As you enter the Park at the Circle, turn right and keep on the lane farthest to the right parallel with Highway "99" till you reach the Pine Grove picnic grounds. Pass on the word.

YES, MONEY TALKS

A hundred for a bedroom suite
And fifteen for a chair,
Four-ninety-eight to buy a dress
And five to curl my hair.

A nickel for the Mission fund
(They passed the plate to me)
I always give a dime for church
Although the pews are free.

An Experience of Grace Is Needed

an editorial

THE SINFUL forces which drove the United States into the first and second world wars are still existent and are driving the United States towards a third world war. The people of the United States have not repented of the sins that lead to war.

Only "a dramatic change of behaviour" can save us from possible annihilation. To bring this about the Christian Church must step up its process of bringing about repentance and conversion.

People must become concerned and do their best. Jesus promised that He would be present where two or three assembled in His Spirit. Perhaps, the best step that can be taken by those who are concerned about preventing a third world war is the establishment of small intimate fellowships.

These fellowships should provide an experience of grace. Christians are tempted to keep up with the Jones' not only materially but also morally. Hardly anyone is content to be morally inferior, and so each feels constrained to cover up all trouble areas of conscience, vexing problems, etc. The result is that the individual finds it difficult or impossible to face his conscience, with the further result that he makes little change and growth. Such an atmosphere does not make for conversion to non-resistance.

Let the members of a small intimate fellowship acknowledge what troubles them, and as each one drops his defenses others will find it easier to drop theirs. There will be an experience of mutual acceptance, with the result that the participants will be enabled to face the weak spots in their Christian living and do something constructive about them.

Naturally with the nations piling up bombs and breeding deadly bacteria, Christian consciences will be sensitized in regard to possible war and the causes of conflict. Thus the members of the fellowship would very naturally be moved to examine their lives as to what they are doing to prevent a third world war.

Such examinations could very naturally lead to such further questions as: "What is the purpose of life here on earth?," "What did Jesus mean when he said, 'And do not fear those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul; rather fear him who can destroy both soul and body in hell.'?," "How can one come to a willingness to lay down one's life for Christ?," "Is the way of the Cross perhaps less risky than the way of war?," "What does it mean to live God who is Love?"

Such searching of self in the company of others is one of the quickest ways of discovering one's fundamental motivations and of surrendering them to Christ. The atmosphere of non-condemnation, of humility, and equality and fraternity helps to do away with the defenses which keep one from conviction, repentance, and a new outlook and uplook.

To be accepted by others and to find in common fellowship a correction of one's own life is an experience which might enable some to come to the attitude of non-resistance.

There must be an acceleration of conversion and growth if the Christian faith is to save the world. The Church must do more than it has done heretofore. Perhaps, the attitude that "There isn't much that we can do" is the supreme heresy of this age, as someone has suggested. During the last war the government could step up the training of soldiers, industry the development of new products, and science the discovery of new methods. In a few years discoveries were made that otherwise might have taken decades. Man can do much when he is concerned. The Christian faith is a faith of miracles. With it we should not fall behind secular achievements.

Great things must happen or some day it will be too late. W. T. Holliday, President of the Standard Oil Company of Ohio, after stating that our number one job is World Peace, says, "If you know that down cellar in your house there are a hundred pounds of dynamite, with a fuse attached of which you do not know the length, but you do know the other end is lit, is it your main job to see that the beds are made and the cupboard is filled?"

The fuse is lit. Human behaviour is in need of radical conversion. Christians ought to be at least as wise and as diligent as the children of this world when it comes to solving problems in a crisis. Let the non-resistant Christians rise up and believe in the power of God to save. Let them work for an experience of grace so that the power of God may be released.

THE RELIGIOUS EDUCATION of the children may have to take a different turn in many communities as a result of the recent Supreme Court decision which makes it unlawful to use the facilities of the public school for purposes of Bible instruction. Just how this ruling will be interpreted in various states remains to be seen. It depends largely upon the local communities and the local courts. Where no objection is raised by taxpayers, the released time program of religious instruction will doubtless proceed as before. In any case there is no need for discouragement on the part of our churches. It may be true, as some Christian leaders are suggesting, that the Court's decision will in the long run work for good in that it will help keep Church and state separate. Maybe it will stimulate greater interest in our Sunday school and vacation church school work.

The vacation schools have been growing by leaps and bounds and constitute a wholesome movement in the church. Vacation time is a very favorable time for religious instruction and with good curriculum material, such as is now available, and well trained teachers, endless possibilities are opened. In many places only two weeks are given to this work. This is better than nothing but it is too short a period for best results. Where possible, the churches should think in terms of a minimum term of three weeks and extend it to four or five weeks if teachers can be found to devote that much time to the work. The Supreme Court has ruled formal religious instruction out of the public schools, but there is probably not a man on the bench who would not encourage the churches to do more and better religious teaching outside of school hours.

ONE HESITATES to think of the outcome of the militaristic logic that has been settled upon America. During the battle over the draft bill backers of the measure are reported to have produced a statement quoting Secretary of State Marshall as saying that backing away from "our present line of action for the security of the United States might mean war." In other words any tendency towards cutting armaments or decreasing militarization must in the future be taken as meaning a step towards war. We are to believe that the more bombs we pile up, the more planes we make, the more men we draft, the farther and farther we shall place ourselves away from war. It means that the people of the United States ought to bring the first fruits (and maybe the last also) of all they have for a sacrifice to the god of Mars in the hope that he will maintain the peace. We must arm and arm and arm, so we are told. Where will this militaristic logic end? We prophesy "in hell" unless Christians overcome it with good.

H. C. Holdridge, a brigader general, U.S.A. (retired) says: "Never in the history of the world has any group wielded so much financial power as our armed forces wield today.... They carry with them the magical power of 'national security.' At critical times they can call for executive sessions which are barred to those who may oppose their views and continue their pressure in secrecy." He continues, "It would take a brave congressman to isolate himself as an opponent of the plans of the armed forces; he would probably be branded as un-American."

H. C. Holdridge says that the "British high command has informed its government that the British Isles are indefensible."

Homer Leisy

Brother Homer Leisy was one of God's good gifts to the Mennonite Church. Those who have heard him preach the Gospel will recall the power with which he spoke. He received his call to the ministry late in life, in 1939, but he became a leading minister in a few years as he submitted the Lord's guidance. He built up the Grace Church in Dallas, Oregon to a membership of 280 in less than a decade. The gifts he had developed for the business of a draper he now used for the glory of God. His speaking ability, his salesmanship, and his ability to draw religious cartoons made him an evangelist of unusual influence. His meetings were usually attended by "full-house" audiences. With radiant face and exuberant enthusiasm for Christ he bore witness to the joy and satisfaction there is in the Christian life. With manifest joy and confidence he shared the things that moved his soul, and this won for him the confidence of many people. He served as President of the Pacific District Conference two terms and as Vice-President of the General Conference one triennium. His memory will remain an inspiration to joyful witnessing for Jesus Christ.

From Denmark

by Mrs. P. S. Goertz

Coming back to Denmark in June, six months after we left it early in December, we found the number of refugees decreased from 75,000 to 50,000. In Aalborg-East the number now stands at 8,000, whereas it used to be 12,000; in Aalborg-West it has been cut down from 8,000 to 4,000. Of all the refugees still left in Denmark, a good thousand are Mennonites. We find some of our Mennonites moved to different camps, for some camps like Frederikshaven and Gedhus are dissolved.

The period of waiting for release from this refugee life is now over three years and needless to say patience is wearing thin. The Paraguay group had hoped to leave in April, now they will likely not leave until October. Of course, the Danes are doing what they can to fill the days with activity, for they not only feed and house unfortunate people, but they also provide educational, recreational, cultural and religious activities for them by furnishing schools for children, lecturers and entertainment for grown-ups, and church services for all. Work is also provided for the able-bodied persons. Small plots of ground around the barracks have been converted into gardens, as well as some larger patches put under cultivation. We even found someone who had acquired a pet rabbit which helped to make life interesting. One concern some persons in camp now have is this: How can they cook some of the vegetables they have raised, when the order has just been given that no chimneys are to smoke after this?

While much of the Danish treatment of the German refugees is on a purely humanitarian basis, there are those who go further; e.g. the church invited Pastor Niemöller to come to Denmark in spite of bitter feeling toward the Germans still existing. Two persons from the Danish Kirchendienst have recently gone to Germany to do spiritual work in that country. There are also signs which would lead one to believe that hatred towards a former enemy is being replaced by an attempt at understanding and co-operation. Those who live here in Denmark have noticed recently that more German books are beginning to appear in Danish bookstores. The explanation is that Denmark is eager to build up trade relations with Germany again. Even common sense says that if commerce is to be resumed between nations, hatred will have to be supplanted by understanding and good will.

SHIPMENTS TO PARAGUAY

Within recent months a substantial amount of tools and other equipment has been sent to the Paraguayan Mennonite colonies. Most of the tools have been gathered through the Gifts-in-Kind program that has been in progress during the past winter and spring. From the various packing centers have come the following amounts: Reedley, California—9½ tons; Vancouver, British Columbia—10½ tons; Silver Springs, Pennsylvania—25 tons; Coaldale, Alberta—4 tons; Newton, Kansas—34 tons. Most of these shipments have left port, one is to leave late in June and one early in July. About 3½ tons of books are also being sent. The total value of this contributed material is $29,683.05.

In addition to this, certain new equipment has also been purchased. In May 717 rolls of barbed wire were shipped, and now one thousand more rolls have been purchased and awaiting shipment. Two new International pickup trucks also are ready to ship. The total value of this new equipment is $15,153.84.

The above shipments do not bring to conclusion the effort in supplying equipment to the Paraguayan Mennonites; additional tools and other equipment are being packed and will be sent.

Voluntary Service Notes

Word from Europe indicates that the group of Mennonite students and European Voluntary Service workers arrived safely and are proceeding on their itinerary of visiting, learning and working.

Thirteen MCC Summer Service Units have been opened in the U. S., Canada, Mexico, and Europe. Approximately 240 young people have volunteered to participate in this work. This number does not include approximately thirty workers who are serving on a longer-term basis in the year-around service projects.

A set of slides on the MCC Voluntary Service work in Mexico has been prepared. These slides depict Mexican life and culture, the Mennonite colonies in Mexico, and the activities of the Service Unit. Write to Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Mennonite Leader Visits Refugee Camps

Mennonite refugees at Backnang and Gronau camps, located in the American and British zones of Germany respectively, were recently visited by J. J. Thiessen, Chairman of the Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization. Brother Thiessen held services with the refugees, preaching to them and bringing greetings on behalf of the Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization which is carrying the responsibility for receiving and resettling Mennonite immigrants in Canada after the Mennonite Central Committee and the IRO bring them to Canada. The refugees were greatly encouraged by Brother Thiessen's messages, and this contact with him helped bring them closer to the work that is being done on their behalf within the Canadian constituency. Brother Thiessen expected to return to Canada on June 21.

INDIA EULOGIZES GANDHI

by John Thiessen

When a widely beloved person like Mahatma Gandhi is so abruptly and cruelly taken out of this life, it is no wonder that various extremes come in the eulogy. We too were deeply shocked when the news of this tragic death came. We announced a day of quietness on the day of the funeral, and never before have we observed such quietness on the mission compound as that of January 31. Not even the children shouted in their play as they normally do. Yes, India was shocked to the core.

Of the hundreds of eulogies that have come in the papers in India I wish to share in a few words only two with you. These seem to me about the best. One is that of Pandit Nehru, the prime minister. He says in essence that India will never see Gandhi again, but if India really loved him, as she proclaims that she did and does, then India must now obey and follow those principles for which Gandhi stood, especially the principles of peace and mutual toleration.

The other eulogy I wish to share with you is expressed in a small publication of two pages, put out by the Church of England in India. Here is what this paper says:

"India has mourned the loss of her greatest son, and the world has mourned with her. In all his long life he was essentially a warrior, fighting for the rights of his countrymen, but fighting in a new way, not by physical force, but by reasoned argument, and by the force of moral character and suffering. These weapons, if we may use such a word here, had been used before in religious struggles, but never on such a scale in the political field. Ultimately he won his battle, and at once in the feebleness of his extreme old age a new strife burst upon him, in the communal rage which has swept over his country in the past eighteen months. He well knew the enmity which he was arousing in fanatical hearts as he pleaded for justice and mercy towards the Muslims, but with supreme courage and disregard for his safety he continued to pass in and out among the crowds with no guard but his granddaughters, until the fatal moment at last arrived to lay him low at the feet of the assassin.

"We may repeat in his memory the words of the Psalmist: Woe is me, that I sojourn in Mesech, That I dwell among the tents of Kodar; My soul hath long had her dwelling with him that hateth peace. I am for peace; but when I speak they are for war. Ps. 120:5."

DESTROYING THE HOLY COW'S FOOD

It was a beautiful star-lit, balmy night on February 12, and almost the entire Christian community, with their guests, the pastors and deacons from our neighboring churches in our Phuljhar area, were gathered at the church. All of a sudden somebody called out "Fire, fire" and pointed toward our school dairy department.

What a shock. There we saw our new fodder house, just finished, and just filled with fresh rice straw to the roof, sixteen feet high ablaze. Our meeting suddenly broke up. Everybody rushed to the fire. The milk cows and work animals were quickly loosed from their stalls. But what about the fire itself? The dry straw was burning fiercely. Would the roof (corrogated tin sheets laid on wooden beams) soon cave in? The straw could not be saved, that was clear. But could the roof be saved? We have no fire extinguishing equipment at our mission stations. After some hesitation and many remarks this way and that way, and the confusion subsiding a bit, some brethren started to throw water with some tin cans on the burning beams which they could reach. That seemed actually to be of some value. So others took courage. Dozens of people ran in every direction to fetch buckets and tubs and tin cans. Step-ladders were brought and the high school boys and good neighbors went to work in real earnest. Fortunately the beams were still not dry, being fresh timber recently hauled from the forest. They were burning, however, as soon as many people threw water on them, the flames went down, even though the water was only like rain drops. It was very hard work, because the heat did not let us come close enough. Yet enough water came to the beams to check the fire and the roof was kept from falling into the burning mass below. The walls and the pillars holding the ridge pole are of burnt brick.

Saving the roof from collapsing was a great victory over the elements. Though the corrogated tin is badly melted and damaged, yet several hundred dollars worth of material was saved from utter destruction. However, the cattle fodder was consumed in the flames. About two hundred dollars, worth. This is a real blow to us, because the mission budget does not provide for such destruction. Therefore, we would be grateful indeed if some friends would be willing to send us a special contribution to help cover this loss.

What was the reaction of the community after the destruction? That the fire was not caused by an accident is abundantly clear. There was no cooking fire nor any other fire in the near neighborhood. Everybody is sure that somebody lit it, just to see what it looks like when a big pile of fodder burns in a new house. A few people suggest that an enemy may have done it. But we do not think so. However, our Christians, and more so the non-Christians, are horror struck that any person would be dastardly enough to destroy the "holy cow's" food. To destroy people's food in India is not such a great shock, but to destroy the cow's food! That is beyond all possibility of forgiveness. One of our non-Christian neighbors said, "That guilty man's stomach will burn until he dies."

Besides the sorrow for this loss, there is also for us a new opportunity. If we are so concerned about this loss and our neighbors feel the unrighteousness so keenly that such strong language is used against a person who destroys God's gifts, how great a sorrow must God have when we human beings flout and destroy His blessings left and right. And more, if we pay no heed to His wooing.—Signed, John Thiessen

Should some individual or organization desire to make a contribution to help cover the loss mentioned above, such monies should be sent to Brother Walter H. Dyck, Treasurer, and designated for that purpose.—Howard G. Nyce, Secretary.

BACK IN JAGDEESHPUR

by Hilda and Herbert Dester

Berne to New York, New York to Port Said, Djibouti, Aden, Karachi, Bombay, Ripur, Jagdeeshpur, just like that. No, it was not just like that. There were delays in getting started, and then difficulties enroute to New York. On Broadway, Mrs. Dester was in the office of W. R. Keatings. Yes our tickets were ready, but they could not take the goods. In Jersey City I was negotiating with the dock and ship authorities to take the three truck loads of goods that came from Berne for the Burkhalters, Miss Burley, and ourselves. They permitted us to unload the goods on the dock. Our goods from Berne did all get on the S. S. Escanaba, and a month later we were in Bombay. Forty-eight hours after landing, our goods and some army surplus provisions of food, purchased in Bombay, were in a freight car ready for the 715-mile trip to Raipur. Getting our goods from the Railway to Jagdeeshpur was another story. It did not just happen of itself. The good part of the story is that our things all arrived in good condition, with comparatively little loss. We attribute that to God's goodness and His answer to prayer. The ambulance arrived later and in good condition. A box of auto accessories has not yet been located, but we trust that it will be found.

Work and More Work

We arrived at our home in Jagdeeshpur a little before midnight. The next morning before eight o'clock, hospital duties were pressing. Doctor Samuel left our services shortly before we returned to India. So for a short while the hospital had been without a doctor. The first three months this year we had a daily average of about sixty inpatients; three operations every working day, mostly major, and a total of 3,500 dispensary patients, new and return visits. This was a real full schedule for one American nurse, one doctor, five trained and four untrained Indian workers, nurses, compounders, and helpers.

In His Service

As I intimated above, getting goods and provisions here from the railway is not a simple matter. We are nintey miles from our railway and shopping center. In getting goods, supplies, provisions, and building materials here for missionaries, schools, hospital, and the station-at-large, the mission truck plays an important part. Among other things obtained from the army surplus supplies, was a good, one-and-a-half-ton Chevrolet truck, as well as some jeeps. In these days of transportation difficulties our station here would be severely handicapped without this truck and jeeps. They play a very definite part in the work, "In His service."

Likewise, the hospital equipment we brought along is also being used "in His service." Before we had things unpacked we had occasion to use a fracture frame from Spokane Washington. Within a short time after our arrival enamel table tops from Nappanee graced several instrument tables and also the tops of boxes used for sterile linens and supplies in the operating room. The large diesel generator is not yet in operation, so a small twelve-volt generator ordered in Hillsboro, Kansas, supplies light and meets that need to some extent. Since we could not yet use the electro-surgical unit supplied by the Nappanee Church, a small six-volt soldering iron helped out in a number of operations. One hundred and fifty dollars seemed a large sum to pay for a dermatome, but thanks to a Sunday school class of girls in Pandora, I was able to get one of these instruments used in skin grafting. It has already been used in four operations, restoring one leg and two arms to useful function, limbs that were practically useless before the operation. I could go on and tell more about the work and how your prayers and contributions are a part of the work of The Kingdom.

Deer Creek Ward

In 1945, before leaving for America on furlough, the building of a new ward was started. It is to have a long central room as a general ward, and ten smaller rooms for family or caste groups. Because of difficulty in getting materials and labor, only the foundation was finished at that time.

While in Deer Creek in 1946 it was proposed to the church that they contribute funds to complete the building. Those contributing $150 are to have one of the rooms designated as their contribution, with a plate at the door indicating the same. Thus seven rooms have their private donors, one living in Kitchener, Ontario, and the rest are members of the Deer Creek Church. Total contributions for this cause are sufficient to complete the ward. Even though labor and materials are still difficult, work at the ward was again resumed several weeks ago. Pray with us that materials, especially roofing, may be available when needed.

Higher Prices

Diesel oil was not so high in price when our mission purchased a fifteen-KW generator. Now the cost is much higher, and the oil is harder to obtain. When Mr. Unruh began to install the electric equipment at the hospital, our dealer in Raipur assured us we would not be able to get Diesel oil. Upon writing to the company they promptly replied that they would not be able to allot any oil to us. "Then why go on and install the generator?" was asked. But that is not the question of faith, so we continued to install. Within about ten days another letter came granting us a monthly allotment. God does answer prayer and supply our needs. It is with this expectation and hope that we continue to prepare for better service, in spite of difficulties and a 25 per cent cut in our budget this year. Twenty-five dollars a month will make it possible to get the needed oil for the generator. We have this generator and considerable equipment to use with it. We trust we will be able to put these into use soon.

Gas, tires, and auto repairs are also very expensive, and often very difficult to get. Since they contribute so definitely to the building of the church and His Kingdom, we trust that the necessary funds for their maintenance will be available.

Unparalleled Opportunities

There is increasing evidence that in these difficult times of transition in India the church and missions face unparalleled opportunities. We know real well that it is "not by might nor by power." It is for this reason we solicit your continued prayers. May we not be found wanting.

SERVICE OF RECOGNITION FOR REV. AND MRS. ALFRED HABEGGER

Busby, Montana
June 10, 1948

Dear Friends:

You will doubtless be interested to know that the month of June marks the completion of thirty years of mission service by Rev. and Mrs. A. Habegger. Most of this time has been spent at Busby, Montana, among the Northern Cheyenne Indians. Here they have been faithfully giving out the Gospel of Jesus Christ in Cheyenne and English for these many years.

A service of recognition for the Habeggers was planned for Saturday June 19 at 2:00 P. M. at the Busby Mennonite Mission Church. Rev. A. E. Kreider, president of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference of Mennonites was scheduled to be present for the occasion.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Wenger

(The Executive Secretary has asked Brother Wenger to send in a report of the recognition service to be printed in our church papers in the near future. —Howard G. Nyce.)

Refugees Board VOLENDAM for Canada

On June 21 a group of 279 Mennonite refugees left from Europe for Canada aboard the ship Volendam. The Mennonite Central Committee had secured five hundred space reservations on this sailing of the Volendam, because a considerable number of refugees had been processd for migration, but could not be provided with transportation to Canada. However, several weeks prior to the sailing of the vessel, the IRO enlarged its shipping schedule, taking to Canada more refugees than had been expected, so there were only 279 prsons fully processed for the sailing of the Volendam. The remaining space was offered to the IRO, so that it could be utilized for movement of non-Mennonite refugees. Thus all of the Mennonite refugees processed at that time have been taken to Canada. The refugee staff continues to work in this effort to help those of our brethren who are still homeless.

Siegfried Janzen, who has been director of the refugee camp at Gronau, accompanied the group sailing on the Volendam. Until he returns to Europe, Marie Brunk and Magdalen Friesen are in charge of the camp.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY NEWS

Andrew R. Shelly stopped with us on Tuesday en route to Montana where he will continue his part-time solicitation for the financial needs of the Seminary. During the month of June the Seminary is engaging in a vigorous campaign by mail and direct solicitation to liquidate the debt on the recent activities connected with expansion. Approximately $9,500 ih still needed to liquidate this debt.

The quartet under the direction of Marvin Dirks had a brief stop-over here on Tuesday and Wednesday following a 2,700 mile trip through the eastern states and Ontario. They report enthusiastic meetings everywhere and look forward now to the second half of their trip in which they will visit the Northern, Canadian, Pacific, and Middle Districts. The trip is being taken in the Seminary Oldsmobile which was presented to the institution by M. S. Pletcher, of Nappanee, Indiana.

President S. F. Pannabecker has returned from recent engagements in Ohio. On June 13 he preached the regular worship service of the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, and then in the evening he shared the pulpit with his wife to describe the more concrete details of the Seminary program. From Bluffton he went to the American Association of Theological Schools meeting at Dayton, Ohio.

Carl Ebersole, a recent graduate of Bethel College, has taken up residence with us as he is starting his medical course at the University of Chicago Medical School. Roland Brown, son of Missionary Brown of China, has just completed his first year in this same school.

John Sommer, of Pekin, Illinois, will leave soon for a youth hostel trip through central Europe. He will ride by bicycle for most of this journey. Later in the summer he expects to visit his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kreider, at the Mennonite Headquarters in Basel, Switzerland.

Elvina Neufeld, daughter of our Business Manager, John T. Neufeld, was awarded the Bachelor of Science degree in Medicine by the University of Illinois. She also received her Bachelor of Science degree from Bluffton College last year. Meanwhile, she will take a position in some hospital during the vacation from her work in the University of Illinois Medical school in which she has completed the second year.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob D. Goering and small son, Daniel, have returned to Newton, Kansas, for a month's vacation. Jacob Goering will be a member of the senior class next year.

—Rev. D. J. Unruh, Newton, Kansas, was elected President of the Board of Grace Bible Institute, Omaha, Nebraska, at a recent board meeting.

Soviet authorities in Berlin have issued a license for the publication of a new monthly magazine by the Evangelical Church in Germany, to be devoted to promoting religious instruction in schools. Each issue is expected to consist of three hundred thousand copies, far more circulation than any other religious periodical licensed by the Western Powers in Berlin.

The Constitution provides that "out of the General Conference Treasury the expenses of the Conference connected with its sessions, the printing of the session minutes, and such other expenses as cannot properly be paid out of other treasuries, shall be defrayed."

A breakdown of the budget for 1948 follows:

Our Executive Committee will be unable to carry out these committments to these various committees which do not have their separate treasuries, if the amounts specified in the budget do not come in. We have obligated ourselves to pay for about one-fourth of the M.C.C. Mennonite World Conference expenses. The total cost of printing the Conference Minutes exceeded the $1,000 by about one-third. The pension and Minister's Aid Committee will be able to assist needy ministers only to the extend that funds come in. Similarly, the Historical Committee, the Placement Committee, and the Church Unity Committee need to be encouraged in carrying out their duties. The least we can do is to give them our whole-hearted financial support. Please also remember them in your daily prayer.—Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The Singing Society has purchased a sound mirror tape recorder, thinking in terms that the various organizations broadcast musical programs over the air in the near future. At present some of the recent programs and services are being transcribed for our older folks, invalids, and those who are in hospitals and unable to attend these services. The C.E. is sponsoring a recreational program during the summer months. Each Thursday evening from 8:00 to 10:00 about forty young people gather under flood lights, which they have erected, for group games and various activities. Some members have again gone out to work in summer service projects. Betty Zerger, Violet Goering, and Marty Mae Kaufman left for a tour in Europe and will be engaged in some work project there prior to their return. Arlene Kaufman is giving a years' service in the Children's Home in Henderson, Nebraska. Evelyn Stucky and Maxine Krehbiel will serve in a service project in Canada.—R. H. K. Corr.

—First Church, Sugarcreek, Ohio: On June 14, twenty-seven of our young people along with their leaders, Grace Jaberg and Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Stauffer, left for a weeks retreat at Camp Alexander Mack. On June 3 we were happy to have the Vesper Choir from Bluffton College here with us. Besides giving us an excellent concert the fellowship of having these students in our midst was most stimulating. —Wiley McDowell, Corr.

—First Church, Fredonia, Kansas: Rev. H. B. Schmidt of Goessel, Kansas, was the guest speaker at the dedication of our church on May 30. In the morning we had a consecration service and in the afternoon the dedication. A basket lunch was served at noon. Rev. Waldo Harder spoke at the evening services, and Rev. Schmidt brought a message.—Corr.

—First Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: A farewell program was held here in honor of Rev. P.P. Tschetter and family, Sunday evening, June 20. Rev. Tschetter has served our church constantly for eleven years. Rev. Tschetter and family are moving to Omaha, Nebraska, where he has accepted a position with Grace Bible Institute. Ordination services were held here for John B. Graber in the morning of June 20. Rev. Tschetter officiated and Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Secretary of General Conference, brought the message. John was the sixth to be ordained in the eleven years of Rev. Tschetter services here.—Ralph Krehbiel, Corr.

What About Co-operatives Today

by H. R. Nickel

During recent years co-operatives have received an increasing amount of adverse publicity, which was often conducted on the "smear campaign" level. By constantly keeping before the uninformed public, through powerful and high-salaried radio comentators (Fulton Lewis salary $6,000 per week), through pamphlets and other means of advertising, in which they use half truths, misleading statements and often deliberate false-hoods, opponents of co-ops hammered at the idea that co-operatives are not on the level, enjoy "special privileges," are unfair business competitors, and are paying no taxes.

This campaign is being spearheaded by N.T.E.A. (National Tax Equality Association on the national scale maintaining a powerful lobby in Washington), and they in turn have enlisted the Independent Business Men's Association (I.B.M.A.) to do the fighting for them on the local scale. Originator of N.T.E.A. was Ben McCabe a millionaire grain dealer.

The object of the campaign seems to be to (1) confuse the public, (2) set one local group against another, and (3) destroy co-operative competition (divide and conquer). N.T.E.A. represents the big corporations and the wealthy. Co-operatives, on the other hand, are composed of common people of modest means and often having a low standard of living. The co-operatives therefore do not have the means with which to inform the public (having several times been refused time on the radio) or influence the legislatures.

It is to be regretted that the I.B.M.A. (who by the way are not independent, but follow the dictates of their superiors) have taken it upon themselves to do the fighting for the major corporations, when they themselves stand to gain most by working with the common people, rather than against them. Any business man will admit that he would rather operate in a community where the people are property owners.

One of the evils of our time is the concentration of enormous wealth in a few hands and its use to the detriment of the common masses. Political democracy becomes but a hollow shell when big monopolies control the economics of a nation. And now big business, the military, and the administration have joined forces to foist military conscription upon the people. They have pushed us another step towards regimentation of the thinking and economics of the common people.

Another example of power-politics is the recent tax reduction legislation. They told us taxes would be cut 12.5 per cent to the low income group and only 5 per cent to the high income group. It looked all right to the public on paper, didn't it? Here's what happened, however. It actually only increased the income of low income tax payers (after taxes) by 3 per cent, but raised the incomes of rich tax payers by as much as 60 per cent (after taxes). Another hoax is the split (man and wife) income tax report. To the small income man this is of little benefit, but to the man whose income is one hundred thousand dollars per year this means a saving of eighteen thousand dollars.

Corporation profits per year, after taxes, have risen from five billion dollars in 1939 to over seventeen billion per year in 1947 (Treasury Department figures). General Motors profits for the first three months of 1948 averaged one million dollars per day. It it any wonder we have strikes? Under those conditions big business could substantially reduce prices or raise wages or do both and still realize more profits than they did before the war.

So you see the money moguls are so powerful that they railroad through any legislation that suits their dollar diplomacy (regardless of antitrust laws). The rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer, and there are so many more of them. Such inequities have caused other nations to fail before our time and will do the same again unless they can be checked in time.

What are we going to do about it? Against such forces the individual, of course, is helpless (as big business wants him to be). And this is where co-operatives come into the picture.

Co-operatives represent an economic setup by which capital is redistributed to the people (farmers, labor, white collar workers, etc.) who have actually produced it. They do it, not by force or bloody revolution, but by the traditionally American free enterprise system of working together. They do injustice to no one who honestly gains his livelihood.

"Co-operation began with the discovery that two people could together roll a heavier stone or move a bigger log than could be done by one alone" (Calvin Coolidge). Modern (Rochdale) co-operatives came into being about one hundred years ago because of the desperate need for them. "A co-operative society is a voluntary association in which the people organize democratically to supply their needs through mutual action, and in which the motive of production and distribution is service, not profit" (Dr. J. P. Warbasse) They are democratic. One member, one vote. No one person or family can gain control. No proxy voting is permitted; shares sell only at par. No chance for speculation.

Now let's take a look at the much disputed tax status of co-operatives and the difference between co-operatives and corporations. Co-operatives pay all tax on the same basis as other businesses. The only question involved is the corporate income tax. Corporations are organized for the purpose of making a profit on

by Karl Suderman

Jim Farnsdall is an average merchant in an average American community. Peggy, his high school sweetheart, is now his devoted wife and mother of their two sons. Their early marriage was a courageous gesture of contempt for future uncertainties.

"Some day we're going to have a store of our own," he used to tell Peggy. "Then we can say and do as we please. If I don't like what Harry Jones thinks about that new school house, I can tell him so; and we won't be harming anyone but ourselves." You see, Jim was an independent sort of person who found it hard to restrain himself. His job at the store was constantly in jeopardy because he "talked too much."

One day their dreams came true, and Jim and Peggy became known as the J and P Hardware Store. It took the nerve of a pioneer, but they were finally "independent." The years ahead were a struggle indeed, and took their mellowing toll from Jim. The hardships and experiences developed in him those enviable traits of self-reliance and self-confidence which characterize our leaders in communities everywhere. He had succeeded in his own small way.

While at the corner drug store one morning, he overheard a startling conversation. It wasn't intended for his ears, but he simply had to listen. It seems the group was talking about starting some kind of a new store; would handle hardware, appliances, cosmetics, groceries, breakfast food and a myriad of other items. Somehow they would all chip in, start a store, and buy these articles at wholesale; and then sell them to each other at regular retail prices. The profit would remain in the store, which would give them more capital to buy more things. Since this profit did not belong to the store and when distributed to patrons merely meant they bought their goods cheaper, the profits would not be taxed. This big savings in income taxes could thus also be used to buy more things. It looked like a beautiful picture for everybody—everyone except our friend Jim.

After supper that evening, Jim expressed his anxiety to Peggy. "And," he confided, "in addition to the obvious appeal of doing business with oneself, it seems that they can legally avoid payment of federal income taxes. Peg, I can't believe that's true. That advantage alone could put us out of business."

"Our government would never do such a thing to us," she remonstrated. "Why we've been paying our income taxes for years, and were glad we could. Just imagine what we could have done if we had that tax money—the new store front you've wanted so long, the new church we want to help build, and the second truck we need so badly. I know those people have wrong information about that tax deal, but let's investigate it anyway."

Investigation proved that the drug store group was correct. Almost without exception, income tax payments on profits were not required if the group organized as a cooperative association. Special Treasury regulations had been established to shield them from the devastating impact of this burden—antiquated regulations which were intended for an entirely different situation—regulations which would place greater and greater tax burdens on fewer and fewer taxpayers, while these cooperative associations were permitted to pyramid their growth through tax savings.

It is unnecessary to follow the fate of Jim and Peggy. A moron could predict their future with accuracy.

Corporation Federal Income tax rates are now loosely quoted at 38 per cent of income. During the war years, when the cooperative associations made their greatest tax-free gains, such corporation taxes were as high as 90 per cent. Under these circumstances, is it any wonder that such a large group of our people are becoming "cooperative minded"? In our zealous efforts to penalize big business, are we not blindly seeking to destroy our own economic independence as farmers and merchants? I sincerely believe we are.

Co-operators feel that they should always remain the marginal segment of our economy, the "pace setter" for high standards, fair prices; a kind of yard stick by which to measure the morals of independent business. There is serious question with regard to this feeling on the part of cooperative leaders. The public remembers the Dairymen's League Cooperative, which pled guilty to rigging the butter market in order to be able to charge the people of New York an exorbitant price for their milk. The public also remembers that the California Fruit Growers Cooperative was indicted and paid a fine for its monopolistic practises. And just last month, a Co-op attorney representing the big Maryland-Virginia Producers Association, a cooperative, stated that monopoly was a privilege granted by law to cooperatives and justified the rigging of milk prices in Washington, D. C. by telling the court, "When we act to eliminate competition, we are within our rights."

These things amply demonstrate that cooperative big business is just like any other big business, and that Co-op monopoly is just as bad as any other type of monopoly. Co-ops wear no halo, and as individuals are no better and no worse than the small businessmen who are trying to make a living in the market place.

Independent business is asking only a fair yardstick —one that has 36 inches for both. As it is, the cooperatives are attempting to use a yardstick with 50 inches (49.68 to be exact) to measure the activities of inde-investment, for its stockholders and not for its customers. Each share has one vote, so the biggest investor controls the business and also receives the biggest dividend check. The value of shares may fluctuate and are often sold and resold for speculation only. This is profit without effort. A co-operative is incorporated, not for profit to the association, but it is an incorporated agreement (partnership) among members to handle their own business and refund all earnings above cost of operation to its members on a patronage basis and not an investment basis. Savings, whether in cash or credits, coming to the members in this manner are income to the individual, and income tax is paid by the individual. The co-operative as such has no income. Hence no taxes.

Many of the busines men, who are fighting co-operatives on the tax issue today, are themselves members in co-operative purchasing associations and no income tax is being paid by these wholesale houses on refunds they return to their members.

It is hard to see why refunds to these dealers should be tax exempt while to the individual they should be taxed. Both work on exactly the same principle—one on the wholesale-dealer level and the other on the wholesale consumer or producer level. There is today more business being done by Business Men's Co-operative Wholesale Purchasing Associations than is being done by Farmer and Consumer Co-operatives.

Corporations, in reality, do not pay income tax. They are tax collectors and pass the tax on to the consumer in the form of hidden taxes.

Only true co-operatives organized under Sec. 101 of the Internal Revenue Act are corporation tax exempt. They are constantly being checked by revenue men to make sure they comply with these restrictions.

Any corporation also receives exemption on funds passed back to its patrons (not its shareholders).

When I join a co-operative, that association becomes my servant. I send my hired man (servant) to the store to buy a sack of feed giving him five dollars with which to complete the transaction. He returns with the feed plus fifty cents which was left over after he paid for the feed. If he (my servant) keeps the fifty cents it would add that much to his income, and he would have to pay tax on it. If however, he refunds the money to me, its for the same reasons that co-operatives are income tax exempt, since they return all the savings to me, its owner. Much has also been said regarding reserves left with the Association after the end of the year and used as operating capital. These reserves also are allocated in proportion to patronage and credited to the individual, representing so much income to him and he in turn must pay tax on it.

Co-operatives can save our capitalistic, democratic way of life from the forces of greed and monopoly on one hand and the forces of totalitarian state control an the other.

In Denmark and Sweden, where co-operatives are strong enough to influence the economics of those countries, they do not have the extremely rich on one hand nor the slums on the other. Neither did they go through the boom-and-bust of a decade ago. Also because of their democratic economic setup they have not rushed headlong into wars in order to make huge profits for a few to the misery of their fellowmen. Co-operatives do not produce millionaires.

The Federal Council of Churches says the following about co-operatives:

"The freer exchange of farm and industrial products through consumers' cooperatives offers at once a more abundant life to both groups and brings them together in practical economic cooperation from which there can emerge a better society for all."

The National Catholic Rural Life Conference makes the following statement regarding co-operatives: "Recognizing that cooperatives are in close harmony with Christian social philosophy and powerful instruments of self-help, the Conference strongly recommends that communities devote themselves to a serious study of the Rochdale principles and to the history of the co-operative movement at home and abroad."

If the foes of co-operatives really believe that co-operatives are enjoying such special privileges, then I cannot see why they do not avail themselves of these same special privileges. They are free to do so. However, they would have to adopt and comply with the same restrictions which give these co-operative organizations such tremendous advantages.

pendent business. Even neutral observers are shouting the injustice, and many ardent co-operators agree. It takes a hardy fellow to outstrip his opponent in the hundred yard dash, when that opponent must run only sixty-three yards to win.

In a recent statement, reported by the Independent Business Men's Association, " . . . . the Federal Treasury is currently losing approximately $300,000,000.00 in tax revenues a year from cooperatives alone and that this figure will approach $2,000,000,000.00 in the next five years. Loss of revenues through tax-exempt businesses is increasing at an alarming rate. Taxpayers are forced to pay higher taxes than would be necessary if all business were paying its full share in support of government."

Cooperatives have all the benefits of our courts, internal and external protection from violence, an organized society, our highways, our cherished freedom to organize as we wish. Independent business helped make these benefits possible for them. Why then are they so unwilling to support these great American institutions in a democratic spirit of fair play? During the past century independent business has succeeded in developing the best economy ever known anywhere. Independent business has provided more material necessities and conveniences for the masses than any other economy in history. It does not consider this entrance of its markets, and adoption of its techniques by cooperatives, as an intrusion. It does however, demand equal tax rights with its new competitor. Otherwise, it is fearless, as always, of its ability to progress through its kaleidoscopic achievements.

On January 14, 1946, Justice Felix Frankfurther expounded, "You may carry out your own notions of social policy in engaging in what is called business, but you must pay your share in having a nation which enables you to pursue your policy."

June 22. Under the new draft bill passed by Congress conscientious objectors opposed to noncombatant service in the armed forces are deferred. This provision, originally in the House bill, was adopted by the Conference Committee which met Friday to iron out differences between the House and Senate bills.

The five Senate conferees included Sen. Morse (R-Ore.) and Sen. Byrd (D-Va.), both of whom voted for the Morse amendment which was defeated in the Senate. The Morse amendment proposed a presidential-appointed civilian commission with board powers for classifying, assigning, and deferring COs.

Deferment was adopted as on expedient way to handle the estimated 225 COs expected to be subject to induction out of the 225,000 men which the Army plans to draft in the next year. This generous treatment will last only as long as public sentiment is favorable and the number of COs subject to draft remains small. It may be changed by the next Congress. It would certainly be changed in a wartime draft.

By this unexpected action the government has put the responsibility for the service of COs upon the man himself instead of ordering him to serve. The 21-months' service required of his fellows is not required of him. How will he respond?

The church now has complete freedom to work out its own program for COs. What it does now could easily influence the government to adopt a new pattern for handling COs in wartime. If the churches and the men want a non-military alternative with religious freedom and opportunities for worthwhile service now is the time to demonstrate how it can be done.

Saturday evening he officiated in a beautiful marriage ceremony for Miss Nadine Moser and Robert Arney. Sunday morning he chose for his sermon "What the Holy Spirit Does for Us," bringing to us the thought that God is in all that is truly good. As the Children's Day program was ready to start Sunday evening, June 20, the five retreaters (Carolyn Lehman, Karen Berkey, Colleen Nussbaum, Homer Gerber, and Donferd Nussbaum, all Juniors) arrived home. They had spent a wonderful week at Camp Mack. This year a special committee had worked to make it possible for some to go. Transportation and the two dollar individual registration fee were paid by organizations of the church.—Corr., Mrs. Ivan L. Badertscher.

Office Methods for the Minister

Does your ministerial calm and poise sometimes lose its perfect balance when you are looking for a letter or a clipping or a poem or an illustration for your service, which you know you have in your file, and you just can't find it?

You know you had it! Now where is it?

This is the type of a thing which sometimes plagues the minister. To be sure, a minister is not a file clerk. Yet, how many times he would be willing to do a little filing if only he could be sure he could find what he needed—when he needs it!

Recently Andrew R. Shelly was in our office looking over our filing system and we gave him a little demonstration to show how any letter, or any clipping, or catalog, or pamphlet, or cut, could be located quickly with a minimum of trouble to anyone. Before it was all over, we outlined for him a little system for his own private office. Like a good little student, he went right back to Canada, ordered a few supplies (he was surprised how little they cost), and here last Thursday we got a letter in which he says:

> "This will be just a brief note to tell you I am making progress on my Variadex system. It took quite a long time for the local office to get the various parts of the system. Now, I have that which is essential in setting it up. Indeed, I have the basic part installed. I am waiting for another filing cabinet after which I will put it into full operation.
> "I want to thank you for the object lesson you gave me, and the very helpful hints. It is already a thrill to be able to instantly find what I want in so many areas. It will take quite a long time to transfer everything into the new folders, properly arranged, etc."

Now, it could be, of course, that there might be other ministers, like Andy, who feel like he did—before he put in his filing system. And if you do, we would be glad to hear from you, and on the basis of your letters we might prepare some diagrams, or even a little series to run in the MENNONITE which might be of some help to you.

We have an idea after you see how it works, you'll like it.

Appeals to Christians everywhere to join in prayer and action for world peace were made at a crowded meeting at Stockolm, Sweden. This gathering was a sequel to the joint message to heads of the American, British, and Russian governments, urging them to unite in staving off the threat of another war.

According to the census bureau, 840,000 children became markedly neurotic every year. Ten to fifteen per cent of the patients in children hospitals have mental disorders. Two youngesters in every classroom of forty are potential psychiatric-hospital patients. Every year one thousand children under fifteen years of age are sent to insane asylums.

Book Notes

A Testament of Devotion by Thomas R. Kelly. Harper and Brothers, New York. $1. (Obtainable from our Conference book stores.)

This little book of 124 pages is outstanding devotional reading material, even though it is not written up for daily devotions. Thomas Kelly shares with us the blessed life he found in Christ Jesus. When he was a college student he said to his teacher one day, "I am going to make my life a miracle." He was deeply religious. He had an insatiable thirst for truth. He reveled in the study of philosophy and science. After he had published a treatise on philosophy, which marks his high scholastic attainment, a new direction took place in Thomas Kelly. No one knows exactly how it happened. He does not speak of it. From then on he spoke and wrote less as one possessed of "Knowledge about" as one who was unmistakably "acquainted with" the Inward Christ.

In this book the author gives a description of a most blessed life in Christ in Quaker terminology and with Quaker restraint. With heart-warming and penetrating insights he speaks of the Indwelling Christ as Guidance, Light, the Living Presence. He writes on Holy Obedience as one who knows whereof he speaks and in words that makes obedience seem attractive even in suffering. He has a deep insight into the blessedness of Fellowship in Christ. His discussion of this subject is not overly philosophical. He brings to us in simple words the wonders of this great gift, Christian Fellowship.

Although the author speaks with almost ecstatic words about the ravishing joys and the blissful peace in Christ, he makes clear that the Divine Presence bring with Him a deep social concern. Life in Christ is not "other-worldliness" in blissful oblivion of the needs of the world. The author takes pains to show that a life of adoration of Christ and obedience to the Inner Light does not make living difficult and complicated. Rather, the Living Presence brings with Him a surprising simplification of life. When Christ becomes the Center of Reference, life becomes amazingly simple and easy. The book is a good illustration of what the Friends mean when they speak of "dedicate yourself utterly and completely to attendance upon the Inward Living Christ." For those who seek a deeper life in Christ this book should be very helpful. It merits more than one reading. There is just one suggestion one might offer before you read the book. It is this. You have here a portrayal of the life in Christ in Quaker language which may be strange to some of us. Thomas Kelly lived only forty-seven years. He has left a rich legacy, a testament of devotion.—W. F. Unruh

Five Hundred Attend Eastern District Retreats

Since 1928 a group of young people from the Mennonite churches of our Eastern District have met annually for retreats. Starting with fifty-four retreaters the retreat has grown year by year so that now we have almost five hundred retreaters registered between the ages of eight and seventy-five, with many more attending the meetings as visitors.

For thirteen years the University Camp at Green Lane, Pa., was rented for our purposes. One general retreat for all ages was held annually up to 1939 when our retreat passed a new milestone and two retreats were held; one for the high school group and another for those above high school age. This plan worked so satisfactorily that additional retreats were started so that we now have five different retreats, namely: Junior, Intermediate, High School, Unmarried, and Married People.

In 1938 Mr. J. Walter Landis, interested in youth and seeing the need of special instruction for them, donated twenty-three acres of land to the Conference for our own retreat grounds. Since Mr. Landis's gift, much work has been done to improve and develop this land; so that we now have a well-equipped camp consisting of seven retreaters' cabins, dining hall and well-equipped kitchen, wash houses, workers' cabin, leaders' cabin, auditorium, road, electricity, running water from our own well, telephone, stoned paths, graded clearings, etc. Almost all of the work mentioned in the previous improvement was done by volunteer help coming from the various churches on designated work days. Retreats have been held on our own grounds (Men-O-Lan) since 1941.

The Eastern District Conference elects a board of six members to develop, improve and care for the physical need of the camp and campers. The retreat programs are arranged by a retreat committee, the chairman of which is elected by the retreaters of the previous year. Through past years we have had outstanding Bible teachers, missionaries, laymen and counsellors from our group and the General Conference at large for our retreats. This year promises to be a summer of equal blessings for the retreaters.

Through the development of our church retreats many have been brought to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ, led into a closer walk with Him, and provided with wholesome and uplifting Christian fellowship. May the retreat program continue to grow so that our youth may be brought closer to His creation, His word and His kingdom.

Men-O-Lan which is located near Quakertown, Pennsylvania, contains many varieties of forest trees, plants, huge igneous boulders left from the Glacial period, and a meandering brook of crystal clear water. When at Men-O-Lan one is reminded of those words from our well-known "America":

"I love thy rocks and rills,
 Thy woods and templed hills,
My heart with rapture thrills
 Like that above."

1947 RETREAT STATISTICS

8700 meals served during 1947 retreats, consisted of:—2440 quarts of milk, 400 loaves of bread, 950 lbs. of beef, 330 lbs. of turkey, 75 dozen eggs, 70 lbs. of butter, 430 quarts of ice cream, not to mention the numerous cans and cans of fruits and vegetables and green goods.

Conscription Means a Choice of Two Paths

A great and tragic step has been taken by Congress with the passing of the draft act. The many implications for the nation and the world involved in this step cannot be enumerated. Mainly it suggests that a leading power in the world proposes to follow the military way, prepare for war—in order to maintain peace, a method which has proven unsuccessful so often in the past that only bitter laughter can be mustered when people soberly and seriously propose it.

Isaiah of old warned his countrymen not to make peace by means of military alliances with the Egyptians who rely on horses and trust in chariots. Isaiah points out that the Egyptians are men and not God and their horses flesh and not spirit. From the time of Isaiah to our day, men have been prone to trust in the cleverness of their fingers and the cunning of their minds to manipulate events according to their own interests. The present militarism reflects again that about which Isaiah spoke, that peace can be maintained by man's means rather than by that which is the eternal will of God, the seeking on the part of all men the best interests and welfare of all men.

This is a tragic hour, one with a dividing of the way before us. Those who will have the main burden of deciding which of two ways they will go will not be those of us who are older. That decision has been thrust upon youth. They now must decide whether they will take the path which relies on horses and chariots, or the path which relies on the redemptive love and grace of God. There is now a clear and sharp difference. The one path of militarism presents youth with many thrills and opportunities. There are many gadgets to manipulate—airplanes, ships and guns. There is much activity—a lot of it monotonous, there is a demoralizing element, there is an opportunity for debauched living—that has accompanied armies from earliest recorded history. But, there is a lot of tangible, exciting activity for youth along the military way.

The other path is not so tangible. It is not so tangible because it proposes to rest its case, to find its strength not in the extent, power, or efficiency of its machinery suddenly and bombastically to overpower its enemy, but to seek out the ultimate, final and eternal will of God who is revealed to men through Jesus Christ as redemptive and forgiving love. For one to take the path which seeks always to build, cement, heal, redeem, be it ever so little and ever so minute, the possibility of the dramatic may be lacking. There are many other factors making for a sense of mission which makes the power to destroy pale and uninteresting.

There are two paths youth must now decide upon. Which will youth take?

Eastern District Holds Fifty-third Annual Youth Convention

Our annual convention of the Eastern District Young People's Union was held Monday May 31 at Men-O-Lan, with morning and afternoon sessions. Our newly constructed auditorium was filled to capacity for the sessions with many of the more than five hundred present seated on the side and front porches.

What a blessing to draw away from the marching parades to a quiet spot in God's great out-of-doors where the children can play together and where we can fellowship one with another in picnic style.

Rev. Ellis Graber, of Souderton, led us in our singing. The mission project goal of $650 for the past year was exceeded by $25. The Convention accepted a project of $675 for the coming year to be distributed to: Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Foreign Student Aid, and our Camp Men-O-Lan. Mission discussion groups followed the morning business sessions and were led by: Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, China; Rev. Samuel T. Moyer, India; Mr. Elvin Souder, Paraguay; and Rev. A. J. Nuenschwander, home missions.

The convention address was presented by Rev. Wilmer Shelly, of Bally, after which our new C. E. officers were installed by our Conference president, Rev. J. Herbert Fretz. The new officers are: Norman Geissinger, Zionsville, President; Russell High, Quakertown, Vice President; Clarence Carbaugh Jr., East Swamp, Corresponding Secretary; Betty Block, Zionsville, Recording Secretary; Jarvey Musser, Bowmansville, Mission Secretary; Erwin Miller, Springfield, Treasurer; Verna Keiser, West Swamp, Junior Superintendent; Mrs. Harvey Bean, Lansdale, Intermediate Superintendent; Rev. Wilmer Shelly, Bally, Pastor Counsellor; Arlene Moyer, Lansdale, C. E. Witness Editor.

The banner for the society with the highest percentage of members present was awarded to the Springfield Society and the society coming the greatest distance was the Richfield Society which came more then 150 miles by chartered bus.

The Senior C. E. of the Bethel College Church will give two one act plays on Thursday, July 1, at 8:00 p. m.

The plays are: "Neighbors," a comedy; and "The Eleventh Mayor," a peace play. An offering will be taken for the new retreat grounds. The play will be given in the Bethel College Chapel. The public is cordially invited.

JUNIOR C. E. CONVENTION

The Junior C. E. Societies of the Eastern District met at Lansdale, Pa. June 5, for their annual convention. The theme for the meetings was "The Golden Rule," Luke 6:31.

Group singing was led by Stanley R. Fretz. Conference groups discussed the following aspects of the Golden Rule: "In the Home," leader Grace Moyer; "In the School," leader Mrs. William Sell; and "In the Church," Rev. A. M. Schultz.

Games and recreation were enjoyed by all present during the noon hour.

The Junior C. E. Banner was awarded to the West Swamp society for the largest percentage of its members present after which the address was given by Mrs. T. A. Lambie, a Missionary to Palestine.

Family Radio Programs Cited

Five radio network broadcasts were cited for family listening in a nation-wide poll of church people. The poll was sponsored by the International Council of Religious Education. The five programs cited are the following:

One Man's Family
The Greatest Story Ever Told
Pepper Young's Family
Fibber McGee and Molly
The Aldrich Family

The balloting was based on a ten-point standard. Persons voting were to be able to answer in the positive at least seven of the following questions:

(1) Is the family true to life? (2) Is the family democratic—recognizing the rights of others? (3) Does the family recognize God in its everyday living? (4) Is there a high moral tone to the program? (5) Is the sponsoring commercial in keeping with the best in family life? (6) Does the program make you want to have a better family life? (7) Is there a high type of humor? (8) Does the family show an interest in the community, the nation, and the world? (9) Is the home the center of security and strength? (10) Does the program portray the family as improving?

Human Rights - the Key to World Peace

(Ed. Note — The following article was written by the author as an entry in a contest sponsored by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. It won first place for him and a $40 prize. Dwight is a student in Newton High School, Newton, Kansas, and is sixteen years old. The title of the article, "Human Rights — the Key to World Peace" was the title chosen by the committee sponsoring the contest and was not chosen by the author.)

Peace—what an elusive dream: Although there is no sane man in this world who does not hope and pray for peace, we seem to be approaching nearer and nearer to the abyss of war. We are following an age-old pattern of hoping for peace but preparing for war. Prior to the discovery of atomic warfare, this pattern resulted only in periodic repetition of war, but now we have reached a crisis in the history of our world when we must either adopt a new pattern or we are in danger of witnessing the destruction of our civilization. How can we build a lasting peace to avert this catastropse? I believe that one great factor in building lasting peace is the preservation of certain rights to the individual.

What are these human rights? That is a very difficult question to answer, specifically, for they mean different things to different people. However, in essence, I believe they mean respect for the dignity of a person's conscience and behavior.

Down through the ages, man has struggled for this ideal of freedom mainly under a misconception. He has struggled for human rights with force and war; believing that if he could just defeat this or that tyrant, the world would be safe for democracy. But, by his very actions, he was perpetrating the spread of tyranny, for it prospers on force, violence, hate, and desolation. We are still following that same pattern today in regard to communism, a great threat to humn rights. I would like to quote Charles Welles, editor of Between the Lines. "One of the most glaring fallacies in our national thought today is that we may have to go to war with Russia to stop communism. But war will never stop communism. War, with its increased poverty, bitterness, and hatred, is the surest way to spread communism. If World War III should come, we would still have to fight the real war against communism—on the battleground of the human conscience." I believe the way to spread the doctrine of freedom and human rights is by setting the example so that the conscience of the world will be pricked.

That is America's golden opportunity to show the world that our great principles of democracy, brotherhood, and equality really work. This is our opportunity to raise still higher the banner of human rights that our forefathers erected in crossing an uncharted sea to found a country in which men could live as brothers and not as beasts. And yet we are letting it slip by. Let's not draw boundaries around these principles of love, brotherhood, and understanding which are the guarantee of human rights, and reserve them for white American citizens who believe in certain economic and political theories, and use force and tyranny against everyone else. Let us throw away these boundaries and treat every man as a brother and recipient of respect for his beliefs and actions. This is a very idealistic picture, but the world is going to have to approach very near this ideal, if our civilization and the principles of democracy and human rights are to be saved.

Now, practically, what can we do to have human rights and peace? First, we must cast aside the boundaries of our democracy in our hearts and actions and extend the hand of brotherhood to all men. Let us treat everyone according to his individual worth—negro or white, Catholic or Jew, Russian or American. Let us entrench the idea of a one world family, deep in our hearts.

Second, we must disarm completely to show the world that we believe the ways of violence and tyranny have been outmoded and that love and understanding must prevail. Let us show the world that we are not heretics but have a firm belief in our Christian democracy. We must lead the world to the idea of human rights, not force them, for there is a stubborn streak in human nature which resents being forced, even to the acceptance of a good idea. A peace built on force is a very tottering peace.

Third, we must defeat the evil in the world with good. We must start a campaign of sharing that will choke out tyranny. We must help the world recover from World War II with no political strings attached. We must share with the whole world, including Russia. We must help other peoples to build their standards of living up to new heights, equal to ours. And as conditions improve and love and understanding begin to spread, tyranny will be choked out.

But this course is fraught with difficulties and perils. If we keep to the course as best we know, the truth will win out in the end. Our forefathers embarked on an uncharted sea in a new direction, and so must we, if we are to carry on in their footsteps. It will take much faith in our cause—faith such as they had. It may entail some suffering on our part. However, it will take much suffering to rescue the world from the sorry plight into which we have allowed it to slip. If America is not ready to adopt this course, I think no other people are. In that case, we shall probably witness the destruction of our civilization. Maybe the pygmies of Africa will escape and be able to build up a new civilization which keeps its spiritual and moral development up with its material development. However, I still have faith that America will waken to her task. We may have to suffer for the sins of the world, but our children will be freed from the scourge of war and hatred. I would rather be a martyr in the cause of human rights and brotherhood than a part of the splatter of an atomic bomb.

Plockhoy's Message to the Mennonite World Conference

by Leland Harder

AN interesting story in connection with early Mennonite history is the life of Peter Cornelius Plockhoy and the small early-American colony of "Mennonists" which he established in New Netherland twenty years before Germantown. The colony, which was destroyed in war after a few months of existence, was the culmination of a career of religious and social reform. Thirty years later Plockhoy and his faithful wife wandered into the Mennonite settlement at Germantown where they found Christian friends; the reformer was old, poverty-stricken, and blind. "A painful reflection," states Eduard Bernstein, a German writer, "that so gifted a man should find so poor a lot in life."

Plockhoy has been called an "utopian dreamer," but the fact is that he always tried to apply his schemes to the real-life problems which prompted them. And the problem which was more real and vital to him was division within the Christian church. Coming from a small Mennonite community in Holland, he must have been concerned when the church split into so many fractions, and when his own congregation didn't know which of two branches it should follow—the Flemish or the Frisians. In his thinking mind, he devised a scheme to unite all Christian sects in a sort of federation without necessarily amalgamating them into one group. Leaving his family and country, he took his idea to England in 1658 during the days of the Commonwealth, and actually talked with Oliver Cromwell in person about initiating an experiment based on his plan. We do not know how Cromwell reacted, for he died a short time later; and the first of Plockhoy's projects came to naught.

Fortunately, the letters which Plockhoy addressed to Cromwell and to the English Parliament have been preserved in a collection of "scarce and valuable tracts" relating to English history. There is a message in these letters which is pertinent to Mennonites of all branches the world over as they prepare to meet in another World Conference in August. The World Conference is evident that Mennonites desire greater unity in the solution of problems common to all; and as one means of achieving greater concord, Plockhoy's program might be considered.

It envisioned in every community a general assembling-place where Christians of all denominations would meet at a certain time. The blueprint called for elevated rows of desks so the people could see, study, and commune with one another. On one side there would be a pulpit aloft for the reading of the Scriptures, after which the people would confer together "concerning the doctrine and instruction of their Lord and master Christ."

This would not replace individual church activities, for "even as the Jews, being divided into several sects (as Pharisees, Sadducees, Essenes, Herodians, &c.) met together in one temple, so we would not deny any particular congregations of their freedom of peaceable meeting among themselves about the ordinances of Jesus Christ, as the orders or synagogues of the Jews were not at all infringed."

Mennonite leaders today fairly well agree that union of the various branches would be highly desirable, but that the possibilities of direct consolidation are not very great. An alternative would be a form of federation, like that which Plockhoy described, uniting the several groups of Mennonites in common Christian endeavor without abolishing the distinctive practices of each group.

Plockhoy called his general Christian assembly the "truth getting enlargement," for he argued that such a united effort would bring about, > not only a clearing of the understanding and reforming of the lives of people, but also a yielding submissive, condescending love; for the wisest and expertest men daily coming thus together to teach and to be taught, it would incline the hearts of those that should behold them, one towards an-

General Conference Ministers' Retreat Postponed

The Ministers' Retreat scheduled for July 30—August 4 at Estes Park, Colorado, has been postponed until next summer. The Retreat Committee reached this decision after a survey of all ministers was taken to determine how many would plan to attend in view of the Mennonite World Conference which has been scheduled for the same week. The reports indicated that it would be wise to secure the facilities of Estes Park for the summer of 1949.—The Ministers' Retreat Committee, J. N. Smucker, L. L. Ramseyer, I. I. Friesen, H. N. Harder, Ronald von Riesen.

> other . . . . For Jesus, the only heavenly teacher (who hath been long enough trod under foot by sectarians) ought to be set above all and all men, as brethren, joined together . . . The truth (which hath been long kept under, or with-held in unrighteousness) will scatter the lies, as light doth darkness; and the great credit which we have given to some teachers in particular, will by opposition be diminished, and the power of all sects (the one dispelling the errors of the other) will be broken.

"For which end," Plockhoy concluded, "that we may transmit the world unto our posterity in a better condition than we first found it, I have contributed this little . . . "

The world today is threatened by conflict and strife because each of some sixty individual nations of people demands to be a law to itself in its relations with others. The only way to peace and Christian living is via a united world in the interest of which each nation surrenders its individual sovereignty. If Mennonites want to be a peace witness in this day, it is plain they must show the world that they, at least, can overcome particularism in the cause of greater unity. Plockhoy's message to the Mennonite World Conference, in his simple language, is this:

> It is time that the universal work of God (as the sun) do outshine all that is particular; to which end I implore the presence of the Most High God to be in your assembly, to guide and direct your hearts in all those things that may be acceptable to Him, and most agreeable to His good will and pleasure.

Leland Harder, 1948 graduate of Bethel College, likes to dig in Mennonite history and to write. He will teach at Moundridge, Kansas, this coming year.

Could Russia Be Easily Licked in a "Preventive War"?

In the article, "The Price of War," the lead article in the July Harper's Magazine, Hanson W. Baldwin gives the answer to the question raised in the heading. Mr. Baldwin is the military editor of the New York Times and is widely quoted.

Mr. Baldwin points out that there is an increasing minority in the United States who believes in a "preventive war" with Russia. He then lists some of the factors that we would have to face if we attack Russia by surprise with the atomic bomb.

He says, "Many of the most vital Russian industrial targets are beyond range of bombers now available (or to be available in the next few years) . . . . unless we use suicide or shuttle bombing. Suicide bombing would mean the loss of all of our bombers and very likely the majority of our crews. Shuttle bombing, which might involve landing near a friendly submarine, would still be extremely expensive.

Even if planes should get over to Russia they would still face tremendous obstacles in the Russian jet fighter planes. Mr. Baldwin states, "The Russians, though weak in night fighters and radar, are known to possess great numbers of day fighters, many of them jets. Jets are based even in the remote wilds of Siberia, as our Air Force discovered some time ago when one of our planes operating off Alaska was ' "buzzed" ' by Russian jet fighters."

Russia is such a vast land that targets could not be reached by travelling only during night time, and so bomber losses during day time would be very high and atomic bomb wastage considerable.

Furthermore, the United States does not possess accurate maps of the interior of Russia, especially of the area east of the Urals. So much of any attempted bombing might merly be a plowing up of the steppes of Russia.

The number of atomic bombs of the United States, Mr. Baldwin claims, is so limited that it "might well be a one or two — shot effort."

Again such an attack by the United States would cause the Russian Army to spill into western Europe making of a supposed quick atomic blitzkrieg a long drawn-out war of attrition. We would not want to atom bomb Paris or the Hague, Baldwin points out. Yet, such a move of the Russian army is a very real possibility. Baldwin declares, "All of our military leaders concede that today, and for the forseeable future, we could not stop such a move. . . . "

Baldwin then goes on to point out that it would be very hard to get bases for bombing Russian supply lines and industries and furthermore that the Germans found out in their fighting that the Russians do not have many supply lines, the soldiers living off the land. A land invasion of Europe would be necessary.

"Victory, in such a conflict, would be hollow, or nearly so."

"If a major war should come in the near future, and if its costs should be piled upon those of World War II, economic security of the United States would be imperiled as never before, and probably no eventual course —save repudiation of the national debt with all that would mean to every individual—would be possible."

would be severely limited in case of such a war and the authoritarianism in government would increase.

"Casualties would be major, nor would they be limited to the fighting forces; we could not hope to escape some Russian attacks upon our cities, even though made only with conventional bombs."

"But the greatest loss would be in Europe . . . The ideals and culture of western civilization probably would forever be destroyed if war came before recovery from past illness was accomplished."

"Preventive war would, therefore, defeat our own purpose. We could conquer Russia, but you do not defeat ideologies by the sword."

Furthermore, what would the United States do with the vastness of Russia in case of a victory? Its present vexing problems of rehabilitation and reconstruction would be multiplied overwhelmingly.

"There is, therefore, no promise of easy victory and perfect peace in a preventive war. Only a great gamble which would probably lead to blood and suffering, toil and sweat, and perhaps disaster. It would solve nothing; on the contrary, even if it resulted in eventual 'victory' our present difficulties of reconstruction and rehabilitation would be exaggerated; we might indeed, in the process of 'victory' lose what we are trying to defend—our way of life."

Another unmentioned objection is the moral one. Baldwin, a military specialist, declares, " . . . . how can we, a professedly Chritian nation, the leading opponant of the philosophy that the ends justify any means, descend to the expediency of communism?"

Baldwin ends his remarkable article with the statements: "We face a 'time of troubles' but we shall not ease our way by inviting war."

It is evident that action to prevent a third world war should not be based on how destructive the enemy could be to the people of the United States. Such action should be based on Christian love for all men.

But any one not moved by such a love needs to realize that a war with Russia would mean diaster for us. (Anyone who believes that the Russians could easily be licked should be sure to read Hanson Baldwin's article in the July issue of Harper's Magazine.) He also needs to realize that self-seeking and protecting actions on the part of United States industrialists and militarists and a large part of the citizenry are driving us towards war just as surely as the same forces drove us into the first and second world wars. Such an individual needs to come to the place where he sees that for his own welfare he needs to do everything possible to prevent a third world war. God has a way of leading people to a realization of the dead end road they are travelling. It is after such a realization that individuals are converted. Christians who are not exerting their might against war must come to see the dead end of the road which the United States is travelling.

Every Christian needs to pray through to a specific step that he can take every day towards the prevention of a third world war. Maybe it will mean talking to someone else about it or writing to someone in order to win that person to the faith that it is never right to go to war and that as Christians we must learn to live with others in a give and take manner.

To summarize: We are headed towards war. War would mean disaster for the United States. As Christians we must do everything possible to overcome the forces driving us towards war.

PERSONAL SALVATION PREREQUISITE TO SOCIAL EMPHASIS

Occasionally we get letters saying that we ought to present material relating to the conversion of the individual and not so much material on the larger problems. We acknowledge that this is, in part, a sound statement, for it is undoubtedly true that a great many people are not able to concern themselves with the larger problems of mankind because their own personal problems loom so large that they have no energy or interest for the larger issues which affect society as a whole.

Undoubtedly, there are many people who are not moved to do something about the present world situation because they in their own lives have not had an experience of grace which has freed them sufficiently from themselves to lose themselves in a great cause for God's sake. Before individuals can be a healing influence, they themselves must be healed. Consequently, a lot of exhortation today falls upon deaf ears. It is the business of the Christian church and of each born-again individual to seek to lead those still bound in self to an experience of grace that will release them, and to a faith in God that will make them salt and light in this world.

The need for such a release from personal problems before the larger issues can be undertaken is illustrated by an accident that happened a short ways from where this is written. On the evening of July 5 three "drunks" ran into a culvert embankment, upsetting the car and landing the three in the hospital. Observers could hardly understand how three people could be so foolish as to invite such an accident. The point is that the three drunks had little concern about preventing such an accident as long as they were all caught up in a terrific turmoil and emptiness of life which induced them to drink. People not free from sin and self do not drive safely on the highway of life. They do need personal salvation.

Individual Packages to Europe

It is regretted that packages cannot be forwarded to individuals in foreign countries which have been sent to M. C. C. collection centers with that request. All food and clothing shipped through M. C. C. channels is shipped in bulk and distributed in the areas of need to the most needy. It is, therefore, impossible to guarantee delivery of individual packages. When it becomes necessary to forward individual packages, the regular postal channels are recommended.

"These Necessary Things" for 1948

With 50 per cent of the Year passed
Only 28 per cent of the Budget has been raised

Our Goal
An Investment of Twenty-five Dollars, on the average, by each General Conference Member in 1948

AGAIN WE PAUSE FOR INVENTORY

at the close of the first half of 1948. The accompanying graph illustrates our findings as of June 30.

The General Conference Council of Boards, meeting in Chicago on February 17-19, 1948, decided "to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things."

Emergency Relief	$399,100
For. Miss. Board	330,000
Biblical Seminary	68,500
Home Miss. Board	60,000
Board of Education	33,940
Board of Publication	22,000
General Conf. Treas.	13,540
Peace Committee	10,000
Young People's Union	5,200
Women's Missionary Assoc.	2,368
Mutual Aid Board	1,650
Doctrine & Conduct Com.	1,000

Gifts during the past six months have totaled about $265,000, or 28 per cent of the $950,000 goal.

Are you, as an individual member of a General Conference congregation, budgeting your giving? Has your congregation a definite plan to give the proportionate amounts needed for each treasury?

"HITHERTO HATH THE LORD HELPED US"

By Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary of Conference

"Then Samuel took a stone, and set it . . . . . saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

We, too are thankful to the Lord for granting us this year—spiritual blessings in Christ which cannot be calculated in figures, leadings in providence which have assured us of His love and care, a harvest of souls both at home and abroad, a harvest on our fields and wages for our labors which are generally better than we might have had reason to anticipate. Out hearts break forth in thanksgiving to God for His bountiful provision for us.

"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us" also breathes a concern. What if we should prove altogether unworthy of these blessings? What if the Lord should ask us to give account of our stewardship and say, as he did to the Ephesian church, "Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent . . . or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place . . . ."

Fifty per cent of the year has gone beyond recall. We have done only a little better than one-half as well as we might have done—as the goal which we set for ourselves.

Bear with us as we list for your candid consideration the percentages we have given toward our 1948 General budget.

The percentages which have been reached toward the respective goals are as follows:

Doctrine and Conduct Committee	55%
Mennonite Biblical Seminary	48%
Mutual Aid Board	41%
Home Mission Board	34%
Women's Missionary Association	30%
Foreign Mission Board	28%
Emergency Relief Board	25%
Education Board	24%
General Conference Treasury	20%
Peace Committee	19%
Publication Board	15%
Young People's Union	12%

The Doctrine and Conduct Committee is only one that has reached a proportionate part of its budget. The Mennonite Biblical Seminary has also been receiving a fine response to its special appeals.

Certainly we do not wish to say that by our giving we have established the order of importance of these phases of the Lord's work.

Each of these treasuries failing to reach 75 per cent of its anticipated needs by September 30, or 100 per cent by December 31, 1948, will thereby counsel those respective boards or committees to plan for a curbing of their work in 1949. This is no more effective way of counselling our board and committee members to lengthen or shorten the cords of our Christian endeavor, than by giving or withholding that which is the Lord's.

As an example, our Foreign Mission ready cash in our headquarters office, Newton, Kansas, as of June 30, is dow to $5000, which would cover one week's expenses.

During the past two years your executive secretary has also served as conference treasurer. I herewith earnestly call for a rallying to the work which the Lord has entrusted to us.

"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." We are confident that the Lord will fulfill His promise if we yield our all to Him. If we listen we will hear Him saying to us, as He did to His people years ago, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

NEWS BITS

"Eighty per cent of the budget for the fiscal year 1948 is in payment for past wars and the maintenance of our present military establishment. Eighty-five per cent of our total federal budget since 1915 have been for war or preparation or payment for war."

December 10, 1947, Daily News (New York) reported that "Senate Appropriations Committee members .... disclosed that nearly one thousand B-17 bombers were recently destroyed by U.S. Air Forces in Germany while Uncle Sam was furnishing American dollars to Greece and Turkey to purchase second-hand British planes. The B-17's cost $193,000 each."

What are you doing to stop war? What can any one person do? What does God expect us to think and do about Russia?

An atom smashing machine has been installed in Sao Paulo, Brazil. It was purchased by a group of young scientists. They have been engaged in atomic studies for ten years. Brazil has large reserves of uranium and seeks scientific application of atomic energy.

Senator Pepper, of Florida, has said: "The Russians have been guilty of aggressions and have done many things which are offensive to our democratic way of life.But I say, we cannot crush it with force. We must pursue a policy that will encourage backward nations where Communism flourishes to give their people something better than they now have."

Here's a true and false statement for you: "No modern state can be called Christian, nor has it the obligation to conduct its affairs in accord with Christian principles."

An Old Mennonite paper quotes a prominent fundamentalist layman in an eastern city as saying, "Evangelical Christianity is failing because we are making it a matter of creed rather than a way of life." Another Evangelical spokesman is quoted as saying, "Unless Evangelical Protestantism comes down from the clouds of theological bickering and begins to cope with the world's social problems, it is on the way out."

The Western District Conference now has a budget committee which is working on a plan to carry out a budget for raising funds for all of the standing committees of the conference. The proposed plan in short is that each committee present a budget in its report to the annual conference session, that a conference finance committee then pool all of these budgets into one, total budget, and that this committee then make adequate systematic preparation of the conference needs to the churches of the district.

A small hospital has been opened in Cuauhtemoc, Chihuahua, Mexico, under the direction of MCC workers. There are more than fifteen thousand Mennonites in the total community. There has been no hospital within a reasonable distance.

The Church of the Brethren has proposed to the Senate Armed Services Committee a $282 million dollar outlay, which would be one-tenth of a year's selective service cost, to establish hospitals in Russia set up peace departments in our colleges and universities, a UN university, and make possible a thorough study of the possiblities of world federation.

A Pax Christi movement headed by Dr. Albert D. Belden, of England, seeks to get at least five million Christian signers from over the world who will pledge themselves to abolish war from the body of Christ. It is their belief that if five million Christians will refuse to fight each other there will be no war.

The Lindsay Church of the Brethren in California is sponsoring an "adopted sons" program between ourselves and Russia whereby American and Russian youth, on an exchange basis, will live in one another's homes for a time in order to know one another's ways and thoughts.

The great historian, Charles A. Beard, has written a book, the first part of whose title reads, "President Roosevelt and the Coming of the War, 1941." A reviewer points out that the book makes plain that "The president was driving the country towards war, while declaring that there would be no war."

Reinhold Niebuhr has said, "One has the uneasy feeling that our own nation inclines more and more to trust in its superior military power because it has a dark and subconscious awareness of the weakness of its moral and political program."

A report from the great Methodist Conference held recently says that the most controversial subject—the attitude of Methodism on the subject of war—was so expertly written, so eminently fair, and so devotedly Christian, that it was approved by the Conference by approximately a six-to one vote.

Mennonite World Conference

Plans for the Mennonite World Conference to be held at Goshen, Indiana, on August 3-5 and at Newton, Kansas, on August 7-10 are developing favorably. Arrangements have been made for thirty-three delegates and guests from Europe and South America to attend the conference. It is expected that most of the visitors from abroad will be interested in spending some time following the conference visiting various churches, schools, and communities. The M. C. C. is prepared to make arrangements for deputation visits to such places from which requests are received.

There will be representatives from various countries who will be available for speaking engagements for a period of four to six weeks after the World Conference sessions as follows: four from Holland; five from Germany; four from Switzerland; two from France; three from Paraguay; and two from Brazil. A wide range of select talent and material in the fields of Mennonite history, evangelical preaching, religious philosophy, Christian education, and Swiss scenery illustrated in colored slides, is represented by this group of leaders from abroad. In addition, these people have some interesting experiences to share as a result of living under the stress of recent difficult years.

All final arrangements in connection with planning the itineraries will be made by the M. C. C. It is understood that offerings will be received at the times of these individual meetings to cover the travel costs of the deputation visits. All offerings are to be forwarded to the M. C. C., Akron, Pennsylvania, from where expenditures will be authorized and paid.

All requests to have one or more representatives from abroad visit your church or community should be forwarded by persons in a position to make official arrangements locally, to M. C. C., Akron, Pennsylvania, by July 20 indicating your special interests as to subject matter to be presented and the nature of the occasion for which you desire a speaker. Every effort will be made to give each request the fullest consideration possible.

A. Wedel celebrated their silver anniversary. In his opening address, Rev. David Wedel, son of Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Wedel, said, "The house of life must stand on a foundation of faith. The right way to believe in God is to trust Him and make our plans accordingly. The wrong way is to make our human plans first, then pray that they be right." Rev. P. P. Wedel, of Moundridge, based his address of the afternoon on the thirty-fourth Psalm. Each of the honored couples received a valuable Bible and a lovely platform rocker. A reception followed the program with many guests filling and refilling the spacious church parlor in the basement. The members of the Mission Band, a youth organization of the church, served a bounteous supper to all the guests.

Non-resident members are urged to affiliate with a church of their liking, particularly a Mennonite church if there is one in their vicinity.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: On June 22, Hydro had its worst flood in forty years. The water swept over the highway, undermining it and swallowing slabs of concrete. HOME MISSION BOARD SENDS GESANGBUCH TO GERMANY

By special arrangement between the Home Mission Board and the Mennonite Central Committee, three hundred copies of the German GESANGBUCH, published by the General Conference Board of Publication, are being shipped immediately to Europe for distribution among leaders of refugee groups. If we are not greatly mistaken, there will be a great many of these refugees to whom the words of the Psalmist will take on a new meaning, "Sing unto the Lord a new song." These refugees, many of whom have grown up through the years have known nothing except persecution, shut-downs of printing presses, foreclosures of publication houses, and have spent endless months on treks of persecution and escape, will also find some old songs—old chorales which in generations past have sprung up in the human hearts of men who are confined in torture chambers, who hid in caves, "of whom the world was not worthy."

New songs and old songs—but deep songs, all of them, of human suffering, joy, inspiration, and heavenly vision. Old songs and new songs—carried forward from generation to generation via the printed page! No, "Man shall not live by bread alone."

REV. J. W. NICKEL FAMILY TO FLY TO PARAGUAY

The Board of Home Missions of the General Conference extended a call to Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Nickel, formerly of Bethel College and Buhler, Kansas, to serve two years among our Mennonite brethren in Paraguay.

It was considered essential for efficient service to ordain Rev. Nickel as Elder. This service took place Sunday afternoon, June 27, in the Zoar Church, Langham, Saskatchewan. This is the home church of Rev. J. W. Nickel, and his father, Elder J. J. Nickel, had charge of the service and performed the ordination for his son, using I Tim. 4:12-16 as text. Rev. G. G. Epp, Rosthern, Saskatchewan, representing the Board of Home Missions, preached the sermon, basing his thoughts on I Cor. 4:1-2.

The Zoar choir, under the direction of Karl Enns, rendered a number of appropriate selections. At the close of the service, Rev. J. W. Nickel responded using Ephesians 6:18-20 as his text. A fellowship meal was served in the basement of the church, and the many friends extended felicitations and the Lord's constant nearness for their assignment.

Plans for Trip

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Nickel with their two small daughters, Gwendolin and Lois aged five and two years respectively, will arrive at MCC, Akron, Pa., July 16. Menno Travel Service has made all arrangements for the trip by plane. Sunday July 18 the Nickels will be in some of the Eastern District churches. July 20 is the date they are to leave New York for Rio de Janerio. Their first stop is to be Sao Paulo, Brazil, where they are to visit with Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Kaufman. From there they will fly to Curitiba, Brazil where they are to visit all the General Conference churches. After this the flight will be continued and concluded in Asuncion, Paraguay.

Rev. Nickel is to visit all the colonies, but he is expected to spend as much time as possible in the new Colony, Volendam before 1949. Plans after that will have to be made according to needs.

Our prayer is that, if it be the Lord's will, the Nickel family might enjoy good health and Brother Nickel might be able to help many to attain to a higher spiritual life. Friends who might wish to write may address: Rev. J. W. Nickel, Mennonite Central Committee, Casilla de Correo 166, Asuncion, Paraguay.—Faithfully yours in Christ, A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary.

Young Germans sitting in a "youth parliament" some time ago threatened the Württemberg state parliament with a demonstration if it did not pass a law that conscientious objectors would not be punished during wartime. The young people also demanded that a paragraph outlawing war be added to the state constitution.

Northern Dist. Conf. Con

reported by

THE fifty-fifth session of the Northern District Conference convened at the Bethel Mennonite Church, twenty miles north of Wolf Point, Montana, June 5-9. This conference brought the delegates to the Western edge of the district, only some forty-five miles from the Canadian border. It was quite an undertaking for a congregation of less than eighty members, but everyone was well cared for. We observed that some of the local church members entertained as many as twenty-four guests for the evening meal! We also learned to appreciate the distance Montana folks have to drive. Since the Bethel Church was too small to accommodate the group, the evening meetings were held in the High School Auditorium in Wolf Point; this involved driving a round trip of forty miles each day — that is, if you didn't happen to stay farther away than the Bethel Church.

Conference Theme

The theme of the conference was "The Moral Attributes of God." Instead of inviting a guest speaker for the conference, ministers within the conference were assigned topics and spoke inspiringly on such subjects as: "The Holiness of God," "The Truth of God," "Love of God," "The Eternal Purposes of God with Man," "The Perfection of God." We were all made to realize again how challenging and practical these great doctrinal studies can be.

Statistics

The total membership of the Northern District Conference now stands at 5,780. The grand total of all contributions is $424,613.72, near a half-million dollars. These contributions show an increase of $105,706 over last year's total contributions. Some other significant variations in the general picture of giving in the Northern District are: a decrease of about $5,500 for home missions and an increase of $6,300 for foreign missions. The writer rubbed his eyes when he saw the next figure on education: schools and education shows an increase of $19,269 over last year; Emergency Relief has increased about $33,700. As the past secretary of our conference, Mr. Henry M. Harder, who supplied these figures, pointed out, these totals indicate the trend of the times and also reveal the flexibility of our program of giving. Mr. Harder also called attention to the Bethel Church at Wolf Point, the host church, stating that this church tops the list on average per member giving; this year it was an average of $289 per member; last year it was even more, $436 per member!

Delegates

The conference at Wolf Point was not a large one, due probably to the fact that it was off to one side of the district. There were 90 delegates in attendance representing 195 votes and 32 congregations.

City Missions

The Evangelization Committee (called Home Mission Board in other districts) has launched out into

Montana Vastness

city mission work where it hopes to reach scattered Mennonite families. Such work has recently been undertaken at Frazier, Montana, by Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Toews; at Glenndive, Montana, by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Harder; and at Wolf Point by Mr. Lawrence Goertz. At Frazier the conference has been offered a church building for missionary purposes among the Indians on the Reservation there. A city mission has also been started at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Conference to Incorporate

The offer of property to the conference compelled the conference to consider the matter of incorporation. Its Executive Committee was therefore empowered to arrange for the incorporation of the conference.

Conscription

It was resolved that the Northern District support any plan which the Mennonite Central Committee would recommend for conscientious objectors in the event of peace-time conscription (which now is a reality). The secretary of the conference was also authorized to prepare a statement, restating our position in regard to military training and send it to the proper authorities in Washington.

Dr. S. F. Pannabecker was a guest of the Conference and forcefully presented to us the challenge and needs of our Mennonite Biblical Seminary at Chicago. Other guests from a greater distance were Rev. Erwin Wedel and Miss Elizabeth Foth.

Young People

Besides the work carried on in cooperation with the Young People's Union of the General Conference and publishing within the district a paper called, The Northern Light, the young people elected a special retreat committee to make plans for the 1949 All-District Retreat. A special

Mission Society

Mrs. Orlando Waltner spoke to the members of the Ladies Mission Societies on the difference God makes in the homes of people in India. Mrs. Alfred Habeggar spoke about the power of God on the mission field. This was followed by an interesting and active panel discussion on "The Work and Activities of the Women's Missionary Societies."

Officers

The new conference president is Rev. J. J. Regier of Freeman, South Dakota. The vice president is Rev. Erland Waltner of Mountain Lake, Minnesota; secretary, I. A. Derksen of Huron, South Dakota; and statistician, H. M. Harder of Butterfield, Minnesota. The conference will meet next time at the Bethesda Mennonite Church, at Henderson, Nebraska.—Willard K. Claassen

—Mennonites and Brethren and Friends and Schwenkfelders again got together on July 10 in a Friends' Meeting House at Jenkintown, Pennsylvania. Freeman H. Swartz gave a message on "Some Basic Christian Convictions." In the evening Clyde W. Taylor, Secretary of Affairs of the National Association of Evangelicals, gave an address on, "Christian Action in the Nation's Capitol."

—Rev. Albert Penner, pastor of a large Congregational Church in Mount Holyoke, Massachusetts, is one of the twelve or so men who will represent the Congregational Church of the United States at the World Assembly of Churches at Amsterdam, this summer.

—Brudertal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Our church was host to a peace institute sponsored by the young people of the Friedenstal, Lehigh, Johannestal, and the First Mennonite Church of Hillsboro, on June 22. Rev. Lester Hostetler was moderator of a panel discussion on the subject of, "How May I Best Serve My God, My Fellowmen, and My Country in such a Time as This." Henry Guhr, Harvey Jantz, Mrs. David P. Ewert, and Wm. Hiebert, took part in the discussion. It was brought out that we must have a will to do the right which will help to create love and peace amongst our fellowmen. In order not to let our young people drift away from their homes and churches we must inaugurate recreation that is constructive for mind and body. One suggestion was that the high schools and churches should cooperate in planning their activities in order not to take the interest away from the churches. The desire was that another institute like this be held in the near future. —Corr.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, grandson of the founder of the China Inland Mission, was the speaker at our mission festival and Children's Day, June 27. The offering for missions amounted to $2,500. Fifty young people attended the tenth annual young people's retreat which was held at the Stony Point Bible Camp, June 13-18. Rev. J. J. Regier, of Freeman, South Dakota, Rev. L. R. Amstutz, of Mountain Lake, and Mrs. John P. Suderman, of Mountain Lake, were the leaders. Our pastor, Rev. Erland Waltner, has completed his studies at Eastern Baptist Seminary, Philadelphia. Last Sunday a Knabe grand piano was dedicated.—Helen Penner, Corr.

—Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota: The annual Sunday school picnic of the North, South, and Bethany churches was held on July 5, with a varied program in the forenoon, picnic lunch, and recreational activities in the afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kauffman, of North Newton have been visiting in this community where they formerly were members of our church. Mr. Kauffman is curator of the Kauffman Museum on the Bethel College Campus. Rev. Willard Claassen and family plan to leave for a month's rest and vacation at the parental homes in Kansas. —Correspondent.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Dr. Ralph Kauffman, of Bethel College, talked on, "The Inner Peace," as he brought us the morning message while Rev. J. M. Regier was convalescing from an operation. This year we are having our Sunday evening union meetings out in the country where it is quiet and peaceful. During July they will be held on our church grounds, and during August on the Brudertal Church grounds.—Mrs. Arnold A. Plenert, Corr.

—Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas: "Some Differences of Modernism and Fundamentalism," were discussed at the evening service on June 27. The pastor is beginning a series of messages on Ephesians.—Ella Voth, Corr.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

President S. F. Panabecker has announced a new appointment to the faculty of next year. Dr. Franklin H. Littell of the University of Michigan will teach during the third quarter of 1949 as special lecturer in Anabaptist Studies. His research at Yale University in the Anabaptist conception of the church has attracted wide attention in Protestantism in general and in the various branches of Mennonites. He has lectured at Goshen, Bethel, and Mennonite Biblical Seminary. He is a graduate of Cornell College in Iowa, Union Theological Seminary, and Yale University.

This week the Young Adult Conference was the outstanding event in the life of the school. On Friday night the group attended a service in the K. A. M. Temple of the Jewish faith.

The Washington Scene

By Paul Goering

July 6. Last week representatives from twenty-one church and pacifist organizations met in Washington to discuss problems of COs under the new draft and also means for providing them with information, counsel, and advice on the draft, classification and appeal procedure.

The Mennonites and Brethren plan to continue the National Service Board for Religious Objectors as a centralized agency with an enlarged staff to serve anyone who asks for information or assistance and to send out information on regulations to ministers or others assisting COs. Churches and pacifist organizations can join the NSBRO in whatever capacity they desire.

War Resisters and Fellowship of Reconciliation people stated that neither the NSBRO because of its past CPS connections nor a new agency with its present ideological basis of cooperation with the draft could fully serve them or some of the COs they represent. These groups plan to organize an agency which will help defend any draft objector who refuses to register or otherwise cooperate with the draft on ground of conscience in its broadest form.

General Hershey, prospective head of the Selective Service System, spoke in the afternoon and answered questions. He stated that of the five million men required to register Selective Service will not bother to send Classification Questionnaires to veterans or married men who are deferred by law but process only those who will be eligible for induction.

Selective Service plans to register by age groups eighteen through twenty-five-year old men between August 16 and September 15. The law permits inductions after September 22 but Selective Service has not indicated how soon they will begin.

June 28. Under the Displaced Persons Act of 1948 passed by Congress in the closing days of the session a maximum of 220,000 D. P.s can be admitted as permanent residents into the U.S. between July 1, 1948, and July 1, 1950.

A displaced person is one who was forced from his residence as a result of the war and who cannot return to his country because of persecution or fear of persecution on account of race, religion, or political opinions. To be eligible a D.P. must be a concern of the International Refugee Organization and must have entered Germany, Austria, or Italy between September 1, 1939, and December 22, 1945. D.P.s in the Russian zones after January 1, 1948, are not eligible.

Each D.P. must also qualify under the immigration laws of the U.S. and in addition have assurance of employment and safe and sanitary housing without displacing anyone else from such employment or housing. The spouse and unmarried dependent child or children under twenty-one years of age of an eligible D.P. are also eligible if they otherwise qualify.

The Act specifies that at least 40 per cent of the visas must go to D.P.s from Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania instead of being issued equitably on the basis of the proportion which the D.P.s of any nationality bear to the total number. This was one of the bitterly fought points on which the House conferees yielded to the Senate in order that any D.P. bill could be passed at all. The effect of this is said to discriminate against Catholics but chiefly against Jews.

Under preferences established by the Act at least 30 per cent of the visas must be issued to D.P.s in agricultural pursuits. Within the preferences priority is given first to D.P.s who bore arms against the enemies of the U.S. in World War II and second to those located in D.P. camps and centers. Mennonites generally will not qualify under these priorities because they neither bore arms nor have they entered the IRO D.P. camps. The Mennonites in the MCC camps are only the extreme hardship cases who are unable to sustain themselves on the German economy. However, because of IRO recognition, their high proportion of farmers, and the MCC machinery well-organized for processing D.P.s abroad and resettling them in the U.S. Mennonite D.P.s will likely benefit from this legislation.

A three-man Commission appointed by the President with Senate approval will administer the Act and deal with the complicated problems. A thorough investigation and written report covering character, history, and eligibility of each D.P. must be prepared by the Government before he can be admitted to the United States. Regular immigration officials will handle most of this procedure.

SISTER HILLEGONDA SAYS THANK YOU

Newton, Kansas, July 6.—My hundredth birthday is over. Through God's grace I had a very nice blessed day. Many came to greet me. I got many nice flowers, cakes, some very nicely decorated, and other tokens of kind remembrance—about three hundred letters and cards. I was honored by a letter from our governor.

Mission workers and societies, relatives and friends in different countries were so kind as to send me birthday greetings. It is not possible for me to write to everyone, but I greet all through this writing and say "thank you."—Hillegonda v. d. Smissen

PEACE OF MIND, by Joshua Loth Liebman, 1946, Simon and Schuster, New York. $2.50.

At times you'll find yourself arguing with the author of this book; at other times you'll be saying hearty "amen's." When you have finished the book you will probably say that it was good that you and he met in this book that has been the best seller of non-fiction recently.

Dr. Joshua Loth Liebman, a reformed Jewish rabbi and one of the leading radio preachers in America today, points out in this short but helpful book of two hundred pages that one of the great causes of the restlessness in the lives of people is the tendency to deny and choke emotions rather than channel them.

Dr. Liebman does not try to make a case of Judaism, nor, of course, for Christianity though he draws insights from both. (The fact that the author is a Jew should not hinder us from hearing what he has to say; for mature people read a book like they eat chicken—eat the meat and throw away the bones; and to put it metaphorically, this book is not a bony chicken.) His main problem is to show that in so many areas of life today, and particularly in the area of religion we have denied or misinterpreted the role of the emotions, and that with the insights of clinical psychology and psychiatry people may be helped to find inner harmony.

The author discusses the abnormal expressions of emotion and the normal role of emotion involved in conscience, fear, bereavement, death, love and hate, and faith in God.

The book will be helpful to people who have difficulty understanding the working of their consciences, to people who have unexplainable fears, to those trying to surmount feelings of inferiority, to those who are afraid that religion and the church have been made unnecessary by psychology, to those who wonder how much emotion they should express in bereavement, to those who think that faith in God is not respectable intellectually.

The author makes the surprising statement that we do not love others more because we do not love ourselves enough. All of us know ourselves to be full of tensions, passions and thoughts for which we hate ourselves; in that situation we cannot help others. Liebman suggests that if we understand that these are the common experiences of man we will come to live above them; of course, he insists that this understanding must lead to a creative renunciation of those manifestations of our emotions that hinder us in the fulfillment of God's purpose for us. Sublimated expression rather than ascetic and agonizing repression should be the rule. In all this, however, one has the feeling that the matter of forgiveness and the Christian doctrine of atonement back of it, which of course a non-Christian Jew would be reluctant to mention, are conspicuous for their absence. For, understanding that we are all sinners—seeing that we are all "in the same boat" — may give a sense of release, but will it satisfy a conscience stained by evil?

Of course, the author is not presenting a Christian theology and it should be stated that for the Christian this book will be helpful only as he relates the materials to his knowledge of the Christian way of life.

The best chapter in the book as far as the reviewer is concerned is entitled "Grief's Slow Wisdom" in which the author discusses bereavement. He shows why the present tendency to avoid expression of grief is dangerous and unnatural. Grief is bound to come to the surface naturally or otherwise. The true way of healing and peace of mind lies in the sincere expression of the amount of grief we feel. His suggestions on situations where small children are close to the bereaved one are unusually good.

This book will prove very valuable to Christians who wish to maintain a faith relevant to the world's deep needs.—Jacob J. Enz

The Christian Life

by Ramon Jantz

One of the greatest sermons ever preached we find recorded in Matthew chapters 5,6 and 7. This all important sermon, which so wonderfully teaches the ideal way of Christian living was delivered by one whose life had neither spot nor blemish and coincided perfectly with what he preached. Therefore we must agree that he taught as one having authority, and if so why are we not obedient?

"Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: and the rain descended and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rain descended and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon the house and it fell: and great was the fall of it." Unto which men are we likened? Certainly our desire is to be as the wise and not as the foolish and certainly we would not build upon the sand but rather upon the rock, "Christ Jesus." Then it is most important to stress the true Christian way of living as taught by Jesus. The problem which however confronts most young people is "How can we live a life that is in harmony with that of Christ and His teachings. In church on Sunday morning, at a Christian meeting in the week, in Bible school or even in a Christian college it is usually not so difficult to "Seek first the kingdom of God and its righteousness." What about the time spent away from these places? God has given every person twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week; what His children do with this time is most important, not only to themselves but also to their fellowmen.

While individual Christians and individual church groups have long caught the vision of their responsibilities and have thus taught the way of true Christian living, by far the majority have neglected it entirely. In our own Mennonite churches, too, it seems difficult, especially for the young people to live a life worthy of two doctrines or the overemphasizing of one and undermining the importance of the other, namely, "New Birth" and "The Christian walk."

Some have tried in vain to live a good, pure, Christ-like life because they have not Christ in their hearts. That is they have not experienced new birth; Christ has not been accepted as personal Saviour and Lord. If anything is to grow it must first have life, and likewise if we wish to grow in grace and knowledge of our Saviour we needs must be born again. Now then if we have great difficulties in yielding to the will of the Lord, let us make certain that our relationship with God is right and humbly accept the finished work of the Lamb.

On the other hand some have expected that with new birth ended all trials and temptations and that all was now finished. One had no more to do but tell others what Christ had done for them, forgetting that even the disciples of Jesus had to be reminded to watch and even they needed to be taught the way of Christian living. It is not either the new birth, or the Christian walk. No, not one or the other, but both are essential in pleasing our Creator and attaining the heavenly home. Since God's word is the final authority for all Christian doctrine we should follow the pattern of true Christian living as it is given to us in the Scriptures. To help us follow this pattern, I would suggest three musts which should follow new birth.

The first is Prayer, Someone has said "Prayer is the breathing of the Soul." A Christian's life can not thrive without ceaseless, prevailing prayer. If you would live true to Jesus, then you must talk with Him.

Secondly the Christian must Study, Paul writes to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The Christian should search the Scriptures daily and yield to the Holy Spirit as He enlightens the understanding. If you would live true to Jesus, then you must learn of Him.

Thirdly the Christian must Serve. Jesus said, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your servant." Here is the all important way of finding Christ real. No doubt, humble Christian service will do more in helping one live a true Christ-like life at all times then anything else. Christian service will inspire us to be concerned about the lost and dying world. It will prompt us to pray. It will teach us to live peacefully with all men. It will lead us into closer fellowship with God and His children. It will keep us occupied to the extent that we will have no time for worldly pleasures, and as we faithfully serve sin will flee. The opportunities are many. Voluntary service is a great venture for God and is especially adapted to give young people an opportunity for service. If you would live true to Jesus, then you must serve Him.

If we as Christian young people would lead a well balanced, Christ-like life, and if all who come from a peace church would be faithful "Doers of the word" living, teaching and preaching the whole Gospel, our mission as a peace church would be more effective and our life would certainly be more pleasing to our Master.

1948 Goodwill Christmas Bundles

Merry Christmas in the summertime? Why should anyone say "Merry Christmas" now? Because so many children in other lands cannot have a happy Christmas unless we help them and because it takes so long to send the bundles across the ocean we must get our 1948 Goodwill Christmas Bundles ready now!

Many of you shared last year with children in need. Some of you received thank you letters from those who received your bundles. We are always made happy when we know that others are happy. Reports sent back tell us of the great joy the Christmas Bundles gave:

"For some it was the first time they had gotten anything like a personal package to open and to enjoy."

"He could not say thank you because of the tears, but he could grasp my hand with deep gratitude."

"I wish you might have seen his happy face as he opened the bundle."

"How I wish the people back home could have seen the shining eyes, the happy smiles, and could have heard the heartfelt thank you's which were spoken."

"My children were so happy; they jumped as high as the table."

"You may be sure that the children and the tiny tots, too, will not forget you in their childish prayers."

"It is also a part of Christmas to receive; to be able to take back the thank you's and to be able to receive the gifts they want to give you as a few eggs, a quart of milk, walnuts, apples, flowers, etc."

"As the American children have given you these useful gifts 'In the Name of Christ' the best way you can show your appreciation is by using these things in the right way, for they have been given to help you."

Happy French girl with Christmas Bundle

"One little girl was so bashful that she couldn't get up courage to come forward for her bundle. The teacher said afterward that this little girl was simply overcome with emotion that she, the worst girl in the school, should get such a package."

"The New Testaments included by MCC were a fitting and most valued addition. They showed far better than any words could, the spirit in which these gifts were sent."

These are just a few parts of the letters and reports sent to MCC telling how your Goodwill Christmas Bundles were given out and received. All of the relief workers wrote to say that the bundles were so lovely, but that they did not have enough bundles for all the needy children.

You have an opportunity to share your Christmas joys and help needy children to have a Merry Christmas this year. There is a possibility that you may be able to start interesting correspondences with friends overseas.

You can pack bundles for children between the ages of one and sixteen years. Your gifts should be wrapped in turkish towels and pinned with safety pins. Before you pack your bundle, be sure to follow the directions in the folder which tells what to put into the bundle and how to pack it. If you have not already received this descriptive folder telling all about 1948 Goodwill Christmas Bundles, write to:

GOODWILL CHRISTMAS BUNDLE PROJECT
MENNONITE CENTRAL COMMITTEE
AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA

Those living in Canada should write to

GOODWILL CHRISTMAS BUNDLE PROJECT
MENNONITE CENTRAL COMMITTEE
223 KING STREET EAST
KITCHENER, ONTARIO

Each bundle must have attached to the outside of the towel the Packing Label which is to be cut out of the folder. After the bundles arrive at the MCC office, Testaments in the various languages will be added to the bundles before they are packed for shipment. In order that our relief workers can distribute the bundles to children at Christmas-time, all your bundles must be sent in BEFORE AUGUST 14, 1948.

These bundles will be sent to the various countries where there is the greatest need. The workers will then distribute your bundles of Christmas joy "In the Name of Christ."

Draft Registration May Begin August 16

On June 24 the President signed the Selective Service Act of 1948. This law has many implications affecting the young men of this country, and in particular those who for conscience sake are opposed to military service. The Selective Service Act contains a provision for conscientious objectors which reads as follows:

> "SEC. 6 (j) Nothing contained in this title shall be construed to require any person to be subject to combatant training and service in the armed forces of the United States who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form. Religious training and belief in this connection means an individual's belief in a relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation, but does not include essentially political, sociological, or philosophical views or a merely personal moral code. Any person claiming exemption from combatant training and service because of such conscientious objections whose claim is sustained by the local board shall, if he is inducted into the armed forces under this title, be assigned to noncombatant service as defined by the President, or shall, if he is found to be conscientiously opposed to participation in such noncombatant service, be deferred."

It is expected that registration of all men between the ages of eighteen and twenty-six will take place beginning about August 16. Details on the exact procedures to follow and the forms to be filled out are not yet available, but attempt will be made to keep pastors of congregations informed on the essential information as it becomes available. The deferrment of conscientious objectors is a provision which should be considered a serious responsibility, on the part of the individuals so deferred, as well as the entire church.

HERE IS A C. E. TOPIC

"U. S. prisons—a Disgrace," is a subject that could well be discussed at some C. E. meeting. If we do not go as far as visiting those in prison, we might as well go so far, however, as to concern ourselves with some of the conditions in our federal prisons.

In them prisoners are kept in steel cages. Unsanitary conditions frequently prevail so that the same facilities are shared by the diseased and the undiseased and the flies. Routine is very rigid, and guards may take more than their authority. Men go insane in these institutions. Prisoner's mail is intercepted coming in and going out, is read and censored, and his correspondence is limited to close relatives. He may write two letters a week and receive seven. During visiting periods his and his relative's conversation is listened to by a guard. He is not always allowed to receive the gifts sent him by his loved ones. Food is sometimes very unwholesome. One former C. O. prisoner reports that frankfurters with an eighth of an inch of green mold on them were frequently served. He also reports that he has seen inmates retch at the sight of food placed on their plates. Beating and torturing of inmates and the use of "strip cells" in the federal bureau of prisons is reported to be a fairly common practice. These conditions vary from prison to prison, but the men in charge of our prisons largely determine the kind of prisons that the country will have. These men are not always the most high minded.

If you want to find out more about federal prisons, get in touch with some conscientious objectors who happened to be in them during the past war, or write to Alternative, Box 827, Church Street Station, New York 8, New York. The Reader's Guide may also be consulted for various articles on federal prisons.

Made in America

In our local Rotary Club, we had as our guest Dick Amerein. Some of you saw him play football for K. U. I never saw a man handle a football like he did. I've seen him all over a field. He was one of the first back from the South Pacific. I told him I knew he probably could not talk like he could pack a football, but just to get up and tell his friends what he had done and seen. He was no speaker, he said, but he got up, and in 30 seconds he told us more than I have ever heard in a like time. I can see him now, standing there. It ran like this—

"I was up 15,000 feet when I got it. I managed to bail out before I hit, dropped in the water, saw as I was dropping an island about seven miles off. I started swimming as soon as I could cut loose. There were sharks. They came around. I did what I had been taught, slapped my hands or my feet together to make a noise in the water. The sharks would go away, come back again in about fifty yards. I kept swimming. I landed on the island, crept in the bushes, rested a bit, started looking around. I saw a Jap asleep. I dropped a big rock on him, bashed in his brains, saw the brains ooze out— a man asleep. It was me or him. I took his shoes, took his pistol. With his pistol I killed two other Jap officers, dodged others, ranged that island for seven days and nights. I was picked up, brought home. I still have that pistol, have it here——" and the crowd broke out in applause. But Dick stood there, white as a sheet, suddenly. He lifted a hand to still the handclapping, held up the pistol, read from it.

240 in M.C.C. Summer Service

Word from Europe indicates that the group of Mennonite students and European Voluntary Service workers arrived safely and are proceeding on their itinerary of visiting, learning and working.

Thirteen MCC Summer Service Units have been opened in the U. S., Canada, Mexico and Europe. Approximately 240 young people have volunteered to participate in this work. This number does not include approximately 30 workers who are serving on a longer term basis in the year-round service projects.

Recently prepared has been a set of slides on the MCC Voluntary Service work in Mexico. These slides depict Mexican life and culture, the Mennonite colonies in Mexico, and the activities of the Service Unit. Write to Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Some Indian Test Papers

(The following are excerpts from tests given to students in India. They tell what the students have learned about Christianity. These questions were mailed to the editor by Miss Ada Stoltzfus of New Delhi, India. There have been some corrections in grammar and spelling.)

Question: What did "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," mean according to the traditions? What does it mean to you?

"According to the tradition on the Sabbath day (you were) not permitted or allowed to take a burden equal the weight of a dry fig. On that day nobody was allowed to work. On the Sabbath day a tailor cannot thrust even a needle in his shirt. A man cannot take any burden which is light or heavy. But, if there is a father who has a child and because that child is small he cannot walk, then his father can take him on his shoulders. But, in the meantime, the child has a tiny piece of stone. And because the boy is on his father's shoulder and the stone is in that baby's hand, then its meaning is that the father carrying the stone breaks the Sabbath day? No, the father does not break the law of Sabbath day.

"Suppose one man is lame. His one leg is a wooden leg. And if he walks on the Sabath day, then he breaks the law of Sabbath day. No, he does not break the law of Sabbath day.

It means to me that what-ever is necessary to do on Sabbath day can be done. As on Sabbath day we can cook our food. We can give food and water to our animals. If anybody is sick in one village some miles away from our house and he calls us, then we should go. On the whole whatever things are really necessary to do on Sabbath day we can do."

Question: Explain the dispute about the Mosaic law.

"In Jerusalem there was a dispute about the Mosaic law that no Jew can become a disciple of Jesus if he is not circumcised. He can not sit or eat with them without circumcision. James was the leader and there were also Saul and Barnabas and Peter at the conference. James stood and began to say that Christ is for everyone whether he is circumcised or not. God has chosen every one. Jesus gave his life for everyone. Only the thing they can't do, i. e., they must not worship idols, nor eat the meat of dead things, etc. Thus in the conference it was decided that everyone become the disciple of Jesus whether Jew or Gentile. We must not keep the ceremony laws today because instead of every sacrifices which people did in ancient time to get salvation from their sin, we don't need that because Christ died instead of those sacrifices. He gave his blood for us. So we do not need ceremonial laws."

Question: "Tell of the life and character of Paul." (Answered by a Hindu student and not a Christian)

"Paul was a real follower of Jesus Christ. First he was the persecutor of the Christians, but he became the best lover of Christ. Due to this change his trust was real in Jesus.

"He put himself in preaching of 'good news.' He tried his best to spread the principles of Jesus. He was troubled and persecuted severely, but he went on his preaching.

"He was brave and bold also. He started on his journey with two friends only. He was not a coward due to the faith in Jesus. In reality Jesus helped him. He could make fiery speeches. He preached in such a way that the men of other religion were attracted towards him and became Christians. He was a good lecturer. He won the sorcerer, Elymus, and became famous. Although he was stoned and driven out, he did not fear a bit and worked regularly. He established so many churches in various places.

"I appreciated most in this course how Paul was changed and he preached boldly."

Peace Teams Plan Summer

Three peace teams met at Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana, during the week of June 21, for a week's joint study and preparation under the guidance of the Peace Section of the Mennonite Central Committee. A team sponsored by the (Old) Mennonites is visiting churches in the Mid-U. S. A General Conference team is visiting churches in western Canada. An M. C. C. team goes to Ontario.

Week-end institutes are being especially planned. An informal fellowship meeting with the young people on Friday evening, a discussion of peace issues on Saturday evening, and a program on practical applications Sunday afternoon outlines the general plan of the institutes.

DWIGHT PLATT WAS THE AUTHOR

The article, 'Human Rights — the Key to World Peace", which appeared on page fifteen of the June 29 issue of The Mennonite, was written by Dwight Platt of Route 2, Newton, Kansas. It was also erroneously stated that it won first place for him. This should have read second place. Dwight was a student in the Newton High School this past year.

Ramon Jantz lives in Drake, Saskatchewan. He has attended Rosthern Bible Acadamy and is this summer serving on a peace team which is visiting churches of Western Canada.

Pacific District Conf. Holds Forty-ninth Session

By Earl Salzman

Aberdeen, Idaho, June 23, 1948. The entertaining church, one of the largest in the Pacific District Conference with a total church membership of 356, is located in Aberdeen, an Idaho village of about one thousand inhabitants. The delegates were immediately made to feel at home by a formal weclome from the pastor, Rev. Henry Harder. With the continued hospitality and generosity on the part of the church membership, all delegates testified that the host church did her part well.

The Pacific District

The Pacific District Conference is composed of twenty churches located in the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and California. A glance at the map will reveal that there is a distance of approximately 1,700 miles between the churches of northern Washington and those of southern California. Some ninety delegates from these twenty churches with a conference membership of 3,408 were in attendance.

The Conference Theme

The Conference theme, "Ye Are My Witnesses," and the conference theme song, "Far and Near the Fields Are Teeming," with the addresses of Rev. A. E. Kreider, President of the Foreign Mission Board, and the messages of Mrs. F. J. Isaac from India, led the conference to take on a strong missionary tone.

Evangelism

Four churches in the district are not fully self-supporting. Two thousand and forty dollars is the amount allotted these four churches; one to receive two hundred and forty dollars and the three to receive six hundred each. In addition the Evangelization Committee is allotted two thousand dollars to carry on further evangelistic work. This committee is now to take over the office of "Pastor at Large" with more emphasis on evangelism.

District Planning and Coordination

A meeting of all the conference committees is to be held sometime during the middle of the conference year to consider ways of harmonizing the conference work. Fifteen thousand man miles is the estimated travelling distance. Four hundred dollars as travelling expense was placed in the conference budget to meet this item. This received strong support from the delegates.

Young People Move Forward

A budget of $1,990 was adopted by the conference young people. Of this amount $1,200 is to help in the support of Malcom Wenger, missionary to the Cheyenne Indians at Busby, Montana. Other items in the young people's budget are: Pacific District Conference $265; Pacific District Young People's Project $75; Missionary work $75; Volunteer Units $150; Mennonite $75; Puerto Rico $150. Mr. Elmer Isaak of Aberdeen, Idaho, was elected President for the coming year.

Women's Missionary Society

The Friday evening session of the conference was in charge of the Women's Missionary Society with Mrs. W. Harley King, President of the society presiding. Mrs F. J. Isaac brought a missionary message, in which she made the significant statement that, "many people in India are searching the New Testament with the hope of finding the power Ghandi had." The missionary offering received was $233. Mrs. W. Harley King has been re-elected as President for the coming year.

Our Educational Institutions

Reports from the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bethel College and the Educational Committee were read respectively by A. E. Kreider, P. K. Regier and H. B. Dirks. The reports concerning the Seminary and Bethel College reveal continued progress in these educational institutions. An increased student body calls for more facilities to meet the growing need in each of these institutions.

The Educational Committee stressed the importance of Teachers Training Courses in our churches; that the teaching ministry should be considered a God-given calling, that we need more of the old fashioned Sunday school conventions with a positive gospel emphasis. The report also expressed a desire for a closer tie-up with the General Conference Board of Education.

The Peace Committee

A panel discussion was arranged by the Peace Committee for the first meeting of the Conference. Rev. Clyde Dirks presided; those on the panel were: Willard Wiebe, P. K. Regier, Earl Salzman, Paul Roth and George Kopper. Vital questions were raised during the discussion. Many testified that this was one of the outstanding meetings during the entire conference. Later in the conference a report prepared by Rufus Franz was read by Rev. Clyde Dirks. The report emphasized that the doctrine of peace calls for a consistent Christian life at home in business, in the church, and community. A plea was made in the report that the conference loyally support our peace program, and it is understood that the peace committee receives the same consideration concerning traveling allowance as well as all other conference committees.

Conference Statistics

The statistical chart reveals that the total giving of all the churches for all causes was $224,679. The First Mennonite Church of Reedley, California, ranks highest in total contribution with the sum of $38,183. The Menno Church at Lind, Washington, stands highest by way of per capita giving with $286.88.

Officers Elected

Rev. Paul Roth of Barlow, Oregon, was elected President; Rev. P. D. Unruh of Colfax, Washington, was elected Vice-President; Marvin Linscheid of Aberdeen, Idaho, was re-elected Secretary and Jno. C. Jantz of Odessa, Washington, was re-elected Treasurer. The invitation extended by the First Mennonite Church of Upland, California, to hold the fiftieth Conference at that place was accepted.

Let the M.C.C. Invite Deferred C.O.s To Serve

While the draft legislation was being discussed there was concern on the part of C.O.'s that in event of passage they be permitted to operate a program of service in accord with their convictions. Now the government has deferred C.O.'s This puts the weight of choice on the C. O.

During the last war the C.O.'s expressed much interest in doing foreign relief work at a time when the government said, "No." This interest should be an abiding one. It ought to be existent among our young people now. The need for such service is certainly still existent. Will C.O's now that they are not being forced to do certain service use their freedom to elect to do such service as relief work? Th United States government, with its program of rehabilitation in Europe, should certainly welcome such service.

Not only would the service meet a definite need now, but it would also be proof to the government that during time of war we would be able to design our own program of action and make a vital contribution to the general welfare with it.

There are in all Mennonite communities now a lot of young people who are very much concerned about the respect that their fellowmen will accord them. Some will undoubtedly be tempted to go straight into the armed forces. However, for many there will very likely be a period of turmoil in which they will wish for some kind of heroic service, which will not be despised by their community. If such young men are given a chance to go abroad and do constructive relief work, one great factor in their choice will have been dealt with.

Such a possibility for worthwhile service needs to be blazoned out before our young people now. Let the Mennonite Central Committee invite deferred C.O.'s to go out into the world and construct instead of destroy. Let it challenge them to do work honorable in the sight of all men. May the M.C.C. act rapidly and in a sufficient manner to enable the deferred C.O. to be of Christian service. May the M.C.C. announce its plans before registration begins—before young men decide.

Choosing Intelligently

One of the very difficult problems that the citizen has in voting is that of choosing intelligently from among the candidates. It seems correct to assume that if we vote for a man we should also know what he stands for. Furthermore, it is also evident that we should be quite clear in our own minds what we think he should stand for. As long as we do not have definite standards of our own that we would like to see in government, we can hardly evaluate any candidate. Therefore, we first need to know what our convictions are for good government, and secondly we need to find out from candidates how they measure up to our convictions. It is this second phase that is illustrated in the following quotation from a letter which, also, of course, has suggestions as to standards. This letter is an illustration of how one can write to candidates to get their stand. The letter written by one of our friends, follows here in part:

"This morning, you left your card here . . . . inviting us to vote for you as a representative to Congress.

"Before I vote for anyone going to Congress, I want to make sure, insofar as my personal liability is concerned, that I know what the man stands for. Will you, therefore, either privately or publicly in your advertisements, give a clear statement as to where you stand on such crucial questions as the following:

"1. Where do you stand with reference to the rights of minorities, such as pacifists, colored people, Jews, and others who, by legislation, often become the victims of legalized persecution.

"2. If it comes to a showdown between the threats of militarism and the freedom of conscience as represented, for the most part, by the church in our country, with which group are you going to throw your influences and your vote in Congress?

"3. Do you visualize yourself going to Congress as one who is going to vote his personal convictions or the way you think your constituency feels about it? I notice you say 'true representation, sincerely pledged.' Which part of your constitutency are you going to represent sincerely and how are you going to do it when a part of your constituency believes one way and the rest of it believes the other way?

"These are just a few representative questions which I mean to ask everybody who asks for my vote in the future."

Perhaps the best part of the letter which came in reply from Mr. Claude E. Sowers, is the following paragraph:

"Taking the entire world picture as a whole, it is my sincere belief that it is the spiritual upbuilding of the spirit in man throughout the world as neighbors, in accordance with the Ten Commandments which should be the Divine principle of law between nations and individuals. It is only with this consideration toward our neighbor and brother and the unselfish desire 'to do unto others as we would have them do unto us,' with an understanding of our brother's problems and he with ours, that is going to create the peace which we anticipate to be our ultimate goal throughout the world."

If enough Christian citizens did something like the above, it would certainly have an effect upon the candidates running for office.

THE TIME TO REPENT is here. An individual arrives at repentance when he sees that by trying to save his life he is actually losing it. The American people need to become aware of what is becoming more and more evident and repent. It is ever becoming clearer that we cannot save ourselves by war. General Carl Spaatz, First Chief of Staff of the United States Air Force, wrote recently in Life magazine (July 5, p. 44), "An irony not without precedent pervades the present situation. We who profited so much from the airplane and atomic bomb now stand to lose most by it. (Let's see what did Jesus say about those who take the sword and about losing one's life by trying desperately to make oneself secure?) An era impends during which an enemy, preparing in secret, may wound this nation terribly with a single blow. That is the emergency hazard of . . . . a period destined to test our institutions to the breaking point unless statesmen have meanwhile found the long-sought political equivalent for war." Hanson Baldwin, in a July Harper's article, declares that though the United States might win a preventive war with a terrific cost, " . . . . we might indeed, in the process of 'victory' lose what we are trying to defend—our way of life." It is becoming clearer that trying to "save" our "way of life" by fighting others does not work. This is something that non-resistant Christians can point out to others.

Exercise, Too, Ameliorates Frustration

by Robert W. Tully

"But Mother, I want to go to Jimmie's house."

"No, Son!"

"Please, Mother, just for a little while."

"No, Son, not now."

"Can I go after a while, say in an hour?"

"No, Son, not this afternoon. You must stay at home."

"But, Mother, Jimmie's mother won't care."

"Listen, Son, you can't go this afternoon. That is final."

* * * *

The above is a picture of the development of frustration for a child. All life and learning is made up of the development and release of tension. When a desire, a want, a need arises, the mind and body tenses and starts to fulfill that desire or need. Frustration develops when the desire or need is blocked or postponed too long.

Now what was to be the reaction of the boy who stood frustrated before the final "no" of his mother? Actions and reactions of the boy could be varied, all of them depending on the growth and development of the lad till this hour.

He might cry, have hysteria, become angry at mother, throw things, etc. He might pout, retreat, sit in silence, day dream, etc. But if he is a fairly normal boy he will resolve his frustration by finding some activity which will do two things: (1) center his attention in something else, and (2) at the same time relieve the physical muscular tenseness. The boy when frustrated might simply say, "O.K. I can't go. I'll play cowboy!"

And with a "whoop and a holler" he would be off, thoughts centered in different experiences and big muscles in action responding to the tension created in them. Frustration would be ameliorated by exercise.

This childhood frustration may seem an over simplification of an adult problem in the same area, but is it? A wife wants or even needs a new dress, but the budget and her love for the family blocks the purchase. What does she do? It will depend on her growth and development to that hour. Because of her love she probably won't pout or cry much. Lacking that love she might have become hysterical. Rather she will lose herself in her work (exercise) to manifest that love.

In facing frustration it is important to remember the following steps and definitions:

1. Where there are wants, desires or needs there are tensions. (Tension: nervous anxiety with attendant muscular tenseness)

2. When wants, desires or needs are met tensions are released and tenseness disappears.

3. When tensions are not released by satisfaction of wants, desires or needs, the human personality moves toward frustration. (Frustration: prevented from reaching goals, attaining a purpose, balked)

4. Frustration increases nervous anxiety with attendant increases in muscular tenseness.

As noted before there are many methods of trying to ameliorate or decrease the sense of frustration. The physiological way is to relieve the muscular tension by physical exercise, walking, running, working, etc.

On many nights the students of my Alma Mater would see our college president walking briskly up and down the railroad tracks behind the college. One morning in chapel he quietly told us that he had "walked all the way to Liberty Mills" (about three miles) before a solution to a problem came.

A young friend of mine was facing the temptation of self play with his sex organs, masturbation. He told me that he would fight the temptation until he became so tense he seemed exhausted. He was guided to relieve himself by getting out into the open and walking or running until physically relieved of tenseness.

Just this last winter during a week of conferences in Nebraska I roomed with a seminary professor who had found that the tensions developed during a day of conference addresses and discussion could best be relieved for him by a brisk "before bedtime walk."

An elderly couple was once asked how they were able to get along so well during the years of their married life. Their answer emphasizes the importance of having a legitimate physical activity for an outlet to mental and physical tension.

He said, "See that wood pile. When things weren't going right I would chop wood. It's a great relief."

Then he turned to his wife and said, "Dear, you tell them what you would do. You know I always like that."

"When I would get mad or tense I would bake. You can put a lot of expression in kneeding dough."

Physical activity is a legitimate outlet for frustration. It may not answer the basic cause, but it will relieve the muscular tenseness attendant with tension leaving the mind and body free to solve the cause.

Conversions Are Realities in India

by P. W. Penner

[In a letter to the Secretary, Brother P. W. Penner says: "Please have this account of another genuine conversion in th columns of our church paper for an evidence that mission work is never in vain."]

Each twenty-four hours, three hundred or more of India's population enter the Christian fold; in spite of that the non-Christian multitudes grow rapidly. There is room for infinitely greater efforts by the Christian Church to increase the evangelistic enterprise. One single example is put forth in the following lines.

There resided in an insignificant village home an illiterate Christian family. They knew only a few hymns and Bible portions. These were so-to-say repeated daily in their devotions. A devoted Brahmin frequented the door of this home. Upon hearing the quotations often, his heart was touched. Whatever he heard was communicated to his wife, who resented vehemently with such threats as "If you will become a Christian, that very day I shall abscond." Ultimately when he decided to enter the Christian fold through baptism, she also gladly consented to venture that step. She was baptized with the husband; the children were also blessed.

His father became furiously enraged over the event. He immediately disowned his son, refused every contact, not a word was exchanged in friendly fashion. This, of course, cut deep into the son's tender heart just now a new convert to face such experience. The family relationship had always been very intimate. Besides the above experience the son was discharged from his well-paid post in the stone quarry. The managed of the quarry, a staunch Brahmin, could not see how a man ignoring the caste, dishonoring Hinduism could any longer remain an employee. Here this new convert with his wife and three children stood absolutely destitute, robbed of their good income, disowned by the once loving father!

What next? Should he deny His Saviour, slip back into caste? No! Again NO!, he said to himself. "This I cannot do after the solemn promise given at the time of baptism!" This Lord had become thoroughly incorporated in his life.

Thinking over various versions, he pretty soon found some employment. At the same time he riveted his thought on what had been pointed out to him directly, or indirectly, yes, by the Spirit. "I was convinced by circumstantial evidences to become a Christian, I MUST now win my father for Him Who accepted me, in Whom I am so happy until this day!" This task was undertaken immediately. Quite tactfully and aimiably he proceeded. First this effort proved of no avail. Not long after that the father came to the mission house veranda for an inquiry, although difficult objections clouded his mind and heart. How should such a staunch Hindu overcome them so quickly.

Several weeks elapsed, then the son came and reported joyfully that the battle was won, asking that someone should come to the father's hut to baptize him. The date was immediately set at 9:00 a. m. of the day we arrived. The father, noticing us ere that, met us at the gate with a warm handshake. The meal was in the making. It should be taken first of all to show that outwardly all caste distinctions had been abandoned. Everbody present sat on mats on the veranda floor partaking of the tasty meal. The fellowship was wonderful. After the utensils had been taken away, the father remarked: "I have invited relatives and friends of my caste to come and witness the solemn occasion, but no one has appeared; I do not want to be detained any longer. The baptism must be performed without delay. I am completely ready. The idol here under this tree, which I worshipped daily repeatedly, has been given away because I do not need that any longer. I am now belonging to Christ fully. Him I am going to serve henceforth. Oh, I am so indescribably happy, please hurry with the performance that is to take place." Other refrains evolved, showing the overflowing joy. The angels it appeared to us must have vibrated the heavenly atmosphere exceptionally.

A pillar of paganism, has left all. A new creature has been born. A complete child of God (John 1:12).

During the conversation that followed after the handshakes welcoming him into the Christian community, he lifted up his finger pointing toward the corner of his plot of land, saying, "Christians are coming by here quite often, they do not know where to lodge, I am setting aside one corner where a rest house should be erected, a well sunk. Gladly I am setting this corner aside for His cause Whom I have fully accepted."

How our hearts were lifted up to the Almighty for another clear evidence that the testimony in His name shall not come back void. The Holy Spirit has thus revealed what happens when He has the right-of-way! These days miracles happen right and left among people who have lived in utter sin and pollution. We must be much more direct with our messages and testimonies. Let us proclaim His name among the nations (Psalm 96:1-4).

Candidate Hits Draft

"We have taken the first step towards becoming a slave state in order to combat another slave state, Soviet Russia," declared Harold Malone, County Attorney of Sedgwick County, Kansas, and candidate for the Republican nomination to the office of United States Senator on July 1. Malone urged what he called "Christian diplomacy."

"An olive branch of peace offered in a mail fist will make it difficult to persuade the oppressed people of Europe of our good faith. Concription is a false premise that builds a psychology of hatred for an entire people. An ideology, no matter how false, cannot be combated by force of arms, but must be met by a dynamic faith in our own American system," Malone added.

Mr. Malone further stated, "The failure of conscription is written in the pages of the history of every European country. The men who settled this country came here to escape the iron heel of military despotism towards which we are drifting."

Mr. Malone pointed out that, "Support of a mammoth military system will impoverish this country and lead to enslavement of the people."

He also said, "The present military trend is headed by those who will profit from the manufacture of military supplies, and, I believe, is not desired by the majority of the people."

Malone pointed out that he was not opposed to military training, but that he believed that it should be on a voluntary basis.

(Editorial comment: The above words should be important to Mennonites who believe that the highest ends never justify the means of war. Though Mr. Malone does not take such an out and out stand against war as Mennonites may take, he does show a certain awareness of spiritual forces when he declares that an "ideology, no matter how false, cannot be combated by force of arms." We are living in a day when many of our leaders have very little awareness of the spiritual power, God. Mr. Malone has set forth some insights which people opposed to war can appreciate. In this time when we have to choose among political candidates, we might well learn to discern the spirit they have. Let us hope that Mr. Malone will continue to work against the militarization of our country.)

Die for my country?
Yes, of course, I would!
But not the easy way,—
Bands playing,
Flags waving,
And the cheers of war-mad thousands in my ears!
And not the useless way—
My body splattered over foreign fields
Or hung in shreds on barbed-wire barriers,
That rabble-rousing slogans be proved false
And millionaires make profits from my blood!
God give me strength
To die the hardest way—
To die for peace,
Conviction,
And a dream of brotherhood—
My only crime that I refuse to kill!
The Pioneer of Peace died on a Cross—
That was before the day of firing squads!

Relief Needs Continue

Akron, Pa., July 9. The recent survey of the MCC relief units in the Far East, Near East, and Europe made by MCC Relief Director, J. N. Byler, indicates that there continues to be a definite relief service to be done in the various countries.

In China and in certain areas of India and Pakistan there are staggering needs among the people displaced because of the civil strife in those countries. Chief among the services that can and are being rendered are feeding, sanitation and medical care. In certain parts of the Dutch East Indies there is also suffering from warfare, and this will be a needy field for relief when the doors are open. In Japan the food and clothing conditions are not as acute, but a community center project will be a valuable service. In Ethiopia good progress has been made in training native helpers to assist in the medical program, making it possible to give a much larger service with the relief worker staff.

Crops in Central Europe are good this summer, but inspite of this relief will be needed during the coming winter months. Food and clothing are still scarce, and for another year or more until economic conditions become more stable, prices will most likely be very high, making it virtually impossible for poor people, and especially older people, to buy sufficent for their livelihood. During May a total of 149,418 people in the French and British Zones of Germany received MCC food regularly. This does not include food sent to the American Zone, CRALOG shipments to the three zones, feeding of Mennonites in refugee camps, and assistance of individual needy Mennonite families. The total in June was expected to be still higher.

Akron, Pa. July 9. In view of the continuing needs in the various countries of the world, as observed and reported by our Mennonite workers, we urge our people to continue contributing for the needy during this summer and fall season. Especially needed this year are: Flour and wheat products, dried fruits and vegetables, meats, and fats, soap, shoes, clothing, bedding, mending materials. Also needed are certain qualified workers, as well as cash for the support of the total program.

A folder describing in more detail the relief needs for 1948 is being printed, and should reach the pastor of each congregation during the latter part of July.

Refugees Complete Voyage by Air

Akron, Pa., July 9. The Charlton Monarch has not been able to carry its Mennonite refugee passengers to the port of Buenos Aires as had been scheduled; but because of major breakdown had to be towed to Recife, on the eastern tip of Brazil. Since the shipping company was unable to restore the vessel to a seaworthy condition it was necessary for the people to be flown to Asuncion, Paraguay.

The first group including aged and ill, left by air on July 3, and other groups are following. It is expected that the movement of the ship's 762 passegers from Recife to Asuncion will be completed by July 10. The baggage will be sent by ocean freight to Buenos Aires and thence to Asuncion by river boat. The air transportation of the refugees from Recife to Asuncion is being financed largely by the International Refugee Organization.

Elfrieda Dyck who accompanied the refugees from Europe, will assist temporarily at Asuncion, along with the other M.C.C. workers now there.

More Refugees To Enter Canada

Word has been received from Europe that 165 Russian Mennonite refugees are scheduled to leave on July aboard the S. S. Tabinta, a Dutch vessel. It is not known at which port these will arrive, but clarification should be received soon, as the staff in Europe makes further arrangements for the movement.

Albert Unruh Takes up Pastorate of Grace Church, Enid

An important day in the history of the Grace Mennonite Church at York and Adams, Enid, Oklahoma, was Sunday, June 27, when Rev. Albert J. Unruh was ordained as elder and installed as pastor.

Services had been arranged for morning, afternoon and evening. The mission service in the morning was presided over by Rev. Walter H. Dyck, secretary of the General Conference. There was special music by the church choir, and missionary sermons were preached by Rev. Dyck who spoke on "Why Missions?" and Rev. W. F. Unruh, pastor the West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas, whose subject was "The Tremendous, Inclusive Missionary Task." The offering for missions amounted to almost $125. Another feature of the morning service was the reception of thirteen new members including Rev. and Mrs. Albert Unruh and their three sons.

A fellowship dinner was served at noon in the church dining room.

The ordination and installation service, held in the afternoon, was in charge of Rev. W. F. Unruh, Chairman of the Western District Conference Home Mission Committee, who also preached the ordination sermon on the subject "Be Thou for the People to God-ward," using as his text Exodus 18:19-20 and stating that this means bring people into touch with God. He spoke of the various aspects of the pastor's work, emphasizing that the pastor should beg his people to pray for him, for God will reveal himself in a wonderful way to hearts that pray and to those for whom they pray. The pastor shall be the Voice of God to his people and shall teach them the Word; he shall show them the way they should go. Duty and honor, privilege and responsibility always go together.

The rite of ordination was impressively performed by Rev. W. F. Unruh, who also installed Rev. Albert Unruh as pastor of the Grace Church. Elders who assisted with the laying on of hands were: Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Rev. John Lichti, Rev. Albert L. Jantzen, Rev. Henry Wiens, Rev. J. W. Bergen, Rev. Albert Schmidt, and Rev. Harold Dirks. The charge to the congregation was given by Rev. Dyck, and the service closed with the response by the newly-installed pastor. Visitors from various churches in Kansas and Oklahoma helped to make the day a happy one for the new pastor and the church.

At the evening meeting Rev. Dyck spoke informally to the church about the scope of the General Conference, stressing the fact that a spirit of cooperation and understanding must prevail when 250 congregations work together in the Lord's Kingdom.

The Grace Church was organized in 1938 under the auspices of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference, which still supervises the work. The first pastor was Rev. Henry Harder, now of Aberdeen, Idaho, who served the church until 1943. Rev. Ben Rahn, Paso Robles, California, served the church for two years. Rev. Albert Unruh, who began his pastorate June 1 of this year, comes from Ringwood, Oklahoma, and has served in the capacity of assistant pastor of the New Hopedale Mennonite Church at Meno. The Unruh family will move into the parsonage of the Grace Church some time in July.

50th Anniversary JUBILEE JEMS

Did you know that one of our pioneer missionaries to India is living in Newton, Kansas? He is Dr. P. A. Penner, now seventy-seven years old. Let us remember this faithful servant of God and India in our 50th Anniversary Jubilee celebations.

REMEMBERING THIRTY YEARS OF SERVICE

[Brother Malcolm Wenger of Busby, Montana, writes the following: "We are enclosing a write up of the recent celebration in honor of the 30th anniversary of mission work by Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger. The article was written by Miss Christene Duerksen, who is the leader of the Young People's Voluntary Service Unit working here this summer." —Howard Nyce]

The mission station was dark and still when the Model T. Ford drove to the house. It was midnight, June 1, 1918. Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger, the new missionaries, had come to Montana to begin work among the Northern Cheyenne Indians.

The thirty years since have been spent in serving the Cheyenne people on the Tongue River Indian Reservation. In order to recognize these years of faithful service, June 19, 1948, was set as the date for the anniversary celebration.

The small white church at the Busby station was almost filled when the service started. Friends, both Indian and white, had come from Lame Deer, Crow Agency, Busby and other nearby communities.

The program opened with music, followed by reading of Psalm 103. Mr. William Fightingbear, a Cheyenne Christian, led in prayer. Rev. A. E. Kreider, Chairman of the Board of Foreign Missions was the guest speaker. The theme of his very fitting address was "Faith." "By Faith Abraham . . . went out . . . By faith he sojourned in the land . . . .(By Faith) he looked for a city . . . . whose builder and maker is God," Heb. 11:8-10. The message was translated by Rev. Milton Whiteman, so that the Cheyennes might also enjoy the message.

Mr. Carl Aldrich presented a gift of money as a remembrance to the Habeggers from the Cheyenne and White friends of this community.

In a brief response Rev. and Mrs. Habegger expressed their gratitude for this gift and for the good wishes of the many friends who remembered them on this occasion. Mrs. Habbegger expressed the conviction that, knowing th experiences of the past thirty years, she would again make the choice to serve her Lord among the Cheyenne Indians. They then sang as a duet, "The King of Love My Shepherd Is."

Following the program there was a short informal fellowship hour in which several of the guests expressed their appreciation of the Habeggers. An old Cheyenne woman, Dora Littlehawk, told of her sorrow that her "relatives" the Habeggers might be leaving Busby soon to move to Lame Deer. She gave to Mrs. Habegger a pair of beautiful beaded moccasins to help her on her way.

Mennonite World Conference

One interesting feature of the Mennonite World Conference, in addition to actual messages by delegates and other speakers, is to be that of displays and exhibits. Graphically described will be the Mennonite activities in Relief, Refugee Resettlement, World-wide Missions, Young People's Work, Mennonite Life and Institutions, and the Mennonite Peace Testimony. These exhibits are to be open during the conference at both Goshen, August 3-5 and Newton, August 7-10.

SEVEN KANSAS CHURCHES TO HOLD MEETING TO CONSIDER PROBLEMS THAT GROW OUT OF THE DRAFT

The first Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, the Halstead, the Garden Township Church, the Eden Church, the Emmanuel Church, the Hoffnungsfeld Church and the West Zion Church will participate in a youth gathering to be held at the Harvey County Park July 25, beginning at 2:00 in the afternoon. Rev. Loris Habegger will discuss, "The Status of the Draft." Rev. Albert Gaeddert will speak on, "Lessons from the Past." Dr. R. C. Kauffman will give an address on, "The Witness of Our Church to the Way of Peace." There will be an open discussion of problems and questions submitted by the group with the aforementioned three leaders answering and directing the group thinking. From 4:10 to 5:00 there will be an informal fellowship, with a basket supper served from 5:00 to 6:00 p. m. Each family is asked to bring a basket lunch. Free iced tea will be served.

The evening service will begin at 6:00. Dr. H. A. Fast will discuss, "Leads and Directions Given by M.C.C. and the General Conference." Mr. Erwin Goering will give a talk on, "A Challenge To Take the Peace Position." The meeting is to close in time to allow people to go home for the union services.

Boys and girls of high school age and up through the draft age are especially invited and urged to attend. Concerned parents are invited to come, and all those who are interested. Those who come are urgd to bring blankets to sit on, for there are no seats available for this service in the park.

The following questions may be taken up in the open discussion: 1. Is it consistent to register in the draft? 2. What valuable and helpful literature is available? 3. Is this the time to be an aggressive witness to the way of peace? 4. What about those young people who feel that their life is not good and consistent enough to take the C.O. stand? 5. What attitude shall a Mennonite church take toward those who disregard the faith of the church? 6. How are high school students to remain firm under the pressure that will come? 7. How can those people be helped who do not want to face the issue?

Jottings

—Johannesthal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Rev. J. M. Regier is home from the hospital and doing well. Jacob D. Goering, a student at the Mennonite Seminary, spoke to us on "Characteristics of Christian Living." These he divided into: work, trouble, joy. Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Schmidt spoke and showed slides and moving pictures at our union services. Arthur Junke, a former relief worker, told us about some of his experiences in Europe at the union meeting held on July 4.—Mrs. Arnold A. Plenert, Corr.

—Rev. Walter Gering left on July 12 for Freeman, South Dakota. From there he will go to the Mayo Brothers Clinic.

—Miss Bertha Fast, former relief worker and leader of voluntary service units last year, left Newton on July 10 for Colorado where she intends to spend three weeks visiting a voluntary service unit. From there she will go to Mexico and spend three weeks with the voluntary service unit there, and then she will go to Gulfport, Mississippi, to spend three weeks with the unit at that place. After three weeks at her home in Mountain Lake, Minnesota, she plans to return to her studies at Bethel College.

—Governor Frank Carlson of Kansas has declared July 18 as Kansas Goodwill Sunday for the purpose of arousing interest in the sharing of wheat with the hungry people in war-devastated areas.

—First Mennonite Church, Madrid, Nebraska: Rev. J. P. Glanzer was chairman of the Bible school work in which the Methodist, and Pilgrim Holiness churches also joined. Our pastor and his wife were formally installed here on May 23 by Rev. Ed. Duerksen, member of the Evangelization Board of the Northern District. In the evening we had evangelistic services. On June 2 the A Cappella Choir of Bethel College presented a very much appreciated program. At this writing, July 5, the wheat harvest is in full swing. This is ten days earlier than usual. The yield is above that expected with stubble wheat yielding from five to twenty bushels and summer fallowed fields yielding from twenty to forty bushels per acre.—Corr.

The Home Is Where Children Grow

HOME GROWN

By Charles A. Wells

A home is not just a place to eat and sleep. It is not just a place to keep our incidental possessions, to get our mail. The major purpose of the home is to bring human lives to a full and fine maturity. When we drive over a community and endeavor to appraise its qualities, we are likely to judge by the architecture, the quality of the buildings, the landscaping and the gardens. But in reality these are the least important indications of the value of the homes in the community. The great question is, — what kind of boys and girls are they raising here? Some big fine houses turn out some badly grown young people. Many of us are spending a lot of time in our gardens these summer days,— but we must remember that there are things much more important than radishes and roses growing up around our homes.

Post Toasties and Publications

We like post toasties—for breakfast.

And when our friends tear off the top of a post toasties box and cut a little hole in it just large enough for a quarter and mail us a twenty-five cent coin for a copy of DAS MENNONITISCHE JAHRBUCH, we think that it is not only anti-climatic—it's precisely appropriate.

It is appropriate that people should pay twenty-five cents for a JAHRBUCH, and it is appropriate that they should read the JAHRBUCH regularly, year after year, especially when it contains splendid literary articles.

It is also appropriate, we think, that our people should be able to go directly to their pastor and ask for a copy of the JAHRBUCH. Each pastor has been mailed four copies of the JAHRBUCH for those who like to read in their mother tongue the best that has appeared in Mennonite literature during the year just closed. There is, of course, a very strong possibility that your pastor will be sold out, in which case you can place your order for a JAHRBUCH directly with the bookstore nearest you or write—Mennonite Book Store at Newton, Rosthern, or Berne, or write directly to the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

Pacific District Conference. The church had a farewell for Miss Augsburger, our church worker, who will attend college this fall. One hundred and forty-six children were enrolled in our Daily Vacation Bible School. The church was shocked by the death of Mrs. Harriet McKenzie, twenty-one, who was killed in an accident July 4.—Mrs. Harold Burkholder, Corr.

—According to a survey by Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, nearly fifty per cent of the active ministers of the General Conference are college graduates.

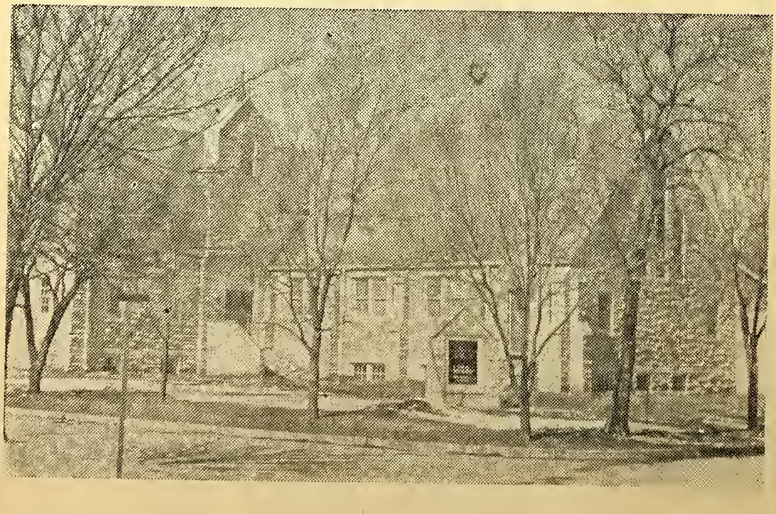
—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martens, of North Newton, left on July 11 for Gulfport, Mississippi. Mr. Martens was to evaluate the work being done there for the Mennonite Central Committee and was also to give four messages of an inspirational nature.

—From the bulletin of the Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, Kansas: "Following the vesper hour there will be opportunity for informal discussion, fellowship, and visiting. This will also afford an opportunity for other group meetings. Those who wish may eat together."—Norma Jost, assistant to the pastor left Tuesday for Chicago to attend the Young Adult Retreat at the Mennonite Seminary. After that she will be leader of groups of young people serving in various churches in Illinois and Indiana. She has made application to do relief work under the Mennonite Central Committee. This is the kind of work she had in mind when she came to us about nine months ago as our church helper. Her activities in Sunday School, Week Day Bible School, Daily Vacation Bible School, work with young people, all kinds of work in and about the building, secretarial work, and calls upon sick people have kept her very busy.

—First Church, Caldwell, Idaho: On June 7, the Bethel College A Cappella Choir brought us a very nice service in song. The ladies served a supper in their honor. Rev. Harold Burkholder and Rev. Ben Rahn were with us on the evening of June 28.— Mrs. Leonard Schmidt, Corr.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Munich, North Dakota: Dr. Hiebert, faculty member of the Grace Bible Institute, and Rev. Marvin Dirks, member of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary, were the speakers at our annual Sunday School Convention and Youth Conference June 20-22. The conference topic was, "For me to live is Christ." The seminary quartet sang several selections. On the evening of June 23, Rev. Dirks and the quartet rendered a program of sermons, testimonies, and song. Rev. J. C. Kaufman, of Kansas, was a recent speaker in our church.—Corr.

—Arlington Church, Arlington, Kansas: On June 27, Barbara Linscheid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Linscheid, was baptized and received as a member of the church. The service was unusual in that Barbara was the first person to have joined the church by baptism since 1937. She is the only teen-age member



The new Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, is a beautiful house of worship with rooms for Christian education. Members have prayed, paid, and worked hard to build this structure which is nearing completion. When first begun members often worked far into the night cleaning bricks. It is estimated that the cost of the building will be somewhere around $80,000. It is situated in a city where many Mennonites come to live and work. Dr. J. H. July 13. Registration for the draft is about a month away. Starts August 16. This week government departments — Justice, Army, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor — are meeting at the Budget Bureau, which coordinates for the Executive Department, to hash over the new Selective Service regulations.

The draft law requires all males between 18 and 26 to register. Only those between 19 and 26 liable for induction for 21 months. Law permits 161,000 18-year olds to volunteer for 12 months then go into the reserves.

Veterans with 12 months of active duty or with 90 days military service between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day are exempt from service. Ex-CPS men are not exempt by law.

The President has authority to regulate the deferment of farmers and other workers necessary to the "national health, safety, and interest." Men with dependents may also be deferred.

Ministers and ministerial students are exempt from service but not from registration. COs who are willing to take noncombatant service will be inducted into the armed forces; those who are conscientiously opposed to both combatant and noncombatant service will be deferred. No service of any kind required.

Draft registration cards are now being printed. Other forms are not yet approved. No space on registration card for indicating conscientious objection. COs should fill out Series XI of Classification Questionnaire which requests Special Form for Conscientious Objectors (similar to old Form 47).

Men in obviously deferred classes will not be sent classification questionnaire. Any deferred veteran or other deferred person who has CO convictions and who wants to establish claim for future draft possibility should write such on registration card. This has no legal significance but may help in such cases.

Book Notes

The Suffering Saviour by F. W. Krummacher, the Moody Press, Chicago, 1947.

"Meditations on the Last Days of Christ" is the sub-title given to this volume in the Wycliffe Series of Christian Classics which is in the process of being published under the editorship of Wilbur M. Smith, D.D. The intention of the series is to bring to the Christian reading public masterpieces of Christian literature of other centuries, some of which are no longer available.

"We see in every single stage of our Saviour's passion some particular part of the salvation He accomplished brought before us in a clear and obvious light." In this sentence the author gives the clue to the purpose of the book. Beginning with the announcement by Jesus of his coming death, the author takes up each event that leads to the cross explaining and commenting in such a way that each incident throws its individual light upon perplexing problems of the soul that seeks to draw nearer to God. At this point his character studies—Judas, Peter, Pilate, etc. are particularly helpful.

The author thinks of these last events in the life of Jesus as steps for Christians to closer contact and fellowship with God as is evident in the threefold division of the book: I. The Outer Court; II. The Holy Place; and, III. The Most Holy Place. The second part begins with Gethsemane while the third part begins with the crucifixion. In the third part there are chapters on each of the seven words of Christ from the cross.

The author treats each event thoroughly, not only explaining in a helpfully detailed way but also making penetrating applications. In his comments he draws from background studies of customs, word studies as well as helpful paraphrases. His applications are largely directed to the personal life of the believer.

The volume of meditations of which this book is a reprint originally appeared in 1854 with the title, "Der Leidende Christus, Ein Passionsbuch" and went through eight editions by 1875.

The author, F. W. Krumacher (1786-1868), is reputed to be the greatest evangelical preacher in Europe in his generation, being made chaplain to the King of Prussia in 1853.

The book will be found to be helpful devotional reading during the Lenten season. It will also be helpful to those teaching or preaching from this part of the life of Jesus for its insights in terms of explanation and application.—Jacob J. Enz

The Church, The Gospel and War, edited by Rufus M. Jones, Harper and Brothers, New York, 1948, 169 pages, $2.

This meaty book is a "must" for both laymen and ministers who would be "wise in their faith." Edited by Rufus M. Jones, it contains eleven well-written articles by an eminent group of British and American writers, theologians, and historians.

As the title indicates, the arguments for pacifism are all well within the full context of the Gospel. The editor ably sets the tone of the book in his introduction: "We must go to Christ as our leader and interpreter of life and not to Church experts who favor compromise and adjustment."

The first section of the book deals with "The Christian Pacifist Faith." Charles E. Raven strongly contends that the Church must see that she cannot continue to "profess to deify (the Nazarene) and then studiously refuse to follow (Him)." Either the Way of the Cross is right, or "it is dishonest to preach the Cross as the means of salvation." "The Gospel Basis of Pacifism" by C. Paul Gliddon is not expository (Cf. Macgregor, "The New Testament Basis of Pacifism"). But he does advance sharp arguments for the necessity of Christians to ask themselves, "What would Jesus do?," in all human relationships. He quickly demolishes the argument that Christ's ethics were not meant for nations or other large social groups. The reviewer found H. H. Farmer's chapter particularly helpful for his discussion on the argument of war as "the lesser of two evils."

The remainder of the book is devoted to "The Position of the Church." Scholarly articles are presented by Roland H. Bainton and K. S. Latourette from the standpoint of church historians. I highly recommend to the mission-minded of our churches the contribution by Charles W. Iglehart. He points out how powerful a bar modern war is to spreading the good news of salvation and how utterly incompatible it is for Christians to support both Christian missions and modern war as waged by their states.

If I had but one book to recommend to a non-pacifist friend, The Church, The Gospel and War would be it.—Hugh Hostetler

Flight from Paochi, China

by Maryellen Boehr, Chengtu, China

It was hard, after 3 months residence, to leave beautiful Paochi, Shensi, China. Everything looked so peaceful!

On Sunday April 18th we 3 Boehrs had dinner at Fishbacher's CIM home outside of Paochi after my father had preached at the morning services of the North West Bible school. As usual we discussed the possibilities of the Red's coming to Paochi, but all of us thought that that was months away. This made mother and me very happy for the first new little bungalow on the mission property was now ready for us. How wonderful it seemed to us that at last we who had waited 16 months would have a home with more than one room.

Preparing to Go

Monday morning as mother and I were washing clothes outside our little lean-to "house", the Catholic father came with disturbing news. The Red Army was headed for Paochi, but he said they were not more than 600 Li (200 miles) away. A Chinese friend, Mr. Robert Mu, said we should not worry because things were not so bad.

A Scandanavian Alliance convoy, 1 car, 2 jeeps, and 2 trucks, bringing language students, women and children from in and around Sian came through Paochi on Tuesday. They were headed for safer regions around Chengtu and Chungking. Three times the Fishers have escaped with nothing but the clothing they were wearing. Once the Japs took all they had and two times the Reds cleaned them out. How wonderfully the Lord undergirds at such times! They came to Paochi just in time to get Mrs. Fisher into the convoy.

Wednesday the railroad between Sian and Paochi, was broken by Reds. The Whites, marooned about halfway between, took 400 lbs. of baggage and rode to Paochi on the only thing available, the train engine. Our missionaries the Wuthrichs and Miss Fast packed on Wednesday preparatory to leave on the Catholic's truck the next day. Mr. Mu said still he saw no need to rush away.

Suddenly on Thursday the 22nd of April amid pouring rain and slippery mud, Mr. Mu came to us to beg us to leave. But all Thursday we segregated important items to take, though men bringing different rumors every 2 or 3 hours kept dad from much packing. Permits had to be given from the local military officers to leave the city by truck and many other jobs were found to keep dad running about through rain and mud. How mother and I prayed that if possible we would not have to go. Packing was made difficult because between every cave or room we had to go out side through the mud.

Mr. Moore, sectional director CIM came on Thursday with his jeep to take 6 ladies from Paochi area to Shwang Shih Pu, 60 some miles up the Sinling Mountains on the road to Chengtu.

On Friday after packing and waiting with prayer, we loaded the truck and leaving half our things behind, we started on our first lap of the journey to Gwangyuan the half way city. Since it was getting dark the truck with us and our hired truck stopped for the night a few li out of Paochi. The important thing was to be out of the city, our Chinese friends said. While here we heard that the Catholic truck with Wuthrichs and Miss Fast had left here just Friday morning.

Travel on Overloaded Truck

Saturday morning though the trucks were loaded higher than the enclosing boards, between 30 to 40 people climbed on top the load. The older truck was found to need more repairs so the Wang family and we three got on top of the newer truck and after bidding a last farewell to beautiful Paochi and the lovely surrounding hills we headed toward the mountains climbing slowly then coasting down was the business of the day till at 4:00 p. m. we reached the Mennonite's compound at Swang Shih Pu where we stayed. While there we heard that the Wuthrich's and Miss Fast had left 10 hours previously. The people who had previously left Paochi for Swang Shih Pu were now 80 miles on at Hanchung.

We prayed much for the safety of our friends and goods which were on the older truck behind us. Sunday, though it hurt us, we had to travel. We had a good truck and a careful driver, who was always ready with horn, brake or shift. The driver asked that we leave early Sunday morning since the rumors said the road out might be cut. It was a lovely day and we on top felt very good though a bit crowded at times My father and I sat on the outside rim with our feet against the board as a brace.

At 11:30 we on top noticed that the driver was going especially fast on the down grade and not using his brake. I smelled something burning then according to the yells of the people on the back, something had broken and fallen off. Soon the engine was making a loud noise and we were leaving a thick smoke trail behind us. Mother in front with the driver didn't notice anything unusual till she saw how tense and pale the driver's face was. His brakes didn't work and we had gained such a momentum that it was too late to shift into a lower gear. The jagged rocks hung over one side of the road and a rushing stream below us on the other side. Fortunately the steering was good and to break our momentum, the driver steered toward the muddy ditch beside the rocks. We scraped the rocks a bit and our wheels dug the mud. When we stopped the mechanic found the piston and connecting rod beyond repair and the oil all burned up, so we all got down. Mom and I went down to sit by a bubbling branch of the bigger stream and enjoyed the peace. Other passengers took their hand baggage and got rides on passing horse carts or trucks. Our Mr. Wang hired a horse cart at a near by village on which we put all our things. So we went and praised the Lord for His marvelous care for His children.

Continuing on a jeep

Before nightfall we saw a bright green jeep coming toward us. It was Mr. Moore and Mr. Posno returning to Shwang Shih Pu for Mr. Fisher and some suit cases. They went on their way and our cart, going 4 miles an hour, soon came to a crowded inn where we slept that night. The sun was not yet up when we were roused from sleep on our brick bed and were urged to start early. So off we went on bumpy roads. Since we went slowly, we could enjoy the scenery. Young green trees lined the road and to our right the river flowed noisily over the rocks. Soon after dawn over the surrounding mountains, we felt a few rain drops then later our umbrellas went up and the rain really came down!

In Moscow, the People . . .

In Moscow, the people stood eight and nine deep reading the news bulletin boards upon which were displayed the texts of the notes exchanged between the United States and Russia. The people nudged each other with satisfaction. They smiled with a sense of relief. They were revealing their previous concern about war. Even behind the "iron curtain" it now seems the people had known that relations with the United States were tense. They didn't like it and welcomed the new steps. We in America also were thrilled by the news. Then suddenly our government began pouring cold water on the whole thing, or, as some members of Congress noted, the President "slammed the door" that we ourselves had just opened.

Mr. President, the people want the doors kept wide open. They want the American government to talk and talk and talk, until reason comes into its own. It may take weeks or months, or even years—but it is because the people have confidence in the ultimate triumph of reason that they urge an unswerving devotion to these methods.—David Lawrence, publisher of United States News

We bounced along for an hour or so not particularly enjoying the rain trickling down the backs of our necks but we sang and talked. Then we heard a wonderful sound. A jeep horn! Mr. Moore pulled up behind us and told us they had packed the jeep with the idea of rescuing the three Boehrs. With 4 men, 2 women and 6 suitcases, "Willy" had quite a load. Mr. Posno and I sat in the back facing each other and squeezed between the suitcases and the backs of the front seats. Mr. Moore, mother and father sat in the front seat. Mr. Fisher, wrapped in blankets and coats, sat on the hood protected from the driving rain by umbrella and slicker. It was wonderful to think that soon we would complete a journey which would have taken 2 more days by horse cart, whereas the jeep got us there in 4½ hours. Though someones typewriter fell on us at rough spots in the road and we were in cramped position, we sang much and praised the Lord for the invisible ties which the children of God feel. Especially in hard times does the Lord give us that comfortable feeling that we are all one family in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Just here let me say something about "Willy". In Honan Province he belonged to a missionary when the Reds came and wanted Willy. For four days they "borrowed" Willy and the missionary dispared of seeing him again. But he was returned and when Honan was evacuated Willy was sent west to Shensi where he has been used to rescue or take out dozens of missionaries all within 2 months.

Paoching and Pu

At Paoching, where Mr. Moore took us, we stayed 2 days in the little CIM chapel while waiting for word from Mr. Wang and family who were on the horse cart, or from Mr. Mu who was on the hired truck which we knew then was at Shwang Shih Pu.

They say there was a bit of fighting and bombing in Paochi and though the Reds are not in the city they are not far enough away to permit the return of refugees. At Paoching we met many Paochi people and heard many rumors concerning Paochi. The rumors were taken with the proverbial grain of salt.

On Wednesday the 28th my father found room for mother and me in a military Jeep going to Gwangyuan. The young Chinese officer took the bumps and curves fast so that after 2 hours we passed a CIM 4 car convoy which had left Paoching 2 hours before we had. Before night we passed an overcrowded city and headed for a town only 2½ hours out of Gwangyuan. Mother and I held on but had some forebodings as to night travel because the old jeep had no light and the mountain road is just wide enough for two vehicles to pass.

That night our shaky legs took us through the front eating house of a Chinese inn and to a clean 2 bed room in the back. The beds were 4 wide boards on 2 carpenter horses and mother and I slept in one and some Lutheran friends in the other. We had rice with bamboo roots and egg soup for supper before we retired.

The Jeepu, as the Chinese call the Jeep, left early the next morning and how glad we were at nine a. m. we saw the houses of Gwangyuan. At 9:30 the driver let us off at the Iliff's home where I am now writing this letter. I'm in the tea room and in front of me is a large moon gate, which frames trees and houses with a mountain background. My father, who came 5 days after we came, is making arrangements to get us to Chengtu. The Lord is leading and will lead, Praise His name.

My Chinese lessons were stopped when my teacher, Miss Wang, left Paochi with Miss Fast, but by now I can keep up my end of a simple Chinese conversation and understand most of a sermon. The study of the language is very fascinating when you learn to read and write the characters.

It's a great day when letters and newspapers come in! As we read, the sensation called "homesickness" is down a lot.

I enjoyed writing this letter to you but I suppose I should have written before about my trips from Gulfport to Shanghai by boat: Shanghai to Kaifeng by train; Kaifeng to Chengchow by truck; Chengchow to Sian by plane then finally the short trip to Paochi by train from Sian. How good the Lord has been! Here are the words to what is called "the Jeep Song":

How good is the God we adore,
Our faithful, unchangeable friend.
His Love is as great as His power
And knows neither measure nor end,
'Tis Jesus the first and the last
Whose Spirit will guide us safe home
We'll trust Him for all that is past.
And Praise Him for all that's to come.

Thank you for your prayers and remembrances.

Sincerely,
Maryellen Boehr

Through European Eyes

by Meintze Kuitse, Wildervank, Holland

This time I will translate for you some excerpts from articles in our youth paper so that you might get an idea of some questions about which we in Holland talk and think.

A representative of our youth movement visited some Mennonite congregations in Germany. He writes:

"I think about a foggy Sunday when we with our hostess walked in the ruins of Emden. I remember a conversation in a dark and cold and rattling train-wagon. A German Mennonite next to me said, 'I believed until the end in Nazism. That perhaps was blindness. And you all perhaps healed us from this blindness. But now—I have my eyes open—but I look into an empty room, the present world. Perhaps I can start to study again. Then I will have at least a goal in life.'

"In my memory I recall the dirty and busy terminals—old people and ladies, who carry bags with potatoes, conversations about control, some sarcastic remarks about the occupation forces (British or American army), and some 'Schwarzhandler' — black market business men—of the most disdained and also the most looked-for job in Germany today.

"Now what memories of wartime in Holland do I recall? Our German friend showed us pictures. 'That was for Leningrad,' he said. We looked at the picture —some soldiers walking in the snow. It is strange, we think. Three years ago we looked for some information in the paper: 'How many miles did they retreat today?' Now we both have our memories. He perhaps about times of good friendship; I about friends who were murdered during the war, and about times of nerve-cracking uncertitude, about the desire for freedom, and also about moments of costly friendship.

"Sometime later we talked with a group of the members of the congregation in Emden, old and young. We talked about Holland, about our Mennonite Church, about our youth movement. First they were pessimistic, but then there came the exclamation: 'You in your young enthusiasm! You are perhaps right. We are Christians. We cannot sit down and do nothing. There is a way out also for us.' It is so difficult in Germany at this moment. And still—faith is the only weapon with which one can wage battle.

"We as Christians may not stand apart from each other. Therefore we propose to get into contact with our German friends by personal correspondence, and we will send them monthly information about youth and Mennonite life in Holland."

So far our friend has been telling us about his trip in the most western part of Germany to the Mennonites there. Now a few sentences from a report about a conference in Holland of Protestant theological students from Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Switzerland, and Holland—students from several countries, which were separated for years by this last war.

"The importance of this conference was that all these students found the way towards each other. This was not the way of easy forgiving and forgetting. We could not approach each other without talking openly about all those events which had separated our countries from each other.

"But we also discovered our faults—the guilt of all of us together, for we spoke about how we as a little group from among different peoples received tha command to look for new roads towards each other. The greatest blessing of this conference was that we could have this experience of the reality of Paul's word that the good forces will conquer the evil ones."

These excerpts are short and incomplete. But I hope that you got my intention: to show you that here in Europe among young people is an earnest desire to approach each other in openness and Christian friendship. The recent war made deep, deep cuts into friendly relations. There is a fervent will among many here to strive for approachment—across borders, iron curtains, and hate. One of the reporters for this conference finishes his report with the word: "We were allowed to experience that in this prospectless world there is a way for those to whom Christ will reveal this Spirit."—Youth Christian Companion by Members of the Summer Service Unit, Rosthern, Sask.

Summer Service in Saskatchewan

A Typical Day in a Unit

"Ting-a-ling" goes the alarm, and 5:15 Leona, Evelyn, Maxine, and LaVerne jump out of bed to get ready for their day's work. Evelyn and Leona are doing practical nursing and have been initiated into such things as removing bed pans, dressing and washing patients, feeding, giving medicines, and answering bells for this, that, and the other thing. They also have great opportunity to comfort and to become acquainted with the patients and their problems.

Maxine is our tray girl. To her is given the responsibility of learning to set the trays and of knowing what patient gets what and why. This job is probably the one that takes the most training and cannot easily be exchanged. She also cleans the trays and dining rooms and helps out in the kitchen. Our kitchen girl is Laverne, who does different jobs for the cook and is responsible for certain parts of the meal. She makes the coffee, cereal, cuts bread, and many other things that a cook would do.

Amy, Elda, Elaine, and Marie are happy that they can get up a little later in the morning. As breakfast is at 7:00, all workers are ready by then. Amy is our laundress. She spends her time in the laundry in the basement and has become very proficient in washing, ironing, folding clothes, and mending. They wash every other day.

Every farm has a garden, and so we have three gardeners—Elaine, Elda and Marie. They have learned to enjoy hoeing vegetables and have made the garden free from all weeds (for awhile, at least!). Washing dishes three times a day is also part of their work.

Everyone is busy during the morning, but after dinner dishes, the girls have some time off. This is usually spent in making up for the little rest of the night before; writing letters to that dear one, friends, or home; washing clothes; or in occasionally making a trip to town.

Supper is at 5:00 The girls and their ravenous appetites never miss a meal? Three times a week we have devotions with the patients. We have found out that there is never a dull evening. If there is no prayer meeting or program somewhere, we can spend the time in other ways. A game of softball against the Canadian girls has been enjoyed. (We hope to beat them yet!) Every day ends with a discussion of the day's happenings or other topics; and then after our devotions, we are off to bed, so that we will be fit for the next day's work.

Why I Chose to do Summer Service

Marie Peters, Henderson, Nebraska

My reason for choosing the Saskatchewan Youth Farm as a summer service unit was that I felt I could be of service here. God has commanded us to give our lives in service to Him, and wherever He leads, we should be willing to follow. It is also an opportunity to work with our Canadian friends. Working and having fellowship with them draws us into closer relationship and a better understanding of each other. If we are willing to follow God's leading, we are assured that He is going to guide our paths for He has promised in His Word, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Even though our service is meager, we hope that our stay here will prove to be a blessing to those we serve.

Leona Friesen, Henderson, Nebraska

My main reason for coming to the Rosthern Youth Farm was that I had been doing nurse aid work in the past and wished to continue in that field. This was the only unit that offered any opportunity to help the sick and I felt the Lord's call to go to Canada for this summer. I thank the Lord for this privilege to serve, but it is not only a privilege but also a duty. The Lord tells us to go into all the world, and with the verse, "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear? The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?", I have found courage and joy in serving the Lord in His work .

At one time it seemed difficult to present the Christian Gospel in Japan. Today reports indicate that Bibles are selling "like hotcakes" in the Land of the Rising Sun. The American Bible Society has provided over two million Bibles and this year there will yet be need for at least six hundred thousand New Testaments and 125,000 more Bibles. It is strange and amazing that out of evil things there can come good!

Should the Congregation Decide?

an editorial

THE Mennonite Church has been congregational in government from its very beginning. In congregational meeting the church takes up problems and makes final decisions. Certain duties the congregation may delegate to the board of deacons, the board of trustees, or other responsible people but the final decisions the congregation reserves for itself. This type of church government rests on the assumption that the laity of the church has the spirituality and vision to make decisions that are truly Spirit-directed. To let the leadership of the church take the responsibility of making final decisions may at times seem a wise procedure, but it is a concession to the spiritual weakness of the church. The congregational method of church government rests on the assumption that lay members are sufficiently spiritual to discern the leading of the Holy Spirit and are able to decide questions with insight that makes it possible for them to say, "it hath pleased the Holy Spirit and us" to do thus and so.

It is significant how the matter was handled when one of the most crucial issues of Christianity was submitted to the Jerusalem congregation for decision. The question was whether believers should be circumcised before they could be baptized, that is, whether they should be taught to obey the law of Moses before they could be received into the Christian Church. If they must first be circumcised it meant that there could be no Christian Church except within the Jewish Church. At the center of this question was the faith for which Stephen had died. Stephen had preached that we come to a blessed fellowship with God through faith in Jesus Christ without obeying all the ritualistic laws of Moses. The believing Pharisees held that Christian believers should keep up the temple worship and the observance of the Mosaic laws. Should so vital a question as this be brought before a congregation for final action, or should church leaders make the decision?

The Antioch church, where this question first arose, sent Paul and Barnabas and other men to Jerusalem to bring this matter before the mother church for action. When these men came to Jerusalem they rehearsed all that God had done for Gentile believers who had never been circumcised and who had not been obeying the laws of Moses. After a private conference of leaders an open discussion was held. Before all the multitude, it seems, Peter and Paul rehearsed how God had saved Gentile believers who had not been circumcised. This was real education. After all this information had been given to the congregation, one of the leaders, James, suggested a statement of position. What he advocated seemed good to the "apostles, elders and the whole church." When the decision was written up they could say, "it seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us." Evidently the entire congregation faced the question with an open mind and with readiness to receive the truth.

The entire congregation was taken into confidence and counsel. The church was given an opportunity to express itself. But before the leaders allowed the church to act on this vital issue, they planned a program of open-minded and thorough education. Both sides of the question were heard. They brought in able leaders to give testimony of God's will as they had seen it revealed. The astonishing thing is that the laity of the church, the multitude was taken in to decide a matter in which a wrong decision would have meant the slow death of the church.

The Mennonite Church, which has been entrusted with unique light from God, confronts issues today in which a wrong decision may disqualify her from further witness-bearing opportunities. Should the congregation be taken into counsel and allowed to make decisions? We will do well to follow the example of the Early Church and plan a program of education, perhaps also calling in leaders to give the best light they have on the revealed will of God before the church is asked to make great decisions. The coming draft may bring up problems that will call for church action. Before a congregation is asked to act it should have the advantage of an open-minded inquiry into God's revelations and leadings that relate to the question.

THE FORCES which drove us into the First and Second World Wars are driving us towards a third one. It is not a matter of some munitions maker here or there, some oil executive, or some politician plunging us towards such a war, although they may all have a part. Rather it is a matter of man's self-centeredness (his awful sinfulness) that makes him seek to save his life (The American way of life) only to lose it in an experience of futility and eventually war. It is America's materialistic self-seeking, its mocking of God who is concerned with the welfare of all people, its unwillingness to take up the cross, that as a whole constitutes terrible forces driving us towards war.

CHURCHES ought to give as much attention to hiring more personnel as they do to new building plans, suggests a minister-friend. The thought is that quite a number of churches would benefit from having another full-time worker so that more attention might be given to pastoral calling, work with young people, Christian education, etc. Congregations realize their need for new buildings. Along with this realization needs to go the insight that the human element can meon as much to the spiritual development of people as bricks and mortar and windows.

Not So Cruel and Wicked Afterall

Editor, The Mennonite

The story of Jim Farnsdall and Peggy seems to impress the readers that the co-operators are a group of cruel and wicked people.

Let us examine this story a little closer. We have many kinds of business: corporations, partnerships, individual proprietorships, co-operatives, mutual companies, etc. This J. and P. Hardware store must be a partnership. It could not be a corporation, because a business, in order to obtain a charter, has to have three or more persons to form a corporation.

The reason I mention this is that the corporations are the only organization that pay a corporation tax. This is a dual tax, and is the only tax from which all other businesses, including some co-ops, are exempt. Only about half of the farmers' co-ops are exempt from this tax and just a few of the consumers' co-operatives. Consequently we see that this J and P. Hardware store is not paying any more taxes than the co-operatives, and there is a good chance that they pay less.

No, we are not angels. Just like church members, co-operators go wrong at times. Nor do we object to constructive criticism, because we know if we are wrong—unjust and unfair—this organization can not last. Many of us are not so much interested in the co-operatives because of the little money we save, but because of the good it will do for the community, the country, and the world at large. Many of the causes of war are economic and we think many of these problems can be solved by doing business in a co-operative way.

USED HYMNARIES

The Mennonite Publication Office from time to time rceives small lots of used HYMNARIES from Civilian Public Service camps and other similar groups which meet temporarily, using the MENNONITE HYMNARIES in their worship services, and then, when disbanding as a formal group, turn these HYMNARIES back for use by other groups.

Being only partly used and in otherwise very good condition, these HYMNARIES can, nevertheless, be secured at very low cost—usually nothing more than transportation only. If interested, write directly to: Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

THE PRICE OF CONVICTION

It would probably stir one's emotions deeply if one knew of all those who paid the supreme price giving their last full measure of devotion during and after the war without compromising their consciences by identifying themselves with the destructive forces. One of these was Lotus Mast Slabaugh, M.D., of Nappanee, Indiana. Being just above past the upper level of the draft age, he as so many young doctors was nevertheless subject to both intense professional and community pressure that took the majority of the doctors out of many communities into the fighting forces. His was the conviction of a "peacemakers" regardless of the cost. That conviction has its price. When only a skeleton force of physicians was left for the home community, this young doctor labored day and night giving untiring, loving care to those in need of care including the wives and children of the very men who were far away engaging in the kind of armed conflict that his Christian conscience could not tolerate. He gave himself for the health and upbuilding of the community at the cost of his own health and life. Does this not underline anew the fact that those who want to follow Christ all the way including the refusal to serve in the armed forces are not afraid? They only want something big enough to die for.—Jacob J. Enz.

Should I Register under the Draft Act?

by Albert Gaeddert

No doubt, the greatest reason for refusing to register would be the reason that the draft is for war purposes. One who is opposed to war and to military service or training in any form wants to stay as far from being involved in this machine as possible. Difficult as this is, and perhaps impossible in a nation which wages total war and makes an all-out effort for war, there are yet lines that must be drawn. Some will draw the line sooner then others, and there are some who draw it at the point of registration. One cannot differ completely with such persons, for the point at which they draw their line is perhaps as logical a place as another.

However, I see two reasons why I would not draw the line at the point of registration. (1) I do not find Biblical grounds for drawing the line at this point. As a follower of Christ I am in the world yet not of the world, and I recognize the rights of Caesar and am willing to obey the laws of Caesar as long as they are not in conflict with the laws of God. (2) Under the present act I am not obliged to perform military service or take military training. Instead, as a conscientious objector, I am deferred. This is not necessarily what I would like; for, aside from asking to be free from having to take part in military training and service, I would ask no special favors. Under the present act I am deferred as a C. O.

It is at this point where I see a strong positive witness that can be given. I am deferred, I need not take part in military training or service, but that is not all. I am free to choose something much higher and nobler to which to give myself for training and service. My position prompts me to seek to witness in a strongly positive manner wherever possible, and I see very definitely some places where such witness can be rendered. In fact, the whole position of the religious conscientious objector is one based upon witnessing rather than upon protesting. I realize very well that the two are not opposites, and in the life of the Christian must frequently go together. At the same time the positive witness should be the great wheel that turns the motors of activity in my life.

Would it not be one of the greatest witnesses ever given by our people to overcoming evil with good, if virtually all of our potential draftees who register as conscientious objectors would say (in deeds if not in words) "I will take an equivalent amount of time required of the regular draftee, and give it to the Church "in the Name of Christ"? To be sure, it would inconvenience. But which is paramount in our lives convenience, or the Kingdom of God?

Last Saturday, July 17, the MCC considered the question of the responsibility of the Church with relation to the present Draft Act. The conclusion was reached that our Voluntary Service Program ought to be expanded to the point where all who feel led to give time to the Church and to the Kingdom should find their nitche in such service. This should be open to both men and women, and to young and old. The times in which we live urge us to give priority in our life to the things of the Kingdom. In the face of all the suffering, the needs, spiritual, physical, personal, social, and every other way, one is moved to choose to do good wherever possible. One wants to follow Jesus as "He went about doing good." The church is not in a position to draft men and women into service; neither can the church decide for the individual what he is to do. However, the church can and must repeat the clarion call: "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good"; "if thine enemy hunger, feed him, if he thirst give him drink," to go the second mile, and to turn the other cheek. It must do as Christ did, Who came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

The details of such a service program, though not wholly worked out, will fall into the pattern of the present Voluntary Service Program. This program already takes us into the deep South, where under the State Public Health Service we may help to eradicate the dread disease of malaria and to fight the hookworm infestations, as at Gulfport, Mississippi, where we have been working since the days of World War II. It takes us to Mexico, where a service of mercy is rendered by way of a medical program, with a hospital at the center; a program of education and of Christian nurture with the natives. It takes us to Puerto Rico, with which program we are fairly familiar, and which never ceases to call to us in a very personal manner, because numbers of our own people have served there. It takes us into the mental hospitals, where we may serve those unfortunate folks, who most of all need loving, Christian care. Besides these projects and many others which have not been mentioned there is the whole field of relief activities, which likewise has been personalized to us so frequently by members of our own congregations who have worked there. Nor are the mission fields at home and abroad to be left out of our consideration; at least we have no indication that our potential draftees would not be free to work in these areas.

This time, we ought not to be miserly with our time nor our talents. The call of God will likely be heard by many amid the crying needs of humanity. May He depend on you?

Albert Gaeddert is Secretary of the Peace Committee of the General Conference and Vice-Chairman of the Peace Section of the Mennonite Central Committee.

Do Mennonites Keep Their Promises?

by R. C. Kauffman

At the 1945 session of the General Conference the following resolution was adopted:

> "Since according to statistics 26% of the General Conference C.P.S. men wish to continue their education after the war, and since the government in its G.I. Bill has made liberal provision for all discharged service men, but especially for those who wish to continue their education, and since our C.P.S. men have received no help from the government while in camp nor will they receive any when they get out, and since some of our most promising young men are in C.P.S. and should be helped to continue their education if they so desire, and since the Board of Education, the Home Mission Board, Relief Board and the Peace Committee are cooperating in working on this problem, it is recommended that the conference approve of this cooperative effort and encourage special contributions for this Educational Rehabilitation Program for C.P.S. men."

Translated into concrete terms, the above resolution committed the Church to paying the tuition of each C.P.S. man in college for a period equal to the time he served in C.P.S. up to twenty-seven months. This (tuition) amounts to approximately one-third of his minimum college expenses, the remaining two-thirds still to be paid by the student himself. Compared with the G. I. Bill of Rights which provides all necessary costs of education, including maintenance, this is a conservative committment. It becomes even more so in view of the fact that the ex-C.P.S. man received practically no pay during his period of service.

Even this conservative committment is, however, not being met by the Church. During the last school year, 1947-48, over 100 ex-C.P.S. men attended our colleges, incurring a total tuition of $20,000. Only about $5000 of this amount has been met through contributions. The various Boards of our Conference are drawing upon their funds to help cover this deficit but a large part of it remains debt to our several colleges which accepted these boys in good faith. Due to the high costs of living, these colleges find it very difficult to carry this debt. Certainly they cannot permit it to increase. This means that prospective students qualified under the Educational Rehabilitation Program will have to be informed that the help promised is no longer available to them.

In the face of the impending draft, it is highly important that the Church does nothing to suggest that it is not whole-heartedly behind those of its young people who pursue the course of its counsel. It is important too that we maintain the Mennonite traditions of paying our debts and keeping our promises. Please give this matter your prayerful consideration. If you feel you have a share in this committment to our boys, send your contribution, individually or as a congregation, to: Educational Rehabilitation Fund; General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas.

Facing the Facts

by Howard G. Nyce, Executive Secretary, Board of Foreign Missions

The other day the Secretary was informed that we had only about $5,000 in the treasury that was not ear-marked. Money that is referred to as being "ear-marked" is money that has been collected or set aside for a definite purpose. It is true our budget for 1948 is very high and would be much higher had the Board not cut down on the various fields. This was not easy, for the Board knows quite well that the various missionary conferences, that is to say, the missionaries from the various countries, have kept the budget just as low as possible. On the other hand, the Board is also conscious of the fact that in each case there was a definite need for the askings of the various groups.

During the Board session in Chicago last February, the Board weighed the matter well, and then it was decided that there should be a committee appointed to make a further study of the budget. This committee was appointed and presented the following total budget which was adopted by the Board. India was allowed $123,500, which included $6,000 for the bungalow at Janjgir and $15,000 for the Janjgir Bible School, which was collected through the efforts of Miss Martha Burkhalter. For China, the Committee allowed $79,000 of which $21,000 was for buildings. That amount will not be needed for buildings. Much more has been used for traveling than had been planned because the work was disrupted in Paoki, Shensi Province. For Colombia, the Committee presented the budget of $25,100. For our part of the share in the Congo Inland Mission, Africa, $16,200 was granted. The Board accepted the proposal of $5,000 for Puerto Rico if the work would be opened there. For the American Indian work $34,800 was allowed. The total adopted budget was $330,000 which included besides the above mentioned, Missionary Pension, Administrative Expenses, Misisonaries on Furlough and New Missionaries, Travel etc. From a recent letter received from the Treasurer, the Secretary has been informed that only about 28 per cent of the money has come in so far.

It was the interest of our forefathers in missions that gave birth to our General Conference. This same interest must be maintained, if our Confernce is to grow. We have a wonderful group of dedicated, consecrated men and women who have given themselves to the task of making Christ known and are scattered among the American Indians in Oklahoma, Montana, and Arizona. Others are laboring for Christ and His cause in India, China, Africa and Colombia, South America. We as a Conference have an obligation toward these faithful witnesses for Christ and missions. They will do the work that God has called them to and to which they have been assigned by the Board. When they applied, were accepted, ordained and sent, the Board of Foreign Missions told them what their salaries would be. The Board did not know whether the money would be in hand or not, but acted on faith. The missionaries went forth on faith. We MUST supply the means that they can do their work, yes, Christ's work.

It is true, we have spent quite a little in China. Has this money been lost? If we are interested in the salvation of souls, we can not think of it as being lost for souls have been contacted and won to Christ; others have been strengthened in the faith. Then too, our Board is not the only Board whose work has been disrupted in China and the other Boards are also pressing on with the hope of contacting just as many Chinese as possible, with the further hope of being able to establish a permament work in the future. Our China missionaries and the Board covet your prayers in the carrying on of the work in this great land of heathenism.

We are continually praising God for the many converts in India. Here too, we are doing a great work in Christ's name. Within the past several years, the Board purchased more mechanized equipment for the purpose of doing a more efficient work. Recently several people have been sent over as builders to relieve the missionaries of that responsibility because they have been sent to bring the Gospel of Christ to those who are in the darkness of sin.

In Africa, we have a set amount that is decided upon by the Congo Inland Mission Board of which our President, Brother Kreider, and the Secretary are members. This includes salaries for the missionaries and our share of the operating budget, based on the number of missionaries we are supporting in the Congo.

In Colombia, South America, we also feel that a great work is being done with the un-tainted leper children. To this the American Mission to Lepers is agreed, having recently accepted the plans presented for the future of the work. I might state in this connection that I have just received and forwarded to the office in Newton, two checks from this organization, totaling $16,350 as follows: the first check of $750 was the first quarterly payment for twenty children in the Home or School. The year with them begins July 1, 1948, and ends June 30, 1949. The second check amounted to $15,600 representing $12,000 for the land to be purchased and $3,600 toward the budget or running expenses for our work at Cachipay. In passing I must not overlook the fact and remind our readers that the American Mission to Lepers pays about $2,000 monthly to our work in Champa, India. Yes, we are doing a great work in Champa, but much of the money comes from this organization for which we praise the Lord.

Our oldest work is that amongst the American Indians. I wish it might be possible for our Conference members to see our buildings. Perhaps it might be better, if you didn't see them. You might say the Board has neglected the work. The only answer, I can give would be, if the Board would have had the money, the buildings would look altogether different. But we believe you should know something about the conditions of some of these buildings. If God has blessed and favored you, I am sure you will show your appreciation to Him by increasing your contributions to missions so that the Board can make the needed repairs and build the buildings that have been on our list for some time.

The Board has some money "ear-marked" for buildings and repairs. Why not build? Even though we have money for some of these projects, we did not have the builder. Now we have young people who have volunteered as missionaries, and the man is a builder. But we do not have the money to employ them for that task. Therefore again we are handicapped. In order that you might see the need, let me take you to several of our Indian stations. In Clinton, Oklahoma, we must build a new church. When it is rather stormy, the building creaks. In Canton, Oklahoma, we must rebuild the Arapahoe Church.

One of our missionaries asked for a porch to be built to his residence. When the Secretary wrote and asked for an estimate, the missionary didn't send it but said instead, "While, however, we would greatly appreciate the porch, we would not feel right about having that built as long as we do not have a new church for the . . . . . The people seem to be under the impression that they were promised a new church a number of years ago, and it is hard for them to see why they do not get it . . . . If anything were added to our house . . . I am afraid their confidence in the missionary and the Board would receive a severe shock which would have its affect on the work. So we would rather get along the way we are a little longer until the church can be built."

Let me cite another illustration. This past February I visited our Arizona field. Brother Harvey Nussbaum had written me that he would be on his way to Arizona and would be glad to stop in and look the buildings over. The Board had previously asked Mr. Nussbaum of Berne, Indiana, whether he would be willing to look the buildings over and make the most needed repairs. It so happened this his going to Arizona was to take place about the time I was scheduled to visit the field. I wrote him when I was going and that he should try to get there the same time. I got there several days ahead of him. The church at Moencopi is in bad shape. The steeple is breaking away from the church, and I told Brother Wiebe I would not go in there to ring that bell because the whole thing shakes when you pull the rope and the bell rings. Concerning his house. I went to see a government man with Brother Wiebe and he said, "I looked the place over and I can't see how anything can be done without tearing down the whole thing and rebuilding it." This government man was on the Navajo reservation. When Brother Nussbaum looked the place over he also recommended that the buildings should be torn down and rebuilt. But again, for this the Board needs to have the wherewithall.

Carl Suderman's Reply to H. R. Nickel

It was my intention that this article be confined to the tax question of cooperatives. The equitable solution of this problem is paramount if independent business shall survive. Since no opposition to this question has arisen, however, I feel free to explore my opponent's arguments in other directions.

Let it be made unmistakably clear that cooperatives are primarily in competition with small business—not big business. Apparently big business is being attacked by cooperators to give the issue wider popularity, and to divert the attention of the small businessman from his own dilemma. It is small business—not big business—that faces his competitor on Main Street. It is small business—not big business—that must compete with cooperatives in the sale of washing machines, radios, cosmetics, farm machinery, etc. It is small business that must take the brunt of price cutting, rebates, special discounts, and the other numerous devices used by cooperatives to choke competition. It is small business that cooperatives are attacking in the name of big business. In fact, cooperatives could not exist today without the help of big independent business. Their trucks, rail transportation, machinery and other equipment are all furnished them by big business. In many instances big independent business manufactures the appliances, farm and other machinery, and other articles of merchandise which cooperatives then sell under the Coop label. No, cooperatives are not attempting to punish big business—they are scheming to annihilate small business.

If we were but willing to adopt for ourselves the principles we strive to impose on others! In principle (and principle only, as yet) the cooperative expects to supply its members with their needs at cost plus actual expenses of doing business. An independent competitor must do likewise if he survives. Thus no margin of profit inures to the benefit of the businessman. This he terms "selling at cost." He is obliged to give his remaining margin of profit to his customer. I have yet to hear of a single cooperator who advocates selling his own produce or livestock "at cost." Today food is a major item in the cost-of-living of the working man. Most other cost-of-living items can be deferred. Food cannot. Yet the cooperator producer seeks the very highest prices in the market, which are now unconscionable. Furthermore, he is attempting to widen his margin of profit through the theory of cooperation, There is no effort being made by him to pass on a portion of these big gains to his consumer, and thus lighten the burden of the working man whom he pretends to befriend. It seems to me that the cooperator's viewpoint of selfishness and greed depends upon the group which commits it.

While the cooperator is seeking the last penny in the market place, he viciously attacks big business for its avaricious practices. Yet most big business is not exacting such prices as it could in a "free" market. We all know that new cars are commanding prices in the illegitimate or "free" market which are about twenty-five per cent higher than factory recommendations to their dealers. These huge inhuman, money-mad enemies of society are actually policing their own dealers in an effort to pass their savings over the "free" market to the consumer. What a contrasting picture to the ostensible benefactor of the common man—the cooperative!

Cooperatives are impounding huge profits, just as independent business, against future emergencies which will occur. However, they have a singular method of justifying this in their instance, and decrying it for others. In the nineteenth Annual Report for 1947, CAA of North Kansas City, a big cooperative, made the following observation. "To meet the situation when the reverse of these conditions return, we are recommending an additional $550,000.00 be put in the members equities reserve to help cushion the shock that will come if and when prices fall drastically." That is all independent business is attempting to do. Stockholders are getting a small part of current earnings in the form of dividends.

My opponent contends that independent business is attempting to "divide and conquer." Surely he does not mean that the merchant on Main Street is trying to divide and conquer a cooperative with dozens, even hundrends of branches located throughout the country. Surely independent business, with its heavy income tax burdens, is not attempting to conquer his tax-free competitor. This Federal income tax issue is of enormous importance to the small businessman, the backbone of our nation. So let's solve it with our heads, not our hearts.

As President of one, and director of another large cooperative, why has my opponent not presented actual figures to support his contention that Federal income taxes are being equitably paid? He is certainly in a position to do so. On the other hand, the safety of Coop loans due to the tax-exempt feature, has been called to the attention of many bankers.

In response to his attack on "power politics," and the like, I am obliged to remind my opponent that the Farm Block has been the biggest single influence on Congress. We have all paid huge tribute to the farmers' welfare in the form of taxes, and probably rightfully so.

QUESTION AND ANSWER ON COOPS

[When we ran the articles on the Co-op issue sometime ago, we suggested that we would welcome questions which would then be answered by one or the other of the writers of the two co-op articles. The following is such a question and answer.].

QUESTION

"I would like to address this question to Mr. H. R. Nickel . . . . The question is:

SOME MORE

ON CO-OPS

H. R. Nickel's Reply to Carl Suderman

1. "The Mythical Yardstick" left the impression that Jim and Peggy pay corporation income tax while cooperatives are exempt. This is false. Neither private business nor partnerships are required to pay corporation income tax. These accusations also leave the impression that such cooperative savings escape state and federal income tax. This also is false, since farmers pay income tax on the returns they get from their cooperative in the same way the individual in business for himself, or as partners in a partnership. And partnerships today are doing eight times more business than all farm marketing and purchasing co-operatives combined. Cooperatives are partnerships. So where does the tax disadvantage come in? Young couples who have been reared on the farm, have married, and are striving to own the farms they operate find the going just as tough as Jim and Peggy. They face a highly organized business world. Unless organized, they must sell wholesale and buy retail. Big business exploits small business and labor. Small business exploits the farmer. The farmer exploits the soil, but the soil shows signs of wearing out.

Family income of the seven occupational groups by percentage is as follows: Independent Professional —30.1 per cent; Salaried Business—19.9 per cent; Salaried Professional—14 per cent; Independent Business—11.2 per cent; Clerical 10.5 per cent; Wage Earners—7 per cent; Farmers—6.3 per cent.

Family incomes of 6 types of communities by percentage is as follows: Metropolises—23.4 per cent; Large Cities—19.5 per cent; Middle Sized Cities—16.9 per cent; Small cities—15.6 per cent; Rural Non-farm —12.9 per cent; Farmers—11.7 per cent. (Reports by National Resources Committee) Other firms have grown wealthy by exploiting farmers, such as: railroads, farm machinery companies, land speculators, grain speculators, commission merchants, etc. Each one of these represents wealth drained from the farms. The result has been an increase in farm tenancy. (Farm tenancy 1880—25 per cent; in 1935—42 per cent; and now stands at about 45 per cent.) This is detrimental to soil conservation (extremely urgent), to improved agricultural methods, to social welfare, to the community, school, roads, etc. and adversely affects (directly or indirectly) you and me and everybody in this country and in the world. Show us a better way of remedying this situation without organizing.

II. Suderman "Higher and higher taxes to fewer and fewer people." That is the inevitable result of higher and higher incomes to fewer and fewer people. Income tax is based on ability to pay. Is that wrong? In spite of excess profits tax during the war corporations have doubled their assets (net worth) during four war years. What would this mean in terms of farming? Simply this: one farm today, two farms four years hence, four farms eight years hence, eight farms twelve years hence, etc. and we would do it with hired help. Since excess profits taxes have now been dropped, corporations are doing better by about 70 per cent. Before the war there were twenty-eight "billion dollar concerns" in the U.S.A.; today there are forty-five.

III. Suderman—"Destroys our own economic independence as farmers and merchants?" No, we are striving for our share of the national income in order to regain farm ownership. Who has more right to own the farms than the farmer? And who owns the farms operated by tenants? Many of them are owned by these same hard pressed, tax burdened independent business men. During the last eleven years the local co-operative creamery refunded to farmers $743,113.66, paid employees $1,127,767.07, all subject to income and other taxes. Paid out for taxes $74,661.91, not including gasoline tax.

The primary purpose of cooperatives is to increase the income to farmers who often are at a disadvantage in marketing and purchasing. Cooperative associations have long been favorably regarded because of their contributions to the well-being of the American farmer.

The local cooperative creamery had $108,000 to distribute to 2,400 patrons at the end of the 1947 fiscal year. This averages $45 per member. As already pointed out cooperative members belong to the low income group. While begging leniency for the large corporations, whose profits are at an all time high, opponents of co-ops think nothing of seeking to double tax (at high rates) the small returns the farmer gets from his cooperative, which were gained, not from investment (wealth) but by the labor of his hands. It is hard to see any justice in that!

"I believe that the major point of contention—the inequality of taxation—between cooperatives and private business has been conceded by most open-minded people that there is a gross injustice to private business by corporation tax exempt cooperatives under the Sec. 101 of the Internal Revenue Act. Even if this inequality could be straightened out by new legislation, wouldn't there still remain a more basic Christian unfairness in each community where co-operatives are flourishing? The community organization and setup as schools, churches, streets, park, modern utilities, etc., have all been built up as the community or town has prospered and has been financially backed by the small independent business man. The cooperatives have a tendency to and are driving these small businessmen out of the community

Program for Mennonite World Conference

The Fourth Mennonite World Conference will be held on August 3-5 at Goshen, Indiana, and August 7-10 at Newton, Kansas. These sessions at the two locations will not be dulpicate, but will rather constitute a single conference program, the Newton meeting continuing and completing the work begun at Goshen.

Arrangements have been made for thirty-two delegates and guests from Europe and South America to attend the conference: sixteen from Holland, six from Germany, three from Switzerland, three from France, two from Paraguay and two from Brazil. The Mennonites in these various countries have been invited to select and send representatives to assure adequate representation at the Conference. The responsiblity of delegates will be to report back to their home groups, rather than to speak officially as delegates at the Conference. It is assumed that Mennonite groups in the United States and Canada will be widely and adequately represented through the attendance of ministers and church leaders. Any Mennonite groups may ask one or more of their number to specifically represent them at the Conference if they desire to do so.

Special attention will be given to the accommodation of delegates and representative leaders at the conference. While it is hoped that seating will be adequate for all who attend, preferential seating for guests is planned. At Goshen the sessions will be held in the Goshen High School auditorium, which provides seating for 1,200, with loudspeaker service for over 1,500 more. At Newton, the sessions will be held in Memorial Hall, which accommodates 3000 people.

This World Conference of Mennonites is by nature somewhat different from the usual American Mennonite conferences of organized bodies which meet mainly to discharge their regular business. Instead, there will be a distinct emphasis throughout on information, inspiration, fellowship and challenge to promote mutual understanding and edification.

A wide-range program has been planned in which the Mennonite representatives from the various countries of the world will participate in discussions on many phases of Mennonite life and thought. The various sessions are to be devoted to such subjects as Mennonite Relief, World-wide Missions, Refugee Resettlement, Mennonite Institutions, Non-conformity to the World, The Peace Testimony, Young People's Work, and Christian Education. Conference speeches are being translated into both English and German in advance so that all present can follow the messages without undue language barrier.

Most of the subjects being discussed at the Conference will be supplemented by special illustrative exhibits. Also in addition to the regular programs, the Conference will provide tours to various points of special interest to foreign delegates. Following the close of the Conference, some of the guests from abroad will spend some time visiting Mennonite churches, schools, and communities, both for speaking and becoming better acquainted with Mennonites in the United States and Canada.

This is to be the Fourth Mennonite World Conference. The first such conference was held in Switzerland in 1925 to commemorate the four-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Mennonite Church. The second took place in Danzig in 1930 and dealt mainly with the problem of helping the Mennonite refugees who had just come from Russia. The last one, in 1936, was held at Amsterdam, partly in Commemoration of Menno Simon's conversion.

To enable the local committees at Goshen and Newton to provide accommodations for guests, those who desire board and lodging should request reservations prior to the Conference by contacting Robert Hartzler, 605 South Seventh Street, Goshen, Indiana, for lodging at Goshen through August 3-5, and Harry Martens, North Newton, Kansas, for lodging at Newton through August 7-10. It is important that reservations be in the hands of the lodging committees at the earliest possible date.

Program for Goshen Session

The following are the main items on the program of the coming World Conference, the first part of which is to be held at Goshen, Indiana, August 3-5, and the second at North Newton, Kansas, August 7-10. The Goshen Conference begins at 7:30 p. m. on August 3. Dr. H. A. Fast will preside.

Conference address will be given by P. C. Hiebert.

Wednesday, August 4, 9:00 a.m. The subject will be "Mennonite Relief." "The Mennonites of Germany, 1936-48, and the Present Outlook," Dirk Cattepoel, Krefeld Germany; "The Mennonites of Holland, 1936-48, and the Present Outlook," H. W. Meihuizen, Rotterdam, Holland; "Relief Work in Holland," A. P. van de Water, Friesland, Holland; "Basic Principles Underlying MCC Service and the Committee's Future," Orie O. Miller, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Wednesday, August 4, 2:00 p. m. The subject will be "Christian Non-Conformity to the World." "The Divine Imperative of Non-Conformity," Frank H. Wenger, Moundridge, Kansas; "The Historic Mennonite Expression of Non-Conformity," Donovan E. Smucker, Chicago, Illinois; "The Purpose and Power of Non-conformity," Pierre Widmer, Montbeliard, France; "The Limitations of Non-Conformity," Paul Mininger, Goshen, Indiana.

Wednesday, August 4, 7:30 p.m. The subject will be "Christian Faith and Life." "The Lordship of Jesus Christ," W. F. Golterman, Amsterdam, Holland; "The Christian's Personal Religious Life," Erland Waltner, Mountain Lake, Minnesota; "The Church of Jesus Christ," D. Edmond Hiebert, Hillsboro, Kansas.

Thursday, August 5, 9:00 a. m. The subject will be, "World-Wide Missions." "A Survey of Mennonite Foreign Missions," J. D. Graber, Elkhart, Indiana; "The Open Door of Foreign Missions," A. E. Kreider, Goshen, Indiana. Testimonies will be given by members of the younger churches.

Thursday, August 5, 2:00 p.m. The subject will be "Young People's Work." "The Church and Her Youth," Ulrich Hege, Sinshein, Germany; "A Program of Service for Young People of the Church," J. A. Huffman, Winona Lake, Indiana; "Re-

THE CHALLENGE OF UNITY

"That they may all be one . . ." John 17:11

"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Eph. 4:3.

The Unity of Believers may be referred to as a doctrine. St. Paul tells us that all who are "in Christ" are One! But, sometimes we do not realize this. It is impossible for us to change the inevitable fact involved: "There is one body, and one Spirit . . ." The degree to which Believers attain to the Spirit of Unity is a mark of spiritual attainment.

The World Conference of Mennonites provides another opportunity to allow the Spirit of God to operate in our lives so that we may come to a fuller realization of this bond of union.

The Church Unity Committee sends forth this supplement with the prayer that it may lead us to deeper consecration in the Spirit and thus a fuller dependence on that self-same Spirit to unite us in Christ.

Christian Unity is not an optional matter; it is an imperative of the Gospel! It is urgent! It is as we unite our resources in full cooperative effort that great things can be accomplished for Christ and His Church during these times of extremely urgent needs.

The Urgency of Unity

The urgency of unity is the importance of our task. Even the world knows that "in unity there is strength." This is true for evil or for good ends. When one considers the absolute priority of spiritual values, the urgency of being united becomes apparent.

What is our task? It is to release the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ unto the uttermost part of the earth. (Mark 16:15). It is to be used of God in the building of His Kingdom. It is to be true to God's righteousness in all of its applications to our contemporaneous world.

Let us ask the question: What could God do in and through my life if I were completely dedicated to Him? Then, let's expand the question. Include our local Church. What a challenge we have: What could God do in and through each of our churches if our great primary aim would be loyalty to Him—if we would be totally expendable for Him.

But, we go a step further—what about our Conference? Our Conference is made up of churches united for the building of the Kingdom. Suppose all our churches would be totally united in all activities into which God has called us—missions, relief, education, publication, etc. What amazing things God could accomplish in and through us!

That is not the top — we think of other Mennonite groups! The things which bind us together are far greater than those which separate us. God has a mission for us to perform through our united efforts.

Then, we must remember that we cannot build the Kingdom by ourselves. We also need to cooperate with other Christians. Our work must be integrated, so that His Will may be accomplished.

May Ephesians 4:2 and 3 become more and more true of us: "With all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love; Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

This We Can Do

Too often we merely speak about the need for greater unity. We also should seek ways in which we may develop unity. By the very nature of things, there are some aspects of the problem we cannot solve. But, other things we can do.

(1) Deepening of Spiritual Life. A Minister in seeking to impress this upon his congregation asked the members to all come close to the pulpit. He urged them to come as close as possible. He then gave them the lesson: as they got closer to the object they got closer to each other. As Christians get closer to Jesus Christ, they automatically get closer to each other.

(2) Greater Information. We should read about the "business" of the church more carefully than the newspaper, or about secular business. We can read The Mennonite. Each Church should be on the 100% plan. We are all part of the work of the Church, and should be well informed. Further, we can get papers of other Conferences of Mennonites. A quick reading of these will help us understand the total work. The Mennonite Weekly Review tends to bind us together. All Mennonites should receive this. As to broader news of Protestant activities, the Protestant Voice, Fort Wayne, is a good medium of information.

(3) Joint Projects. The number of communities entering into joint projects is steadily increasing. A number have Sunday school conventions involving a number of conferences of Mennonites. Others have song festivals. Still others cooperate in Vacation Bible Schools. In one community four groups of Mennonites have a soft ball league. In addition, wider cooperation in certain activities with broader areas is helpful.

(4) Increase personal contacts. During our generation of rapid transportation, and the tendency of our people to travel, this has great possibilities. It will be discovered that people everywhere have similar problems.

(5) Union in service. Someone has said that if people can play with each other they will get along. This is even more true in service. Here our relief activities have been very beneficial. The M.C.C. has been a very real uniting force. Service units have helped.

(6) Student Exchange. This has great possibilities. Becoming acquainted with students from various countries should be helpful.

(7) Student Exchange. American Mennonite students go to Europe to study. European Mennonite students come to study in American Mennonite colleges. Would it not be well for Bethel College, Bluffton Colege, and Freeman College to exchange students with Goshen College, Tabor College, and Messiah Bible College?

(8) Young People's Society Meetings. Young people can discuss in their meeting the question of unity. Also, joint meetings can be had with other groups.

(9) Work together with Mennonites of other continents. The coming World Conference of Mennonites may work out plans for a united effort to make our testimony to the world. It should be possible to find avenues of service and ways of making our testimony in which we might all join heartily without having to make concessions to our unique life and faith as a church or denomination.

(10) Invite ministers of other Mennonite conferences to preach in our pulpits. Every expression of confidence will be rewarded with confidence.

"Unity" — an Expository Sermon

by Donovan E. Smucker

During the war era American Mennonites made a very interesting discovery. Despite real diversity of background and belief they found a real unity. This was best seen in a Civilian Public Service Camp for conscientious objectors. A very warm unity was frequently found among the Amish, the conservative Mennonites and the more progressive Mennonites. Moreover, these camps often had men of other Christian groups with whom real unity was developed. Problems and tensions, of course. But real substantial unity.

What was back of this? Nothing less than the great truth which Paul affirms in I Corinthians 12. In all our quest for harmony we have forgotten that this great chapter teaches that we may have unity without having exact uniformity. Unity without uniformity! Merely as an aid to ready remembrance I have worked out the exposition of this chapter in acrostic form.

I

First, is unity under the Lordship of Christ working through the Holy Spirit. ". . . . . no man can say, Jesus is Lord, but in the Holy Spirit."

How marvelously the Edinburg conference on Faith and Life caught this truth. In 1937 Christians assembled from radically different backgrounds. What was the basis of unity? Was it some creedal declaration written by the theologians? No, it was the Lordship of Christ through the Holy Spirit. Listen to their moving declaration:

"We are one in faith in our Lord Jesus Christ . . . . We are one in acknowledging that this allegiance takes precedence of any other allegiance that may make claims upon us.

"This unity does not consist in the agreement of our minds or the consent of our wills. It is founded on Jesus Christ Himself, Who lived, died and rose again to bring us to the Father, and Who through the Holy Spirit dwells in His Church. We are one because we are all the objects of the love and grace of God, and called by Him to witness to all the world to His glorious Gospel.

Our unity is of heart and spirit. We are divided in the outward forms of our life in Christ, because we understand differently His will for His church. We believe, however, that a deeper understanding will lead us towards a united apprehension of the truth as it is in Jesus.

There it is! The truth is in Christ. And Christ is known through the Holy Spirit in our hearts. Heart and Spirit dominated by the Lord Jesus. Put that down as the basis of every movement for unity Under Christ.

II

Under Christ
Not emotional or forced. This truth must be placed alongside the first one. Paul declares in the second verse:"Ye know that when ye were Gentiles ye were led away unto those dumb idols, however ye might be led." Goodspeed's translation reveals more clearly the literal meaning: "You know that when you were heathen you would stray off as impulse directed to idols that could not speak." That is to say, these Gentiles were dominated by a purely emotional reaction. Beware of mere heat rather than light.

The issue of emotion is real. Men and women survey the strife and conflict. They are depressed by it. Along comes a false prophet with easy solution. His quack remedy is bathed in emotion. His oratory is bathed in catch phrases and epigrams. The solution is always less than Christ.

Yes, beware of mere emotional unity. For, it leads directly to forced unity. From false fervor to false fascism! From flame to fanaticism! From hysteria to hate! This is not the unity of the heart of which the Apostle spoke.

III

Under Christ
Not emotional or forced Involves variety. The Apostle says:"Now there are diversities of gifts but the same Spirit. And there are diversities of ministrations and the same Lord. And there are diversities of workings but the same, God, who worketh all things in all." Then Paul amplifies this truth by citing the variety of gifts which different men possess.

Right here is the center of gravity in most issues of unity. Many people assume that unity calls for a dull uniformity. God forbid! Such an objective is not only wrong but frightening. I say 'frightening' because totalitarianism has acutely dramatized the evil of uniformity of this kind.

But note more closely what the apostle has declared: " . . . . . there are diversities of gifts." Goodspeed translates this as "Endowments vary." Men differ in their natural ability and aptitude. The Spirit is still the same. Moreover, there are "diversities of ministrations" or forms of service. Men have different vocations; different ways of expressing the talents they have been given. The Spirit is still the same. Finally, there are "diversities of workings" That is, difference in our experience as we face life with varied talents and vocations. The Spirit is still the same. Talents! Vocation! Experience! These three are united in the common good for a universal God who is sovereign over all. Unity truly involves variety. Unity presupposes variety. Inversely, mechanical uniformity is simply disunity in disguise. Behind every movement, religious or secular which denies the truth of I Cor. 12:4-11 is actual disunity under camouflage. Germany was never complete Nazi. In fact only 10-12 per cent of the people ever joined the Nazi party. Russia is not completely Communist: only 2-4 per cent of the people belong to the Communist party. Or, show me a nation with a religious monopoly enforced by law and I will show you a people with wide divergence of religious conviction. Variety is not only inevitable. It is ordained of God for the enrichment of life!

IV

Under Christ
Not emotional or forced
Involves variety

Teaches specialization plus appreciation. Here Paul lays down a further development of the previous point. Variety exists not merely for the sake of variety. Variety's true function is that of specialization. And specialization of function assumes appreciation of the contribution of others. "For as the body is one," writes Paul, "and hath many members, and all the members of the body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. For in one Spirit were we all baptized unto one body whether Jews or Greeks, whether bond or free; and were all made to drink of one Spirit. For the body is not one member but many." (verses 12-13). Following this general principle Paul continues with his famous illustration of false isolationism. What clever personalizing of bodily parts.

The foot says, "I am not the hand" nevertheless, it remains a part of the body.

The ear says, "I am not the eye." Nevertheless it remains a part of the body. In other words, no matter how loudly you declare your isolation and self-sufficiency you still belong to the Body of Christ.

Then the argument shifts to another basis. Suppose the whole body were nothing but eyes. Alas, then you could not hear. Or, try to imagine the whole body with nothing but the ability to hear. Alas, then you would not smell. In his first argument Paul declared that you can't resign from your common humanity in the Body of Christ. Now he says that you can't limit humanity to your talent, your vocation, your experience without ruin to yourself. No, the eye cannot say to the hand that I have no need of thee. This is the dead end street leading to ruin.

Still another application of this principle is made. This deals with the pride of status and distinction. The great man, the great church may say: "We grant that your little contribution is part of the whole; indeed, that it is needed. But, please do not equate your lowly, tiny gift with our glorious leadership." Paul rebukes such pride. He shows that the lowliest part of the body is of crucial importance. And what is more to the point, that God gives special care to the lowliest precisely because they are valuable parts of the whole.

The twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth verses clinch the whole discussion: ". . . . . . that there should be no schism in the body; but that members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffereth all the members suffereth with it; or one member is honored all the members rejoice with it."

Can Christians live up to this truth? And especially Mennonite Christians? Can Mennonites suffer and rejoice with other Protestants? Can the American Mennonite suffer and rejoice with his Dutch brother in Christ? Can the American and European churches suffer and rejoice with the younger Christians in Africa, Asia and the South Pacific? Can the Amish rejoice and suffer with the educated Mennonite who leads the larger enterprises of the church? Can the plain, rural Mennonite rejoice and suffer with the believers in Chicago, Amsterdam and Philadelphia? Can the white Mennonite rejoice and suffer with his dark-skinned brother of Java, Congo and America? Can the Mennonite scholar rejoice and suffer with the simple faith of the God-fearing tiller of the soil? These are some of the issues which verses 25 and 26 bring to our hearts.

For the first time in nineteen centuries Christianity has become a global religion. Virtually every nation, every culture, every race, every continent has the beginnings of the Christian brotherhood. Today is the moment of testing. For eighteen centuries schism and division have dominated the church. Today consolidation and expansion have become dominant. Can Christian people keep faith with the missionary movement? Dare we to take I Corinthians 12 seriously? Dare we think of the Body of Christ? Hear the prophetic word of Dr. John A. Mackay. "An epoch-making step has been taken in the Protestant world when division is regarded as one of the greatest evils which can afflict the church of Christ. In the light of Christ and the developing unity which brings the Protestant churches of the world together, schism has a hideous face. And what is the soul of schism but that one institutional expression of the church of Christ should presume to be the whole? Those Christians are schismatics in the worst sense who, in spite of the New Testament record and the testimony of history, regard the particular organization to which they belong as The Church." Dr. Mackay then suggests a basic concept for the church coming down from the early church fathers: "Where Christ is, there is the church." Concede that and you are on the way to unity. But, turn to Paul's final affirmation.

Our word u-n-i-t-y is almost complete.
Under Christ
Not emotional or forced.
Involves variety
Teaches specialization plus appreciation
Yields to the more excellent way of love. How I Cor. 12:31 has eluded Bible students! It is one of the most important connectives in the entire Bible. This verse connects the twelfth and thirteenth chapters of I Corinthians. Note well its words "But desire more earnestly the greater gifts. And moreover a most excellent way I show I unto you." This more excellent way is an arrow pointing to the great charity chapter where "the beatitudes are set to music." Love Christian love, is the all-important cementing ingredient of true unity.

The motive for unity cannot come from organization enthusiasts who see nothing but the greater efficiency unity may bring. The motive for unity cannot come from those who would water down the Christian message to a pale least common denominator which has lost the boldness and audacity of our Lord in the Temple and Paul on Mars Hill. The motive for unity must be the love of Christ which never faileth.

Where is Christian unity most real? On the mission fields—that is the answer. The desire for the more effective discharge of missionary tasks has prompted the best Christian unity. Supremely the heart of the missionary is saturated in the love of Christ. This is not unity for the sake of unity. But unity through the love of Christ. A chaplain approached a wounded soldier. The soldier looked up and said, "Thanks, just the same, padre, but I don't belong to your church." Replied the Chaplain. "I know. But you belong to my God." Across the world are the millions for whom Christ died. To bring them the broken body and shed blood of Jesus Christ demands God's gracious love working through the Holy Spirit.

Unity! May God grant it on His basis for our salvation.

UNITY JOTTINGS

Dirk V. Coonnhert (1522-1590) expressed a great truth when he said: "Did we but understand one another aright, we should find that we are not so far apart as we think." As Christian people get to know each other better, suspicions often vanish.

Pride is one of the greatest hindrances to unity. It is easy for Christians to rationalize to such an extent that this is mistaken for genuine piety. "In honour preferring one another," (Rom. 12:10); "In lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves," (Phil. 2:3); "Love seeketh not her own," (I Cor. 13:5).

Unity need not lead to harmful compromise. We can have strong conviction, and yet feel a oneness with those who differ. Paul says "speaking the truth in love." (Eph. 4:15). Love has an absolute priority. There is never a time when the Christian can do other than love. This leads to unity .

The things which unite us are more important than those which divide. Since we are all human, none of us attain to an absolute yielding to the guidance of the Spirit. Indeed, if we could we would attain to absolute perfection. Thus, the great fundamentals of our faith bind us together.

The Fruit Of The Spirit leads to unity. "Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." (Gal. 5:22-23).

ST. PAUL considered a factious spirit very damaging — and an evidence of a carnal spirit. He devotes much time in his Corinthian letter to the correction of this.

UNITY begins with a union of the individual heart with the heart of God through the blood of Jesus Christ. This then expands to the family, the local church, our conference, the community and ultimately all believers everywhere.

The Minimum requirement for unity, one thinks, should be that we recognize other believers as children of God and as members of the Body of Christ. Such recognition is made when we participate in the Holy Communion. Until people are ready to take the Lord's Supper together we could hardly say that they are united in the bond of love.

Manner of life is often a hindrance to unity. It is not only doctrine that divides Christians. What some people allow themselves as Christians may seem inexcusible to other believers. Only as Christians give evidence that what they do they do to the glory of God will others feel that they are united at the center, in loyalty and love to the Lord Jesus Christ.

GREETINGS TO WORLD CONFERENCE

We extend greetings to the Mennonite World Conference which is to convene, God willing, at Goshen, Indiana, and North Newton, Kansas, in the beginning of August. May Christ reveal Himself to this conference as the One in Whom we are really and truly one.

Every evidence points to the fact that God has called the Mennonite Church into being for a great purpose and mission in the world. In all the persecution and suffering through which this Church has gone, the Lord has watched over her and kept her. This Church is still growing — growing not only in numbers, but in favor with all sober-thinking Christians, and we trust in favor with God.

Her strength lies in this that we come into fellowship with God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ through personal study of the Word of God. In love and loyalty to Christ her people strive to be literally obedient to His revealed will and teachings. Her unique mission lies in the field of peace and simplicity of life. It is an ever-growing conviction among Mennonites that these directions in Christian discipleship are vital to the Kingdom of God on earth. May the Mennonite World Conference contribute greatly towards a united testimony to the world.

News about Our Missionaries in China

CHINA MISSIONARIES as evacuees in Chengtu find much to do. The Wuthrichs are studying the language which in Szechuan has a different dialect. Mr. Boehr on June 7 went by plane to Sian with the hope of going back to Paoki to look over the situation. Mary Ellen is finishing her Senior year in the American High School in Chengtu. Aganetha Fast is teaching in a Vocational Girls' School. She asks for prayer that the hearts of the leaders and students in this school may be opened to the love of Christ and His claim to their lives. Also during July Miss Fast as scheduled to teach a course twice a week on "Personal Evangelism" at a summer school being held at the West China Union Theological College of the University. At this summer institute the (Chinese Christian) workers of all missions of the entire province were to be gathered for a month's study.

Miss Fast writes: "I am much concerned that I make the best use of my time, and I plead for prayers that much love, the love of Christ may so fill my heart, life, words and face that people will be drawn to the Saviour. And always, as opportunity presents itself, I give them an appropriate tract. One has to do it wisely for tracts are expensive, but I am always glad to present Christ through the printed word. The riscksha boys always get one for I do not want them to accuse me before God that I had driven in their ricksha and had never so much as mentioned to them Christ. Yes, our work would grow and more people would come out for Christ if more of our churches would have consecrated prayer warriors and prayers bands. I'm so glad that our church is getting alive to that."

Wm. C. Voth, in company with Dale Nebel and Ruth Fisher of the M.C.C. and Elisabeth Goertz of our mission and a Chinese driver, left Shanghai June 9 on the newly purchased mission truck. Their road lay along the coast southward through beautiful Hangchow, then southwest to Nanchang and Changsha and far-off Kweiyang in Kweichow Province, northward to Chungking and northwest to Chengtu. Rev. and Mrs. Brown made the trip to Chungking by Yantze River steamboat, in one week's time. From there they went by jeep station wagon to Chengtu.

Before leaving Shanghai Brother Voth wrote (June 4) concerning opportunities for work in China:

"Time and again one has occasion to observe how much worthwhile it is to be in the service of the Lord. Recent examples: last week Thursday one of the Assemblies of God missions in Shanghai had baptismal service where fifty-five were baptized — and that on a busy weekday. Thirty were to be baptized in Taianfu, Shantung; a large class also at Tsinan. Then Mrs. D—— said some of their group had been invited by government men to come and conduct a series of meetings in Hangchow. All expenses were paid and food and lodging provided by the Chinese. These meetings were held in government buildings. Now the mission was asked to send a staff of teachers down to teach Bible classes. Most of those wishing the Bible classes are College and University students. The meetings had been very well attended . . . . This shows again one of the reasons why it is imperative that we as Christians go forward, even to the extent of family inconvenience in order to do what we can to show forth the Salvation of the Lord . . ."

M.C.C. Reports from Akron

Goodwill Christmas Bundles

Quite a few Christmas Bundles have already been received at this time. Indications are that the total response will be good, but it should be stressed that in past years there have not been a sufficient number of these Bundles to fill the total need. Some children received none even though they may have been just as deserving as those who were first to receive. The workers abroad report that these Christmas Bundles are ideal gifts to needy children, for they contain the various items for which there is prevalent need.

All Christmas Bundles should be sent in by August 14, so that they can be packed and shipped for distribution by Christmas. Instruction appearing on the Christmas Bundle folder should be carefully followed.

Andrew R. Shelly, part time Field Secretary for the Seminary, announced this week that the campaign to liquidate debts on Seminary property has concluded its first phase, whereby a total of nearly $25,000 has been raised. This means that further expansion and remodeling can continue in order to take care of the nearly ninety people expected here next year. This group will not be entirely students but includes the family of the students themselves.

Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker has been in Pennsylvania as one of the leaders in the Eastern District Retreat. John T. Neufeld has been in Mountain Lake, Minnesota, conferring with churches in that community in connection with building plans. Don E. Smucker was scheduled to preach in the Bethel Mennonite Church of Mountain Lake this Sunday at the morning and evening services, while he is also scheduled to address a reunion of C.P.S. men in the afternoon.

The new catalog of the Seminary is ready for the printer and will be available to various indivduals in several weeks. In connection with the catalog, President Panabecker, announces that September 7 is opening date for the 1948-49 term.

Jottings

—Salem Church Dalton, Ohio: Having the Rev. Vernon Sprunger family, missionaries on their return way to the Belgian Congo, with us for the morning and evening services Sunday, July 11, proved to be a real treat to our church and community. Their enthusiastic zeal and consecration to their work was very gratifying. Briefly their message was: God needs missionary doctors, teachers, nurses, builders, electricians even more than just preachers. Rev. Sprunger queried, "If young men have ears to hear when Uncle Sam calls, why do they not have ears to hear when God calls as the need for bringing peace and life to the world is so much greater than bringing destruction and more strife?"—Corr. Mrs. Ivan Badertscher —First Mennonite Church, Summerfield, Illinois: A Vacation Bible School, which was sponsored by the Evangelical Church and our church of Summerfield, was held for two weeks in June. As a climax, a program and a tea were given for the mothers and friends. On Children's Day a portion of the Sunday morning services was given by the children. Following the Church Services, we had our annual Sunday School and Church Picnic.—Kathryn Ruth, Corr.

—The Gospel Mennonite Church of Mountain Lake, Minnesota is having a fare-ye-well service on Sunday, July 18, for Miss Anna Quiring, who is sailing for Africa on July 25 to resume her missionary services there. In May the Children's Bible hour celebrated their yearly birthday party in a welcome service for the Missionary P. J. Nickel sisters from Alaska, who with their parents have spent a few months at home in South Dakota and here. Birthday gifts were given only to the Nickel sisters. Since the Missionary Nickels are soon going back to Alaska this farewell service will also be in their honor. The churches have enjoyed the testimony of Marion Tassel, a native of Alaska who came with the Nickels The King's Co-workers are busy sewing for the Missionary C. P. Klaassen family wardrobe. These missionaries, too, plan to return to South America later in the summer or early in the fall. The church relief committee arranged to plow the fields of those members whose crops were totally or partially hailed out, With eighteen tractors on one field it takes but a comparatively short time to get it ready for re-seeding. The newly sown soy beans are doing well.—Corr.

—Zion Church, Elbing, Kansas: On Sunday evening, July 11, about 150 friends of the Kuhlmann mission met in our church to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Ernst Kuhlmann who have just recently returned from China. Following a basket dinner, Rev. Kuhlmann spoke to the guests, relating some of their experiences in China. Mrs. Kuhlmann is a sister to Rev. H. J. Dyck.—Dorothea Dyck, Corr.

—All mail formerly sent to Albert Graber, of the Zion Mennonite Church, Kingman, Kansas, should now be sent to William G. Unrau, Box 193, North Newton, Kansas.

PASTORS TO RECEIVE INFORMATION

Pastors of General Conference churches in the United States will receive a folder on "What To Do," in regard to the coming draft, beginning August 30. —The Peace Committee, H. T. Unruh, Chairman.

July 21. Many people have asked (1) why Congress deferred conscientious objectors under the draft and (2) what does deferment mean.

Deferment started in the House Armed Services Committee. While holding hearings on the draft the chairman, Rep. Andrews (R-NY), asked Secretary Defense Forrestal whether he objected to deferring COs instead of putting them in "concentration camps." Forrestal said, "No." Andrews and his staff apparently favored deferment because it appeared to be the easiest way to handle the small number of COs who would be subjest to the draft — estimated at 200 to 250 in the first year.

With Army approval the Committee adopted deferment despite the protest of Selective Service. When the bill reached the House floor in the last days of the session the proponents had their hands so full defending the important features of the bill that no attention was paid to COs. Draft opponents, nevertheless, succeeded in weakening the main provisions of the House bill.

The Senate bill was a stronger one which required COs to do civilian service. Sen. Morse (R-Ore.) made an unsuccessful attempt to put the COs under a civilian board instead of Selective Service. The passage of separate bills required a Conference Committee with members from the House and Senate to work out agreement on one bill. The Conference rejected the crippling amendments of the House bill. With the help of Sen. Morse the other Senate conferees agreed with Andrews to accept the House provision for COs instead of the Senate. After this, there was no chance for anyone who wanted the draft passed to change any part of it, so deferment stayed in.

Deferment means that a CO who proves his case is deferred from service by law. No service of any kind is required nor is he frozen to his job. Deferment is not as strong as exemption and implies a temporary status; however, this provision can be changed only by Congress.

at Pullman. The seminary quartet presented a program on July 4 and is remaining in this community for three weeks to work in the wheat harvest. In June the congregation enjoyed a Sunday School picnic at a local park. The dinner, program, and baseball game were enjoyed by all.—Mrs. Willard Wiebe, Corr.

—Missionary Marie J. Regier is scheduled to leave Shanghai for the United States on July 27.

Richard Ratzlaff, who has been called to serve the Deer Creek, Oklahoma Mennonite Church was ordained to the ministry in his home church at Pretty Prairie on July 25. Dr. H. A. Fast of Bethel College performed the ordination, assisted by Rev. P. P. Tschetter.

which they had built up by their own labors. This condition, not often realized by the farmer cooperator, is very prevalent is most small towns where cooperatives are thriving. Now I ask of you, Mr. Nickel, as a fellow Christian brother, don't you think this condition as stated is unfair?"

Lehigh, Kansas Max J. Friesen

ANSWER

"In regard to the claim about gross injustice, let me point out the following: In Lehigh there is a Farmer Co-op Elevator which by law is compelled to pay corporation income tax. (Only about fifty per cent of the co-ops qualify for exemption from the corporation income tax). Now don't you think it would be the co-op's turn to complain about unfair taxes since the Friesen Grain and Seed Company is not required to pay this tax?

"Let us consider co-ops and municipal institutions: True, co-ops pay all taxes which any other business pays with the exception of the corporation income tax. It must be remembered that personal and corporation income tax is paid to the state and federal governments, that most of it is used for war purposes today, and that none of it benefits local municipal projects. Municipal projects are not financed by donations from business men but by taxes levied on properties, business and otherwise, within the city. No property within the city limits can legally escape this tax. In this regard consider the taxability of the Central Kansas Co-operative Creamery Association during 1947: Property and other taxes over $19,000. The payroll was over $300,000. All of this, of course, is subject to income tax, and most of this goes to local employees, who pay taxes or rentals and are a part of the local municipality. Over $108,000 was credited to patrons, and all of this, of course, is subject to income tax. There was granted to the Marion County Fair Association ten acres of land, etc.

"What about co-ops and churches? Since we do not have a state church in America, churches are financed, not by civic taxes but by donations and other levies on the members. It is noteworthy that the two largest churches in Hillsboro are each making substantial additions to their buildings. In Moundridge, another strong co-op town, a new $100,000 church is to be built in the near future.

"About driving out small business men: Change is just as sure as death and taxes. We constantly change, physically, mentally, and spiritually. Nature about us changes; so do business methods, communication, etc. Unless we readjust ourselves to the times we may find ourselves cast aside. When the car, the truck, and the tractor appeared, the buggy maker, the wagon maker, and the harness maker, etc., lost their means of livelihood. Should we stop progress to save a business that may have become obsolete? Hillsboro, Kansas, has had a building boom for several years and we still do not have enough room to house our families and business. It takes just as many or more people to operate a co-operative than are required to operate a private business. No, co-operatives do not destroy, they are community builders.

I have given a pretty good picture of things as they are and the condition of the treasury. I believe our Conference members will respond to the needs and that our budget can be met in full. Yes, I believe it is possible to go over the top. What a wonderful thing it would be if we would receive a surplus so that these matters could all be taken care of.

Brother Kreider reports "that churches, individuals and young people have offered to assume the support of two couples and $1,200 toward a third couple." We praise the Lord for this report. This means that this money will go into the regular treasury. Other groups and churches have done the same in the past. This is greatly appreciated. We believe it is far better for people to give to the cause in general rather than for a special item unless that item has been assigned as a project. If it was included as a project, it has been accepted as such by the Board.

The early part of March I was attending the Foreign Missions Conference at Buck Hills Falls, Pennsylvania. I thought a great deal of our Board meeting which then had been recently held at Chicago. I had received a number of letters concerning the possibility of opening work in Puerto Rico. Our Chairman, with Brother N. Paul Stucky, had made a trip to Puerto Rico and presented their report. I was impressed with the sincerity of the young people and their zeal to open a new field and especially happy about the spirit manifested when they suggested that the $2,500 they desire to raise could be used in Colombia if we didn't open a new work at Puerto Rico at this time. While in my room at the Foreign Missions Conference I thought of the total budget of our Conference, almost a million dollars. Then this passage came to me and seemed to lodge in my mind, "this ought ye to have done and not left the other undone." Later I looked up the passage and find that the exact reading is "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone," Matthew 23:23. Is it possible that we too as a Conference are concerned about certain matters at the expense of something else? No, not that we shouldn't do what we are doing, but have we left something undone?

Dear reader, do you see the hands up-lifted of those who are going to a lost eternity because they didn't receive the message of salvation? They are looking and crying for help. Do we hear their cry? May God help us to be faithful to the great commission. Remember it was Jesus who said, "Go . . Teach . . Make disciples of all nations, baptizing in the Name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

I hope and pray that as the result of this picture presented in this article, money will be coming into our treasury as never before. No, we dare not let down our other Conference contributions. The causes to which we are giving are noble, but remember the words of the passage quoted above, "these ought ye to have done, and not left the other undone." In other words, we are to give to other causes but not to leave the cause of missions suffer as the result of our giving for other causes.

Alcoholics Anonymous and the Church

by Carl Smucker, social worker

MARTIN is in trouble and will need some help outside of himself. There are many causes for his trouble.

He seems to have a feeling of social inadequacy. You will notice that he is trying to find an escape from the realities of life. He is trying to escape the immediate problems before him. Another escape is from himself. You will note that the story tells us that Martin wants to be alone, perhaps at The Willows where he may have a drink. "The "shot" would give a pleasant feeling which he thinks would help him forget his troubles—making passing grades at school, facing his girl friend, his family or himself.

He also has that feeling of being sixteen again and the thought that he might go back and start things all over. Perhaps things could be done differently and these sessions of depression would not occur.

Before a person takes a thousand-mile trip he must start with the first mile. Before a person becomes an alcoholic he must start with the first drink. In the case of Martin, he is on the way to becoming an alcoholic. One of the characteristics of an alcoholic is losing one's self respect, even to the extent that he blames others for what he brings upon himself. Martin is beginning to lose his self respect.

There is hope for Martin as well as many others that I know. His words, "God, what can I do?," express this thought.

We all know of a great many men and women who started out like Martin, some of whom went much farther than he did. When they stop to ask themselves, "God, what can I do?" then one can begin to help them and they can turn face about and start in a new direction.

To cure drinking is not the easiest thing in the world. In helping those who need help one must first find something which will interest them more than the thing to which they are addicted. There is another thing that one notices in those who drink to any extent, and that is that they do not love anyone, not even themselves. They may be great "lovers" and even very social persons, but they rarely form a real adult relationship with anyone. Many times they are noticably infantile in their behavior. They act like badly brought up babies. One cure is to get them to form more adult relationships with other persons.

A few weeks ago a young man was sent to see a psychiatrist because of his drinking habit. The psychiatrist advised that he see a minister and that he should develop a new social relationship. This young man had been sent to the penitentiary a few years ago because of a manslaughter charge which resulted from drinking. He returned home to his wife and three children. He was unable to make the proper adjustment, and he continued to drink. A young minister visited him to see if he could help him. His first confession was, "I just can't face anyone, There really is no good in me." After a few visits he said, "Yes, I want help but I do not know where to find it." He was referred to "Alcoholics Anonymous," an organization which demands "all or nothing" of an alcoholic. This organization helped him to realize that God is the only one who can change him. He told the young minister, "Thats it." He had found the thing which would help him face people and, most of all, himself. He then started attending church, became interested in new things and new people. His good wife says he is now singing and pleasant around his home. "I have never seen him like this before," she added. He has now joined the church.

Thus one realizes that the cure for drinking is getting the person to love something more than he loves drinking. The "A A's" have a message for Christians and that is that conversion is the only cure for this moral evil and also many other evils of the world.

The drinking man, says an "A A," will never stop drinking by just tapering off, but what he must do is stop and stop completely. If he will not take the stand for complete abstinence immediately, then they contend he does not have the will power to stop at any time.

Here is some advice to girls thinking of marriage. They should never marry young men who are drinking, with the hope that some day they will be able to change them. It just cannot be done. There is nothing more tragic than to see a once beautiful young girl beaten down and old before her time as a result of marrying a slave to drink with the hope of reforming him.

The only hope for Martin and others like him comes from the statement which he made, "God, what can I do?" He is ready and prepared for any help that comes along. The church does have the solution and cure for this problem of drink. It is our opportunity, as a church, to help many young people, and old too, to solve their difficulties by helping them to know the power of God's love.

Gulfport - Eightfold Service

by Orlo Kaufman, Gulfport, Mississippi

God will bless and reward each individual with a richer life and in opening wider areas of service as he seeks to meet each task as Christ would meet it under similar circumstances. These tasks may be so trivial as to be monotonous, or apparently insurmountable. The type of work, whether it be nursing, repairing of homes, directing recreation, or teaching sewing, does not matter much if it meets a genuine need and is done in the spirit of Christ. Our ultimate objective is a spiritual one, with these areas of service as handles to help us realize it. A demonstration of the Christian way of life not only opens doors for evangelism, but often calls for evangelism. People want to be Christians; they long to hear the Gospel. Rendering service in genuine Christian love has proved itself valid both in Gulfport and in other fields of service.

The work of the service unit in Gulfport can be divided into eight general categories:

Family Welfare

The three sewing classes are the most organized family welfare activity. One is for white adult ladies, one for young girls, and one for colored ladies. Attendance at the colored ladies' class was small until it switched from the afternoon to the evening. Now eight or nine girls are attending regularly and showing good interest. In these classes they do sewing for their own families, and have been learning to quilt. The young girls are learning to make such simple things as handkerchiefs, pot holders, etc. This work is making a real contribution to the homes from which these mothers and girls come. In cases where they are unable to provide materials we provide them. Rather than give away food and clothing, our aim is to help people to help themselves. In a few emergency situations some gifts have been made available from local group contributions. Vera, camp nurse, bought vitamin capsules and baby food for children. One family was checked for hookworm and a girl's eyes are being tested for glasses.

Maintenance Work

This area of work may be less exciting and glamorous than some others, but it is essential to the happiness and efficiency of the group. Two of the girls spend most of their time in the kitchen, and one in the laundry.

Recreational Work

During the school year Ruth Weaver was in charge of recreation in thirteen colored schools, each of which she and Elizabeth Plank visited for one and one-half hours per week. An illustration of this work is a boy who is rather dull and generally not too successful in his attempted achievements. He made a mat for his mother such as the boys made in C.P.S. and was thrilled with the result. Joe Esch made several pieces of recreational equipment, such as sand boxes, high-jump stand, set of volleyball poles, helped mark courts, etc.

Religious Education

This includes work in the colored schools, our Sunday school, and some visitation work which is devoted to story telling for the children and devotions. The religious education in the colored schools is a new undertaking. The work is highly appreciated and the instructor is well qualified. The Sunday school, which is a community Sunday school but staffed largely by unit workers, is also a good work. The fact that seventeen from it recently accepted Christ is evidence of the value of the work and that of the unit as well. Recently we have been inviting families from the community in for Sunday dinner. This is an effort to get the men to attend Sunday school, too.

Home and School Repair

A limited program of school repair is being carried out. The superintendent of schools was not willing to give funds for this purpose but agreed to purchase materials and then have the unit do the repair work. Although he has not fulfilled this promise, the workers have made a few minor repairs, such as painting a blackboard, repairing steps, and fixing privies.

Home repair is also limited. We helped one needy family build a new home. It is a 10 x 20 house for a family of six. They had to move on very short notice. They had no funds to buy windows or doors. We bought windows, built frames, and put them in. We also built doors and installed them. The total cost of material was $18.50. They promised to pay on a weekly basis. The father said, "I don't know what I would have done if you and my brother had not helped me."

Home Nursing

One of Vera's prized projects has been teaching an old lady, who recently became a Christian, how to read. The Bible serves as one of the textbooks. She also gives shots and makes occasional calls when her services are needed. Our camp nurse's special interest is child welfare and health education work, both of which are very needy fields.

Project

The health department has asked that the camp make available complete sanitary units. After checking our material inventory we decided to complete thirty-eight units. The units have been completed and we are taking steps for final settlement. We still deliver units, but do not install except in cases where we feel that labor cannot be hired because of lack of funds to pay the necessary wages.

Education

Mary Ann is helping some handicapped children in their schoolwork as well as attempting to teach them the basic materials which they should have learned in the primary grades. She is working with Ruthie also, even though she was asked not to attend school because she has not learned to speak well.

Vera is planning a health lecture that will be given at each of the colored schools. She will accompany Libby and Ruth. The colored schools are open for anything we have to offer.

The unit testifies:

"It has been our privilege to give food to people who would have gone hungry without our help, to give clothing to children who would not have been able to attend school regularly, to help people to do house cleaning and to create the desire to be clean, to help mothers sew needed clothing for members of their family, to teach Bible to hundreds of children—white and colored—to provide nursing care which would not have been provided, to teach children to play wholesome games and to play fair and in a Christian spirit, and, to influence at least seventeen to make a verbal confession of Christ as Lord and Saviour."

How Do You Rate?

by Ruth and Kenneth Bishop

How do you rate with your friends and your family? Do they feel overjoyed when you make your appearance or are they relieved when you finally leave? Read the following statements and mark one of the three solutions. Be honest so you really know how you stand with others.

1. You always feel extremely selfconscious when you are with a group. In fact you just cannot enjoy yourself. You change all this by a. Getting away from people as much as possible and spending your spare time reading and listening to the radio.

b. Becoming loud and boisterous attempting to make yourself the life of the party.

c. Trying hard to forget your selfconsciousness by expressing an interest in others.

2. Your church-school teacher has handed you an article to read and report upon next Sunday. You take the article home.

a. Lay it aside, think about it next Sunday morning, and skip church school that morning.

b. Glance over it while you are eating your breakfast next Sunday and tell the class it was interesting.

c. Read it, taking a few notes, and giving a brief and interesting report to your class.

3. Your best friend came out of a chemistry quiz with a very low mark while you hit the one hundred per cent mark. So,

a. You make him feel worse by reminding him over and over again that chemistry is your favorite subject and that you made out well.

b. Tell him you flunked also and drowned your sorrows in a coke.

c. Forget about the chemistry quiz and talk about last night's basketball game.

4. You have always covered your mistakes at home by losing your temper at the appropriate moment. Now Jim and Barbara are kidding you unmercifully about that awful boner in French class and you

a. Blow up and tell them what you really think.

b. Sulk and plan ways of getting even.

c. Say a little prayer for self control, laugh, and take the kidding like a good sport.

5. You arrive at church school a little early and notice a stranger sitting with your teacher.

a. You hurry out quickly so you will not be asked to entertain the new comer.

b. You try to find out from others who this new person is, stare at him and keep your distance.

c. You say, "Good morning" to the teacher and are introduced to your new class member. You try to make him feel at home in your church.

6. The gang decides to go ice-skating, but you wanted to ski. So you

a. Tell the gang what you think of them and go to a movie.

b. Follow the gang to the rink, but never let them forget that your idea was different and that ice-skating is all right—for children.

c. Have a good time ice-skating with the group.

7. Mother and Dad have planned a family picnic. All the plans are complete. Then your best pal calls you saying he has two tickets to the big baseball game. You decide to

a. Tell the family to enjoy the picnic without you.

b. Tell Jack you will "give him a ring" in fifteen minutes and then put on a big act for the family's sake until they decide you should cancel the picnic and go to the ball game.

c. Tell Joe, "Thanks," and "Sorry," but you have made plans with the family for a big day and you cannot change them now.

8. You have a Sunday afternoon at home with the family. This does not happen often and

a. You spoil the family's day by letting them know how bored and miserable an afternoon at home can be.

b. You settle down to a session of your latest records to enjoy yourself while shattering the peace of the rest of the family.

c. You help with the dishes, are conversational and enjoy a nice, afternoon with the folks.

9. Mother and Dad are going out for an evening. A baby sitter cannot be engaged so they ask you to help out. You do a. By complaining making them feel miserable, but finally agreeing.

b. By taking on the job but taking out your feelings on your younger brother.

c. By telling Mother and Dad you'll be glad to help, and have a lot of fun entertaining your brother.

10. When you are with your friends you try hard to be popular by.

a. Being loud and witty.

b. Agreeing with everybody not matter what they say.

c. Being your best self.

Now that you have marked these honestly, look back and see how you rate with those who know you. Every "c" mark is good. Every "a" and "b" mark should call your attention to the fact that you could become a much better person. Somewhere you are a little off center. If you do not have a "c" rate, see what you can do about it.—Youth

What Means the C. O. Deferment?

The recent legislation putting into effect the new conscription act provides that he who "by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form (is a conscientious objector). Religious training and beliefs in this connection means an individual's belief in a relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation, but does not include essentially sociological or philosophical views or a merely personal moral code." Those who fit into this classification will be deferred from any service to the government.

The reason this was done was because the Congress felt that the small number of people which would be so classified would not warrant the machinery required to provide for them.

This, however, raises some entirely new circumstances for those who are conscientious objectors. They can look upon this as a privilege and opportunity and perform no service beyond that which the government asks of them. In this case, it would mean that they would go scot free. Or, this can be looked upon as an opportunity to demonstrate to government and society the seriousness with which the individual considers his obligations to the church and his Christian faith by performing voluntary service equal to or more than that required of his friends who have been drafted for military service.

Those who are ages nineteen to twenty-five will be deciding this question.

Events of Interest to Youth

June 11 and 12, at Eureka, Illinois, the formal organization of the Mennonite Youth Fellowship of the (Old) Mennonite conference took place. Adoption of a constitution and the election of officers as well as discussion and talks composed the meetings for the two days. A high spirit of enthusiam on the part of those present has been reported. This organization is to the (Old) Mennonite church what the Young People's Union is to the General Conference. Gerald Suder of Orrville, Ohio, was elected president.

A Christian Youth Conference of North America is to be held at Grand Rapids, Michigan, from August 31 to September 5. This conference will bring five thousand young people together. It is being sponsored by the United Christian Youth Movement which combines the youth work of forty denominations and sixteen national youth-saving agencies including the International Society of Christian Endeavor. "The conference is called to demonstrate the power of Christ in the lives of young Christians in North America," states Rev. Dennis Savage of Chicago, conference director.

Ideas for Projects

The young people of the Topeka Mennonite Church, Topeka Indiana, have undertaken a crop project consisting of the raising of an acre and a half of potatoes. One evening they gathered together in a barn and, sitting on bales of hay, they had a potato cutting bee. Later several of the young people planted the potatoes with a tractor and planter. During the summer there will be several hoeing bees. The project has as its main interest the raising of funds for a camp site to be purchased by the Middle and Central districts for young people's retreats.

Twenty young people of the Skippack Congregation of the (Old) Mennonite Church have formed a Twilight Missionary Project Band. This group last year raised sweet potatoes and field corn. They planted 2,800 sweet potatoes and six acres of field corn. The group also maintained the church cemetery during the summer. The total proceeds from these projects yielded for them $866.32.

Out of China . . .

Out of China comes a report from two American Friends Service Committee workers who have spent the last year with the international peace hospital in Communist-occupied territory. They are Frank Miles of Oregon and Margaret Stanley of Iowa. Although they held no brief for Communist tactics in China, they did say that many reports are exaggerated. Frank saw only one case in which a landlord was beaten, and says that the man was not severely hurt. Traders and machine-shop operators can continue to own their businesses. Prices of basic necessities such as food and clothing are strictly controlled, and currency values are controlled to meet those prices.

Regarding stories of opium growing, Frank said that some opium is grown for medical purposes, but that is strictly controlled. "Opium smoking is not allowed," he added. "Drinking is frowned upon. Prostitutes are reformed and re-educated, and no philandering is allowed in the marriage relationship."—Adapted from a story in the New York Times.

Building a Brotherhood

by J. S. Schultz

Building a Brotherhood! What a wealth of meaning those two words imply: what a range of action in our day is suggested by the word, building. In one breath we whisper of reconstruction and building peace and goodwill, with the next we thunder force and destruction.

In our saner moments we give a bit of attention through school and church to building character, human equality, yea, building the Kingdom of God and Brotherhood. Are we fit to be builders of anything so sacred?

If I were to use a text as background for this article, I could do no better than refer to Paul's oft quoted word to the Corinthians (I Cor. 3:9): "We are God's fellow-workers; you are God's field, you are God's building." According to Paul, we are thus both builders and building material. As material, we can be as hay and stubble or as precious stone. As builders, God has created us free to accept or reject Him as Lord and Saviour when He breathed His Spirit into us. His church is the great building He is perfecting for us, a brotherhood of love out of men, for men.

This intricate building process can become a marvelous adventure—man working with God. Here are a few thoughts from men who have experienced it. Wallace Speers, referring to our faith in God and its expression in service in a book entitled Laymen Speaking puts it thus: "The first is the spiritual conditioning, or intake side, and the second is the practical or distribution side, and we must maintain a complete balance between the two." "Intake only becomes completely paralyzing: too much attempt at distribution without intake lays one open to all possible error." "As individuals are, so the groups become," asserts another layman. A third writer in this same book, W. C. Huckabee, adds, what seems to me a very helpful observation, while we are talking about ways in which laymen can exert their Christian influence. He classifies Christians into two types, the meditative and the active. The first he characterized as "men who have unusual capacity for effective prayer and meditation; who are by nature sensitive to spiritual values." The active he describes as one to whom "prayer is very important, but one who earns by his work the right to pray." How much we Christian men are in danger of finding fault with Christians who are not just like we are. Surely in the Bible, even among Jesus' disciples, we find these different types. God made us differently one from the other not to find fault, but so that we together might make a more complete whole.

Again emphasizing the importance of lay-Christians in the church, here is another statement from a great Christian leader of today: "The church's critical need today is laymen and laywomen who believe that Christ's truth alone can set us free, and who therefore are determined that the convictions and principles He stands for shall in the end be worked out in all of public life." "There are many ways of getting rid of Christ but in Christendom the most popular way . . . . is to split life into two realms, the secular and the sacred, and then put Christ away in a sacred niche within whose confines we treat Him with great respect. My truth, says Christ, was meant for business and politics, and racial relationships, and national and international life; I died to save the whole world."

Surely, fellow laymen, the field is white for harvest; how shall we go to work? As individuals there are three areas in which every Christian can witness for his Savior, can let his light shine. As church members, there is work for us to do in the church, one of the greatest institutions in the world, and through the church in conference and other Christian organizations, and how unwillingly we respond to the call! Why not surprise our church leaders by volunteering for service instead of waiting to be elected or even drafted? I believe the angels are waiting to sing the praise of such service rendered spontaneously, joyfully.

Secondly, every layman, with very few exceptions, has a vocation and every boy or young man is searching to find his vocational niche if he hasn't yet. Would we not all far rather give ourselves over

an editorial

For too many the Sunday school is just an empty form, something to be endured but hardly much enjoyed. Whereas the Sunday school should be a momentous experience.

We think that it could be such an experience if the Sunday school time were utilized in such a way that each member would discover, even if in a very limited way, what he can specifically do about the solution of problems that are momentous.

We need not stumble dully through our Sunday school periods and remain in the dark about taking one step to evangelize those who have not found The Way, and not discover an effective approach to winning other Christians to non-resistance, and be unable to find anything to do to prevent a third World War, and fail to do anything in our community to free men from the desire to drink, and fail to work out for and with the young people recreation that satisfies, and remain perplexed about how to lift one finger against racial discrimination. Surely there are momentous problems, the consideration of which should also be momentous. Surely there are problems upon which we ought to spend hours and hours.

The Christian faith should lead us to do something about the things that are not as they ought to be. Two minutes spent in the usual Sunday school class on a "problem" does not lead to such doing. One of the most killing things about the Sunday school is that it leads to so little action. It is too largely an intellectual exercise. We usually know much better than we do.

The guiding question for each individual, as the class considers a problem, should be, "What can I do about the problem?" Each person should come to some specific step he can take even if that step is ever so small. Little actions linked with a great concern have a way of developing into mighty action. We are to be doers of the Word and not hearers only.

The aim of our usual Sunday school procedure is to develop the spiritual life. We propose that trying to do something about a problem is one of the best ways of promoting such growth. It stimulates creative thinking, which, to our mind, is much more valuable than the accumulation of a lot of facts or the absorption of a lot of ready-made conclusions. Thinking will lead to facts and conclusions and will do it in such a way as to make them seem momentous.

A wholehearted attempt to solve major problems can lead into an exploration of the deepest truths about God and man. Such problem-solving makes people look for resources and basic truths.

The Sunday school hour is a good time for attacking such problems. Our schedule is generally so crowded that the addition of a new activity usually is an invitation to failure. Let us remember that it is "lawful to do good on the Sabbath."

However, not only young people's and adult Sunday school classes might profit from such an approach, but also young people's C. E. groups.

Such a creative approach eliminates boresomeness because: it enables people to think on problems that are vital to them, it asks them to formulate their best thinking on the subject, and it makes each one stand up to be counted on vital issues.

If the reader feels that this approach has genuine merit, then let him decide what his steps ought to be towards its application.

THE BERLIN SITUATION is being played up in the papers as though it were a fundamental problem between Russia and the United States. That is not the case. Solving it in the usual way will not unite the nations in friendship. The battle of Berlin seems to be an outcome of the struggle for power in Europe. Russia seeks to surround itself with friendly states, and the United States is out to build up a strong western Germany which would serve as a bulwark against Russia. However, this whole attempt grows out of a still more fundamental problem. That problem is the refusal of the United States to see anything good in Communism and Russia's refusal to see anything good in America's system of free enterprize. The solution lies in integrating the best of the two systems into something new the world hasn't seen. If that approach were taken far enough, the result would be a Christian economy in which the dignity of the individual would be balanced by a vital concern for the general welfare, with both based on voluntary choice instead of chance or compulsion. As it is, American's have too much of the attitude of "let the best man win and the devil take the hindmost," and Russia has too much the attitude that the state is everything and the individual nothing. The fundamental problem is that of proving both systems and of holding fast to that which is good in each. Let there be no mistake. Neither Communism nor Capitalism is the answer. But there are tendencies in both which point to the real solution in the Christian answer, in which a man dares to love himself but also feels like loving his neighbor as himself. Christian thinking about the Berlin situation should lead an indivdual to some appreciation of the wheat that is to be found in the straw of Communism.

(Issued by the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, 941 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington 1, D. C. Phone: Executive 0230, July 7, 1948.)

Note: This is a preliminary statement of information regarding the provisions for conscientious objectors under the Selective Service Act of 1948. Regulations and Selective Service System Forms referred to are tentative at the time of this writing and changes will occur from time to time. Registrants should keep in close touch with the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, with their church or organization headquarters, and read denominational and other papers for additional information on conscientious objectors.

PART I.

PROVISIONS FOR CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS

Text of Sec 6 (j) of the Selective Service Act of 1948.

"Nothing contained in this title shall be construed to require any person to be subject to combatant training and service in the armed forces of the United States who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form. Religous training and belief in this connection means an individual's belief in a relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation, but does not include essentially political, sociological or philosophical views or a merely personal moral code. Any person claiming exemption from combatant training and service because of such conscientious objections whose claim is sustained by the local board shall, if he is inducted into the armed forces under this title, be assigned to noncombatant service as defined by the President, or shall, if he is found to be conscientiously opposed to participation in such noncombatant service, be deferred. Any person claiming exemption from combatant service and training because of such conscientious objections shall, if such claim is not sustained by the local board, be entitled to an appeal to the appropriate appeal board. Upon the filing of such appeal, the appeal board shall refer any such claim to the Department of Justice for inquiry and hearing. The Department of Justice, after appropriate inquiry, shall hold a hearing with respect to the character and good faith of the objections of the person concerned, and such person shall be notified of the time and place of such hearing. The Department of Justice shall, after such hearing, if the objections are found to be sustained, recommend to the appeal board that (1) if the objector is inducted into the armed forces under this title, he shall be assigned to noncombatant service as defined by the President, or (2) if the objector is found to be conscientiously opposed to participation in such noncombatant service, he shall be deferred. If after such hearing the Department of Justice finds that his objections are not sustained, it shall recommend to the appeal board that such objections be not sustained. The appeal board shall, in making its decision, give consideration to, but shall not be bound to follow, the recommendation of the Department of Justice together with the record on appeal from the local board. Each person whose claim for exemption from combatant training and service because of conscientious objections is sustained shall be listed by the local board on a register of conscientious objectors."

PART II.

DEFINITION OF A CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR TO ALL WAR.

The new law carries the following definition of a conscientious objector:

" . . . . any person . . . .who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form. Religious training and belief in this connection means an individual's belief in a relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation, but does not include essentially political, sociological or philosophical views or a merely personal moral code,"

The first sentence follows the phrasing of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940. The second sentence has been added to the wartime definition. This language narrows the definition of a conscientious objector from the general interpretation given in the 1940 Act.

PART III.

PROCEDURES FOR CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS.

Note: Regulations and Selective Service System Forms referred to below are tentative at time of this writing.

1. REGISTRATION.

All male citizens and other male persons who are between 18 and 26 on the day or days fixed for the first or subsequent registration are required by law to register. Failure to register is a violation. The draft registrar will register anyone who appears, answers questions, but refuses to sign the Registration Card

(S.S.S. Form No. 1). This does not protect from prosecution those who refuse to present themselves. Signing the Registration Card is not evidence of willingness to perform military service. It is conceivable that refusal to sign may raise barriers in obtaining classification as a conscientious objector.

A registrant may note on the margin of the Registration Card (S.S.S. Form No. 1) that he holds conscientious objections, but this act has no legal significance. The Registration Certificate (S.S.S. Form No. 2) is required by law to be carried at all times.

It is expected that registration will begin on August 30.

2. CLASSIFICATION QUESTIONNAIRE (S.S.S. FORM NO. 100).

After filling out the registration card the Classification Questionnaire will be sent to eligible registrants in those groups which are subject to induction. This questionnaire asks for information on identification and education, membership in the armed forces, prior military service, ministry or ministerial preparation, family status and dependents, present occupation, agricultural occupation, students, citizenship, court record, conscientious objections, and physical condition It is not expected that this questionnaire will be sent to everyone who has registered. Every conscientious objector who receives the questionnaire, regardless of other grounds or claims for deferment, should fill out SERIES XI for claiming conscientious objection to war.

Series XI now reads:

"By reason of religious training and belief I am conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form and for this reason request that the local board furnish me a Special Form for Conscientious Objectors (S.S.S. Form No. 150) which I am to complete and return to the local board for its consideration."

Signature

3. SPECIAL FORM FOR CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS. (S.S.S. FORM NO. 150).

Need for Form No. 150. Determination of a claim of conscientious objection cannot be made from the Classification Questionnaire. Regulations impose on each conscientious objector the duty to obtain and file information about his position on Form No. 150.

Obtaining Form No. 150. If it is not mailed promptly after signing Series XI of the Classification Questionnaire, write to the local board again asking for the form. Retain a copy of your letter.

Answering Form No. 150. Answers should set forth your views fully but concisely, giving illustrative facts. Form 150 lacks space for adequate statements; extra sheets should therefore be attached to the printed form. Keep copies of all answers. The following papers may also be submitted:

1. Documents: These might include papers such as the official church position towards conscientious objection; proof of membership in a pacifist organization; proof that registrant has registered with his church as an objector, etc. Keep copies.

2. Affidavits: These may be notarized letters from persons who know registrant's position. Letters of parents, ministers, teachers, and others who personally know the registrant are valuable. Letters from non-pacifists are very desirable. It is best to give specific facts and not just a brief opinion that the registrant is sincere. Keep copies.

SUGGESTIONS: Answers to Form No. 150 should emphasize all facts showing that registrant is a sincere objector as defined by the law. The following points are important:

1. Religous Training and Belief. This should be explained as clearly as possibly. Any formal church connection should be mentioned. Conscientious objectors are not limited to members of the "historic peace churches" nor are they required by law to be church members or church attenders.

2. Opposition to "participation in war in any form." To qualify as a conscientious objector, the registrant must be opposed to participation in all wars, not just some wars.

3. Employment. Claims of scruples against war may be doubted where registrant is employed in war work. If he is so engaged but feels certain that his work is fully consistent with his claims, he must convince his local board.

Returning Questionnaire to the Local Board. Failure to return Form No. 150 after it has been requested by the draftee is not a crime but will jeopardize a future claim to a conscientious objector classification.

4. APPEAL

Any person denied his claim of conscientious objection by his local board may appeal his classification by sending a written request to his local board. The request must be submitted within the time allowed for filing an appeal after receiving the classification. The time allowed will be fixed by Selective Service regulation. If a registrant does receive proper classification by the appeal board, he may appeal to the President. Keep copies of all letters.

Anyone seeking assistance from the National Service Board for Religious Objectors or any counselling agency should give a complete record of his case including date of registration, classifications and dates received, copies of papers submitted to the local board, dates and copies of requests for appeal, vote of the appeal board and other pertinent information.

5. TYPES OF CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS

The law recognizes two types of conscientious objectors: 1) those willing to do noncombatant service in the armed forces and 2) those conscientiously opposed to both combatant and noncombatant service in the armed forces. Conscientious objectors willing to do noncombatant service will be inducted into the armed forces and assigned to noncombatant duty. Such persons are members of the armed forces and subject to all military discipline. The President is authorized to define noncombant service. To date, noncombatant service has not been defined. During the latter part of World War II such service was in the medical corps of the armed forces.

Conscientious objectors who cannot conscientiously perform either combatant or noncombatant service in the armed forces are deferred. Deferment leaves the conscientious objector free from any service under this Act.

6. PENALTIES

Sec. 12 (a) " . . .any person . . . who otherwise evades or refuses registration or service in the armed forces or any of the requirements of this title, or who knowingly counsels, aids, or abets another to refuse or evade registration or service in the armed forces or any of the requirements of this title, or of said rules, regulations, or directions . . . shall, upon the conviction in any district court of the United States of competent jurisdiction, be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years or a fine of not more than $10,000 or by both such fine and imprisonment . . . ."

This is similar to provisions of the 1940 Act. Ministers and others may counsel with young men about provisions of the law for conscientious objectors without violating the law.

7. CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS WHO SERVED IN NONCOMBATANT OR CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

Veterans who have had 90 days or more of honorable military service between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day or who have had 12 months or more of honorable military service between September 16, 1940, and June 24, 1948, are exempt. This exemption applies to conscientious objectors who served in the armed forces.

The law does not specifically exempt conscientious objectors who served in Civilian Public Service under the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940. Classification as a conscientious objector under the 1940 Act, though not conclusive, is strong evidence in support of a claim for conscientious objection under the 1948 Act.

C. O. THEOLOGICAL STUDENTS AND THE DRAFT

[The following resolution was adopted on July 17 by the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges concerning C. O.'s and theological students in relation to the draft and registration.]

ART. XIII In view of the Selective Service Act of 1948 the Council approved the following suggestions of procedure for securing exemption and deferment privileges provided in the Act for conscientious objectors who are pursuing theological or pre-theological studies:

(a) Those pursuing pre-theological courses should pre-enroll with a recognized theological or divinity school.

(b) Those enrolled and those pre-enrolled in theological or divinity schools should clearly indicate such information in classification questionnaire (S.S.S. Form No. 100).

(c) In filling out classification questionnaire (S.S. S. Form No. 100), conscientious objection against war should be filed under Series XI and special form requested.

(d) Special form for conscientious objectors (S.S.S. Form No. 150) should be filled out and filed with the local board.

News from Paraguay

Asuncion, Paraguay

Dear Editor and Readers of The Mennonite: Over two months ago we left Henderson, Nebraska, on our way to Paraguay. Our first stop was Akron, Pa., where we spent several days, acquainting ourselves with the work of the MCC. We were also privileged to visit the Eastern District Conference at Lansdale, Pa. On May 6, we boarded the Pan American plane for Paraguay.

The trip really was grand. After about eight hours flight we landed on the island of Puerto Rico. Here we were met by Hildegard Peters from our home church. She is teaching in the Academia Barranquitas. Within an hour we were in the air again. All that day the weather was pleasant, and the plane sped on smoothly. At about six o'clock that evening we came into a stormy area. The big plane bore up nobly under the weather, although it rocked and pitched considerably. Supper was postponed for at least an hour. By then it was safe to try and hold on to some soup and a cup of coffee. How different it was to sing, "Jesus Saviour pilot me, over life's tempestuous sea," on a night like that over ten thousand feet in the air, than to sit in the church pew where everything is serene. The next day we arrived at Trinidad. A summer day awaited us there. In a short time, we were in the air again, leading for Brazil. About midnight, we arrived at Belem, Brazil.

There our passports were checked for the first time. Also thermometers were put in our mouths to see if any one was running a fever. Everyone passed this rigid physical examination with flying colors. Here we met with a doctor and his wife from Utah, who were on their way to Rio de Janerio for the convention of the Rotary International. In Rio we were met by Mr. Arentz, who is so nobly giving his time and advice to all Mennonites traveling through Rio. We spent the night in a hotel. Early Sunday morning we again stepped into a plane, a two-motored one, bound for Sao Paulo. We had hoped to meet Rev. and Mrs. Kaufman at that point, but due to the fact that we had the wrong address, Mr. Arentz phoned to a German family, friends of his, who met us at the port and where we spent a quiet Sunday.

On Monday, we went out on search for the Kaufmans. Went to the place our address showed, but to our dismay no one even knew anything. What next? There we stood in city of several million people, unable to make our wants known in Portuguese. We saw a man walking about two blocks away. I said to myself, "Can that be Kaufman?" I ran as fast as possible to overtake him. Yes, it was Kaufman. He had come out to this part of the city to look for a house. "All's well, that ends well."

We spent a week with them. Met a large number of the Mennonites that have come here from Curitiba and the Kraul settlements to work. This is a needy field. A Mennonite center, such as the Kaufmans are trying to establish under the direction of the MCC, will bear rich fruit. Again we bade our friends and co-workers farewell, and in about two hour's flight we landed at Curitiba.

Here Rev. David Koop was already waiting for us. We had been several hours late out of Sao Paulo due to rain. It was Pentecost Monday, second holiday, and they had hoped we would arrive in time for services yet, but it was noon before we arrived at Reverend Koop's home. Here at Curitiba we spent two weeks, visiting and serving in the two churches which they maintain together with the Mennonite Brethren. Our services here were interrupted considerably because of my health. I spent several days in bed. The doctor, who spoke a good German, warned me of going on to Paraguay.

Against his order we again boarded a plane for Asuncion, where we arrived, after several hours flight. We were late again; it was getting dark when we landed. Geo. Buhr, one of the MCC staff, waited for us. We were also glad to meet one from the U.S. Embassy who greeted us very friendly as fellow citizens and asked us to stop in at the Embassy to register as soon as convenient.

Here we are in Asuncion now since May 3. Mr. and Mrs. Buhr were the only acquaintances we had here, but by the next morning after our arrival, we met all of the MCC staff. Mr.

Every day we were patiently waiting for word as to when the immigrants should dock in Buenos Aires. Days and weeks went by, till one day, July 2, the report came that the first group of fifty-three, mostly old people, mothers with small children, and the sick would arrive via airplane. One of the two doctors that were coming with the group was with this first transport. The ship was delayed for several weeks at Recife (Pernambuco) Brazil, due to boiler trouble. Seventeen flights were made to bring the whole group of 758 to Asuncion. This number was increased by four babies that were born on the way (one set twins). By the end of this week, it is hoped all will be on their way to the colonies. They are leaving in groups of ten to one hundred and fifty by boat for their destination.

Rev. and Mrs. Harder, J. W. Warkentin, and Homer Martin, all of the MCC staff, and left for Buenos Aires around the first of June to make preparations for the arrival of the immigrants. When word came that the whole group would arrive by plane they hurried back, but due to fog and other things arrived Tuesday morning. Some of the group were taken care of in the MCC home, a few were taken to Mennonite homes in the city, while the greater part was taken to the Colegio Internacional (Disciples of Christ) who just happened to have a few weeks vacation. The accommodations here at the College are very good. Dormitory space, with plenty of sleeping cots and the kitchen are ideal.

All of the immigrants seemed to be in good spirits. The long delay on the ship had not been too pleasant. Since the ship's machinery was out of order, the ventilation and freezing units did not function, which made it rather hard for all. They were not far from the equator, so the weather was quite warm. We had hoped that Mrs. Elfrieda Dyck would be able to come as far as Asuncion, but more work was pressing so she decided to return to Europe after the last group had left Recife.

Mr. and Mrs. Buhr left several weeks ago for home after spending two years in MCC work here in Asuncion. Miss Emma Schlichting and Ella Berg also went with them. They, too, had finished two years of teaching in the colonies. Miss Viola Duerksen is at present in Brazil visiting the groups at Curitiba and Sao Paulo. She will be back in a week or so to resume her teaching in Volendam. Her two-year term terminates some time in January. Mr. and Mrs. Ura Gingerich and Ed Zehr are also making plans to sail for home by the end of July. Mr. J. W. Warkentin will sail for the U.S. in a few weeks but plans to return after Christmas to resume his work here at MCC. A number of new workers are expected to be here in the near future at the MCC office.

Our stay here at the MCC has been a pleasant one. We have met many people here in Asuncion also many from the colonies who come here on business or to consult a doctor or to meet friends. During Rev. Harder's absence we have had charge of the Sunday services, also the Thursday evening Bible and prayer hour. We also are doing visitation among the Mennonites living here. It is not too easy for us to get around here. First of all, we feel lost because we cannot speak Spanish. Another thing, the Mennonites live scattered all over this city of over 100,000 population. Ever so often we are stopped and told or motioned by the police not to drive or even walk on certain streets. Why? Ask me an easier one, someone says. Especially in the evening we do not care to go out much, unless with someone that knows the situation.

Reverend Harder will leave for Buenos Aires to see that the baggage of the immigrants arrives safely. This may take some time. So we really do not know when we will be settled in the Chaco. We try to rest as much as possible under the circumstances, which is not so easy with hundreds of immigrants on all sides asking questions of all kinds. But the work is pleasant. More and more we feel our responsibility toward these unfortunate brethren who have been forced out of home and country, and for several years have had no abiding place. One thing which impresses us is that they still praise God for the marvelous leading in their lives, although there is not a family that is not broken up. The majority are cooperative and grateful. How appreciatively they tell us about the food packages they received when starvation was so near. Let us continue "In the Name of Christ" to serve to the best of our abilities, while we still have opportunity. The night cometh, when no man will work. Very sincerely, A. W. and Margaret Friesen."

Canadian Conference Now a Big Event

reported by John G. Rempel

Conference minutes are usually dry, although the conferences themselves are very interesting. The meet- of so many acquaintances, especially on the first morning, how it fills the hearts of the Conference guests with joy and enthusiasm! There is old Brother Benjamin Ewert, a full head higher than most of those who have come to the Conference. His silver hair can be seen from afar off. He was one of those in attendance in 1903, when the Conference was organized and held its first session in Hochstadt, Manitoba. Since then there have been few conferences at which he has not been present. One also meets many other familiar and cherished faces.

The conference was held in the Mennonite village of Gnadental, Manitoba. Coming into the village, the first thing that caught our eye was the dazzling white picket fences. The residents had to make everything as beautiful as possible to create a good impression.

The ministers met in conference the Saturday preceding the General Conference. Approximately one hundred and thirty ministers registered. This was larger than any previous attendance.

There were the usual discourses for our edification; these were well thought through and provided much material for lively discussion and even more food for thought. The reports which were given centered mainly around the ministerial courses held in the various provinces, and which, by now, are an established arrangement.

The main interest, however, centered on the resolution which had to do with the uniting in wedlock of persons where one party is unaccounted for. We have very much sympathy for the mother, who with her children has gone to Paraguay and whose husband has met an unknown fate in Siberia. Or the case may be reversed. The Word of God speaks very clearly on this matter, and even though some of the brethren might have liked to see the dam opened to some extent, the Minister's Conference, as such stood firmly behind the resolution that was adopted last summer at the General Conference in Berne, Indiana, namely: Only to unite in wedlock if there is evidence that the other party has passed away.

The Missionary Festival, held on Sunday, was celebrated in high spirits. Not all of the visitors could get into the large tent. Our thoughts were directed towards the foreign, as well as the home mission field. And therefore ministers, elders, and missionaries all took part in the program of the day. The president of the Foreign Mission Board, Rev. A. E. Kreider, was also present and he spoke about his visit to India. Mrs. Isaac, missionary to India for many years and sister of Missionary P. A. Penner, related many interesting things about India.

It is interesting to note that the Canadian Conference at one time was organized for the purpose of doing home mission work. This consisted mainly in locating the Mennonite families which are scattered over the whole of Canada, serving them, and where possible uniting them into congregations. However, there was elected at last year's Conference a Board for Foreign Missions which is to work hand in hand with the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference. It was hoped that more interest for foreign mission work could be awakened. It seems as though we shall not be disappointed.

The Conference, which lasted for three days, progressed in most beautiful harmony under the able leadership of Rev. J. J. Thiessen. A great deal of work could be accomplished in the fields of home missions, foreign missions, relief, immigration of refugees, Sunday school and youth work, publications, doctrine and conduct, and last, but not least, our schools. We have a number of Bible schools in all five provinces where our people have made their homes. We have a Mennonite Collegiate Institute in Gretna, Manitoba; the Junior College in Rosthern, Saskatchewan; and lastly, the youngest child of our conference, the Mennonite Bible College in Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The chief interest of the Conference, however, was centered around the fact that three of our elders had returned from extensive trips abroad and had important reports to deliver. Rev. Johann Wichert has proved a blessing to many through his prolonged work in Europe, and so did Rev. G. G. Neufeld, through his shorter stay in South America. Rev. J. J. Thiessen had just returned from a mission to Europe. If we further consider the fact that two elders from South America, Elder David Koop from Brazil, and Elder Jacob Isaac from Paraguay, attended the conference and that Rev. Heinrich Winter, a refugee from Europe, just recently arrived in Canada, also attended the conference, it is evident that the conference was very much aware of the relief work done here and abroad.

The three conference days passed only too quickly. While looking at the many delegates and visitors, one involuntarily had to think how mustard-seed-like the work had once begun. The Bergthal Congregation in Manitoba and the Rosenort Congregation in Saskatchewan were the root stock. At the present time, more than fifty congregations belong to this conference, with a total membership of 14,000 baptized members, one hundred churches, and some two hundred and sixty ministers.

Next year the conference is to meet for the first time in British Columbia. The floods there have caused tremendous damage, especially in the vicinity of Sardis, where it was expected that the conference would meet. However, the brethren there are courageous and do not want to give up the goal that they have set for themselves. We are anticipating the visit to British Columbia and are especially looking forward to that spiritual fellowship which we will be able to cultivate.

By Paul Goering

July 28 Although President Truman called Congress back under the "Extra Ordinary Occasion" authority granted the President by the constitution, indications point to a do-nothing session. The Republicans claim it is a political maneuver to put them on the spot and denounced Truman's speech as an appeal for votes, particularly from the Progressive Party fringe. They have only promised early Senate consideration of the Anti-Poll Tax Bill passed by the House and consideration by committees of Truman's proposals for inflation control and housing.

Selective service announced that draft registration begins August 30, starting with twenty-five-year-olds. Tuesday the House and Senate Armed Services Committees met in executive session with Gneral Hershey, selective service head, and agreed to his plan to draft upper age groups first, starting with the twenty-five-year-olds. Hershey estimates that a registrant will get his classification forty or sixty days after he registers. Selective service reports that more eighteen-year-olds are trying to volunter for twelve months service although the 161,000 quota permitted by law is already filled. This will build up pressure for one-year UMT which the army hopes to have substituted for the draft.

to a Christian physician than one who has no faith in God? Do we not much prefer to patronize the business man who thinks of himself as the steward for Christ than the one whose goal is merely that of accumulating wealth? And so we could go through all the occupations that honestly serve mankind.

In addition to serving Christ by serving man through the church and in our serving God and man through our vocations, the third area of Christian life and service is found in a community— yes, state, nation, and world—where a true Christian witness is desperately needed. What a crying need we have today in public life everywhere for men of Christian faith and power instead of those who give mild lip service to Christianity or ignore or deny it altogether. "If the salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?"

That brings us to our main thought. If individually we as laymen can do much to further the great cause of Christ, we can do more if we form a simple organization. At this point you expect me to say that each of our nineteen churches of the Middle District Conference should organize a Men's Brotherhood, if it hasn't already done so. Perhaps, that is the answer to the question of, how men can best serve their Master. Before we come to that conclusion, let us examine our churches a little closer. Reading a sermon recently on "What the Law Cannot Do," I was strongly reminded that there are things organizations cannot do. Neither law nor organization can go beyond the spirit or the inner drive of those who are under the law or in the organization. "The latter," says the writer of this sermon, "organizes and regulates life from without; the other creates life from within." "Not coercive and regulative law, but creative spirituality must work the transformation inside the lives of men." "Spiritual creativity is inward and personal, something that God does in men inspired by the Spirit, and the call to that comes home to each of us." This cannot be overemphasized. No organization can save people; yet it should not be overlooked that an organization can be of great help to accomplish ends unattainable without it, provided the spirit of service and fellowship are back of and in the organization.

How can these general ideas be put into effect among older boys and men in a church so that spiritual uplift, human fellowship and cooperative service may result? In some churches organized Sunday school classes partially fulfill these purposes. Monthly class meetings are held providing projects devotions, instruction. Where this is not feasible, a Brotherhood is likely the solution.

Far too long have we men who promised Christ our first allegiance at the time we accepted Him as Savior and joined the church, too long have we assumed that the real work in the church, in God's Kingdom was done by the minister.

In the General Conference, the plan of a threefold division of all church members into working groups has evolved. Women's missionary societies have been active for decades. Now if we laymen of the Whole General Conference through every Church down to the last man unite for the Cause of Christ by bringing about spiritual uplift, human fellowship, and consecrated service of all our men, the cycle is completed. We men have always needed the church, and the church needs us desperately. I wish I could speak for myself in saying that I have done my best to bring this about; I can't. I wish I could speak for my church to the point that we have arrived; we haven't.

Though we have an organized brotherhood, we can't say it is the power in our church we wish it to be. Many of our Conference churches have made a beginning. Our men's meetings at Berne last August when the General Conference met were very encouraging. Since then we have heard from a number of groups of men who have taken a hold in one way or another. It is gratifying that in more cases the men report that they have undertaken a project than that they have formed an organization.

In closing let us sum up what is involved in Building a Brotherhood. The fact that we are both laborers together with God as well as His material to be formed in a brotherhood for Him inspires us with hope and confidence. Let us go home to our respective churches and, with the help of our pastors, discover the areas, the tasks, the projects men of the church can best do. As soon as our men show a degree of interest in going to work or would respond to meetings for meditation, study or fellowship, let us organize, if we haven't yet done so. A great deal will depend on the leader we choose and in turn the support we give him. A few supporting committees and real enthusiasm by some will help much. Our Brotherhoods can truly add much to making our beliefs, our Christianity live. Our M.D.C. and our General Canference can gain much in the next few years if we as men under God's guidance do our part.

J. S. Schultz, Dean of Bluffton College and a leader in the laymen's organization of General Conference, gave a paper on laymen's work at the recent Middle District Conference. The accompanying article is a condensation of this paper.

At the Wednesday evening prayer meeting Sylvia Pannabecker brought a report on her recent period of two weeks service at the Men-O-Lan retreat of the Eastern District Conference. She pointed out how unusually important it was to reach young people in the formative part of their lives with a clear-cut decision for Christ and His church.

Professor St. Clair Drake of Roosevelt College presented a lecture on Thursday night, "The Negro in Chicago." He pointed out that just before the first World War there were 40,000 negroes in this city and that today there are 400,000 of them and hundreds are still coming. These people live in an isolated area primarily on the south side about eight or nine miles long. Professor Drake estimated that there are 150,000 people living in this area for whom there are not proper housing facilities. The recent Supreme Court ruling made it impossible for real estate owners to restrict the residence of negroes; and therefore this large group of people is expected now to move into other parts of the city. Professor Drake challenged the Seminary audience to relate themselves to this great problem by whatever means are consistent with their Christian convictions. "To ignore such a terrific problem," he said, "would be fatal."

President S. F. Pannabecker went to Bluffton this week-end to inspect some books which have been offered to the Seminary. He will be on the program of the Central District Conference at Danvers, Illinois, during the latter part of August reporting on the status of the Seminary and delivering a message on the topic, "The Bible Today."

The Seminary is expecting some visitors during the next few weeks on their way to the World Conference sessions at Goshen and Newton.

Don. E. Smucker will teach the Bible course and present the evening messages to the Oklahoma Young People's Retreat and Bible Conference to be held at Camp Hydro, Oklahoma, July 26 to 30. Director of this retreat is Waldo Kaufman, Pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church of Hydro; Assistant Director is Henry Hege, Pastor of the Bergthal Mennonite Church of Corn; Registrar is Albert J. Unruh of the Grace Church of Enid; Dean of boys is Abe Peters of the Geary Church; Assistant Dean is Curt Boese of the Greenfield Church in Carnegie; Dean of Women is Mrs. Eva. Harshbarger of North Newton, Kansas; Music Director is Harold Dirks of the Ringwood New Hopedale Church; and Professor Walter H. Hohmann of Bethel College is teaching a course in music.

Discuss Draft

Moundridge, Kansas, July 26.— On the afternoon and evening of July 25 young people from various Mennonite churches met in the Moundridge city park to consider problems that grow out of the coming draft. A large audience had gathered. Many people had come a long way to attend the meeting.

Rev. Loris Habegger the chairman of the afternoon session pointed out that our fathers paid a price for our faith, and now we are called upon to pay a price to keep this faith.

Mr. Paul Goering of Washington, D. C., explained the selective service law in so far as it relates to conscientious objectors. He pointed out that the law makes provision for two types of conscientious objectors. (1) Non-combatants will be inducted to do work which the President will define as non-combatant service. (2) Men who feel that they can have no part in military training will be deferred.

The agencies and regulations to implement the draft law have not been completed. The registration is to begin on August 30. Men twenty-five years of age will probably have to register first. Classifications will be determined by local boards. If the classification is unsatisfactory men may appeal to an appeal board for re-classification.

Rev. Albert Gaeddert, former director of C.P.S., spoke on "Lessons from the Past." He mentioned two lessons which we may take from Mennonite history in general. (1) We must never lose sight of the evils conscription alwas brings with it. Conscription leads to totalitarianism. (2) Unless we express our faith we lose it. Alternative service helps to keep our faith alive.

Our alternate service experience during the recent war reveals eight lessons for the future. (1) We need to keep as clear as possible the line between the state and the church. (2) It is profitable to the personality of a conscientious objector to give a positive witness. Just to object is not good for his soul. (3) Let the church be clear in expressing its convictions. The attitude of the church has a great influence upon the individual member. (4) The church needs to take an active interest in helping its young people with counsel and guidance. (5) We have learned that we can work together with government officials, and that we can make a witness to them. (6) In a governmental work project, it will be well for the church to have to say more than was the case in the recent experience. (7) We have observed that men came out of the C.P.S. camps very much the same as they came in. The experience fortified them in their attitudes; it did not change them. (8) We have learned that where we voluntarily give of ourselves we can make our best witness.

Dr. R. C. Kauffman in his message on "The Witness of Our Church to the Way of Peace" pointed out eight unique aspects of our Mennonite faith. (1) Belief in baptism upon confession of faith at an age of responsibility. (2) The Holy Communion is held as a symbolic rite. It is faith which makes this sacrament meaningful and a blessing. There is no magical power in it. (3) Voluntary church membership. Each individual must by his faith qualify for membership in the church fellowship. (4) Mennonites hold that the New Testament is of greater authority for a Christian than the Old Testament, especially the Sermon on the Mount. (5) They follow the ethics of positive love. (6) They hold to the separation of the church and the state. (7) They emphasize simplicity in speech and conduct. (8) They insist on freedom of conscience. We must obey God more than men.

Our original faith was radical and completely different from the thinking of the ordinary people in many respects. We reject force as a means. Our gospel is remarkably simple and can be stated in simple words. War is wrong. There is no complicated reasoning behind this. It is based on the fact that God is love, and we are His children.

During the discussion period the question was raised, "What of the young person who feels that he is not good enough to take the C.O. position?" In answer it was suggested that we counsel such a person (1) that no one is perfect. No conscientious objector was ever perfect. And (2) in every one's life there come times when a person must say, "From here on I want to do better." A person should make his decision not on the basis of his past but on the basis of what he should be in the sight of God.

Dr. H. A. Fast reported on the statement which the M.C.C. will soon release. This will no doubt be published. One of the significant leads which the M.C.C. gives is that young men who are conscientious objectors shall be given opportunity to give one year's service in some service project. When they are deferred this will give the opportunity to witness by life to the Christian way of life.

Mr. Erwin Goering challenged people to take the peace position. He pointed out that we now have an opportunity which may change the course of our church. We can now prove that we are willing to do more than just object. An army colonel who visited a C.P.S. camp challenged the men by saying, "You fellows have the opportunity to demonstrate whether your plan works or doesn't work. If you are really sincere we will see evidence of that men when the war is over." Upon the consecration of our youth today depends the welfare of the church of tomorrow. The future of the church rests upon the young people. Our parents left all to be true to Christ. Will we be true?

Dear Friends in Christ:

Greetings with the words of the Psalmist "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord all ye lands." But how can a people make a joyful noise unto the Lord of whom they have never heard? Ours is the blessed privilege of implanting the "song of the Lord" in the hearts of those who have been without knowledge of Him for hundreds of years.

We praise the Lord for the 137 souls that came forward during a series of evangelistic meetings during the month of May. The native pastor Ksadi Matayo was wonderfully used of the Lord as he proclaimed the Word of Life during these meetings. Some of those who came forward wished to become right with God again having wandered back into sin, but by far the majority were such as wished to accept Christ as their Saviour. Please, uphold these new-born babes in Christ in prayer, and may we be found faithful shepherds in nurturing them in the Word that they might become stalwart men and women in Christ.

June 8 marked the date of our moving to our new station, Mutena, from Kalamba. Now once more our entire personnel is located at one place making it possible to make a more concentrated effort in evangelizing those for whom we are responsible. Not all the phases of our work have been completely organized as yet, but we are grateful to God for what we have been able to accomplish, by His strength, in the year and one half that has elapsed since the beginning of building up of Mutena.

On the first of June we began a special refresher course for some of our teacher-evangelists in an effort to raise the standard of our workers. Selected subjects such as personal evangelism, the duties of a pastor. French, music, and general teaching principles and methods are being taught. This course is to last nine weeks after which the teachers will again return to their respective villages. Even though it often proves quite a hardship for a teacher to come in for such a long period of time, they often express their joy and gratitude for such an opportunity of improving themselves.

Miss Slagle, our nurse, is often perplexed these days as to where to place the many patients that come to her and need to be hospitalized. The temporary quarters that were set up and were thought to be abundantly adequate until permanent buildings could be built often prove to be entirely too small. This is especially true in the O. B. department.

We are in the midst of our dry season. The air is filled with smoke and soot from the many grass fires round about us. During this season everybody is eager to go hunting. As the grass burns the animals are forced to come out from their hiding places making it easier for the African to kill them. Thus their perpetual craving for meat is satisfied. This is also the season for preparing fields to be planted when the rains begin again. During this time of the year the building of new houses is also a very common sight. Therefore the African, who is ambitious, has not much time to idle away.

We are also thankful for the response of the children as Mrs. Dick arranges special services for them. The attendance often is near the one hundred mark.—Sincerely in Him, Elmer J. Dick

CANADIAN DOLLAR NOW WORTH 100 CENTS U.S.

Did you have the experience, when crossing the boundary from Canada to the United States that in changing over to United States money your Canadian dollar was worth only 86 cents?

Have you had the experience of sending a Canadian dollar to the Mennonite Publication Office, at 722 Main, and get in return $1.25? Well, we don't exactly send you $1.25, but it amounts to that. This is the way we figure it out.

First, we send you four copies of the fine, new MENNONITISCHES JAHRBUCH. The price of these, individually, is 25 cents each. There's your dollar.

Second, we save four money order fees of three cents each which you would have to buy if you send us a money order for an individual copy. That's 12 cents.

(Total, so far, $1.12).

If four people each, individually, send us 25 cents, it would require 12 cents in postage (16 cents in Canada). If you send us, however, $1 for four copies in one envelope it requires only 3 cents postage (4 cents in Canada). There's a saving of 9 cents (12 cents in Canada).

(Total, so far, $1.24, in Canada)

And surely it was worth a penny to read this, which proves that it's worth $1.25 to send us $1 for four MENNONITISCHE JAHRBUECHER.

PRAYER the Mightiest Force in the World by Frank C. Laubach.

In this book Dr. Laubach makes an appeal to save this world from destruction by having ten million people pray. He says we help God when we pray. When great numbers of people pray for leaders a mighty invisible force lifts people's minds and eyes toward God. If we would advise leaders they might be more or less wrong. But what God tells them must be right. One hundred million prayers falling on world leaders every day would fill them with a sense of responsibility.

The author explains what he means when he says that prayer helps God. By prayer we persuade people to listen to God. Prayer, he says, is a sort of telepathy. People listen to each other a million times before they listen to God. Their minds may be open to us but closed toward God. When we pray God's Spirit can through us get to their hearts. Just as we influence someone for God when we write to him about God, so we influence people for God by "mental radio" when we pray for them. To this conclusion the author has come as he has watched what happened when he prays for people on trains, in waiting rooms, on the streets and in church services. He feels that when telepathy will be proved we will have a scientific explanation of prayer. Prayer he holds is the least understood of all fields of knowledge.

The author has disciplined himself to pray almost continuously and he gives many examples of how prayer has influenced people for God. He urges that our prayers be chiefly that others may hunger and thirst for God. We should pray, for instance, "Lord, make Stalin hungry and thirsty for Thee."

Whether or not we agree with the author's explanation of prayer, we will find the book a real challenge and encouragement in prayer and Christian living.—W. F. Unruh

God Walks in My Garden

BY DWIGHT PLATT

photo Hommel

Who makes a garden learns the art of kneeling;
Develops comradeship with sun and wind;
Grows tall beneath the sky, that frescoed ceiling
Whose changing artistry is never done.
Renews his faith in childhood fairy stories
Each time he bends to plant a sleeping seed.
Discovers in a root a world of glories;
Learns silent perserverance from a weed.
Who makes a garden lifts between his fingers
Eons of history reduced to sod;
Grows reverent the while his fancy lingers
Upon the mystery and majesty of God.
—Caroline Cain Durkee

Gardening is an art which can help a person to grow both physically and spiritually. Its great benefits physically have been discussed again and again. The outdoor exercise and the low-cost, more nutritious, and more flavorful food it provides are good reasons for adopting it as a hobby. However, I am interested in gardening as a means for spiritual growth. In nature one can see God at work, and in gardening one works with God in a more real and obvious sense than in most other endeavors. I believe we all need some contact with nature if it be only in tending a few houseplants. As James Russel Lowell said in his poem, "Under the Willows":

> " .... the brain
> That forages all climes to line its cells,
> ....
> Will not distil the juices it has sucked
> To the sweet substance of pellucid thought,
> Except for him who hath the secret learned
> To mix his blood with sunshine, and to take
> The winds into his pulses."

In our mechanized Western civilization, we are apt to view our scientific progress and think of man and man's works as ends in themselves. Many people work in factories, live in large cities, and go to movies and other manufactured forms of entertainment in their spare time. Even their brief contacts with nature are for the excitement of exploitation, such as the thrill of shooting a rabbit. Because of this lack of real contact with nature and this preoccupation with man's material world, many tend to forget God. They become restless, frustrated individuals who are worried and fretted by all the little problems of everyday life. They want more and more excitement and murder stories to take up their spare time and find it boring to be alone with God in nature. These are the kind of people who make possible the present war panic and preparation which could lead to our doom. Whittier in the prelude to "Among the Hills" describes that kind of people:

> "................ sour and sullen men,
> ....
> With scarce a human interest save their own
> Monotonous round of small economies,
> Or the poor scandal of the neighborhood;
> Blind to the beauty everywhere revealed,
> Treading the May-flowers with regardless feet;
> For them the song-sparrow and the bobolink
> Sang not, nor winds made music in the leaves;
> ....

Church-goers, fearful of the unseen Powers,
But grumbling over pulpit-tax and pew-rent,
Saving as shrewd economists, their souls
And winter pork with the least possible outlay
Of salt and sanctity; in daily life
Showing as little actual comprehension
Of Christian charity and love and duty,
As if the Sermon on the Mount had been Outdated like a last year's almanac:"

Gardening or a contact with nature would not be a cure for these people, but rather it could be a means through which a cure could be effected. That kind of people do not want spiritual growth, and for them gardening is a chore which if done effects a saving in their food bill. But if their eyes could be opened and they could be turned in the right direction, gardening could be a means of helping them grow.

But what are the rules of the art of gardening which will make it of most help to us. One essential characteristic of a good gardener is an eye for the beauty and wonder in nature. This sense is in us all, but it is very weakened by disuse in most people. For how many people see the beauty in an English sparrow, a weed field or an ant hill? And yet Minot J. Savage says in his poem. "Earth's Common Things":

"In wonder-workings, or some bush aflame,
Men look for God and fancy him concealed;
But in earth's common things He stands revealed
While grass and flowers and stars spell out his name."

We see beauty only in the spectacular in nature, such as the brilliant sunset or the flashing red of a cardinal and even then we do not most of the time truly appreciate it. If we cultivate this sense of seeing beauty in common things we will be surprised at what new enjoyment we can get out of life. A second essential is an experimental attitude toward discovering and appreciating God's laws. We must try to discover the laws that govern the growing of plants and then work in harmony with them. Perhaps if we learn to build up the soil in accordance with God's laws, we will greatly reduce the damage done by insect and disease pests. For there was not such great damage before man rudely upset the balances in the soil and in nature. And finally we must have an appreciation of the earth and nature. We must not consider the earth as a ball of mud into which we will put a few seeds which will grow into plants but rather as a balance of chemical and biological forms which are essential to healthy plant growth. When this soil gets out of balance, the plant life suffers. It is our job, with a great appreciation for the soil and these great natural processes, to work in harmony with them and keep the soil balanced and fertile.

If then with these ideas in mind we undertake gardening as a sparetime hobby, it can give us a sense of restfulness and peace which could, cure the hysteria and tensions of our day. It could help put our problems into their right perspective and give us a truer sense of values. In this way one could come into closer contact and deeper appreciation of our world and the forces that run it. It could bring us into closer communion with God. As Thomas Edward Brown says in the poem, "My Garden":

"A garden is a lovesome thing, God wot!
Rose plot,
Fringed pool,
Ferned grot—
The veriest school
Of peace; and yet the fool
Contends that God is not—
Not God! in gardens! When the eve is cool?
Nay, but I have a sign;
'Tis very sure that God walks in mine."

Meeting Friends at Quaker Hill

One of the important experiences of our service unit has been our association with the Quakers in this community. As a religious group with its primary object of serving the Lord in the brotherhood of Christ, it is fitting that we should also take advantage of the opportunity of becoming actively and intimately acquainted with a proximate group which has many basic beliefs and practices in common with our own.

Our fellowship with the Quakers thus far has been limited to the visiting of local Friends' Meetings on Sunday mornings, a social at the home of Mrs. Swift, a Friend, and group gatherings with a group of recreational workcampers living at Quaker Hill, to which site the greater part of this article will be devoted. From Quaker Hill we have received our clearest insight into the spirit and beliefs of Quakers.

About one-half of the unit has found it possible to attend various Friends' meetings on Sunday mornings and have been warmly and graciously received with sincere invitations to return. Our friendship with Quaker Hill and our understanding of its history, philosophy, and purpose stems primarily from our joint gatherings with the recreational work-campers living there at the present and an address by Bill Hale, the present resident. The group is attempting to stimulate a recreational program and construct playground facilities for the youngsters of north-side Richmond, an area in great need of these.

Quaker Hill consists of an imposing old, white, brick, two-story building, faced by two columns, on the summit of a bluff overlooking the Whitewater River Valley on the outskirts of Richmond. There are a few acres on which there are located two frame dormitories, garden plots, and a renovated garage serving as the office for Rural Life administration.

Quaker Hill as a location has many uses. It is used as a place of retreat by various groups, and as a site for many conferences. It is used as a hostel for guests and a home for work-campers. In the near future a program of resident study is being begun as a means of developing the inward spiritual life. This program which is to be the core of Quaker Hill's winter plans has three main objectives: (1) to exemplify daily worship, (2) to develop self-discipline, and (3) to experiment in cooperative living. It is a new experiment in educational methods. Finally, although the resident study program is to receive prime attention it is hoped that it will also be possible to develop a schedule of week-end work camps.

Now, what is the point of it all? What is the all inclusive purpose of Quaker Hill and the motives, ideals and practices which lie behind it. Just this! It is an experiment in deepening the life of society, a place for individuals to meet on the basis of spontaneous worship, and an attempt to exemplify the primacy of devoutness and love in the hearts of men. Our unit here at Easthaven has appreciated the friendship and fellowship which we have had with the Friends of Quaker Hill and this community, and we look forward to a growing acquaintanceship.

Youth Team at Carlock, Illinois

Perhaps you're wondering who we are — so we'll start this off by introducing ourselves. From Canada comes Bertha Millar (and this spelling is correct for her father is Scotch) comes to us from the Stirling Avenue Church at Kitchener, Ontario, and Rudolph Martens is from the Waterloo Church at Waterloo, Ontario. Two representatives of the fair state of Minnesota come from the Bethel Church at Mountain Lake, and they are ElDoris Balzer and Eldon Epp. Norma Jost, the leader, comes from Hillsboro, Kansas.

We spent our first week at Chicago. Like to know what we did? You would, Well lend us your ears and we'll tell all.

Our group met for a get acquainted there. We got acquainted and still like each other. A visit to the Presbyterian Book Store, a sightseeing tour, shopping trips and so forth helped us get acquainted. We became more familiar with the General Conference too. Rev. Don Smucker spoke to us on this topic and Rev. Troyer introduced us to our summer's work. To us the highlight of the week was another introduction — that of meeting the Pacific Garden Mission. There we saw the power of the word of God. We felt a new appreciation of our Christian heritage. It was a time of rededication.

On Saturday morning we gathered our overstuffed and too numerous suitcases together. Not wanting to say "good bye" to the Seminary, but anxious to get out to Rev. Troyer's church at Carlock, Illinois, we dashed for the train — and missed.

We enjoyed our first week. The people were so very friendly. Even the bright little church with its sunny stained glass windows and tower bell seemed to welcome us. Rev. Troyer had a well-planned program outlined for us, but did not get nearly everything done. Saturday night we met with the minister and several key people in the church to plan the week. On Sunday morning our group took over most of the Sunday school classes as well as the worship service. In the evening the team led various discussion groups which later met for a joint worship service which we planned and carried out. Each morning the youngsters from the church came for games, singsongs and Bible stories and then worked together converting old hats into baby booties. You should have seen the fashion parade when the boys modeled the ladies' old hats. Goodness, ladies, what have we been wearing?

The youngsters thorougly enjoyed making the shoes, we believe, were blessed knowing that they would be helping needy children.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings the men and women of the church came for a craft class. For the men plastic and linoleum block craft work was available, but most of them spent more of their time watching the ladies deftly creating shell pins. Needless to say the ladies also got a lot of visiting done. Other activities of the team were clerical work for the pastor, a visit to our very efficient Mennonite hospital at Bloomington where we had the privilege of having devotions with the patients. Wednesday night we gathered with the Intermediates for an outing, campfire and worship service, as we we did with the young people on Thursday night.

On Friday noon we took the youngsters, or rather the youngsters took us on a hike. In the shade of a wayside tree we rested and our worship service brought us even closer together. Quietly we felt that "it was good to have been here," and a strange feeling of warmness swept over us as the children wholeheartely invited us to "come again next year." We proved the words of Jesus when he said "It is more blessed to give than to receive." We gave so little—we received so much.

News About Youth . . .

History of Music

The Hoffnungsau Christian Endeavor of Inman, Kansas, spent an evening presenting the history of music in the church. Being aided by the various musical organizations of the church in this candle lit service, the young people gained a new appreciation of the place music holds in the church service of today.

Youth at World Conference of Mennonites

An evening at Goshen and Newton of the World Conference of Mennonites is to be devoted to youth. The meetings are to be in the hands of youth and presented to the full body of the Conference. Likewise, at Goshen, there is to be discussion of youth in the church. This, however, will be discussed by older churchmen.

Meeting Friends at Quaker Hill

One of the Mental Hospital Summer Service Units is serving at Richmond, Indiana. Beside the regular twelve-hour a day stint of duty, members of the unit undertake other activities among which is the developing of an acquaintance with the Quakers the accompanying article describes. General Conference members of the service unit: Miss Minerva Hilty, matron, Bluffton, Ohio; Harold Hartman, Bluffton, Ohio; Alice Ruth Pannabecker, Chicago, Illinois; Robert Ramseyer, Bluffton, Ohio; Martha Lee Yoder, Topeka, Indiana.

Three Big Kicks

Some time ago William Allen White, whose name was and still is a household word in Kansas and who is honored throughout the nation, presented his home town with a tract of land to be used for a city park.

As he handed the mayor of Emporia the title to the land, he said, "Your honor, there are three good kicks in a dollar."

Now a statement like that arrests attention. The people, listening attentively, were all ears.

White went on: "One kick comes at the earning of it. This I have had; I great enjoyed it."

There is a joy in earning anything that costs sweat and perseverance. Lincoln's story of the first dollar he earned is thrilling.

Editor White continued: "The second kick comes from just having it. This I have inherited from my father. He was a Scotchman. I have much enjoyed having it."

And there is a joy in possessing something honestly earned, and there is also heap of genuine satisfaction in it.

The famed Kansan concluded with this: "The third kick comes from giving it away. This I inherit from my mother. She was Irish. I will now indulge that privilege."

And to be able to give to a good cause is one of life's choicest privileges.

Whosoever knows the three good kicks of a dollar knows much. To earn, to have and to give is the abundant life in action. Take away this valued privilege and not very much remains.

"Earn all you can and give all you can," was the advice of John Wesley, who earned a good living and gave it all away.—Edgar Dewitt Jones

Self Examination

by Isaac Watts

Let not soft slumber close your eyes,
Before you've recollected thrice
The train of action through the day!
Where have my feet chose out their way?
What have I learnt, wher'ere I've been,
From all I've heard, from all I've seen?
What know I more that's worth the knowing?
What have I done that's worth the doing?
What have I sought that I should shun?
What duty have I left undone,
Or into what new follies run?
These self-inquiries are the road
That leads to virtue and to God.

THERE IS REST FOR THE LOVING

a farewell message by the outgoing editor

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Matt. 11:28-29.

A man wrote in to an advice-giving newspaper columnist that he was in deep trouble and that where he lived there was no psychiatrist or other person to whom he could go for help. As a result the writer of the column published the name and address of a national leader in the mental health movement, suggesting that he might be helpful. Upon publication of this name and address over 2,000 people wrote in. Among them was a woman in mental and emotional turmoil who ended her letter with the words, "There is a hell on earth, and I'm in it."

This woman is an extreme example of what others experience to a lesser degree. Georgia Harkness some years ago wrote an article entitled, "Nothing Burns in Hell but Selfwill." Most of us are not altogether free from self-will.

The fact that the book, Peace of Mind, by Rabbi Liebman has been a national best seller indicates the mood of the American people.

Angelo Patri, educator, writes, "There are too many boys and girls in this country today without aim or purpose in living."

Elton Trueblood, in his book, Alternative to Futility, states, "Joy has gone out of much of our lives. Millions go through the motions as though they were waiting for a catastrophe. What we miss, almost everywhere, is the uplifted face and the flashing eye. Men cannot live well either in poverty or in abundance unless they see some meaning and purpose in life, which alone can be thrilling." He goes on to say, that men "have lost incentive because, in their entire manner of living, their psychological and spiritual needs are not fulfilled. They go back and forth to their places of employment, beget children and try to pay their bills, but they do not feel that all these details are steps toward some great and dignifying end."

The foregoing is suggestive of the sense of futility with which we are not unacquainted. To this lack of purposiveness in life we can add our handicaps, and who does not have one? The girl without special beauty may envy the glamor girl, not realizing that the glamor girl is at a disadvantage because of the temptation and handicap of self-admiration. The highly intelligent individual may find that his asset is a disadvantage when it comes to being patient with those less endowed. The poor man may envy the rich man, but does not have to share the rich man's dread of being hated and molested. The individual with much social grace may make many friends and influence people but bury all worthwhile convictions in doing so. Even so-called advantages may be burdensome if used as an end in themselves.

The soul of man longs for the answer which will give it rest. The Eternal Christ offers rest for the soul and purposiveness for living in a life of loving.

However, this life of loving is not found through legalism or moralism. The way of the Pharisees was an intolerable yoke and burden in the time of Jesus.

One wonders what kind of a childhood the scribes and Pharisees had. Today we know from the observations of child psychologists that the unloving adult was once a child whose fine sensitivities were rudely hurt by those upon whom he depended most. While mother is gone little Jane uses her mother's best tea cups and quite accidentally breaks one. Mother comes back and goes into quite a rage impressing upon Jane what a bad girl she was. Now maybe Jane will learn a wholesome lesson, but it is also possible, and very probable, that if mother repeatedly impresses upon her how bad and wicked she is, Jane will develop such a feeling of self-reproach and self-detestation, and inadequacy that she will carry that feeling into adulthood, with the result that she will ever be under a compulsion to convince herself and others that she afterall really is somebody. Furthermore, she will have antisocial feelings towards others.

From the scriptures it is clear that the Pharisees despised the common people. Ever did they feel compelled to convince others and themselves that they were righteous—that they were somebody. One thing seems very evident—they did not have an experience of grace in their lives. They did not have what it meant to be loved and to love. As a result they had to bear the heavy yoke of pretending to a righteousness which they did not genuinely desire.

But the danger of legalism has not been left behind. The Christian Church has really not caught up with Christ, for it frequently has much more legalism than grace. It's leaders are still inclined to lay down the law.

Being saved has often been pictured far too simple. The woman who wrote, "There is a hell on earth, and I am in it," was undoubtedly surrounded by churches, which preached a moralism that made her despair even more. The church does not have the labor masses of America. It seems to lack Einfuehlung as far as they are concerned.

Ministers are so easily tempted to throw out challenge after challenge. What other result can this have than stimulate most people to pull at their spiritual bootstraps? Inspiration and idealism can be repressive making the hearer feel that he ought to do so and so without first recognizing the negative attitudes in his life which cancel his good intentions.

A woman riding in a bus was incessantly smoking and giving other evidence of being under severe strain. A Christian with much zeal, but perhaps not quite as much skill, got into a discussion with her and found out that she was running away from her husband. The Christian worker started reading one Bible passage after another to the distressed woman, but finally she stopped as she had the insight to realize that the nervous woman's mind was so surcharged that she needed to pour out her troubles before she would be able to give any attention to the precious claim passages of the Bible.

Undoubtedly there are many people today who feel defeated in their living because they know much better than they do. They feel as though their spiritual brakes were on and needed loosening, as though they must deal with those elusive factors which so frequently cancel out their better intentions.

Methodist editor Roy L. Smith writes, "To stop war we must go back to . . . causes. This calls for a type of introspection, self-criticism, and humility to which the American people are not accustomed." And the American people to which he refers includes over fifty or so million church members.

Idealism is frequently a new legalism incapable of giving people a life of restful purposiveness, because it does not deal with the removal of that in their lives which keeps the better from being realized. We can call this sin if we think of sin more as missing the mark than as a deliberate choice of evil.

The way to a life of loving is through what Paul termed salvation by grace through faith.

Men knew a righteous God before Christ, but through Christ an experience of grace became possible and men became able to love, so that they far surpassed the rigid righteousness of a powerless legalism.

Once troubled people could look into the eyes of the Christ, who was gentle, who knew what was in man, and who could forgive people who didn't know what they were doing.

Today Christ depends upon witnesses to make his grace plain. The importance of this witnessing to God's grace is ever becoming clearer.

For example, in mental hospitals it is becoming ever more plain that no approach can compare with love in helping broken hearts to vibrate once more. Love is the great word in Dr. Menninger's hospital, and the whole movement for improvement in mental hospital care rests on it.

Today Alcoholics Anonymous are successful in reclaiming more than 50 per cent of those treated, whereas 5 per cent was high for former methods. Understanding, a feeling into the feelings of the alcoholic are working wonders.

Lately science has been berated a lot, and much of it was undoubtedly deserved. But the suggestion of E. Stanley Jones that if science only goes far enough it will come out at Christ is seemingly being fulfilled already. It is the newer social science of psychology which is piling up evidence upon evidence that grace, understanding, acceptance are indispensable for healing the souls of men.

Doctors, social workers, psychotherapists, etc., are being sought by troubled people today because they seek to understand the troubled, whereas the Church with its rigid moralism is frequently by-passed. But the Church, never without witnesses of God's grace, is taking a blood transfusion from the newest results of the newer sciences, and seems to be headed for a stronger emphasis on the grace of God, so that it will once more become more of a society of the repentant and forgiven, and therefore the powerful.

Suggestive of future trends is the fact that Fritz Kunkel, an outstanding psychologist, who seeks to integrate the insights of psychology and the Christian faith, serves as counsellor for a large church in one of our largest cities.

Dr. Jesse Ziegler mentioned during the 1948 Bethel College Bible Week how everybody needs someone to whom he can talk to. An astrologer in New York City, when asked how he could afford such an expensive penthouse, replied that people are willing to pay well to have someone listen to their stories. People crave understanding. They need and desire an experience of God's grace, not grace as an abstract in thin air, but incarnate in human form. Such an experience of grace is a very definite part of the way which leads to a life of loving.

The other part is faith, faith in God who is love. It seems that Jesus puts burden bearing and loving together with the result that the burden is light. Jesus made clear that his followers could expect tribulation in this world, but he also declared his victoriousness over the world. His saints in this day prove that tribulation can be overcome by a life which finds its great purpose in loving.

It's conflict within and without man that makes life burdensome. Those who know tell us that nervous breakdowns are never caused by overwork, but that at the root of every one of them is some kind of conflict. Mental work in itself produces practically no fatigue, but mental conflict and muscle tensions can produce plenty.

Love does away with conflict and harmonizes. Jesus suggested that those who were burdened learn of Him who was lowly in heart. Bertran Smucker, Mennonite relief worker in Austria writes, "Evaluating conditions from this Eastern outpost of Central Europe from a theological point of view one is again impressed that the basic cause of the 'cold war' which is going on here, and the continued misery of body, mind and soul is the evil of pride." Pride spells conflict and burdensomeness.

Jesus was meek. He appreciated others. There is a formal, legalistic kind of loving that may express itself in doing good unto others. And then there is a love, which not only does good, but is a heartfelt appreciation of other people—a desire to know how they think and feel because their thinking and feeling is important to the total life of all. Such love produces a heavenly restfulness.

Jesus made much of love. Love God with all that you are, love your neighbor as yourself, love one another as I have loved you. He said, "Come learn of me and you will find rest for your souls." There is rest for the loving, and in loving they realize life's great purpose.

There is rest for the loving whose desires are:

"To melt and be like a running brook that sings its melody to the night.

To know the pain of too much tenderness.

To be wounded by your own understanding of love;
And to bleed willingly and joyfully.

To wake at dawn with a winged heart and give thanks for another day of loving." (Gibran)

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls."

P. S. Goertz, 1886-1948

Death came suddenly to Dr. P. S. Goertz of North Newton, Kansas, on the evening of August 4. Dr. and Mrs. Goertz had recently returned from Europe, where they had served in Holland and Denmark under the Mennonite Central Committee. Dr. Goertz was to resume the deanship of Bethel College next month, but friends noticed his impairment in health. For nearly eighteen years he served faithfully at Bethel as Dean and Professor of Philosophy and Religion, under conditions not always encouraging. In a world where education is so frequently secularized and misused, he exemplified the power of Christian education by living a life of service. He was a scholar, but a humble, brotherly, and helpful one. In a world where many give first place to material things, he gave first place to the cultivation of the spirit. In a world where even Christians are tempted to be unduly aggressive, he lived the life of a gentle man. Although he had a tremendous load of work to carry, students found him sympathetic, understanding, and appreciative. As missionary, teacher, and dean he worked hard and helped many.

When the Service Begins

By Erland Waltner

"Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God which is your spiritual service." Romans 12:1b ARV.

Dr. Elton Trueblood in his book, Alternative to Futility, tells of a visitor who attended a Quaker meeting for the first time. He did not realize that Quakers spend much of their meeting in silence. After sitting in the meeting for a while and hearing no one speak, he became impatient and thinking that some mistake had been made about the hour for starting, he turned to his neighbor and asked, "When does the service begin?" The memorable answer was, "The service begins when the meeting ends."

That, indeed, might well be the ideal for any Christian worship. Christian service should begin and continue on through the week after the worship service ends. It is true, of course, that we also serve God in worship. However, if worship does not lead to work, if inspiration does not lead to application, if hearing does not lead to doing, Christian worship has been in-complete and frustrated in its purpose.

The apostle Paul declared that the essence of spiritual service was to present our bodies a living sacrifice unto God. That is the meaning of the consecrated life. It is a life that is lived for God and others continuously, not only during the morning worship hour on Sunday, but daily, in every place and in every situation. The world of today is completely impatient with mere "Sunday religion." It is tired of Christians who boast about their faith but fail to demonstrate Christ in daily life. The world today is looking for a faith that "worketh by love."

Remember, it is after the closing song has been sung and the benediction has been pronounced that the real service begins.—Reprinted from The Mountain Lake Observer

Recreation as a Tension Remover

by Robert Tully

JUST as Energine is known as a "spot remover", recreation is known as a tension remover.

The reason for recreation's tension removing effectiveness is that it works in two ways. It, like exercise, can relieve, through activity, the physical tenseness that develops and at the same time divert the nervous anxiety or mental strain by substituting another goal that is rather inherent in the activity itself. In that way substitute desires and wants are reached.

Recreation, by formal definition, is "refreshment of strength and spirits after toil, diversion or a mode of diversion, play." Play is defined as "to amuse or divert oneself."

Recreation, therefore, opens two avenues of relieving tension. It offers diversion in the sense of diverting attention to more immediate goals or desires and at the same time offers opportunity for activity, physical exercise.

Examine for a moment the life of Paul, the Apostle. Frustrated in his attack on the followers of Jesus by the revelation of Jesus, Himself, Paul spent an extended period of re-creation of thought and purpose in the desert of Asia. Later in his life frustrated by imprisonment, he entered one of the most common of recreational pursuits, letter writing, and found in it release from tension, and gave to us much of the New Testament.

Many of us have come from religious background that has condemned recreation and play as legitimate expressions of a Christian life. The struggle of the past has been against words and not experiences, for all Christians have and will find some form of "refreshment of strength and spirits after toil" or tension and also strive to "amuse or divert oneself" when frustrated.

My grandmother often stated that she did not play and did not believe in play. But when asked about quilting, which she did beautifully, she said, "I like to quilt. When I am tired or discouraged it is such a relief." Quilting was part of her play.

My grandfather in his later years used conversation as his recreation. He would sit by the hour on the courthouse benches swapping stories and strong political and personal convictions.

During this gerneration it seems wiser not to fight against the words, recreation and play, but to accept them in Christian circles and then give guidance in choosing the best and highest types of recreation to overcome the frustrations and tensions of our toil, so that we will be re-created, refreshed, for new and more creative attacks upon the problem of Christian living.

Here are some guide posts that have helped in choosing high type recreation:

"Does it contribute to health:
  by building up the body and mind,
  by aiding in relaxation,
  by encouraging active participation?
Does it lead to sociability:
  by being entered into by all,
  by appealing to both sexes,
  be creating the desire for teamwork?
Does it permit self-expression:
  by making the person forget self,
  by giving opportunity for individual initiative, by having more than a one-time application, learned in youth but enjoyed throughout life?
Does it build character:
  by calling for loyalty to a group or ideal,
  by calling for self-discipline,
  by adding to the spiritual life?
Does it meet the money and time budget:
  by not calling for more than the person or group can pay, by calling for little equipment and a short period of preparation, by not taking too much time before joy comes?
Does it bring joy:
by leaving no hang-over,
  by creating a desire for short periods of reflection, by just being fun?" (Social Recreation Primer, Tully)

Many are the stories and examples of wholesome recreation that Christians use to release tensions that have created frustrations:

"I play the piano. If angry I pound, if blue I play softly."

"When I get all fussed-up I bake a pie. I love to do it."

"There's nothing like throwing a ball around. It sure relieves me."

"I go to a good play or symphony."

"Personally I like to read. My wife knits."

"Who me? I write poetry."

And so it goes. My father does woodworking, my mothers reads and prays, my brother tinkers with autos, Sis plays the phonograph. I would guess there is a list of personal recreations for your family, too.

Let us not overlook the value of worship as a recreative experience. Worship is the highest type of recreation known to man. Jesus when facing His deepest personal problems spent entire nights in prayer.

So to close this section let us say it this way. Find legitimate recreational experiences to relieve your personal frustrations, but move toward learning to make worship the most recreative experience of life.

How Many Witnesses?

by Mrs. J. R. Duerksen

HOW many missionaries are there in the world? Some one has said that there are only ten thousand which would make each missionary responsible for one hundred thousand persons each. Those are senational figures but, as a Methodist missionary from China points out in "Christian Life and Times," those figures do not tell the truth. "They leave out of reckoning the thousands of nationals who are building an indigenous church with missionary aid." And I might add, who are witnessing consistently to non-Christians of their living Lord.

We had bumped over some bad roads on our way to the village where I wanted to be for a few days. En route we came to the village of where we knew a Christian couple was living. Sometime during the Christmas week they had had a thanksgiving festival with three other Christians, and the offering brought in by the evangelist amounted to twenty-one rupees (about seven dollars in American money). We must stop to see them.

We followed the road pointed out to us and before long one of our Indian traveling companions said, "There is the house."

Grace Bai was not expecting company. In fact, it was months since anyone had been out to see them. But the house was tidy and she offered us her simple hospitality in a gracious manner. Mr. Duerksen and I stayed out on the shady veranda, but the three Indian women who came with us went through the living room and out onto the back veranda and the little kitchen from where the pleasant murmur of conversation came back to us.

Non-Christian neighbors came to see who the visitors were. One of these women sat down near me and began to talk. It was not long before she was singing the praises of Grace Bai. "She is always out to teach people. If she sees a few of us sitting together she is sure to come and say, 'Listen a bit. I have something good to tell you.' She sings for us and tells us about Jesus. There is no village near-by where she does not go regularly. She has such a spirit for telling us about her religion. What she teaches us is true. How can we bow down to a stone? We use stones to walk on, to build with and to grind with. Should we worship a stone? Truly, God in heaven wants us to pray to Him in our hearts. I often come to this house because I like to hear. You should have seen what a nice program she had prepared for the great festival (Christmas) when her children were home. There were many at the house to hear. You know, there is that other couple in this village who are also of your faith. If they do not come to the Sunday Service, then Grace Bai and her husband go after them. She is very zealous for the things of God."

When Grace Bai had a few moments to spare while the meal was cooking, she came to show me some of the material with which she worked. There, in that outpost, I found flannelgraph material and the Wordless Book" where the colors speak the story of salvation. Her equipment was far from complete, but she was using it well. Where had she obtained it?

'Radiantly, she told me what a happy time they had had in January when one of the daughters, a nurse in another mission, had been home on vacation. This daughter had spent a summer at a retreat where she had been introduced to flannelgraph work and child evangelism literature. She had asked that she might bring material to her mother who was doing evangelistic work. Together she and the daughter had gone out to near-by villages with the Christian message.

A week later, on our homeward trip we stopped with these good people for the night. In the morning she said, "I want you to go to the Ranger's house with me to meet his wife." We suggested that she go about her work as usual and that we would just go along as guests.

We were warmly greeted by this woman. Years ago she had been a pupil in a mission school somewhere. It was just before the Easter week. After an introductory song. Grace Bai told the matchless story of the cross as I would like to tell it if I could. Simply, scripturally, she traced those days that led up to the cruel cross and then ended in the triumph of the risen Lord. "O sister," she said, "That is my loving Saviour and He would be yours too. Won't you give Him a place?" We sang, "Oh what wonderful love, Amazing wonderful love. From the cross flows the cleansing blood stream."

Time was up. The Ranger's wife had her work to look after, and we must get ready to go on our way. But my heart was strangely strengthened because of the fellowship in the Gospel. Grace Bai, living here so far from the church but faithful to her call, was co-worker with me. I confess that I felt that in many ways she surpassed me.

Are we missionaries alone in the task? No, indeed. We are fellowlaborers together in the Gospel.

MCC Moves Ahead with Homes for Mentally Ill

It is anticipated that by the end of the summer Brook Lane Farm can be opened for admission of patients. Progress in the construction of this home for mentally ill had been delayed for a few months due to difficulty in securing certain materials. The exact location for the western home for mentally ill has not yet been determined, but final approval of a site in the Reedley-Dinuba area is expected soon.

The Homes-for-Mentally-Ill Fund continues to be open for contributions from any of our people interested in helping in this work. All such contributions should be directed to and through the treasurers of the respective conference groups.

DEPRESSION AND ANXIETY

by Albert C. Voth

WHEN things go well with us we are usually happy, content, and feel well. The reverse holds true when things go badly for us.

It can be stated as an established rule that man lives not to himself alone. For a human being to realize his fullest capacities and to be most fully aware of himself as an individual of worth and integrity he must associate and operate and cooperate with other human beings with a purpose. To know that other people respect you and stand by you and are willing to work with you produces a very reassuring and comfortable feeling and sense of well-being.

There is also the situation where we are more or less alone and independent in our undertakings of various kinds. Even there, in order for us to be mentally comfortable we must be able to realize a degree of mastery and control over whatever exists around us. Furthermore, those things in our universe over which we have no direct mastery must have some appearance of dependable orderliness so that life may not seem too capricious or catastrophic. In this latter case true science, with all that it implies, has done a great deal to establish our sense of security.

Anxiety is the first weather flag to tell us that we are not in smooth relationship with the world about us, and are therefore frustrated. Even a dog will slink off into a corner, pull in his tail, and cast a cautious anxious eye around when he is suddenly brought into a strange place entirely unfamiliar to him. The farmer whose machinery breaks down and for which he cannot get repairs, whose weeds begin to get out of control, whose crops suffer because of drouth or excessive rain, will begin to experience a sense of anxiety. The laborer, the business man, the doctor, the preacher, the teacher, all may feel ill-at-ease when things get out of control for them.

The step that sometimes follows anxiety when matters continue to go badly for a person is a depression, or some other form of abnormal mental behavior in which the individual either gets too suspicious, or withdraws from everything, or develops excessive fears, etc. In a depression a person feels so cut off from everything that he loses his appetite for food, and for everything else for that matter. He usually loses weight. It becomes a burden for him to get up in the morning to face the day. Suicidal thoughts frequently become prominent, and feelings of self-guilt are common. Sometimes there is a marked feeling of being completely deserted by God. Utter hopelessness is the final essence of a depression. In the thirty-eighth chapter the Psalmist writes as follows:

> O Lord, rebuke me not in thy wrath; neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.
> For thine arrows stick fast in me, and thy hand presseth me sore.
> There is no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger; neither is there any rest in my bones because of my sin.
> For mine iniquities are gone over mine head: as an heavy burden they are too heavy for me.
> My wounds stink and are corrupt because of my foolishness.
> I am troubled; I am bowed down greatly; I go mourning all the day long.

Little temporary worries and short periods of mild anxiety about how some situation will turn out are probably common to all of us, and are more or less to be expected in an imperfect world. Such complete despondency, however, as just described, and such excruciating anxieties as will not even allow us to take a good deep refreshing breath of air are not anymore to be considered normal, and usually require psychiatric care if they continue for a length of time.

Modern psychiatric treatments offer considerable hope of relief to mentally ill people, but more important is the prevention of illness through correction of those conditions that bring it about. It is not reasonable to expect that in a social order, be it family, nation, or world wide, where conditions are chaotic, suppressing, unjust, and tyrannical, all individuals will be orderly, confident and hopeful. Disorderly and disorganized conditions at large are bound to reflect themselves in the individual.

Sometimes it happens that a person sees in his environment (in people and things about him) a disorder and a threat to him that does not actually exist. In such a case we must conclude that that person has developed a false way of thinking about things, and a wrong way of seeing a thing. The psalmist would not have needed to be so gloomy and pessimistic. There were many nice things to see and talk about and experience even in his days. "He that seeketh findeth" is still a valid principle. Things appear good or bad to us to a considerable extent according to what we look for and how we have been trained. Many of the important influences that color the outlook we hold occurred in childhood. Quarrelsome, or cold-hearted, or unduly severe parents, may they be ever so pious, can freeze the naturally congenial and optimistic disposition of a child into a constricted, brooding mode of thinking that may easily drift into a depression. The excessive prohibitions and admonitions we have sometimes heard in childhood, and the constant emphasis on the evils of life and the sinfulness of mankind may finally give us the false impression that practically anything we do, especially if there is a little fun in it, may be mortal sin. The excessive and

By Paul Goering

August 3. Congress is stewing in its own anger and taking little constructive action. The majority party has said it will act on no measure until the Senate passes the anti-poll tax bill. The Dixiecrats have pledged defeat of this bill by filibuster. The Republicans are not as interested in civil rights legislation as they are in having the Democrats fight. This is their answer to Truman for calling Congress back.

President Truman named inflation and the housing shortage the two emergency conditions which made it necessary to call the extra session of Congress. Senator Taft claims Truman has not used his executive power previously granted to control inflation. As for the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill, the real estate lobby will prevent its passage.

The Berlin blockade has received little attention by Congress. While both Russia and the U. S. are making a strong stand, neither side would go to war over Berlin although this is the kind of situation which could explode into war through a blunder. It is admitted that Berlin is of no military value to the U. S., but diplomatically the U. S. would lose prestige if it pulled out of Berlin without getting something from Russia in return.

unreasonable guilt feelings which depressed people sometimes experience can often be traced to an overwrought conscience. A person's conscience can be too severe—to greatly enlarged. We must learn to be at least as kind to ourselves as we are to others.

Many of our childhood impressions have been long forgotten, but their influence continues. Mental disturbances do not just pop up out of nothing and for no reason. They develop like a picture that requires many strokes of the brush for its completion, be it grotesque or beautiful. Unlike the completed picture, however, we human beings can change and adapt ourselves, and can change our environment to our advantage. To the degree that we deny this fact we may feel ourselves the victims and not the masters of circumstances. Involved in every depression is a certain feeling of being ensnared in the meshes of unchanging and unchangeable network of circumstances. For such a person, God, who is viewed as the author of all things, becomes the terrible arbiter and deserter—the unhappy reflection of a rigid way and philosophy of life. Happily, such reflections and rigidities can be forestalled by enlightenment, and often changed though they occur.

(Miss Eva Pauls, nurse in the Champa Leper Hospital, sent in the following for publication, dated July 11. After reading it we should rejoice for the way God has blessed us with health and strength. The second paragraph should cause us to pray earnestly for believers that their faith fail not. Howard G. Nyce, Secretary.)

"My Grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness." This is a verse that has been quoted and has been a great help and blessing to many. But one of the leprosy patients thinks that he can hardly stand any more suffering. He has been an inmate for a long time, and usually has been a happy Christian. A number of years ago he lost one leg. Then a few years later he lost the sight of one eye. Through leprosy he has lost all his fingers. Now he is in the hospital with a bad abscess and suffering a great deal of pain in the other eye which is almost gone. Besides all this he is suffering from diabetes. The other day as we made our rounds in the hospital he was very discouraged and felt that he could not bear it any longer. if only the order be given for him to go home to heaven. We gathered around his bed for prayer. May he have faith to believe that God will not give more than what he is able to bear.

The yearly Bible course was held in the hot season this year. We believe that the Lord blessed the Word to many as it was being taught. A group of twenty-five young people and adults have expressed their desire to follow Christ. But Satan "as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour: whom resist steadfast in the faith." We are grieved that some of the young people who have been tempted have yielded and fallen in sin. A brilliant young man, in whom we had great hopes as a leader, has fallen in sin. Pray that in true repentance he may return unto the Lord again, and be cleansed and sanctified and meet for the Master's use."

THANK YOU!

Several months ago we published an article written by the Rev. John Thiessen, missionary to India, in which he states that he lost approximately $200 as the result of a fire. He suggested that perhaps some organizations or classes would be willing to send in money for this loss. I included a note suggesting that those interested in sending money to cover this loss should state that it was for that purpose when the money was sent to the Treasurer. Brother Dyck, Office Manager and Treasurer, reports that over $200

The Rev. Li Kwang Ming Family

Li Kwang Ming (Bright Light Li) and Gia Yin Hua were brought up in our mission schools, he an orphan boy and she a daughter of a poor widow. Mr. Li took a Seminary-Bible School Course by correspondence after his graduation from Middle School. During 1932-39 they served in rural evangelism in the Taming-Nanlo-Tsingfeng area, Brother Li being especially successful in work with children. Mrs. Li excelled in literacy classes with Mohammedan women where much patience is required.

Rev. Li was ordained as elder in 1940, being one of the six Chinese brethren ordained in our South Hopei Mission in the pre-World-War-III period. Always cheerful and willing, Brother and Sister Li with their happy family endeared themselves to many.

During the Dr. Sung evangelistic meetings, April, 1934, Bro. Li said to one of our missionaries, "If we had ten men in our mission (or church) like Dr. Sung things would happen in this area."

The missionary asked, "Do you think it would take ten men?"

Mr. Li thought a moment, then he said, "No, if we had one like that—dauntless, spirit-filled—many things would change."

The missionary put the challenge squarely: "Brother Li, why not you be that one?"

Li sat for a long minute, tears filling his eyes. The missionary and his faithful helper knelt down and fervent prayers were made, each asking for grace from the Lord to "follow in His train." Since then they have been greatly used of the Lord.

The Sprungers were the guests of the Rev. and Mrs. Wilmer Shelly of Bally, Pennsylvania. Brother Sprunger is a member of the Wadsworth, Ohio, Church, of which Rev. Shelly was a former pastor. WORD PICTURE OF MISSION BOARD NEEDS

The Secretary gave the closing address at the retreat at Men-O-Lan Sunday afternoon, July 25, giving a word picture of the great work done by the Foreign Mission Board of our General Conference and the needs of the immediate future. He reported that only 28 per cent of the total budget of $330,000 has been received to date and that the Board was greatly handicapped because for the last three years the Board spent more than it had received. He explained that the surplus was about exhausted and that there was an urgent need for funds NOW. We are praying that the Lord might move upon the hearts of those who can give and give more abundantly for the salvation of the lost. —Howard G. Nyce, Executive Secretary.

Swift Current Bible School Forges Ahead

The General Conference as well as the Canadian Conference have done great things for us, for which we are glad and very thankful.

Last fall, when the students began to come, and the new Bible School building was not yet completed, our ebb was at a very low tide. We had worked all summer with the hope of moving into the new building in the fall, and then it was not ready. Once again we had to use the church. Now that the Bible students have been dismissed, we want to continue with the work with new zeal and vigor.

The secretary, Mr. Henry Janzen, has just informed me that we have spent five thousand dollars already, that is, for building material and labor. Two thousand dollars we have received from the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, and the balance we have collected around here. It will take about five thousand dollars more to complete the building. We are on our way collecting again, and it is our prayer that the Lord would undertake, for it is not an easy task to approach these farmers again who seldom get a good crop. We are hoping and praying for a good crop this year.

Let us just briefly describe the building to you. We bought an old but well built house, 28x46, and moved it to Swift Current. We took off the roof and added a second story for a girls dormitory. It contains eight rooms, a bathroom and a hall. On the first floor are three classrooms and an office for the teachers. The basement is partitioned according to the following plan: dining-room, kitchen, pantry, laundry, furnace-room and bathroom. The building has a flat roof. The walls are to be decorated with stucco, and no doubt will add to the beauty and dignity of the city.

During the past year we had an enrollment of thirty-eight. One of our students, Margaret Epp, left us after Christmas and went to Europe under the M.C.C. She is now stationed in Austria. This year we were blessed with an exceptionally good spirit in our school. As a result no problems of discipline appeared. This good spirit manifested itself in the whole city of Swift Current. Every Saturday a group of students flooded the town with tracts. Restaurants, theatres, stores, streets, and many other places where people could be contacted, were visited. Even beer-parlors and pool-rooms, where the most degraded and sinful people are found, were visited. Sunday afternoons some students were busy in child evangelism work in the homes on the outskirts of the city, reaching those children who are unable to come to Sunday School. Others visited the Old Folks Home to hold a short service. There one lady remarked, "We are old and weak and cannot go out to worship. It is very nice of you to come and worship with us." Hospital visitations also proved to be a great blessing. Christians were cheered and comforted, while the unsaved were pointed to the Lord. Every other Sunday night the Bible students gave a program in our church which led to the salvation and edification of many souls. Last, but not least the Bible School choir was in charge at every Youth for Christ meeting which was held in the United Church every other Saturday night.

Five days of the week we were busy in the classroom. We are teaching a three-year course, but we are planning a four-year course for the not too distant future. Three full time teachers, Rev. Jacob Unruh, my wife and I, and one part-time teacher, Mrs. Jacob Unruh, teaching D.V.B.S. and child evangelism, were employed. Both teachers and students worked zealously for five and one half months. Much work, prayer and fellowship gave harmony to both classroom and dormitory life. The many missionaries that visited us greatly enhanced the Spiritual life of the school.

April 8, 9, brought a blessed school year to a close. For this two-day conference we had invited Rev. Abraham Unruh, North Dakota, and Rev. J. C. Schmidt, Rosthern. Four students graduated with an Evangelical Teacher Training Association diploma. The conference closed with a dedicaton service at which many people dedicated themselves to the Lord.

It is hoped that this report will give you a picture of the work done in and around the Swift Current Bible School. I have not mentioned the activities of the Church and Elim Gospel Beach because they are separate fields. May we again thank you for your generous help and kindness to us. May God bless you richly and continue to make you a blessing to others as well as to us.—Yours in His service, Hans Dyck, Teacher.

Note: The members of the Board of Home Missions felt that this report, sent first to the Board, would be interesting and bring forth prayer supporters and perhaps financial as well, for the school, if the readers would get a glimpse of the heroic work being done here.—A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary, Quakertown, Pa.

Relief in Kashmir Planned

A new MCC relief project is being developed in the small state of Kashmir, which borders on the northern boundary of India. Here relief needs have been made acute through political strife within the government. Very great suffering exists among certain groups of people who are neglected by the present ruling classes. The major needs are for clothing, medical care, some supplementary feeding, and general rehabilitation. It is felt that a program of relief beginning in the near future and continuing until possibly November can alleviate much need and leave a real witness "In the Name of Christ."

United States Immigration for Mennonite Refugees

The recently passed "Displaced Persons Act of 1948" may enable some of the Mennonite displaced persons in Europe to enter the United States. The President has not appointed the three-man commission provided in the bill, but he is expected to make the appointments within a short time after which immigration will begin. The MCC Special Meeting at Chicago on July 17 approved an Aid Section recommendation that a poll be taken to determine the number of Mennonite refugees interested in the United States as a place of settlement. It was also decided that the Mennonite people in the United States be invited to provide assurances that the refugees who enter will be provided with employment and housing without displacing other people. This is a requirement of the law which also gives preference to agricultural workers.

Persons who have either housing or employment opportunities may write the Mennonite Aid Section. It is not necessary that the same persons provide both housing and employment for a refugee family, as one person may assure housing and another employment. A rather complete description of the housing facilities and the employment opportunities should be given by those who write the Aid Section. The location of housing and employment is but a preliminary to bringing persons to the United States, and it may take some time after housing and employment are secured until immigrants begin to arrive. LISTEN IN

"Gems For Thought About The Bible"

The American Bible Society's Dr. Francis C. Stifler will be heard twice each Friday over the facilities of the ABC network and its affiliated stations until September 24.

There are two different programs each day, based on the subject, "Gems For Thought About The Bible."

Originating over station WJZ in New York, both programs will be heard from coast to coast at 8:45 A. M. and 11:30 P. M. Eastern Standard Time. Since on certain stations the program is broadcast by transcription and since on April 25 many parts of the country adopted Daylight Saving Time, it is advisable to consult your local station affiliated with the American Broadcasting Network or your local newspaper to make sure of the exact time when the program will be heard.—John E. principles under which Mennonite refugees will be settled in the United States are given below.

1. The immigrants be placed in areas where it will be possible for them to remain in fellowship with the Mennonite Church and where it will be possible for them to be reached readily by the church.
2. The sponsoring local Mennonite communities be encouraged to assume full responsibility for employment, and housing with the assistance and counsel of the Akron office. Each immigrant or family group must be assured definite housing and employment in order to meet the terms of the DP Act.
3. The local communities be encouraged to extend mutual aid in providing not only employment and housing, but also the basic necessities for establishing a modest beginning.
4. The Akron office be the point of contact with the United States Government in assisting the immigrants and sponsors to meet the immigration requirements.
5. The Akron office, in assigning immigrants to specific localities, take into consideration the wishes of the immigrants, the adequacy of housing and employment, and other factors that exist in individual cases.

A. THEODORE MUELLER TO BE NEW OFFICE MANAGER

The Executive Committee of the General Conference is glad to announce that Brother A. Theodore Mueller of Enid, Oklahoma, has accepted the call to become Office Manager of the "Krehbiel Memorial Building," our Conference Headquarters Office at Newton, Kansas. His services will begin September 1.

Rev. P. A. Penner formerly had charge of this work. After his illness, our Conference Secretary, Rev. Walter H. Dyck, was asked to take over these duties in connection with his own work until someone else was found. Brother Dyck has faithfully carried this double task for several years, and we wish to thank him for his fine service.

As the work is again divided, we ask your prayers and co-operation for the important work of these two offices.—For the Executive Committee, J. N. Smucker, Chairman.

WANTS INFORMATION ON WEAVING

There are a few sources of written material and a few samples of Pennsylvania German weaving in the United States which are very interesting and old. It seems that there must be also, somewhere, material pertaining to the Mennonites exclusively. If anyone has knowledge of weaving that is a distinct Mennonite heritage, Mrs. James W. Bixel, North Newton, Kansas, would be exceedingly glad to know of it.

Paul Hutchinson: The New Leviathan. Chicago, 1964, Willett Clark and Company, $2.

"Totalitarianism" is a word that was not known to one considering the problem of church and state as recently as 1924! This is indicative of the constantly growing character of this aspect of the problem of the church and the world which is treated extensively in this book of something over two hundred pages.

The book takes its name from the concept of state held by a seventeenth century philosopher by the name of Thomas Hobbes in which the state was regarded as a "mortal God" with power to secure peace and order for its citizens. Hutchinson shows how modern man in his search for security is unknowingly selling out his freedom to the state. In the process he is becoming a new kind of idol-worshiper. "The battle between Leviathan (the state) and the church is the battle for men's souls." Probably the greatest value of the book lies in its turning up of areas and instances in which the thinking of good Christians ultimately amounts to idolatrous worship of the state, harmless though it may appear on the surface.

Another value of the book is that it digests much of the material that has been written in these recent critical years on this particular subject. It relates the material to previous thinking on the problem. Statistics and factual material from recent history are in abundance to illustrate the nature as well as the growth of the problem.

In separate chapters Hutchinson takes up the various detailed applications of the problem. He shows the more pronounced ways in which the state appropriates the loyalties of the individual in war time. Again he notes the more invisible ways by which the state does this in peace time. He deals with the problem of imperialism and how this phase of the problem of the state affects the missionary program of the church. Then he discusses the problem of religious liberty pointing to the fact that the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches seek two entirely different kinds of religious liberty; the Catholic seeks liberty for the church—the only church, the Church; the Protestant seeks liberty for the individual conscience; there is a survey and discussion of the situation in the various parts of the world with reference to this problem. There is a discussion of the extent to which the church can and may expect the state to submit to the laws of God. There is a treatment of the manner in which the Christian and the church are to fulfill their responsibility in the operation of the state. Then the author deals with the now-so-highly-controversial issue of religion in the school, pointing out what is and what is not consistent with our Christian heritage.

What must the church do to subdue Levitatan (the state god)? Hutchinson gives several answers. The church must realize anew that it exists to proclaim the nature and the will of God. The church must keep itself free from any form of state subsidy or control. The church must proclaim an end to the divisive world of nationalisms and point to a more inclusive world-wide loyalty. The church must take with new seriousness its responsibility to act as monitor to the state concerning the requirements of moral law—the task of the prophet.

Who should read this book? Every intelligent Christian in order that he may not unknowingly become the typical 20th century idol worshipper, every American in order that he may not unknowingly throw away his freedom as the price for an ever receding security, every church leader and missionary, that they may not embarrass the unconditional claims of the Gospel and the church by depending on finite states that make infinite claims.—Jacob J. Enz

Summer Means Service . . .

Summer means service for several hundred Mennonite youth each year. It means going forth into many varied fields of endeavor to serve mankind in the spirit of Christ. For some, it has been a summer in Europe. Others find their field in Canada, and still others in varied places throughout the United States. Some chose to serve in mission fields; others have found their service in teaching Summer Bible School, and many enter mental hospital service. Some teams have been visiting churches in the interest of helping promote the Christian peace position.

The many individuals involved could speak of many things. They could tell of a great variety of experiences and of their meaning to the individual. The following material represents a few of the voices as they tell of a few of the experiences. This issue is confined to those serving in mental hospitals and those in the Chicago unit engaged in teaching summer Bible school.

. . . In Mental Hospitals

Summer Service unit members speak for themselves in the following collection of comments from their weekly "logs" or diaries. The voice of the unit member in the M.C.C. sponsored Mental Hospital Units are recorded here. Ed.

St. Elizabeth Hospital, Washington, D. C.

"This type of unit and group life is for many of us the first time we have had to make a concentrated effort at Christian living in a non-Christian society. Our resources are tested and in some cases strained. People are curious and challenging to our convictions."

"Our unit activities have been most profitable. In my opinion the high points are our group devotionals. Although our group is composed of fifteen individuals with almost as many varying opinions, we are unified through our common goal—to serve 'in the name of Christ'."

London, Ontario

"I know that I have had to change my ideas and prejudices about a mental hospital. In my opinion occupational therapy is one of the most worthwhile activities under way. The hospital grounds, garden, orchards, livestock, laundry, cooking, housework, fancy-work, painting, etc. are all done by patients. All who are able are given work to do. Idle hands help no one, not even the owner. This is recognized in the hospital as well as we outside recognize it. And how very much like us they are in other respects. After all, it is not such a big jump from a so-called normal person to one mentally unbalanced."

"As for the unit, I am very much pleased with the idea of such an outlet for youthful energy. If service is to be a Christian watchword, I can think of no better way to spend a summer than in serving those who need our help. Apart from the work, the time spent on Bible studies, group discussions, lectures from the outside, tennis and picnics are a wonderful supplement to the work."

"We have the privilege of looking up and reading case histories of our patients and this helps us to understand better how to approach them and find their interest, etc. I find my ward work—shock therapy ward—very interesting and beneficial to myself. It is amazing to see how people can be helped and even cured, and more wonderful when they get to go home!"

"Each day presents a new challenge, but often fail to take note of the many opportunities around about us. While walking to lunch today, I passed by an elderly woman patient trying to get out for some fresh air and sunshine. She was trying to push a heavy chair out, and since she was limping was having quite a hard time. My noon hour was limited and I was late already, thus I passed on by. On second thought I turned back and helped her move the chair out and in a few minutes had her happily settled. It took just a few moments of my time, I felt richly repaid for stopping."

Richmond, Indiana

Wednesday we were shown around the institution. The institution seems very inadequate and offers a wonderful field of witnessing and needs the love of Jesus manifested. I believe that it is an excellent location for a S.S.U., for it offers a real challenge and presents a real understanding in Christian living and testifying."

"I am glad that the wards are kept clean and that the physical requirements of the patients are met fairly well. But I feel that other than shock and water bath treatment nothing is done to help the patient get well. They have nothing to do but work puzzles and read a few old magazines. Most of the time they just sit and want to go home. The attendants are rather unsympathetic and feel that their responsibilities are through when the cleaning and meals are through."

"One or two patients have challenged me to see if any improvement can be made at all. For instance, I would like to get Josephine, who seldom stirs and never speaks, to respond in some way or another to a personal approach."

North Battleford, Sask.

"I want to re-emphasize to myself the principle of our work; set definite aims and codes of conduct for myself, and by my sincere kindness aid someone in his struggle for recovery."

" . . . . the success of our work—at least to an extensive degree—depends on us. If our attitude is wrong; if initiative is lacking, and if our fellowship with the other children of God and with the Father himself is lacking, we will lose out in our effectiveness in our work and in our witness for Christ."

"Another thing which impressed me was that from observing the patients, I found that many have normal feelings and emotions and yet they must live such a desolate and lonely life. Would that we could be more thankful for the material blessings of health—both mental and physical."

Cleveland, Ohio

"After only one week in this service unit I feel definitely that this program is one of the best and most practical ever sponsored by the Mennonite Church. It is a positive expression of Christianity as a way of living and not only as a belief. One of the patients came to me and said, 'You girls are different, I can see that.' We are able to demonstrate by actual meanly tasks that we believe in service to our fellowmen."

"Might not many of these cases have been averted? Why do we not work harder along preventive lines? Why do some individuals makes better adjustments in life than others? How can mental stamina be fostered?

"Since hatred, fear, indulgences of many kinds, lack of trust or faith, exposure to ridicule, sarcasm and numerous other causes are named when speaking of mental illnesses, one wonders whether there aren't means of giving all individuals the fortitude that those have who have withstood all these without breaking mentally?

"Why not attack the whole program more enthusiastically by providing for the physical, emotional, moral, and spiritual needs of the individual? What a challenge for our homes, churches, schools, and communities! May they so guide the children of today through all the changing complexities of childhood and youth into mature, mentally strong individuals, should be the prayer of all who are concerned."

"Our experience in Cleveland is very beneficial to us from the standpoint of our religious growth and the fulfillment of the will of God, which is our ultimate aim. This occurs through our contact with the world—that world in which we are bound to live and work if we are going to give a contribution to the growth of the Kingdom of God on earth. We see humanity without mask, more so than in the society of the so-called normal people—without even the seventh veil. This veil being removed, we can see wounded spirits and the misery of decayed passions. The case histories of the patients tell us of the overwhelming power of evil in the world and the challenge to overcome evil with good—in deeds and truth—seems too difficult to meet. To meet humanity at its worst signifies to accept the challenge of existential Christianity, that is to seek Christ in the most miserable of our brothers, our fellowmen."

Skillman, N. J.

Were boys and girls able to associate when off duty? When we arrived a large group of girls were walking down the street—we knew! for we had been told before we left that when the group we were to be associated with went out in the evening the girls went in one direction, the boys in the other. Actually the group which we saw were patients returning to their respective cottages after attending a play whose actors and actresses were also patients."

"There are many unpleasant tasks, but it is necessary to perform the most menial in the name of Christ—in the same spirit of love and kindness that He worked."

"One thing that we could not help but notice was the reputation left for us by the previous units. If we can live to this challenge, we shall have continued a witness for Christ.

"Concerning ward work, if at times we think of shirking our duty, the keynote of my summer shall be Col. 3:17, 'And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus.' If we think our work is fruitless this verse was brought to our attention in group devotionals, 'In due season we shall reap if we faint not.'"

. . . In Chicago

Happy Hour Bible School

For the past two weeks, Rosemary Linscheid and Elda Duerksen have helped conduct a Bible School at 7607 S. Seeley in the basement of the Max Ephraim home.

The school is in collaboration with the First Mennonite Church and has been under the direction of Mrs. Lillian Lutz who also taught the nursery department. Peggy Argile and Kathryn Prentice supervised the Kindergarten group while Elda took charge of the primary class. The Junior Junior (this is not a typographical error) group was directed by Mrs. Natalie Barts. Rosemary instructed the oldest group.

When considering that the total enrollment stood at eighty-four and that the classes were separated only by screens and curtains, it is very obvious that there was quite a commotion.

The Bible School has proved educational to the teachers, as well as to the children. For instance, one day Elda came home at noon informing us that of a truth Job's body was covered with boilers and the dove returned to Noah's Ark carrying an Oliver leaf.

There is a tremendous field in this section of Chicago as well as in the city in general, and we do hope and pray that the little we have done may help someone to become a follower of Christ.

A program was rendered by the pupils on Friday evening, July 23. The day following was spent in picnicking and recreation at Foster Park.

Mennonite Bible Mission

It has been a great pleasure and blessing to be an instructor here at the Bible Mission.

The children that attend are from many types of homes. Several nationalities and races are represented, mainly Polish, Lithuanian, German, Norwegian, Swedish and Negro. A great majority of the children are Roman Catholic.

The opening exercises feature Miss Elvina Neufeld who has been telling a continued story of an Indian boy. This story is an encouragement for the offering, which is marked for use in caring for a leper for one year. The goal, which is forty dollars has almost been reached.

One of the most startling facts is that, on the average, there are more boys present than girls. In fact, in one class twelve boys and only six girls are enrolled. The average daily attendance is approximately thirty-six.

Seminary Bible School

This Bible School is the smallest with which our unit is assisting. It is also the most conveniently located, being almost next door to the unit girls' apartment. These children range in age from five to eight years. Verna Vogt teaches the five and six years old class and Mrs. David Habegger from the Seminary teaches the seven and eight year olds. Each day this Bible School begins with an assembly period of worship and closes with a chorus period at which time the children are all together again.

One noon Verna reported a new version of part of the twenty-third Psalm. She had been teaching this Psalm to her class and had come to the part. "Thou anointest my head with oil." One little girl when asked to repeat this said, "Thou anointest my head with gas." It seems Verna needs to learn how to explain things a little better to help eliminate such misinterpretations.

Not all teachers have such devoted pupils who lavish candy upon them. (There is more than one way to keep a teacher sweet!) One day David said, "Teacher, I have some candy for you." The candy was gratefully received by his teacher. Then David decided he had better have a piece of candy for his girl friend, so he proceeded to give her a part of the teacher's gift. After recess the little lover gave three more pieces of candy to his friend. Then the teacher unselfishly asked David to pass her box of candy to the children in the class. After everyone except Verna had a piece (and only one more was left) the climax came! She asked, "David, is that piece of candy for me?

"No, I think I'd better save that for my girl friend," he replied. What a let down! Little boys are difficult to understand at times, aren't they?

But there is another side to Bible School. These children need to learn the lessons that can be taught through the Bible stories. It is hoped that the books that have been used in Bible School will also be read to the children at home in order to fix more firmly in their lives the truths that have been presented. These city children truly need Christ with them daily amid such confused and congested surroundings. May God bless our efforts as we continue to serve Him.

Is Your Halo Too Tight?

by Kenneth Adorse

DOES BEING GOOD make you feel uncomfortable? Would you be happier if you junked your convictions and followed the crowd? Do you secretly yearn to break the bonds of your careful upbringing and have your fun while you're young enough to enjoy it? Or, in the words of a teen-age girl who found it difficult to maintain high standards when all her companions had lower ideas, is your halo too tight?

Let's admit from the start that it's tough these days on the person who has ideals and sticks by them. You have to run the gauntlet of sarcastic digs, you must be strong enough to withstand social pressure, you have to take the risk of spending several Saturday nights at home—alone.

The best way to handle a halo is to forget that it's there. In other words, you needn't be so self-conscious about your right behavior. Accept the fact that you're with the 10 per cent who don't rather than the 90 per cent who do. This works both ways. It keeps you from being self-satisfied because you do right and it helps you to be natural in doing what's right. Also, if you can forget your halo, there's a chance that others will come to respect you for what you are rather than for what you profess. It's your job to make goodness attractive.

NOTE: When writing specify both old and new address.

A second suggestion is to put the accent on what you choose to do rather than on what you refuse to do. If someone is going to expect a good-night kiss at the end of that first date and you would prefer not to, master the situation by concluding the evening in your own sweet—and surprising—way. You're clever enough to know how. And you'll be asked out again. If you think you may be asked to accept a drink or a cigarette, have your alternative suggestions ready. And you can be more original than to say simply, "I'll take a coke."

There's no valid reason why a reputation for correct behavior should embarrass anyone. Every Christian young person should be challenged to wear his high standards with an easy grace. A little imagination, spiced with humor, will help you over many a dangerous moment. Forget the halo and concentrate on being your own best self.—Our Young People given at the last session by H. A. Fast, vice-chairman of the M.C.C.

The Mennonite World Conference is about to close. Now we pause a moment to look back to see what it all meant, and we wonder what it did mean. What it has meant to you personally will depend largely on the spirit with which you came, what opportunities you had to attend, how wholeheartedly you entered into its purpose, and how much you prayed for its success. What it will mean to your particular Mennonite group will depend largely on how much you want it to mean and how much you will share its blessing with others. What it will mean to the world-wide Mennonite brotherhood remains to be seen. What it can mean is without limit.

What a marvelous gathering of Mennonites this has been. We came from the east and the west and the north and the south and we sat down together here at the banquet table of the Kingdom. We mingled together as children of God should. We were not particularly concerned to know from what group the other person came. We were just glad to be together. Here we met many old friends and learned to know and love many new ones. God grant that we may never forget that we were Christian friends and brothers and sisters here.

It was evident that we are still living under the dark shadows of the world war. The old tensions of war are not entirely erased, but outward evidences were so few that they were almost negligible and then sounded like a false, discordant note in the harmony of a great hymn.

We were made aware that suffering, poverty and homelessness caused by war is still tragically hanging over many of our brethren, and our sympathy was stirred with the deep desire to serve them in the name of Christ.

Our German guests came here keenly sensitive to the immeasurable wrong and destruction wrought during this war by the people of their land. Penitently confessing their own share in the common guilt, they expressed their longing to be forgiven and to be readmitted and accepted into the full fellowship, love and trust of the Mennonite brotherhood. We cannot let them go back without reassuring them that we have heard and that whatever there is to be forgiven is forgiven. We are as anxious as they that the old relationships of Christian brotherliness be re-established and we invite them to enter into wholehearted cooperation with the Mennonite world brotherhood in serving the cause of the Kingdom. It would probably have been good if all of us would have come here with a spirit of penitence and confession because our hands are not clean either, nor our hearts pure or our service perfect. It would be tragic if any of us should leave here with a spirit of Pharisaism: "I thank thee Lord that I am not like the rest of men."

There was evident at this conference a remarkable spirit of unity. Who can ever forget how we sang together: "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" or how our voices rang when we sang: "Faith of Our Fathers," or how our hearts were stirred with "Ich weiss einen Strom," or how our souls seemed knit together as we sang: "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

Here we stood and lifted our hearts in a common petition to the God and Father of us all. With our eyes upon Him, His eye searching our souls and His love warming our hearts, we felt ourselves drawn to one another as brothers.

Here we reminded ourselves that "Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, namely Jesus Christ." With our eye on this Christ as Savior and exalted Lord, center of our faith and head of the church, we learned to respect and love one another even though we discovered there was considerable variation in the practical expressions of the Christian faith or even in viewpoints sincerely held.

We were made vividly aware of the tremendous need in the world—the physical need and the spiritual need — and the great opportunities and the wide open doors in fields all over the world. We were challenged with the unparalleled need for a Christian witness of love and peace.

We looked at ourselves and took an inventory of our resources in the face of so great a need and so great an opportunity. We examined our institutions to see what help they could be. We looked at our young people and children and we asked ourselves how best we could train them to be useful instruments in the hand of God. We were thrilled when we heard our young people express such a deep and genuine Christian concern and saw their high idealism and their unflinching courage in the face of our present world crisis and opportunity.

Out of all this there came to us a renewed and compelling sense of mission. We are sure that God has kept us for these four hundred years for a purpose. We are certain we have a God-given message to tell to the nations that shall turn their hearts to the Lord—the good news of God in Christ Jesus reconciling the world to Himself and to one another bringing peace. We heard the Master say to us: "Go ye into all the world," "Ye shall be my witnesses." But we also heard our Master reassure us: "Lo, I am with you alway" and "Ye shall receive power." God grant that we may not lose this vision of the great human need and God's call to us: "Give ye them to eat."

The road ahead may not be entirely clear and it may look rugged and rough. But when we look at our Mennonite history and especially the history of the very recent years, we take courage. God has been faithful, his providence over us marvelous, his love unfailing.

Newton Session of the World Conference

an editorial review

God, the Creator, and God, the Father, were felt at the Mennonite World Conference. As M.C.C. workers and Mennonite leaders in various fields discussed their work and its problems there was evidence of a creative God breathing over the chaos and agony of today. God the Father was evident in the concern expressed for refugees and fellow Mennonites in various lands and the family-like way in which "assorted" Mennonites mixed with each other at the conference.

Fellowship was, indeed, a keynote of the conference. Mennonites from many different branches and many lands learned a good deal more about the thoughts and feelings of one another. At close quarters there was far less temptation to pull hair than at usual greater distances. One might predict that each group will find it a little harder to regard itself as the chosen people after finding members of other groups and lands quite friendly and sincere.

Differences were justly minimized at this conference and unity emphasized. However, it is to be hoped that someday Mennonites will be united enough to discuss their differences calmly. Just as husband and wife talk over their differences and use them, so Mennonites ought to be enriched by their differences instead of being separated by them.

Strong Emphasis on Non-resistance

One of the main arguments for the continued existence of the Mennonite denomination is its belief in non-resistance. Therefore it was particularly fitting that the Mennonite World Conference gave so much time at choice places in the program to emphasize non-resistance.

So much of the usual talk about non-resistance is hortatory. These are the teachings—do them, as though we had a new law to obey. Unique therefore was the message by John H. Mosemann in which he declared non-resistance the result of the redemption experience whereby man is released from his own destructive self-will and won to a love of the Father and a desire to do his will. He made a strong case for the thought that the taproot of all disharmony among men is man's loss of rapport with God. Man's idea that his highest welfare lies along his own narrow self-interest rather than along the line of God's will results in conflicts, irritations, frictions. To bring about peace there must be a restoration of man's fellowship with God. The speaker made clear how peace requires the absence of antagonisms, how it depends upon a release of tensions, and upon a condition of mutual confidence. Now in a way it might seem as though this message gave no unusual or strong basis for winning people to non-resistance, for do not the Christians who do not believe in non-resistance also insist upon coming right with God? It was rather by the choice of words and their use that the speaker gave to the hearer a conception of God who, when loved as the Father Spirit, releases the believer from all violence and gives him the grace to be a creative peacemaker instead. A little psychology of how children lose their rapport with God when "despised" by the elders would be a valuable supplement to this presentation.

Also expressed at the conference was the note that our economic life has much to do with the prevention of war and that Mennonites need to examine their participation in the national economy with this in mind.

Goshen Session of the World Conference

Reported by J. Winfield Fretz

Long before eight o'clock on the evening of August 3 at Goshen, Indiana, people began assembling in the high school for the opening session of the Fourth Mennonite World Conference. It was the first time this Conference was being held in America, thus was a new experience for most American Mennonites. Among the Mennonite groups represented at the Goshen meetings were the Old Order Amish, the Conservative Amish, the Church of God in Christ Mennonite, the Defenseless Mennonites, the Krimmer Mennonites, the Mennonite Brethren, the Evangelical Mennonite Brethren, the Old Mennonites and the General Conference Mennonites. In addition, of course, were delegates from various Mennonite organizations and conferences in Holland, Germany, France, Switzerland, Brazil and Paraguay. The only country unrepresented were Mennonites who are living in Mexico.

The opening session of the Fourth World Conference was presided over by Vice Chairman, H. A. Fast of North Newton, Kansas. Throughout this session he did a remarkably competent job of extemporaneously making summary translations of speeches from German to English and vice versa. Throughout the entire Conference the two languages were used. Sanford C. Yoder, president of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, conducted the devotions and welcomed the guests officially for the Mennonites. The Mayor of Goshen and the high school principal also spoke words of welcome. Following the sermon on the subject "Looking up to Jesus," given by chairman, P. C. Hiebert, a number of foreign guests responded with brief remarks.

The Conference really got under way on Wednesday morning when the subject of relief was discussed. Dirk Cattepoel, minister in the Mennonite church at Krefeld, Germany, opened the subject with a brilliant address on "The Mennonites of Germany, 1936-1948, and the Present Outlook." This illuminating speech enabled non-German Mennonites to understand the way the Nazi state subtly and gradually influenced the religious life of the German people until ordinary church life was severely shackled. He made an eloquent plea for Mennonites throughout the world to forgive, understand and pray for their repentant brethren in Germany. Dominie H. W. Meihuizen and Dominie A. J. van der Water from Holland next described the condition of the Mennonite Church in Holland and the relief work that was being carried on by the Dutch Mennonites. It was a surprise to most non-Dutch Mennonites to discover how extensive were the activities in the fields of relief and charitable work by their Dutch brethren. Orie O. Miller concluded the discussions on the topic of relief by outlining the basic principles that underlie the service of the Mennonite Central Committee. In his usual succinct yet comphensive way he forcefully set forth the meaning of the Committee's slogan "In the name of Christ." Glimpses of trends and future plans of MCC were sketched and a plea made that the Committee might continue to be guided by God to serve the supporting churches.

The Wednesday afternoon session considered the topic of "Christian Non-Conformity to the World." The first address by Frank Wenger of Moundridge, Kansas, and leading minister in the Church of God in Christ, Mennonite, dealt with "The Divine Imperative of Non-Conformity." Don E. Smucker of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Chicago next set forth "The Historic Mennonite Expression of Non-Conformity." He pointed out the importance of avoiding superficial manifestations of non-conformity as required by some group rules and laws while forgetting the more profound meaning and purpose of Biblical non-conformity. Pierre Widmer of Montbeliard, France, spoke in French on "The Purpose and Power of Non-Conformity." Only a very few conference people could follow the thought of the address. One of the highlights of the Goshen conference was the highly stimulating address of Bishop Paul Mininger of Goshen, Indiana, on the subject "The Limitations of Non-Conformity. "Having been raised in the parsonage of a large city congregation and now serving a city church, Bishop Mininger drew on a wealth of observations and personal experiences for his discourse.

Other high points in the Goshen Conference was the session on Worldwide Missions. J. D. Graber, Executive Secretary of the Old Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, surveyed the total Mennonite foreign mission program, thus bringing to impressive focus the tremendeous combined mission program of Mennonites throughout the world.

A. E. Kreider, Chairman of the General Conference Foreign Mission Board, delivered a statesmanlike address on the subject, "The Open Door of Foreign Missions." Before outlining the opportunities, however, he sketched in bold paragraphs the graphic changes that have taken place, or are now taking place, in the various mission fields of the world. These economic, political, social and cultural changes, he pointed out, must be taken into consideration by missionaries and mission boards. The dynamic changes that are everywhere occurring in the world make it necessary for mission boards to take these changes into careful consideration.

A series of three addresses were given in the afternoon of August 5 and a larger outdoor mass meeting was held in the evening at which time young people's work was discussed. Ulrich Hege from Sinsheim, Germany, J. A. Huffman from the Missionary Association, and John R. Mumaw discussed topics of special concern to young people. At the outdoor meeting, at which there were an estimated four thousand present, four young people gave testimonies

Still More on Co-ops

by William Stauffer

I have just read with consuming interest the two articles on co-ops by Brother Suderman and Brother Nickel. My interest in and close association with both producer and consumer co-ops during the past fifteen years leads me to add still more on co-ops.

Mr. Suderman says, "Let it be made unmistakably clear that cooperatives are primarily in competition with small business—not big business." I am sorry to have to differ with Brother Suderman; but this is a half-truth. Of course, cooperatives are in competition with private business just as any two or more private business enterprises may be in competition with each other. Just what is so bad about that?

Where private business on main street really takes the rap is not with cooperatives, but with the chain store; a form of big business. It is rather a curious thing that if a man decided to go into business on main street in direct competition with another private business, that is quite all right. If a group of private business enterprises like the I.G.A. pool their purchasing power to make greater savings, that too is quite all right. Or, there is the organization known as the Federated Stores. This is an organization on a non-profit basis combining the purchasing power of some of our largest retail stores in the Country in order to make greater savings to themselves. This too is accepted by the man on the street. Really, he doesn't know that it exists. Or, we have in our own county the Twin City Co-op. This is a corporation of private grocers organized on a non-profit basis to buy more cheaply on the open market. We take this as a matter of good free competitive business.

If, however, a group of individuals go together for precisely the same purpose as the above and organize a local consumer or producer cooperative, that seems to be bad. Why?

To my knowledge no cooperative anywhere has ever put private business to the wall. They compete with one another the same as any other business. The cooperative, on the other hand, does directly face big monopolistic business which is interested in free enterprise only in name. Mr. Clifford Hope, Congressman from Kansas, has said that small business groups are being used as stooges by certain monopolistic groups who are opposed to free enterprise.

The issue is not really over taxes. The National Tax Equality Association merely uses the tax issue because equality in taxes is a popular way to attack cooperatives. Anyone who knows cooperatives knows that they pay almost every tax that any business pays. The only exemption is on the patronage refund which is taxable at the individual level. True, the Corporation pays a double tax here. But they are free to avoid this by following the same practice of patronage refunding as that of a cooperative. This they are not interested in doing. And here is the real issue. It is not taxes. The real issue is competition. The real issue between big business and cooperatives is not taxes, but the right to genuine free enterprise. Shall it exist in practice or only in name?

I know little about corporations, having helped to organize one a year ago as a small business in our community, and serving temporarily as its secretary-treasurer. When I see all the methods used in evading the tax laws, the revenue which is lost through co-operative exemptions in comparison is nil. As a matter of fact, corporations don't pay any taxes any more than anyone else. They merely act as tax collectors for the Government. The public pays every time.

Let me cite two examples, with which I am personally acquainted, of the real issue between cooperatives and big business. The first is in the field of fertilizer. Here in Ohio our cooperatives pooled their purchasing power to make a saving on fertilizer to the farmer. The discovery was soon made that several large companies pretty well controlled the price. Nothing could really be done until the cooperatives went ahead and build their own plants. At one stroke, when other things were either going up or holding a price level, the price of fertilizer dropped better than two dollars per ton; and none of the big companies or small local distributors went broke. Even at the lowered price the cooperative plants soon paid for themselves, and the private companies also made a fair return. Farmers in Ohio had paid for fertilizer plants over and over again but still didn't own them. In a short time they paid for their own and now they own them, and they haven't really cost a red cent. The local private distributors are still in business making the same margin of profit. They stick it into their pockets, which is their perfect right. The cooperatives distribute their savings to their patrons. That's free enterprise.

The second illustration is insurance. Some twenty years ago a cooperative insurance company was organized in Ohio. They lowered rates from existing company rates from 40 to 60 per cent selling only to farmers at first. Slowly they expanded, until today, it is the third largest casualty company in the world. And, no one else went broke. The margin of profit was simply cut from exhorbitant heights to a fair return. That is precisely the role of the cooperative. That is genuine free enterprise.

I want to say two things in closing. I strongly believe that the family sized farmer on his own farm and the small independent business man are the backbone of our great America. What is choking the freedom of both of these is monopolistic big business in the form of chains and inter-locking directorates. The cooperative is one peaceful wedge into this real enemy of free enterprise. Ultimately the cooperative will be an aid rather than a hindrance to independent business.

The final thing is this. Business men know the little folder called Kiplinger's Washington Letter; hardly a cooperative publication. Mr. Kiplinger called in one of the best men of his staff and asked him to make a thorough study of cooperatives. After a thorough study he wrote the following for Kiplinger Magazine for November of 1947.

"The biggest reason for the success of co-ops is that they offer values and services which millions of people, correctly or not, believe are not forthcoming from orthodox enterprises. If businessmen want to lose their tempers over co-ops, all right. But it may be more profitable to study co-ops calmly, as you study any other smart competitor . . . . So it is clear that the 'co-op question' will be settled in the market place, on the basis of competitive efficiency. It would be strange indeed if supporters of free enterprise declined that challenge and became obsessed, instead, with legal maneuvers to restrict co-ops. The legal maneuvers probably will not turn out as desired. The co-ops will still be in there competing, and other businessmen will have wasted time they could have spent studying ways to meet the co-operative challenge."

Do Dreams Like This Ever Come True?

by Annetta de Graff

SHE HAD come from Europe as a refugee. There was really nothing outstanding in her appearance. She was not tall. Her dark blonde hair she wore in two braids wound around her head. She was not pretty, There were too many lines of suffering in her face which made her look older than the twenty-eight she was.

She was grateful for all that had been done for her. She had a roof over her head now, and shelter from the cold, a clean room, and the opportunity to work, to earn her own living, and to worship her God.

She worked hard, and when she came home at night there was little energy left for hobbies she would have enjoyed had she not felt so tired and—yes, there was another reason, too.

The house she lived in now with the other girls, all working as she, all refugees, did not breathe that comforting warmth that makes a house a home.

Marliese was not outstanding in appearance, but she had a tender and poetic soul, a good taste, and a deep love for all that is beautiful and pure.

The living room in the house was not a "living," but a dead room, an office-like space in which some chairs and a table, businesslike placed along the walls, did not invite one to stay long.

The matron, a woman whose face and voice showed the frustration of so many unmarried older women, did not fill the place a mother would have in the heart of her girls. She was like the house, impersonal, the boss whose rules had to be obeyed; no warmth and love flowed out from her personality. She was not the kind of woman a younger girl confides in when she has problems.

Marliese lived in the girls "home," grateful for what it offered her, but still there was a yearning growing in her heart as the months passed by. She longed for—she didn't quite realize what until, one night, she had a dream.

She saw herself walking home. The day had been more tiring than ever. When she opened the door of the girls' home, she stood one moment struck with surprise.

There were flowers on a table in the hall, and the usually bare and hard hall light shone mercifully down through a parchment lamp shade she had never noticed before.

When she walked into what had formerly been the tasteless furnished "living" room, her eyes opened in wonder. There was a little rug in the middle of the room. A low table with flowers and some attractive looking magazines.

There were easy chairs and several small reading lamps at different places along the walls, while a standing "twilight" lamp with its indirect light gave the room a charm it had never had before.

Also the big frames with pictures of the former refugee girls who had lived in the house years ago had been taken away and were replaced by good reproductions of famous pictures. On one wall there was a reproduction of the famous picture of Christ as a boy, speaking in the temple. On the opposite wall, the eye found rest in a sunset over a beautiful hilly countryside.

Perplexed, Marliese sat down in one of the soft easy chairs and looked inquiringly at the other girls in the room, some of whom were reading, others knitting, but all looking fully content and at home.

Just when Marliese opened her mouth to start asking questions, someone unknown to her entered the room with a rolling tea table, on top of which were a typical English tea set and a plate with tempting freshly baked cookies. The unknown lady started to pour the tea in the China cups and handed them out to the girls, showing a lively interest in each girl apart and asking her a few questions about the work and the day behind her. Marliese was startled when one of the girls spoke to the lady, addressing her as "Mom." It was strange, but although she saw, heard, and felt everything clearly, it seemed to Marliese as though she were not present in the room, and as though the others didn't notice her either. Everyone acted as though nothing was extraordinary, and so Marliese accepted the situation, strange as it looked to her, and suddenly the dream was changed.

Annetta de Graff, a Dutch Mennonite music eacher with a melodious voice and an alert, idealistic utlook upon life, taught in the Canadian cities of Winnipeg and Altona this past winter. She knows bout the life of Mennonite immigrant girls who come o the large cities to work and here gives her dream f a home for such girls.

She was with all of them in the garden on a lawn with gaily colored garden furniture.

Beside the lady, she had seen inside the house, she noticed a middle aged, friendly looking gentleman. The girls called him "Dad." Marliese now knew that they were the father and mother of the home and the thought flashed through her mind, "Of course, a home isn't complete without a father."

They all sat down in a big circle, and then "Dad" started to read the Bible, pausing now and then to ask questions or explain, or just plainly to meditate a moment.

In no time all of them were engaged in a lively discussion of "Christ and everyday living," and many questions came up that Marliese had asked herself hundreds of times without ever having had an answer to them. She felt happy. Then the dream changed again, and she found herself with all the others at the breakfast table.

A great joy and thankfulness for this home filled Marliese, and before she left for her work, she ran upstairs to her own room to kneel down and thank God—but she could not kneel because something was in her way. She struggled a moment and then woke up, finding herself half outside the bed; the chair on which she had laid her clothes the evening before preventing her from going down on her knees.

Then Marliese realized she had dreamt. But then and there it was that she knew what was lacking in their "home" and she went down on her knees after all to send up a burning petition: "O God, if it be possible, give us such a home."

Are dreams like this ever to come true? Will prayers like this ever be answered? Are we, who do have homes, doing enough for girls like Marliese? Is it enough to give them just the necessities? Or should those girls especially get some extra love, some extra comfort? They who have come through suffering most of us can't even imagine—should and can't more be done for them?

concerning their aims and plans for Christian youth. J. N. Smucker, Chairman of the General Conference and pastor of the Bluffton, Ohio, Mennonite congregation, closed the Goshen share of the conference with a persuasive plea for all present to dedicate themselves anew to the service of Christ.

Two days of recess were allowed for travel from Goshen to North Newton where the second part of the conference was to be held. With hardly an exception, those attending the Goshen part of the Conference enthusiastically claimed its blessings. The strong feeling of unity, the enthusiasm with which the group sang familiar hymns, the tremendous amount of new information that came to all present further increased the value of the first half of the Fourth World Conference.

Dr. Franklin H. Littell will serve as specia lecturer in Anabaptist Studies at Mennonite Biblica Seminary during the third quarter of the 1948-194 school year. Dr. Littell, a minister in the Methodis Church, is now Director of Religious Life at th University of Michigan. He was awarded the Fran S. Brewer Prize by the American Society of Churc History in 1947 for his thesis, "The Anabaptist Vie of the Church."

IF A LETTER'S TOO LONG, JUST CABLE A SONG!

Well, did you ever?

Ever what?

Why, send a letter in two words, "Hymnary, 380."

You know when you cable a message from some foreign port you're not allowed too many words—unless you're willing to pay for it. Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Duerksen, missionaries to India, found that out when they wanted to send a birthday greeting to their son, Joe. They were limited to twenty words, including the address, so they made it short: "Hymnary, 380."

To some folks a song is just a song—mostly just soprano, alto, tenor, and bass—just so it harmonizes. To other people a song has a message. It goes down deep, and this message is the real essence of the hymn itself.

Naturally, as a Publication Board, we think that the MENNONITE HYMNARY is about tops, and now that the HANDBOOK FOR THE MENNONITE HYMNARY is coming out, we believe that there is going to be a new upsurge and increase in circulations not only of the HYMNARY itself, but of this splendid little HANDBOOK which tells the story back of these great songs.

Christ's Spirit is Expressed in City of Vienna

(Below Walter Adrian and Elizabeth Boehr, M.C.C. relief workers in Vienna, Austria, tell a bit about the varied relief work being carried on by Mennonites in the beautiful, old city of Vienna, where hunger now gnaws at people. The work described here is but a large and varied program being carried on.)

WARM NOON MEAL FOR TEN THOUSAND OLD PEOPLE

by Walter Adrian

Since the beginning of last October and continuing until the later part of May, ten thousand old people in the twenty-six districts of greater Vienna have enjoyed a warm noon meal through the love and generosity of people from other lands. The so-called Old People Feeding Program was started by the Swiss Quakers and soon aided by the Danish Red Cross and the Mennonite Central Committee.

To qualify for such a program the recipient must be seventy years of age or over, without an income, and approved after thorough investigation by the social worker of the city district in which the person resides. A monthly meal card is then issued to the person which entitles him to one warm meal per day until further notice.

An average meal consists of a fourth liter (a cup) of soup, a half liter of the main dish usually a vegetable mixed with some meat or cheese, and a "semmel, salzatangel, or kipfel" (the Viennese equivalent for a piece of bread). During the very cold weather the soup was often substituted for a hot drink such as cocoa sweetened with honey or coffee made with a bit of sugar and lots of hot milk.

While the supervision of the fifty-five feeding stations in Vienna is divided among the three participating relief agencies, the food contributions of these agencies are pooled and prepared in a huge kitchen maintained for this purpose by the city of Vienna. A member of the Swiss Quakers has assumed direct supervision of the kitchen and the menus while the other two agencies are consulted before any major changes occur. The hot food from the central kitchen is transported in huge thermos cans to the feeding stations by city trucks.

To say that these ten thousand old people are grateful for this aid is expressing it in a very mild form. It is only regrettable that those of you in the Mennonite churches who have given so generously and unstintingly "in the name of Christ" cannot be here to receive in person the numerous "Vergelt's Gott" that pour from the thankful lips of these needy people. Often while going about the city or traveling in the crowded streets cars one is greeted by some of "our" old people. You may be sure that many of them have in a good measure caught the love of Christ which you sent with the cans and cartons "In the Name of Christ."—Walter Adrian

SEMMELWEIS CHILDREN'S HOME

by Elizabeth Boehr

This children's home is the only one of its kind in Austria. Probably we would speak of it as a foundling's home. There are six hundred children here between the ages 0—3 years. These institutions have suffered much during the war. Among these babies all nationalities are present. Babies are on the increase, and food and clothing very scarce. Mr. van den Berg and I visited these little unfortunates.

We asked what was most needed. They told us they had about one thousand diapers on hand, some little shirts and kimonos and very few stockings.

Children in the Semmelweis Children's Home dressed in clothing sent by the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California.

The clothing supply was badly worn. In normal times they had a supply of seven thousand diapers alone on hand for the size of the home. Institutions of all kinds always beg for soap. It is so scarce.

We decided to give them a supply of baby clothing from our clothing center. These children get medical care; as far as possible the mothers care of them during the period of nursing; food and clothing is provided up to the third birthday. If the child has not been adopted by some family, then it is placed in one of the children's homes of the city.

Many of these children are not well and strong, but they are sweet and well cared for.

We were reminded of Christ saying:" What you have done to the least of these you have done it unto me." The clothing for children that has been sent by so many of our churches is surely filling a real need. May God bless all the givers.

The Austrian unit sends greetings to all the churches at home.—Sincerely, Elizabeth Boehr

his American brethren by his hesitancy in regard to paying taxes to a state that uses so much of them for war. Such heart-searching is in place. However, his radical emphasis upon nonparticipation in government might suggest that Mennonites should believe that government is of God but that unbelievers should run it. More positive was another thought expressed at the conference, namely, regardless of the degree of Mennonite participation in government, Mennonites ought to be as a conscience to the state. The problem of church-state relationships is one that needs much more attention by Mennonites who have not only believed in separation from the state but frequently have separated themselves from their fellow citizens as well in religious matters.

Non-resistance Reconsidered by European Mennonites

Cheering is the news that non-resistance is being reconsidered in Germany, France, and Holland. One hundred seventy Mennonites in Holland have taken the C.O. position. These are supported by 40 per cent of the pastors. There is a growing conviction in Germany and France. A German conference passed a resolution requesting that there be a constitutional provision for C.O.'s and some provision for alternate service. A French leader made a strong plea for non-resistance at a recent conference.

No Discussion of "Push-button War"

The conference did not discuss the implications of a "push button" war fought with the atomic bomb and bacteria, etc. It talked much of the traditional peace testimony, but gave little consideration to the fact that another war might not leave very many to give a testimony. It was suggested that we make no claims to bringing about world peace, but it should also have been stated that God can do great things in and through those who have faith.

Stress Impact of Mennonite Colleges

The impact that Mennonite colleges have made upon the Mennonite Church was brought out in a paper by Dr. E. G. Kaufman. According to this paper Bethel, Goshen, Bluffton, Freeman, Tabor, Hesston, Eastern, Rosthern, Gretna, Messiah, and Beulah colleges in 1947-48 conferred the Bachelor's Degree upon 274 young people, of whom 241 are Mennonites. "In their entire history these schools have had 3,488 graduates of the liberal arts course, of whom 2,612 were Mennonites. Of these college graduates, approximately seven hundred went into teaching, three hundred into the ministry, 250 into mission work, and approximately two hundred of them entered the medical profession . . . . A careful and conservative estimate of the total enrollment of all our colleges during the half century of their existence indicates that over 35,000 young people have attended as students . . ." Further importance of the church schools was indicated by the statement that one of the first aims of the newly founded General Conference in 1860 was the organization of an educational institution for promoting Mennonite union "as well as to Mennonite participation in the spreading of the Gospel or mission work." It is clear that the Mennonite colleges have contributed very notably to the leadership of the Mennonite Church.

Dutch Mennonites Not Isolated

W. Leendertz, professor of the Mennonite Seminary in Amsterdam, Holland, made a very strong and frank case for Mennonites being more in the world even though not of it. He pointed out how in Holland there are no Mennonite colleges and how Mennonites generally mix with Roman Catholics, Reformed, Lutherans, Communists, etc., as they attend the University of which the Seminary is a part. He showed how the Dutch Mennonites mix freely with others and how as a result they have opportunities for witnessing which they could not have if they lived in a community unto themselves or attended a Mennonite school.

Perhaps, the American way of striving to keep the faith by separation and the Dutch practice of mixing ought to be fused together. Certainly American Mennonites need to mix with others to share what they have.

Survey of Foreign Missions

The field of foreign missions was surveyed in a masterful and comprehensive way by Dr. S. F. Pannabecker. His statement that the early brethren carried on such an intense program of witnessing that it might have become a great missionary movement (similar to that of the eighteenth century) had it not been suppressed by perecution should be a challenge to Mennonites of today to witness more to all those they can reach. Significant was his picture of the young mission churches, who now have pastors and administrators of their own and can send Christians to the older churches to invigorate them. Also significant was Brother Pannabecker's conviction that relief work and mission work must be more thoroughly integrated for the benefit of both. This presentation by the president of the Mennonite Seminary might well be used for foreign mission boards for formulating their policies.

Messages on Evangelism

The conference also heard about evangelism in a talk on "Biblical Evangelism" by H. H. Janzen, Winnipeg, Manitoba. Although Mennonites have lived rather aloof from others they cannot get away from the fact that they ought to be bearers of the Good News.

Pictures Mennonite Migrations

Dr. Cornelius Krahn, professor of church history at Bethel College, helped many to get a mental picture of Mennonite migrations by depicting them on large charts. It was interesting that Mennonites migrated not only for religious reasons but also economic ones.

The Prussian Mennonites a Concrete Example

American Mennonites who particularly enjoy economic prosperity and at the same time feel that Mennonites "owe" the government military service because of privileges and opportunities enjoyed can see what kind of a harvest they help to bring on by looking at the German Mennonites. Brother Emil Haendiges in tracing the loss of non-resistance among the German Mennonites put their attitude in a nutshell by quoting a statement of the Danzig Church as of 1886:

"According to the teachings of Jesus Christ and His apostles, we attempt, as far as it is possible for us, to live in peace with all men, also do we consider any war a great disaster for mankind. We hope that peace may reign among the nations and consider it our Christian duty to cooperate to this end. However, we do not refuse to submit to universal military service, because we feel indebted to the nation to which we belong and which protects us, considering it our duty to preserve its rights, prosperity, and very existence, even with our lives. Whenever the nation calls for military service, we leave it up to the conscience of each individual, in which legally acceptable manner he is going to fulfill his duty."

What a warning there is in this! American Mennonites who like to prosper and take the above attitude are contributing to a coming catastrophe for American Mennonites, for they that take the sword shall perish by it.

From a distance we can easily see how vitally the welfare of mankind was affected by the kind of decision that German Christians, including Mennonites, made in regard to militarism. This was a matter of intense religious significance. Striking therefore it is to learn that the German Mennonites very zealously kept up young people's work in the "Biblical spirit" and also other activities that fitted in better with the national picture. The history of the German Mennonites suggests rather clearly how easy it is for Christians to neglect the great expressions of the Christian spirit by remaining zealous about lesser things.

Refugee Work a Thrilling Story

Particularly stirring were the papers on the refugee and resettlement work. The listener could not help feeling that men like C. F. Klassen and others were right in the forefront of a great creative work that affected the happiness and welfare of thousands of Mennonites who have suffered severely. The story of refugee work is a story of heroic doing. It is a continuous series of problems and their solution. Unfamiliar with government men and activities, Mennonites also thrilled to hear how refugee workers cooperate successfully with such government men as those in the International Refugee Organization. The leaders of the I.R.O. have been very sympathetic to the Mennonite program. Furthermore, they have remarked about the way that Mennonites pray their way through difficulties. While others who had written agreements with the I.R.O. couldn't accomplish much, the Mennonites who had no such

World Conference a Great Occasion

On the evening of August 8 a steady stream of cars turned into the little village of North Newton, Kansas, and soon filled block after block. From three to four thousand Mennonites of all kinds poured out of the cars and hurried to the large Memorial Hall for the third session of the Fourth Mennonite World Conference, the first one to be held in America. Shoulder to shoulder they sat in the large hall, feeling themselves a part of a great work and a high purpose.

And so the days followed. There was a world feeling. The Mennonite Central Committee had brought Mennonites from Holland, Germany, France, Switzerland, Paraguay, Brazil, etc., to this conference. Since the German representatives were not allowed to take funds out of the country, the M.C.C. paid all their expenses. There was Emil Haendiges of Monsheim, Germany; Samuel Gerber of Les Rouges-Terres, Switzerland; W. Leendertz, Amsterdam, Holland; and other leaders in the life of the Mennonites in other countries.

German and English were the two conference languages. Some of the German did not sound quite like American Mennonites are used to it, and some of the European English lacked Americanization, but the difficulties were not insurmountable.

With a tinge of sadness Mennonites bade farewell to each other after four memorable days to return to Canada, California, Minnesota, Dakota, Pennsylvania, and other states and parts of the world. The feeling of a large family gathering of Mennonites was not soon to be forgotten.

written agreement got things done. The Mennonite attitude counts with these men of govermnent. According to military ruling German nationals cannot leave Germany. However, when Mennonite refugee workers asked permission for Prussian Mennonites, now in the Allied Zones, to join the other members of their families now in Denmark for a proposed migration to Paraguay, authorities gave permits to all except 9 per cent. They made clear that this was an exception to the rule and not a breaking of it. The resettlement problem is still a big one. The movement to Canada is accelerated. In 1947 five hundred went there. Two thousand have already gone there this year, and probably one thousand more will go. The I.R.O. has given assurance that it will help to send a third group of 860 to Paraguay this coming October. Thousands of Mennonites in Europe still await resettlement.

A Heroic Pioneer Life in Paraguay

Messages on the resettlement experiences in Paraguay told of the heroic pioneer life there. J. W Warkentin quoted one mother as saying, "Never have we been so poor but never have we been happier." That is indicative of the spirit of these people who ten thousand strong are hewing out a new homeland for Mennonites. The M.C.C. has discovered that by giving the settlers considerable equipment, large direct maintenance expenses are cut down later on. Here is a clear example of how it is just as Christian to help people make a living as it is to give them continued relief.

Discusses Successful Colonization

J. Winfield Fretz in his paper on "Factors Contributing to the Success and Failure of Mennonite Colonization" defined a successful Mennonite colony as "one which succeeds in establishing and maintaining the distinctive religious principles and practices considered essential to the concept 'Mennonite.' " He listed as factors contributing to success the following: religion, practice of mutual aid, belief and practice of non-conformity, and favorable government laws and concessions.

A Case in Point

Samuel Gerber, in his paper on the Mennonites of Switzerland and France, pointed out how many rural Mennonite families in Switzerland are moving into the cities and are in danger of losing their distinctive virtues. This observation raises the question as to whether Mennonites are not far too often sustained religiously by outward customs and forces rather than by an inner spirit, an inner coming and realization of the Eternal Christ. To be like their Saviour Christians must be able to mix with the publicans and sinners and yet remain pure in spirit.

It Was Uplifting

The conference lifted the thoughts of those who attended to a very high level of faith expressed through life. It gave one the feeling that while many in our land are spending time, energy and money for lesser selfish purposes, the Mennonites are a group of people who are about the Father's will. Many of the good things of the conference must be left unreported here. A book report will be published later.

Mennonites to Resettle 3,000 Refugees

"In the next 10 months we plan to find new homes for more than 3,000 Mennonites refugees from Russia who are now in western Germany," says Cornelius J. Dyck, who represents the Mennonite Central Committee in the British zone. Already the M.C.C., joint service agency for some 17 Mennonite bodies in the United States and Canada, has resettled 5,000 refugees, 3,700 in Paraguay and 1,300 in Canada. Representing a constituency of only 250,000, the M.C.C. is known throughout Germany for its works of charity, which go far beyond helping members of the group. In 1947 the Mennonites shipped more tons of material aid into this country through CRALOG than any other relief agency of whatever size. This means that the M.C.C. alone contributed more than all the groups participating in Church World Service combined. Its teams carry on student feeding programs in all the universities in the British zone, and this fall 16 German students are to be given scholarships in American Mennonite colleges. This summer the committee is sponsoring two international reconstruction camps in Germany.—"The Christian Century"

Peace Publication Again Available

A second edition of the booklet, Before You Decide, by Charles and Hoover, has been published, and copies are therefore again available from the Peace Section, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania. The booklets are priced at 20c per single copy, or 15c each in lots of 12 or more.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

The World Mennonite Conference at Goshen, Indiana, was the major event in the life of the school this week. Virtually, the entire staff was in attendance at the meeting at Goshen. Grace Liu, our student from China appeared on the program which recognized the members of the younger churches in Asia, Africa, and South America.

Rev. Alvin J. Regier, head of the Oklahoma Bible Academy, brought the quartet of that institution here en route to the east where they will present programs on behalf of the Oklahoma Bible Academy. Dr. Ralph C. Kauffman, of the Bethel College faculty, is now in residence for the month of August, representing Bethel at the North Central Association Workshop held on the campus at the University of Chicago.

Don. E. Smucker will spend the next two weeks in California, serving on the faculty of the California Young People's Retreat to be held at Camp Gaines, Miramonte, California. He will also preach at the Upland, Los Angeles, Paso Robles, Schafter, Winton, and Reedley churches. During his appearance in Reedley on August 13 the Mennonite Central Committee is arranging a Peace Institute along the lines of those held in the mid-western and eastern states.

By Paul Goering

August 11. The public was the biggest loser in the recent session of Congress which ended August 7. Political motives overshadowed the real needs for legislation. The Republicans tried to avoid criticism by passing weak housing and inflation-control measures in answer to the President's 11-point legislative program. But major effort and interest was diverted to exposing Communist espionage activity in the government during the war which makes good publicity and embarrasses the Administration.

The Republican leaders refused to follow the advice of Gov. Dewey, their presidential candidate, to amend the recently-passed Displaced Persons bill which discriminates against Jews and Catholics. Dewey could not afford to alienate the large Jewish vote in New York. Sen. Revercomb (R-W. Va.), author of the bill, would not yield to Taft, Ferguson, and Wherry who favored changing the cut-off date which limits assistance to D.P.s entering Germany before December 22, 1945. Most of the Jewish D.P.s now in Germany came there after that date and are automatically excluded.

The recent session and its results is largely a consequence of the conflict between a Democratic Administration and Republican-controlled Congress which is accentuated in an election year. The Republicans did not want to come back to be tested by their new platform and said that they would not do anything. But in refusing to meet the real legislative needs they failed to rise above the political character of Truman. Some observers think they will lose votes for it, too.

Land Agents and Children's Hymns

"Now what would a land agent have to do with a Hymn?" you say.

That is not surprising. We were surprised ourselves. We were going along, proof-reading the galleys for the new book, HANDBOOK FOR THE MENNONITE HYMNARY, when we came to No. 410. Yes, No. 410 in the HYMNARY. The write-up in the HANDBOOK always corresponds to the number in the HYMNARY itself.

We discovered that one verse which the author had written in the original, is omitted in our copy of the HYMNARY and could you guess why! Here is the verse that was omitted:

> The rich man in his castle
> The poor man at his gate,
> God made them high and lowly
> And ordered their estate.

If you had been writing that hymn, would you have omitted that verse?

It is only when you discover that the author of this hymn was the daughter of a very wealthy land agent living in Ireland, and in her day it was only natural that she should think that land agents were in one classification and the "poor man at his gate" must necessarily be in a separate category.

Well, Christian thought possibly has gone a long ways since those days, and it strikes us rather oddly that anyone should write a verse like that. In those days, however, it was perfectly normal. Today that verse would not sound right in a hymn of the Christian church, and it is wisely omitted. Such things are nice to know, because they give us all some sense of the progress that Christian thinking makes through the years. It helps us to "sing with the understanding."

A Peace Team in Saskatchewan

Three young men are spending their summer visiting churches in Saskatchewan presenting programs and discussing the Christian peace teaching of non-resistance. This is a new effort and a new method of raising the issues which deal with the peace position. The team consists of Bruno Epp, Mt. Lehman, British Columbia; Ramon Jantz, Drake, Saskatchewan; and Dave Schroeder, Winnipeg, Manitoba. The following is their report of their experiences. Ed.

As members of the Peace Team we are glad to say that we are happy in the ministry of the Gospel of peace. We are glad to be able to serve in this way, first of all because we have the peace of God in our own hearts, but then also because the teaching of nonresistance is a part of the whole gospel of Christ, and finally because it is a timely and a needed message.

The goal toward which we as a team are working is that we might in some way realize anew the Biblical basis of the teaching of peace as held by our Church, so that it might once again become a vital part of our faith and practice. This goal we are trying to accomplish by various means and methods. Of these we may list a few:

(1) By pointing to Christ as the Center of all peaceful living, and as the source of strength by which our forefathers remained true to the Word.
(2) By pointing out the Biblical basis of our faith.
(3) By showing how our non-resistance is related to our Christian witness.
(4) By encouraging young people to make their decisions on the basis of what is right in the eyes of God.
(5) By discussing some of our shortcomings in the last war and what we can do to improve our witness.
(6) By handing out tracts to stimulate thinking on the subject.
(7) By illustrating how non-resistance can be applied in our daily life.
(8) By pointing out how Christians fight and what weapons they use.

As a team we stand ready to plan with local help a week-end Conference on peace and non-resistance. We also take every opportunity to meet with the young people to discuss any problems that they may have. Wherever possible we conduct a study group with Sunday school teachers, young people's leaders, and ministers and Christian workers on how we can carry on a more continuous peace education. In our work we have had to do Sunday school teaching as well as serve the churches on Sunday mornings, in short — we must be ready for anything that may come along.

For us, as peace team, the night ended at 7:30 a. m. After breakfast there was a period of recreation for the children. One of the members was in charge, dividing the 130 children present into groups, with other members helping. Automatically, we were in the play and therefore had our part of recreation. The time of play lasted approximately an hour. Time was then spent in preparing for a lesson on the "Sermon on the Mount," presented to two classes just half an hour before dinner. Emphasis was laid on the importance of love and a forgiving spirit towards our fellowmen. After dinner was a short period of rest followed by one and one-half hours of recreation. Here we also had the opportunity of stressing peaceful relations in play. Another two classes were given in Bible drill, half an hour each. The time between classes and recreation was spent in preparing for the evening's service to be held in one of the neighboring churches. Being in the particular church only one evening, we each spoke on one topic:

1. Christ, the Center of all peaceful living
2. Christians facing the world today
3. The Biblical basis for non-resistance

After the program, we returned to Rosthern to be ready for the next day's services at the retreat.

Another Day in One of the Churches

In the morning we had opportunity to prepare for following services, do secretarial work, etc. Since we stayed here several days, a meeting with ministers, Sunday school teachers and other Christian workers had been arranged for. The meeting was in form of discussion. Topics discussed were:

1. The Importance and Need of Teaching Non-resistance
2. What Can We Teach?
3. How Do we Teach Non-resistance?
4. Impressions in regard to peace team

For the evening, the young people of the church had planned a social. On the program was a talk on voluntary service, special musical numbers, testimonies and reports by two ex-servicemen and a discussion touching the following subjects:

1. Non-resistance in home
2. Our relation towards others in society
3. Non-resistance applied in work

After the successful program, a lunch was served in the basement of the church. A short period of fellowship was enjoyed.

We believe to have aroused convictions on the subject of non-resistance and hope to have helped young people take a stand in the right direction.

A Log of Events

Saturday, July 3 at 10:30 a. m., the peace team together with the voluntary service unit of the youth farm and one representative for each of the M.C.C. Hospital units of North Battleford and Brandon gave a program at the Young People's Retreat at Rosthern, Saskatchewan.

Monday evening, July 5, we visited the Eigenheim church near Rosthern which was the first on our itinerary. The program consisted of three short talks by the members of our peace team and a solo by a member of the youth farm unit.

The following Sunday morning was spent at Osler church teaching Sunday school and speaking at the morning worship service. In the afternoon we attended an outdoor song festival near Aberdeen and had a meeting in the church in Aberdeen in the evening. This Sunday was typical of the ones that followed. We took part in three services.

Through the week, we have been having one and often two services every day excepting for the one day a week which is spent in study, rest and travel. Especially have we been impressed with the active participation in the informal discussion periods at which time the possibility of a continuous program of peace education was discussed.

Why Go to Church?

Coming to church, like coming to meals, is a good habit to acquire. Spiritual nourishment is as necessary as is the physical. One could get food for the body without bothering about regular meals. Savages, I am told, do not set the table, or ring the dinner bell. They just eat when they are hungry and food is available. But as man rises in culture and civilization, regular meals become a social habit, almost an art. Physicians say that this is a good habit, that it is better to eat regularly in reasonable quantities than to gorge oneself at irregular intervals. Of course even civilized man could get along without regular meals. He could buy some fruit at a peddler's wagon, and later purchase a box of crackers and a pound of cheese at the grocery store, topping it off with a malted milk at the soda fountain! But what a way would that be to live! Civilized folks, I find, prefer table cloths, a balanced menu, good table manners and good fellowship.

Now there are various ways of getting spiritual nourishment. One can wait until tragedy overwhelms him and then reach blindly for some kind of religious help and comfort. One can browse around, take in all the queer religions, sample all the cults, and accept no responsibility anywhere. But that would be like a child trying to get a square meal by sampling everything in a candy store.

The best way to nourish one's soul is to come regularly to church. Join up, make a subscription, enter heartily into the worship service, sing the hymns, listen to the Old Book, bow in prayer, pay attention to the sermon, shake hands with somebody before you leave, talk it over around the dinner table and think about it before you go to sleep at night. Do that regularly, week after week, and you will not suffer from spiritual anemia or religious under-nourishment.—Albert W. Palmer

Serving in Paraguay

By Edmund Zehr,* Flanagan, Illinois

When the job of relief work is examined at close range, it takes on a much different aspect than can be imagined by someone who is farther away. It becomes stripped of its glamour and becomes an everyday job. One often wonders if what is being accomplished is worth the effort and money being spent. One must come to realize that the real worth of relief work can never be judged in dollars.

During my relief term here in Paraguay it was my privilege to spend most of my time with the Mennonite colony of Fernheim in the Chaco. My assignment would be classed as a service work rather than relief work. We usually think of relief work in terms of handing out food and clothing. In Paraguay these needs are not so great. However, we have found that there are other areas in which there is great need and that we as relief workers can help fill them.

The Mennonites here in Paraguay are a different people than the type of folk we know as Mennonites in our country. They have different backgrounds and attitudes. They have a different culture. Their methods of education are different. Sometimes some of these things seem queer to us, and we wonder why they have the attitudes that they do, but these things become clear when they tell of the pain and suffering which they have endured. One cannot help imagining our people at home in the same position and wondering what the outcome would be.

It is our feeling that the Mennonites of Paraguay have a great mission and that they must be made aware of this mission. So far most of their energy has been used in making their living. This will continue to be so, especially with the coming of the new immigrants. In a country which is Catholic in name but with a large percentage of the people making no profession at all, where almost every change of government means a revolution, where everywhere reigns bewilderment and confusion, the need of an example of a firm faith in the way of Love of Jesus is evident. It is this example that the Mennonites can afford, and it is the relief workers who can make them aware of this great mission. Already a mission work has been begun among the Indians of the Chaco, but the Mennonite witness needs to be extended until it reaches all of Paraguay, all of South America.

M.C.C. has had a number of projects aimed at helping the Mennonites in this area and plans for more in the future. So far no active mission work has resulted, but we hope that in the future a work will be started as a result of the hookworm and child-feeding projects. The rural areas are in need of medical service. The Hutterians have taken advantage of this avenue of approach and give medical aid to the Paraguayans in their medical center which was built from M.C.C. funds. They also definitely try to be a Christian witness along with their medical service. We hope that the Mennonite colonies will also be able to serve in this way.

It is also important that the beliefs of the Mennonites be correctly interpreted to the Paraguayans. It is seldom that one meets a Paraguayan who does not know something of the Mennonites. When one speaks to a Paraguayan who finds out that he is speaking to a Mennonite, he is always anxious to know more about the Mennonites. One of the first questions he asks is about the principle of nonresistance. They want to know what it is, why we believe so, and then of course this leads into discussion of other beliefs. It is important that these beliefs be interpreted correctly.

A majority of us have, however, worked directly with the Mennonites in our medical work, in school work, agriculture, and road and telephone construction. Many times it is hard to see that anything beyond the actual service is being accomplished. Once in a while we do get a hint that our efforts are not without results. In one of the colony homes an M.C.C. teacher in one of the schools was being severely criticized. It was said that she could not speak the language correctly, that her methods were inferior to those used by other teachers, and that she did not measure up to the colony standards. One of the pupils in the group, a little girl, then said, "Yes, but if Miss ——— were not here, there wouldn't be anybody to tell us about our heavenly Father."

Another example—an M.C.C. worker was making a trip in a wagon with a colony man. Both were quiet for some time. Finally the colony man turned and said, "Tell me, where do you M.C.C. workers get all of your love." The M.C.C. workers, not knowing exactly what was meant, asked that he explain. He answered, "Well, I have seen M.C.C. workers insulted, made fun of, criticized, rebuked, but it just doesn't seem to make any difference. You keep on working for us and loving us just the same. Tell me how do you do it." It is in these areas that constructive work of lasting value can be done.

With the coming of the new immigrants such witnessing will be needed more than ever. Most of them have departed pretty far from the Mennonite nonresistant principle. Most of the young men have seen army service. The demoralizing influences of the army and of years of lager life which most of them have gone through have made deep inroads on their moral standards. It will be difficult for many of them to get back to normal living again. For some of them the church services here in Paraguay are the

It is a joy to see how eager they are to hear and study the Bible. But nevertheless, Mennonite principles need teaching and interpretation. We can, moreover, be examples to them by living pure, whole-souled Christian. lives. —The Christian Evangel.

Events of Interest to Youth

The first Assembly of the World Council of Churches will meet in Amsterdam, Holland, this August. The Assembly will bring together churches from many nations, speaking many tongues, and observing many practices in worship and organization. The World Council is being organized by Christians convinced that a divided Christendom does not represent the true spirit of Christ.

An All-India Christian Youth Conference is to be held December 24-28. This conference is to be along the lines of the World Conference of Youth held at Oslo, Norway, last summer. There will be five hundred delegates in attendance. They "will attempt to carry forward the message of Oslo, and to provide guidance and direction to Christian youth in the new and free India."

Quo Vadis, a Novel

by Paul Fast, Waterloo, Ontario

The name of the book is "Quo Vadis" and the author is Henryk Sienkiewicz, a Polish author of great skill and versatility. He has a singular style which intrigues the reader and leads him deeper and deeper into the book. The author displays a wide and surprisingly complete knowledge of the Bible, the life of the Apostles, and of life at that time.

The story is of the time of Nero, and opens with a description of the life of the richer class, and the introduction of the two main characters—Petronius, foremost advisor and companion of Nero, and Vinicius, nephew of Petronius.

I will attempt to give you a brief synopsis of the story:

Vinicius, a soldier, was returning to Rome when he broke his arm and was nursed by a rich, kind family, in whose house he falls in love with a Lygian hostage called Lygia,—a Christian. Then in the usual rough and ready ways of that time he has Nero take her into Royal custody and then give her to him. She is forced to attend a feast at which Vinicius becomes drunk and behaves rudely towards her. After the feast she is spirited away by her Christian friends. In the following long and costly search, he hears the teachings of Peter the Apostle, and after a long, hard struggle becomes a Christian. When Rome is burnt it is blamed on the Christians. Nero ordered the conflagration. Then came the great and horrible Christian persecutions in which thousands of Christians died a martyr's death. It makes a person shudder to even read about them. Finally he describes the death of the Apostles, and later of Petronius.

This is frankly the greatest book I've ever read (excluding the greatest of all books, the Bible) and I sincerely hope you will find it is as interesting as I did.

The Church Must Awake

THERE is inertia in Christendom. Somehow we have come to hold the position in the church that the maintenance of institutional Christianity is all that is necessary. We are content with our present form of nationalism, class and race distinction, our economic arrangement and our political and social organization.

The church must awake. The Great Commission, if it had been taken seriously, would never have permitted the church to let well enough alone. It would have been a marching church. In our time the plain people of the whole world are longing for ideas big enough to meet their everyday problems. These ideas and ideals must be big enough to justify the suffering it will cost to bring them into action. They must be practical enough to compete with all the goals of secular nationalism. People are dreaming about the kind of world in which they would like to live. In their best moments they may even be stirred by the ambition to create it. As our ideals become clearer we can begin to move toward them. And yet, we are fully aware that even now we do not live up to what we already know. Somehow there is needed a dynamic, a power to bring this about. The fact that we entered World War II when we did not want war is a good illustration of the lag between man's ability to manage his relationship with other people and the available scientific knowledge. Our post-war action is clear evidence that we are not using the knowledge which psychologists, sociologists and historians have accumulated.

We must become very serious about building a new world. This can be done only by reconditioning the minds of people with respect to the way they behave in their relations with one another. This includes the national, racial, economic and social aspects of man's culture. This is the task of education and religion in our time. This involves teaching and conversion; conversion and teaching. It is time that we need the words of the Great Commission again. We are to teach and to make disicples.

It is clear that by education we try to prepare youth to take their place in society. Education is the torch that lights the way that youth can take. In order to teach the oncoming generation how to live in peace and harmony, education must cover the whole gamut of human experience, including his religious life. This we have left out in our public education. As churches we have not yet taken this matter too seriously. We assume that somehow the children now growing up have as much understanding concerning religious matter as we have, who were reared in an atmosphere of religion in the home and many other educational opportunities where religion became a part of our life. We need to redouble our educational efforts if we are going to prepare youth for the future.

As vital as education is for the individual and for the rebuilding of a new social order, it is not enough. This is true because man always acts according to what he worships. If he worships that which is unworthy, he, and with him society, begins to degenerate. If he worships only technology and scientific developments, the dignity of man is

Christian Education Emphasis Period

August 29 through September 26 has again been set aside by the Board of Education in an effort to give special emphasis to the task of Christian Education both in the local church school and the task of higher education in our colleges and seminary. For many years the last Sunday in August has been known as Christian Education Sunday, consequently August 29 will this year be known as such. The Board earnestly requests and hopes that the cause of Christian Education will be presented in all our churches on that Sunday or a subsequent Sunday. Suggestions for observance and related materials have been mailed to all pastors in the hope that special services will be conducted in the churches for this cause.

It is hoped that one of the results of such a concentrated period of emphasis on Christian Education will instill in all of us a new appreciation and concern for the welfare of all who have a part in this great task, in our Sunday Schools, Vacation Bible Schools, Week Day Religious Schools, Colleges and Seminary.

ignored, and man finally becomes only a pawn in the hands of a few who are in power. It is impossible for society to endure without moral sanctions. A nation without God and morality finally ends in tyranny. It is only religion which can furnish the dynamic to bring into action the everlasting values of kindliness, integrity, community mindedness, love and concern for one's fellowman. Individuals can achieve only through religion an integration of body, mind, and spirit. This is what conversion must do for us. It brings us peace with God through Jesus Christ. It brings us peace with ourselves. As a man looks into the face of Jesus Christ as his Saviour and Lord, his motives are changed, his actions become new, he finds a great loyalty and a new spirit within. As the individual becomes changed, society is likewise changed. As the number of changed persons increases the effect upon society becomes greater.

Let the church awake and convert and teach. The Great Commission still bids us go.—D. C. Wedel

The Board of Education of the General Conference

THE Board of Education of the General Conference is composed of six members elected by the General Conference, for six-year terms. The function of the Board is general oversight of all educational activities of the church. These activities fall roughly into three categories, (1) Coordination of educational activities. (2) Initiation of activities and provision of materials where it seems imperative that such action be taken by some central group. (3) Promotional activities, keeping before the layman the importance of the educational activities of the church.

Under its coordinating functions, the Board attempts to relate the activities of educational committees of the various districts to the work of the General Conference and to each other. Much work still remains to be done along this line. Some efforts have been made to coordinate young people's retreat activities. A sub-committee, the Inter School Committee, is working in the field of coordinating the activities of the various schools, including academies, colleges, and the seminary. A beginning is being made in coordinating nursing education in the Mennonite institutions.

In the field of initiation of activities and furnishing materials, much work is being done through a sub-committee, the Curriculum Committee. More detail concerning its activities will be found in another article. It is sufficient at the point to mention that this committee is overseeing the production of Sunday school supplies and will soon have ready for publication an adapted edition of the (Old) Mennonite Daily Vacation Bible School material for our use. The committee also has before it the publication of a junior hymnal and a manual to go with the Mennonite Hymnary.

There are other areas too where a group larger than the individual church or district is needed to promote educational activities and in which the Board

The Task of the Curriculum Committee

By Paul R. Shelly

THE curriculum committee is entrusted with the task, of providing materials for all of the divisions of the Church, so that our Christian faith may be taught in its fulness and purity to all age groups in each department of the Church.

What Has Been Accomplished

The curriculum committee has evaluated the existing quarterlies and has been attempting to improve them. They have introduced the Young People's quarterly. They have also suggested a curriculum for both the uniform and graded series for the year 1948. Topics have been sent out to all of the youth organizations with suggested materials for meetings.

Releases This Fall

Two publications will be made available this fall. The first is a pamphlet entitled: "What Wouldst Thou Have Me Do?" This deals with the call of God to all people, particularly to full-time work in the Church. The question of what constitutes a call is discussed as well as the need and challenge for Christian service. A somewhat detailed list of opportunities available in the General Conference is also included in this publication. A second publication will also be sent to each youth organization. This will give thirteen program suggestions for the booklet: "The Power of Love." These include worship material, topics for discussion, and suitable visual aids. Since the way of love is again being threatened today, some youth organizations may want to spent a quarter for this booklet.

Thou Shalt Write

The boards of Education and Publication of the General Conference have planned to employ someone on a full-time basis to write in the field of Junior materials. The person should have a college education, some teaching experience in the elementary field, and some Biblical training. All of these qualifications are not entirely essential for if a person has an interest, aptitude, and call for this kind of work, additional training could be secured.

Any one interested in this kind of work is asked to prepare a sample lesson for January 30, 1949. The theme for this Sunday is: "The Temptation of Jesus" with the special Junior topic "Jesus Makes a Great Choice." The Scripture is found in Luke 4:1-13 with the printed part in Luke 4:3-12. The memory selection is found in Hebrews 4:14-15. It will be well to follow the general pattern which has been used by Mrs. E. J. Miller and Mrs. Don Smucker. If you do not have past copies of the Junior quarterlies or if you have any other questions write to Ronald von Riesen, 4614 Woodlawn, Chicago, Illinois. This sample lesson should include the work for the pupils as well as suggestions for the teacher and should be sent to the above address not later than October 1. If you know of someone in your community that we should contact personally we would appreciate having you send in the name and address.

We have been commissioned by our Lord to "teach all things" and we need to get a new vision in the area of using the talent of writing for our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. We need to realize that this too is one of the fields to which God calls people to full-time servise for Him. If God has given you a talent in this area we need you and urge you to respond.

takes initiative. These areas include arrangements for the foreign student exchange program, the educational rehabilitation of former CPS men, minister's retreats, and a conference visual aids Library. Any work in the educational program of the church which needs to be done by a group larger than the local church or district would fall within the province of the Board.

It is also the function of the Board to keep the cause of Christian education before the people of the church. This is done through articles in The Mennonite, through special bulletins and information materials published from time to time, and through the special Christian Education Emphasis Period, which this year extends from August 29 to September 26.

The Young People's Union works under the general supervision of the Board of Education. The Executive Secretary of the Board attends all meetings of the Executive Committee of the Union and acts as its advisor.

As mentioned previously, two sub-committees work under the Board, the Inter-School committee being largely for the purpose of coordination and recommendation of activities related to the schools and the Curriculum Committee in charge of publication and selection of educational materials for the local church schools. Neither of these committees has any power to take independent action, but all recommendations must be approved by the Board itself.

This, in brief, is the work of the Board of Education. Meetings are held annually at the time of the meeting of the Council of Church Boards. An office is maintained at Newton in charge of the Executive Secretary, Rev. Ronald von Riesen. Members of the Board solicit your prayerful consideration of the work done, your suggestions, and your support in this very important task of Christian Education.

Mennonite Biblical Seminary

Trust in the Lord . . . and He will bring it to pass.
Ps. 37:3-5.

THE Seminary was established for the purpose of training men and women to serve the cause of of Christ through the Mennonite Church. Such training demands a spiritual preparation—the nourishing of a Christian spirit and attitude—and an academic preparation—the equipping with information and techniques for service. Young people consecrated and with a call to service in the Kingdom are invited to participate in the program of the Seminary.

Two educational levels are represented in the school. The graduate seminary trains men who have completed college for full time religious service—ministerial, missionary and educational. The Bible school provides a training for positions where graduate training is not necessary, such as lay workers assisting in church music, religious education, or part time pastoral duties in small churches. No differences between the two groups is recognized in fellowship or in ideals of consecration or service.

The location in Chicago has been found favorable to wide contacts and facility in reaching Mennonite congregations and welcoming Mennonite visitors. Cook County Hospital with its three thousand beds became a training ground for practical visitation work under the direction of the hospital chaplain. Sever churches within a radius of two hundred miles were served regularly by seminary students, while intermittent visits were made to many others. Visitors have come individually and in groups for retreats, committee meetings, conferences, including the Council of Boards, so that the Seminary location is becoming widely known.

Ministers and officers from the General Conference have assisted at chapel services, vespers, and other special occasions. Three special speakers who made notable contributions were Bishop George Lapp from the India mission of the (Old) Mennonites, Miss Muriel Lester, and Dr. Franklin H. Littell who spoke on the Anabaptist Conception of the Church. The last mentioned is also engaged to conduct a two-hour seminar in the spring quarter of 1949 in the same field.

The physical plant has been further expanded during the last school year through the addition of a ten-room house and a three-unit apartment house.

THE FACULTY

The former, purchased through assistance outside of Seminary funds is for the entertainment of Mennonite students not attending the Seminary; the latter provides additional student housing. In view of the growth of the Seminary family both of these moves were very fortunate. For the next year seventeen new students have indicated their intention of attending. This will bring the student body up to a total of between thirty-five and forty. Additional family members will mean the housing of eighty to ninety people.

Development in the lines suggested above has been accompanied by a growth in financial assets. The net worth of the Seminary as of June 1 was over $92,000 as compared with $66,000 a year previous. Progress is being made in liquidating liabilities incurred in the building expansion. At the end of June it was possible to celebrate the close of the first phase of the financial campaign in which $25,000 had been raised for debt liquidation and expansion. The raising of a similar amount in the succeeding months of the year will cover the latest purchase and needed remodeling.

Some success in meeting the aims of the Seminary is found in the men already in the field. Six graduates are now in service, one in the pastorate, two in missionary service, and three in church schools. Others in the graduating class of next year have already been called to pastorates where they will serve while completing their studies.

It is these men living the gospel and leading in its presentation in their communities for which the Seminary was founded. The world desperately needs the gospel of Jesus Christ. Let us unite in presenting it.

Bethel College

DURING the past school year 695 different students from twenty-two states and eight countries attended Bethel College. This figure includes 136 pre-college music students. A more rigid policy of selection is being carried out for the coming school year, so a definite decline in enrollment is expected. Bethel College is trying to provide housing facilities for a maximum of four hundred resident students. This number plus a maximum of one hundred commuting students should be large enough for the development of a stimulating Christian family spirit on the campus.

The 1947-48 Bethel College Memorial Hall Series of educational entertainment attracted families from a radius of one hundred miles. This year evening programs were given by Juvenile Judge Camille Kelley, Louis Utermeyer, the Chicago Little Philharmonic Orchestra, and the Westminster Choir. For the coming school year Cornelia Otis Skinner, Seumas McManus, The Guardsmen Quartet, and The One World Ensemble have been engaged. One or two additional programs may be added to the series later.

Bethel College is concerned about the current trend toward World War III. Only as we share in the task of teaching "all nations . . . . to observe all things" Christ has commanded, do we feel that the existence of a church college is important. Therefore we seek the prayerful concern of friends everywhere that we shall have the courage to remain true to our historic Christian faith.

Bethel Aims to offer promising youth a thorough college education plus the full Gospel of Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord as the ideal foundation for every worthy vocation. This plus element is vital, for education without Christ and a concern for welfare of all mankind results in imperialism. power politics, and war.

Bethel is Accredited by the State Board of Education and by the North Central Association.

Bethel Welcomes students whose character references, academic records and personal aims meet Bethel's requirements and whose applications for admission have been approved. Bethel College seeks to overcome barriers of race, class, and creed. There are no sororities and no fraternities at Bethel College.

How Much Does it Cost to Attend Bethel? The cost of tuition, fees, room, and board for three quarters (nine months) is approximately six hundred dollars. Private music lessons would increase this cost. For commuting students the cost of tuition and fees is $300.

Is Financial Aid Available? Grant-in-Aid, scholarships, loan funds, and part-time work contracts are available for a limited number of worthy and needy students. Application blanks are sent upon request to prospective students desiring special financial aid.

Why Attend a Church College? A Courgeous church college is a bulwark of Christian democracy, for it teaches all courses in harmony with basic Christian convictions. It trains youth for world reconstruction.

Would I Feel at Home at Bethel College? Yes if you want to get a well-balanced, Christian, college education. No, if your ambitions are purely selfish and you have no desire to let God's will influence the plans for your life. Yes, if you wish to become a vital member of the Bethel family. Yes, if you enjoy a combination of study, work, worship, and play.

How May I Apply for Admission? Simply write to the Public Relations Department, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, and make known your desire to apply for admission to Bethel College. You will receive an application blank which you should fill in and return to the Office of the Dean.

Applications for grants-in-aid, scholarship, work, and room reservations may be sent in at the same time, but they are given consideration after the applacation for admission has been received and approved.

FRIENDS of Christian Education are interested in the developments which take place in our schools. The youngest child is glad to report on the progress that has been made within its halls and tell of the blessings which God has bestowed upon it.

It is our conviction that God has undertaken a work in our Canadian Conference that will be of great signifcance in the history and work of the Church. We have not accomplished everything that one would like to see in such an institution but have sought to take one step at a time. It has been a joy to pioneer in this field with the wholehearted cooperation of the students, fellow faculty members, and with the interest of many friends. Library study habits, student organization and activities, devotional life, Christian service projects, all are a part of this total program.

Field of Instruction

At the meeting of the College Board in January a Committee was appointed to study and work out further a plan of instruction. The courses of instruction can be divided into four departments. These are listed as Bible, Christian Education, Arts, and Social Sciences. An endeavor has been made to present a well-rounded curriculum in these fields of study.

Our College plans to offer work toward two degrees, Bachelor of Theology and Bachelor of Christian Education. The work toward a Bachelor of Theology is considered to be a more specialized course for ministerial students, while the work toward the latter is more general in scope. The Committee hopes that these two courses will meet the needs of many of our Canadian young people who are interested in further preparing themselves for active Christian service.

Scholastic Standards

A great effort has been made to build a good and workable library. Since we do not have a librarian, the organization of books and the carrying out of library rules has been done with the help of two student librarians. The students have learned to appreciate the value of good books and so spend most of their study hours in the library.

It has been our concern to keep a high scholastic standard to that our sister colleges can recognize the work by the students toward a Bachelor of Arts degree. The instructors have sought to acquaint the students with various sources of reference materials in the different fields of instruction. However, a conscious effort also has been to share with students a spiritual warmth throughout all classes. Personal counseling has been an integral part of school life. We, as instructors, hope that we can help the students find the deeper spiritual insights in God's Word, and understand the truths in the light of daily experiences and findings of our day.

Student Activities

A Student Council was elected at the beginning of the school year to plan various activities. The Council met regularly with the Principal of the College in an effort to deliberate and carry out a well-rounded program. Other student committees were then appointed to work with members of the Council in promoting these activities. The three main phases of student activities were centered in devotional life, social and recreational activities and Christian service.

A feeling of responsibility has always been manifested among the students during the past school year. All have been aware that the things which were done during the first year would influence the student's undertakings of future years. The fine Christian spirit and co-operative effort on the part of the students have made our school year a very enjoyable one. A family spirit has prevailed at all times.

During the school year we have had as our theme "We would see Jesus." It has inspired us in our studies, in our activities and in the deputation work. It has been our aim to see Jesus in every phase of college life.

Bluffton College

DURING the past year Bluffton College has served the largest number of students that it has had in any year of its history. It has continuously striven to help these students to become wide awake, active, working young people, deeply committed to Christ, intelligently integrating the whole of their lives about Christian Truth. An intense effort is made to create a sensitivity to the problems in their world and to help students to apply Christian principles to the solution of these problems.

Bluffton also strives to be a strong force in the support of the Church, both by providing a center of church leadership and through developing leaders among its students, both as future laymen and in full time church vocations. Deep personal commitment is necessary to achieve this goal, as well as a zeal for the extension of the church and the promulgation of its message.

Again this past year one of the highlights was the Bible Lecture week. The messages were brought by Dr. Charles T. Fritsch of Princeton Seminary, and were drawn from Old Testament texts. Rev. Andrew Shelly was the speaker for the spring Christian Life week.

There was active work throughout the year for peace through understanding and mutual helpfulness. In the name of the Administration Committee all alumni were circularized calling their attention to the dangers of conscription and Universal Military Training. Students organized to send one of their number to Washington, D. C., to help to work against such legislation. In many ways the college attempts to teach Christian way of love and consideration for others as the way to live at peace with one's fellowman. Relief activities were promoted through drives for CARE packages, clothing collection, and soap making.

The faculty has continued cooperation with the North Central study group, concentrating its efforts largely on general education. This is the term applied to the organization of the curriculum in such a way that every student is certain to secure a broad understanding of the various fields of learning in addition to his field of specialization. As a result of this study several new courses, required in the first two years of college work, are to be offered this fall.

Extensive work has been done during the year in building improvement. Science Hall has been redecorated and the entrance remodeled in such a way as to make room for two offices. In College Hall new administrative offices have been constructed on the first floor and arrangements made for additional classroom space on the second floor. A new floor is being laid in the dining hall. New concrete walks are being made to replace some that had cracked badly in the approach to Science Hall.

One of the primary needs of the college is additional staff members who are deeply committed to Christ and Christian education, know how to work with and inspire young people, and have secured their Ph.D. degree. Efforts are being made to solve this problem over a period of years. Several young men are now in graduate school getting ready for faculty posts at Bluffton. In some cases financial assistance is being given for this study on a loan basis, the loan to be cancelled by a period of service to the college.

The need for greater financial support is closely tied in with this need for additional staff members. It takes a remarkable spirit of sacrifice to be willing to spend time, effort, and money to get an advanced degree when the financial remuneration offered after having achieved the doctorate is less than is offered young people just out of college by some of our better high schools. The church is asking prospective faculty members to make sacrifices which few church members would be willing to make themselves. Many college faculty members are contributing the equivalent of one thousand dollars per year by working for that much less than they could secure in other educational institutions. The only answer is in terms of greater sacrifice on the part of all, so that a few will not have to bear so large a proportion of the burden.

There are also building needs. A campaign is now underway to raise funds for the erection of an auditorium-physical education building. Other Mennonite colleges either have rather recent buildings of this type or now have them under construction. Bluffton has slightly more than half of the funds raised to meet this need. Other buildings must follow in due time, such as a music hall, additional dormitory space, and better facilities for a health center.

We ask your prayers for the support and guidance of the college.

Freeman Junior College

THE aim of Freeman Junior College is to provide young people with an education under the influence of Christian instructors and surroundings and to supplement that general education with special courses devoted to a study of the Bible and of Christian precepts. Believing that the religious influence in education dare not be postponed until early adulthood every effort is made to encourage parents to enroll their children at Freeman upon completion of the grammar grades.

During the past year many things were planned and accomplished. Overshadowing all other events, however, was the work and planning that went into the present building program going on on the campus. This includes a Boys' Dormitory and a new Auditorium-Gymnasium. Much building material was secured through the purchase of War Surplus Materials, and much labor was donated by school friends in the complicated process of bringing this material to the campus as well as in the many other tasks in which donated labor could be used.

As the building program occupied a major position in the past year, so it will of necessity continue to do during the coming year. Finishing touches are being put on the Boys' Dormitory which provides housing for sixteen boys and has two apartments for faculty families. Work will be carried on to finish this building by installing a furnace and by making a recreation room in the basement. Work on the new auditorium, the foundation for which has just been completed, will be carried on as fast as possible. The building is 180 feet long and 76 feet wide and when completed will be of great use not only to the school but to the whole community. According to present plans the basement will house—besides the necessary heating unit and showers—a kitchen and a dining hall, as well as mens' and womens' rest rooms and lounges. The main floor of this building provides the auditorium, part of which will be used for the basketball court. Besides the stage and dressing rooms there will also be room for the Book Store and for several music practice rooms.

Work on decorating and painting rooms, halls, and offices in the Administration Building is in progress. The dwelling house on the school farm will also be renovated.

Among immediate and urgent needs of the school are the following: at least thirty thousand dollars in addition to present funds are needed to complete the new auditorium; an expanded library—both as to material and space available for that material is necessary; and contributions are needed for redecorating and for replacing obsolete and inadequate plumbing in the two girls' dormitories.

With the addition of Richard K. Berky, 1948 Bluffton College graduate, as instructor of Chemistry and Mathematics, the faculty staff for the coming year has been completed. Besides Rev. Edmund J. Miller, who was recently installed as president of Freeman Junior College the following will serve on the faculty: Dr. Harold H. Gross—Dean of College, Philosophy and Phychology; Benjamin P. Waltner—Registrar, Biology and Agriculture; Edwin P. Graber—Principal of Academy, Sociology, Economics; Richard K. Berky—Chemistry and Mathematics; Esther Bohn—English and Art; John H. Ewert—Dean of Men, Education; Mrs. Oscar Gering—Piano; Orlando J. Goering—Bible; Katherine Kaufman—English and Speech; Louis L. Linischeid—Manual Arts; Adeline H. Quiring—Commerce; Elva Ratzlaff—Dean of Women, Home Economics; Gerhard J. Toews—Mechanical Arts, Manager Bookstore and Museum; Dr. John D. Unruh—History (absent on leave); Elvera Voth—Music; Marie J. Waldner—History and German; Vernon R. Wiebe, Physical Education, Coach.

To these men and women will fall the major task of carrying on the great task of Christian Education in this community, but they urgently need the active help and co-operation of all Christian friends of the school. Above all, President Miller and his faculty plead for your prayers and for God's guiding spirit and blessing for the great work of training young people in Christian living and Christian service.

Rosthern Junior College

THE Rosthern Junior College has functioned last winter with six teachers in charge and 154 students enrolled.

The problems that our school faces are not by any means unique. They have been partly solved by brotherhoods across the borders, and they are occupying the keenest minds of our leaders in Canada.

In the beginning the problem was to prepare teachers for our district schools and to give a general education with some German and Bible to those young people who stood a chance of being elected to the ministry or of serving in some other capacity in their congregations. The people lived more or less in closed settlements, and language and social barriers seemed to safeguard the future of the brotherhood as such. At present the picture has changed considerably. Language barriers do hardly exist, and social barriers are disappearing more and more. The "salt" is scattered into the world. May it prove its worth!

We have many students whose parents are living in non-Mennonite communities. In their struggle for existence they have little time to devote to their children. When these grow up parents discover that their children are different from the time when they were young. They often wish that the school would change these young people into their own likeness of years ago. But this cannot be done.

We have to interpret our present life as it is in terms of Christian living. This is our biggest problem. We have to face the present such as it is. If we want our boys and girls to go out and make the fullest contribution to the life of their day we have to educate them accordingly.

The high schools of this province are receiving a good deal of attention from our present Socialist government. A great deal of money is being invested to create the facilities to give the youth of Saskatchewan an education in keeping with the philosophy of life which has little room for the spiritual welfare of the child.

Our brotherhood feels that the principles of life which we have inherited from our forefathers should form an integral part of the education of our boys and girls. Many of high school age cannot be reached because of local patriotism which keeps them in their home town schools. Another year of school above grade twelve would open the door for many of this group to come and acquaint themselves with the heritage of their fathers. It is for this purpose as well as for many others that a full Junior College course is to be offered next term.

The problem of accommodation for the large enrollment of recent years is also rather pressing. The government is modernizing the high schools of the province. Our school building is hopelessly inadequate to meet these requirements. But where there is a will, there is a way, and this time the way seems to be pointed out by one of our board members who has offered to donate the bricks for a new school which shall stand as a monument to the great services rendered our people by the late Bishop David Toews. With the bricks waiting for delivery, it is only a matter of doors and windows and a few minor accessories to complete the project. This will only be a matter of time (and a short time, we hope).

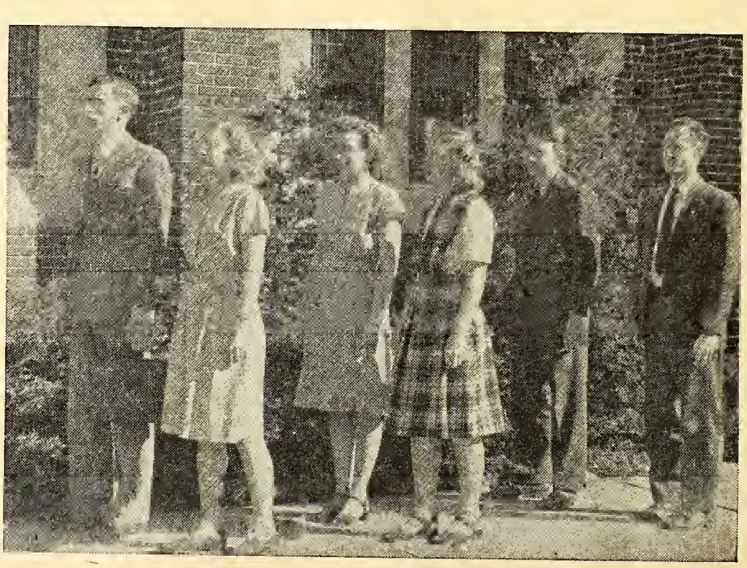
Why I Chose a Church College

by Joanna Bower, Topeka, Indiana

THE case of Church College versus State College has always been a case for college-age young people to decide, though in my "case," that wasn't the "case" at all (if such a play on words is pardonable.) You see, I knew what I wanted. I wanted not only an education with a diploma, a lot of fun, and a chance to see the world outside my own small town. I wanted an education for living: an education that would help me find the genuine things in life, and which would give me the vision of true happiness through service to others. That's why I wanted to attend a church college—my church college.



I admit a small church school is up against it when it comes to prestige, and the popularity and unmistakable glamour which surrounds a big university. My 4-H friends over the state of Indiana who go to Purdue University can't understand why I want to go to my little college. They ask, "How big is it?" and I answer, "Between three and four hundred." "Have any well-known instructors or heads of departments?" "Not in the sense of popular acclaim, or riches, no." "Music department?" "Small, but good." "Football team?" "Yes." "Win any games?" "Ahhhh-h-h, no." But the questions they don't ask me are the important and deciding ones.

"Who are the students there?" People like me; young people who grew up in Mennonite homes where love and kindness (and work) abounded, where prayer was offered before each meal, where the whole family went to church and sang the old hymns and chorales together. Those are the people with whom I work, laugh, study, worship at Bluffton College. I want to know my people, and to grow in the atmosphere which was begun in my home and should be carried through my early years of college training.

"What are the advantages of a church college?" The kind that doesn't attempt to balance a materialistic ledger. In fact, I don't suppose I'll be able to appreciate fully the contact and training I've had until I have spent a lifetime working with these people — my people — of whom I am a part.

The living religion on campus makes me aware of the vast possibilities for service, and of the wondrous ways in which the Master Teacher instructs us. God is not a swear word, but the name of our Father. Making money isn't our chief concern; finding our true selves in service to others is more important. Gross unconcern for the unhappiness and suffering of the world is not our general attitude; we are concerned and want to do our part in bettering conditions. "Natural" dislike for members of other races or religions is not overlooked. We believe it is unnatural and strive for peaceful unity. Science is not merely dissection of the earth to see what makes it tick. It brings us closer to the miraculous power who so magnificently engineers our complex universe. Success, in the popular sense of the word, is not our chief goal. We seek happiness, in the sense of lasting values, proven friendships, a love of beauty, and appreciation of the fine relationships between men and with God.

These are the questions my friends don't ask me, but they are real questions.

You and I both know that today's world doesn't need or want young people trained to do or be nothing but the center of their own little world. It needs us able and eager to accept responsibilities for rebuilding and recreating right and beauty out of chaos and hopelessness. And where shall we go to find this vision and inspiration? Nowhere, if not to the colleges which live and breathe the rich heritage which is ours as Mennonite youth—the faith of our fathers.

This case shouldn't be a hard one for you to decide, either. It's only natural for you to want to go to your church college, right?—See you there.

The Signs That Persuade Us

Jesse F. Perrin

WHEN a desert traveller was asked how he knew there was a God, he replied, "How do I know whether a camel or a man passed my tent last night? By their footprints on the sand." The psalmist of old declared: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

The evidence of God confronts all thoughtful people, the order of the universe, the beauty of nature, the inescapable inner moral law that will not let men rest or sleep until they have righted as far as is humanly possible wrongs they have done. These, and other observations, are his footprints on the sands of time.

The most convincing sign is the life of a saintly person who lives, moves and has his being in God. How boldly the true Christian spirit stands out in a multitude of petty, bickering, quarrelsome souls. I believe in God partly because my parents taught me to believe in him, partly because I see evidence all around me that points directly to the logical conclusion that God is, that he cares, and works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. I believe in God because thoughts come into my mind and feelings into my heart which I can explain in no better way than to assume that God gave them to me for reasons he knows best.

The prophets saw the evidence of God in the reversals of history. Whenever the wicked prospered and used their profits for sin, waste and luxury they raised their voices in warning: "Only righteousness can endure." "God is not on the side of the strongest battalions. He is on the side of the oppressed." "In the long run, righteousness exalts and sin destroys." This is why, as Walter Horton says, "The prophets invariably in times of selfsatisfied prosperity raise their voices in warnings; but in time of unjust persecution their messages have been glad and hopeful. The hope of a coming Kingdom of God and a coming Messiah was the supreme expression of their assurance that sooner or later, in God's good time, his moral law would be vindicated in history."

God is not mocked. Slowly, painfully, roughly, and kicking and resisting every step of the way, our world is being driven toward the goal of world brotherhood and inter-group good will and understanding.

As we come to know a friend best when we suffer with him, pray with him and share his grief and misfortunes, so we come to know God best when we share troubles and anxieties with him. It is in the dark hours that he proves himself a saving, helping power, a refuge in the time of storm.

We look at the life of Christ, and it reflects as a mirror the love, truth, beauty courage and the infinite compassion, mercy and redemptive suffering of God our Father for us and our salvation. We love and believe because he first loved us.—Onward

Relief in Poland

Needy people in Poland continue to appeal to the relief workers, "We also are without clothing and shoes — can you not help?" It is impossible to give to all who ask, so those most needy must be selected. To send some away empty-handed, and yet give a clear witness to them that this is necessary as part of a relief work "In the Name of Christ," is very difficult.

Aid to Mennonites of British Columbia

The Mennonite Central Committee is taking an interest in the British Columbia, Canada, flood conditions which have inundated a considerable area in which Canadian Mennonites live. It was reported at the special MCC meeting on July 17 that two thousand of the seven thousand settlers in the area were affected, and the loss is estimated to be in excess of one million dollars. The Canadian government and the Canadian Red Cross will probably help in replacing houses and compensating for loss of crops. Other problems in which our people can be of assistance is in providing care for certain elderly families, and in caring for European refugees who had been scheduled to come to British Columbia, but must be received elsewhere now.

Peace Section to help in Draft Problems

The special MCC meeting on July 17 requested the Peace Section in view of the present draft law, (a) to inform our constituency on all the implications and details of the Act of its regulations, (b) to serve all our young men fully in all problems relating to the Act, (c) to stand ready to serve similarly any others needing and desiring such service. (d) to continue the relationship with the National Service Board, and to maintain friendly relations with other agencies concerned with the problems of the Conscientious Objector, (e) to stand ready to meet Selective Service administrators to inform and attempt to clarify our viewpoints and attitudes regarding this Act, its regulations and implications.

The section on counseling and guidance at the national conference on family life resolved that more professionally trained people are needed for family counselling and that counsellors need to help improve conditions which produce the problems that call for counselling.

MISSION SUNDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1948

The Board of Foreign Missions of the General Conference met in Newton, Kansas on August 6 and 7, Many important and urgent matters of business were considered. These matters will be reported in our church papers in due time. Among other items of business, it was decided to designate Sunday, October 10, as Missions Sunday.

A letter is being sent to all pastors and church leaders of congregations of the General Conference, requesting that they make special arrangements to observe this day with appropriate mission messages and special programs which will call attention to the scope, the opportunities, and the results of foreign mission work of the General Conference. Further announcements and information will appear from time to time, stating the present opportunities and the needs of the Board of Foreign Missions and of the mission fields under their supervision.

Pastors, deacons, and members of church committees, please note the day, Sunday, October 10. Plan and pray to make it a great Mission Day in your church. If this day conflicts with a previously arranged program in your church, then designate a Sunday near to October 10 and plan a Mission Day program for that day.

"The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth labourers into His harvest." Luke 10:2. "For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." I Corinthians 16:9.

Daniel J. Unruh, Vice-President

(Written at the request of the Executive Secretary. After September 1, Rev. H. G. Nyce may be address at Pretty Prairie, Kansas.)

NOTE: When writing specify both old and new address.

The Sturdy Rock Rent in Twain

The sturdy rock, for all his strength,
By ragings as is rent in twain;
The marble stone is pierced at length,
With little drops of drizzling rain;
The ox doth yield unto the yoke,
The steel obeyeth the hammer stroke.

The stately stag, that seems so stout,
By yelping hounds at bay is set;
The swiftest bird that flies about,
Is caught at length in fowler's net;
The greatest fish, in deepest brook,
Is soon deceived by subtle hook.

Yea, man himself, unto whose will
All things are bounden to obey;
For all his wit and worthy skill,
Doth fade at length and fall away.
There is nothing but time doth waste;
The heavens, the earth, consume at last.

But virtue sits triumphing still,
Upon the throne of glorious fame;
Though spiteful death man's body kill,
Yet hurts he not his virtuous name.
By life or death what so betides,
The state of virtue never slides.

Present Studies

Three studies are being made at the present time which will result in new material at some later date. A number of leaders have suggested that materials are needed to make the teaching of our catechism more effective. Henry Harder is heading a committee which is making this study. Questionnairies have been sent to the ministers and many of these were returned. A study is being made of the German quarterly in an attempt to discover ways of making it even more useful, particularly to our Canadian brethren. I. I. Friesen is heading this committee. A number of people have suggested the need for a teacher's quarterly. The committee is studying the need for this and the possibility of supplying this need.

Releases in 1949

The big task for 1949 is the publication of our own edition of the new Summer Bible School series of the Old Mennonites. There will be no changes made in the lower age group up to and including Grade 2. We will come out with our own edition of Grades 3, 5, and 7 in time for the school of 1949. This will include our own mission material and our own music. We then plan to come out with Grade 4, 6, and 8 in 1950. We feel that this will make available to our people material that is superior to any that has been used. Mrs. Joanna Andres is doing the editorial work on this and has secured many others to help her. Several units for our young people are being planned, and at least one of these will be ready during 1949. This will be a series of program suggestions for missions. A Junior Hymnal will also be published during the year of 1949.

Future Plans

The curriculum committee is looking forward to producing graded materials beginning in the Junior Age. We are also looking for someone who is trained in the area of children's work to write on a full-time basis for this age group. The committee has been keeping in touch with the curriculum committee and others among the Old Mennonites to discuss mutual issues. Future meetings are also being planned.

Addington, Marion H. "Incantation" (Poem), 27-9 indicates that this poem will be found in issue number 27, on page 9. The dates of the issues which appeared in THE MENNONITE during the year 1947 issues number herewith.

(No issues during the weeks of July 4 and Christmas)

Names of individuals are mentioned only, as a general rule, where such individuals were authors of some article. Each article was cross-indexed by approximately two subject references. The only items appearing in the section "Jottings" were the names of churches and the names of Conference institutions.

This is the second attempt of the General Conference Board of Publication to present to our readers and to research students in general a complete index of any previous year of the MENNONITE. Again we must say, as we said in the 1946 index, that there may be some oversights and some errors. For such we apologize. Despite that, we believe that this index will present to our people something which may lead to greater unity of understanding, to more joy of research, and more satisfaction in the preparation of printed or oral material presented to our churches from time to time. It is presented to our readers in the hope that all who get it will give it some special care and place it where it will be most readily available for reference and frequent use. Additional copies of this index are available at 50 cents a copy.

—Tabor Church, Newton, Kansas: World Conference guests that spoke at the Sunday morning services were Rev. Neufeld and Rev. Enns, both from Canada. Union meetings of Tabor, Goessel, and Alexanderwohl were held at the Tabor Park recently. The program consisted of two double numbers by the Men's and Ladies Choir, of Tabor. Prof. Eldon Graber, of Bethel College, showed the film, "No Greater Power." This film presented the story of Zacchaeus as found in Mark 19.—D. S. Thiesen, Corr.

—Calvary Church, Barlow, Oregon: The Mennonite Biblical Seminary Quartet gave a program of song and testimony in our church. On August 10, Randall A. Heinrichs, MCC worker from Mexico, was in our church and showed pictures on Mexico.—Corr.

—Hereford Church, Bally, Pennsylvania: Our Sunday school has made 16 Christmas bundles. The Ladies Aid made one quilt and three comforters for relief. Our congregation purchased the Patterson Home in town for a parsonage. Rev. Wilmer Shelly and family will be able to occupy it sometime prior to October 1. Rev. and Mrs. Vernon Sprunger and children, and Mrs. Sprunger's mother, Mrs. Bachman, stopped with Rev. Shelly and family while en route to New York City prior to their sailing for Africa—Mae Latshaw, Corr.

—First Church, Paso Robles, California: At a recent church service Rev. and Mrs. Ernst Kuhlmann, from China, related their recent experiences to our group. Rev. and Mrs. Frank Manning were with us and showed their slides, also giving a challenging message. The quartet from the Mennonite Biblical Seminary gave us an inspiring program.—Mrs. Edwin Schroeder, Corr.

Arthur Isaak brought the morning message on August 8. In the evening the Men's Chorus presented a muscial program. The Mennonite Biblical Seminary quartet was with us on August 15. Rev. Marvin Dirks brought the morning message and the quartet furnished a musical program in the evening. The Young People's Bible Conference began August 22, with Rev. Lando Hiebert, of Omaha, Nebraska, as speaker.—Corr.

Mennonites are Challenged!

By Mrs. Selma Platt

MENNONITES make up a small percentage of the large number of individuals and groups who have been opposing the present peace time draft. Even in the congressional committee of the armed services there was a report which stated that the compulsory draft would "destroy the institutions on which America was founded," that the draft law was actually a "program for war" and would prove to be "one of the most tragic errors which could be committed by Congress."

Unafraid

by Elizabeth Thiessen

Thoughts from Psalm 46:

"The Lord Almighty is with us, Our shelter in distress."

Though the mountains be carried to the midst of the sea,
We will not be afraid;
Though the volcanos erupt and the ground disappear,
We will not be afraid.

The streams make glad the city of God,
For a river is flowing by;
Come, quench your thirst and so be glad.
You can be satisfied.
The implement and tools of peace,
Are presently brought to birth;
And so, henceforth, He makes the war
To cease upon the earth.

Parents love their sons too much to make a decision for them as to how to face the present peacetime draft; neither should we fail them by withholding any of these pertinent facts or by a half-hearted concern in helping them think through the various positions. The radio, movie, and press scream military propaganda every day. It is not easy for our young boys to take a stand against the pressure of public opinion, especially if their position has an appearance of ease in dodging duty.

The way Mennonite youth has been volunteering for service projects shows that many of our young people are eager to do their duty, not to escape duty. If any young people are ready to heed the call of a service which is worth living and dying for, it should be those from Christian homes. Therefore, I can see no reason for withholding any facts and for failing to challenge our young people with the courageous stand which a significant group of Americans are taking today.

The new "Peacemakers" movement numbering approximately four hundred religious leaders, including such prominent ministers as Allen Knight Chalmers, Henry Hitt Crane, Bernard Clausen, and Frederick K. Stamm refuse to go along with the militarization of this country. Specifically, they have pledged support to the young men who are planning to refuse to register for the draft. Milton Mayer says that these ministers have decided " . . . that their Christ . . . . did not tell them to render unto Caesar the human lives that are God's. And so, obeying God rather than man, they have stopped talking about the cross and started carrying it." At this hour when the main current in the world affairs seems to be rushing us headlong toward catastrophe, such a courageous countermovement should be a real challenge to Mennonites, who have carried the torch through centuries of persecution.

The possibility exists, however, that some Mennonites have become so well wrapped in the garb of good custom and tradition that they cannot feel the impact of this challenge. Mennonites have historically separated themselves from the rest of the world. In the past this habit of quietly escaping military coercion has been a prudent policy because it is usually foolish to butt one's head against a stone wall when there is a gate around the corner. Although Mennonites have been escapists in one sense, we have not escaped our responsibility in feeding and clothing the world. Mennonite relief and migration projects have been and still are stupendous and are almost beyond the comprehension of those who live in a "dog-eat-dog" society. Let me state emphatically that we should let nothing interfere with the continuance of this great relief program.

Yet, is charity alone enough? Charity alone may have little more effect than that of a salve of the cancerous tissue of our society. If we try the escapist policy in this hour of crisis, the world can justly accuse us of refusing to dirty our hands in the great labor of removing militarism. Any spirit of self-righteous smugness can be fatal. Truly, "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." I believe these words are especially true today.

The Peacemakers program seems radical to the Mennonite mind. Peacemakers are convinced that a surgical operation must be performed and that we are required as instruments in God's hands. When our baby was twenty-six days old, he was gasping for breath as the result of a congenital diaphragmatic hernia. We were told that no surgeon this side of the Mississippi had ever performed the type of operation re-

THE ATOMIC AGE

Dan West

Naval Aviation Training Creed From the New Testament

- To train young men to fight with minimum danger to themselves, and maximum deadliness to the enemy.

- To direct their might energies and enthusiasms into channels of clear and quick thinking, nerve-steady fitness, effortless accuracy, and the determination to return from every mission.

- To Conserve men, money and operational equipment by employing only the best and surest methods of training, devised especially for today's great airborne implements of war—the most powerful, most complex, most destructive implements ever created . . . .

- To inspire and guide these young men toward the ultimate of objectives: a well-earned "well-done."

- To imbue them with full knowledge of the affection with which they are held by their navy and their country.

- To harden their bodies and their fighting spirit, but never their hearts.

- "Love your enemies . . . ."

- "Whosoever would save his life shall lose it."

- "The Son of man came . . . to minister . . . and to give his life a ransom for many."

- "Thy will be done on earth . . ."

- "And (he) made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation."

- "Suffer hardship with me as a good soldier in Christ Jesus."

quired. Our surgeon was frank in telling us that the chances for our baby to live through such a radical operation were slight. The experienced child-specialist who had diagnosed our little Joe's trouble had seen only one other case of that kind, but no operation had been performed because the parents did not give consent to what seemed to them deliberate murder. They chose a "natural" death for their baby. Not for one instant did we hesitate to plead with the surgeon to operate, because we could see clearly that an operation was our only hope. We were thankful that we were given the courage and our surgeon was given the skill which was required, so that God had a chance to perform a miracle on our baby. To me it is just as clear that a revolutionary Christianity, such as that which Jesus brought into the world, is the hope in our present crisis.

Jesus, a Spiritual Revolutionist

Jesus dealt with evil directly. Without bitterness or convention he broke one sacred Jewish law after another. He made no attempt to negotiate with those in authority so as to win favor or to escape suffering at the hands of the authority. Men called Jesus a mad man and a winebibber. He was the revolutionist of his day. He seems not to have used weak pleadings or subtle diplomacy when he removed the money changers from the temple. The power of his spirit dealt simply, but courageously and effectively, with the entrenched evil practices of his day.

> "Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, for you devour widow's houses and for a pretence make long prayers.
> "Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, for you compass land and sea to make one convert, and when he is made you make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.
> "Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, for you are like whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outwardly but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness."

Probably Jesus could have escaped the cross by being a little less radical, probably by staying away from Jerusalem at the hour of tension. Jesus was the reformer, the prophet, the saint who was considered more dangerous to the prevailing customs and institutions than was Barrabas, a criminal. In contrast to the easy-going, enlightened self-interest of the high priests, the road of courageous, even dangerous, living was the one which Jesus trod. In Jesus before Pilate there was the resigned patience which avoids the folly of retaliation, but his spirit was firm, even powerful, in the face of injustice. Tis spiritual courage bore witness to truth. No outer defeat can break that kind of inner integrity. The hands were tied but the spirit was still free. Walter Marshall Horton has commented:

> I confess that as I think upon the life of the supreme Lover and supreme Sufferer, "who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame," I am never for one moment tempted to pity him for the faith in God that led him to his death. Rather am I disturbed with an uneasy sense that we sophisticated modern folks, with our pitiful timidity and our persistent self-seeking, are living in darkness and misery when we might follow him through suffering into light and joy.

The power of Jesus, spiritual personality as he hung on the cross has come down through the ages and is now our great inspiration in facing our accursers in this hour when His Spirit is on trial before the world.

Non-Cooperation, Effective

To the shame of Western white Christians it has taken a Gandhi to demonstrate to the world the power of Jesus' Spirit in a difficult political situation. The western world has used strikes and boycotts in industrial situations, but these have usually lacked the spiritual dis-

A Missionary Vision

By H. D. Burkholder

"WHERE there is no vision the people perish." According to the prophet Isaiah (6:1-9) the basic requirements of a missionary vision are: (1) A vision of God; (2) a vision of oneself; and, (3) a vision of others.

A Vission of God is necessary before one is able to see his own need as well as the need of others. Isaiah's vision of God followed the death of King Uzziah. It is impossible for one to see the King of Kings clearly until he has dethroned and buried other "kings" of life.

A vision of God will also reveal God's holiness, and will produce a sense of personal unholiness. In other words, a vision of God issues in a vision of oneself. The cry of the seraphims, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts," brought forth the response, "Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips." The man who sees himself reflected in the mirror of God's holiness will be quick to confess his sin. The servant of the Lord must be cleansed and yielded instrument if he is to be used effectively.

A true missionary presupposes a vision of God and a vision of oneself. No one is qualified to witness for Christ until he sees God through Jesus Christ ("salvation") and sees himself in the light of God's holiness ("sanctification").

A missionary vision must also include a vision of others. After Isaiah had seen the Lord as well as himself, he said, "I dwell in the midst of a people with unclean lips." This admission issued in the Lord's commission, "Go, and tell this people." God had always seen the need of "this people" but was without a qualified servant. Unclean hands and unclean hearts must be cleansed through the blood of Christ before they can be entrusted with the gospel of Christ.

Are you qualified to obey His commission? Have you seen the Lord? Have you become burdened for you seen yourself in the light of His holiness? Have you become burdened for souls at home and abroad? If you have, then accept the challenge of Christ's commission, and look on the fields for they are NOW ready for harvest.

Thank God for the young people of our Conference who are responding to the call of Christ for service. Thank God for the farmers, teachers and factory workers who are obeying the call to give and to pray. Our mission board has appealed for recruits and for funds The recruits are responding. but what about the funds? Let it never be said that the Mennonite Church was unable to send forth her willing workers. Let us respond to the recent appeal of the Executive Secretary without delay: "the night cometh when no man can work." Let us "pray without ceasing," for "the effectual fervent prayer of righteousness man availeth much."

H. D. Burkholder is one of our contributing editors and the pastor of the Immanuel Mennonite Church at Los Angeles, California, a church which historically has had a strong missionary interest. He has been working on his Master's Degree while preparing this article.

Study to Show Thyself Approved

By Grace Noll Crowell

"Study to show thyself approved" to One
Who marks our daily living; study well,
That through our toil his dear will may be done
On earth as it is in heaven. Rise and tell
Each willing worker in his cause that he Has sent his word abroad, that he has named
His workers and he pleads that we may be Laborers that need not be ashamed.

Proud, indeed, we should be when we do
His instant bidding; proud each time we bring
The good fruits of our toil the summer through;
The sheaves we garner as our offering.
And proud will God himself be if we heed
His earnest word to labor long and late
In earth's wide fields and vineyards when the need
Of workers is so desperate and so great!
"Study to show thyself approved," and God
Will labor with you on the old earth's sod.

JOHN H. OBERHOLTZER

An early leader and founder of the General Conference John H. Oberholtzer was a pioneer in the publication work of our Conference. He maintained his own little print shop in which, as early as 1854, he prepared a little booklet containing sixteen songs for children.

Now, the Board of Publication, many years later, continuing the work which he began, is again considering the printing of a song book for children, in English. At the Berne Conference sessions in 1947, the Conference adopted as a part of its budget the project of putting out a songbook for children similar to the German song book which is proving so popular among the young folks in Canada, but which is printed in the German language.

Whether the children are in Paraguay, or whether the children are in Canada or in the United States, they love those beautiful songs of Christian faith which become the treasures stored in the storehouse of memory in the years to come.

The Best Place to Work for Christ

By Paul N. Roth

IN THE story of the maniac of Gadara we find the purpose of Christ's healing touch. Christ went through a storm to help one man, suggesting that human needs and not personal comfort is the determining factor in Christian evangelism. The healing of the maniac is suggestive to us.

First, who shall work for Christ? The maniac wore no clothes, lived in the tombs, and was kept bound with chains and fetters. Here is a scriptural picture of the spiritual condition of all men outside of Christ. The essential nature of sin is man's claim to his right to himself. Jesus says, "Give up your right to yourself to me and come follow me." The maniac's mental, physical, and spiritual state was the logical outcome of a life devoted to selfish pursuits. Sinners do not always descend into the depths of sin. They may be moral and often are self-righteous. This kind of sinner said of himself, "I count all loss and refuse that I might have the righteousness of God which is through faith in Christ and depends on faith." The ministry of reconciliation has been committed to cleansed sinners. Every born-again believer is to be a witness unto Christ.

Second, what is the message? "Go home and tell them how great things God hath done for you." The disciples were told to go to all nations with the cross central in their teaching and living and showing it to be God's supreme revelation of His love and concern of His erring children. They were to be living witnesses of the transforming Grace of God in changed lives.

Third, Where shall I work for Christ? "Go home and tell" reminded the maniac that before he could be an effective witness in regions beyond, his former neighbors and friends must be given an opportunity to witness the transformation wrought in his life by Christ. His reputation was not good in his home community. People observing his changed character would ask questions concerning the change. He would then have the opportunity to witness to what God had done for him through His Son.

In these days of vugarity, lust, and Hollywood conceptions of home and marriage, we have the opportunity of witnessing to the power of Christ in a homelife which manifests the Spirit of Christ. The Scriptures teach that love, respect, submission, and consideration for each other's need characterize the relationships of the Christian husband and wife. Fathers are told not to provoke their children to wrath and children are admonished to honor their parents.

In our church life we should follow peace and see to it that no root of bitterness springs up and causes trouble. As we imitate God and walk in love, we find that every difficulty in the field of human relations in our church life finds a harmonious solution. If the Christian Gospel does not bring such harmony into our church life, we cannot expect a response from our unsaved neighbors. In Colossians 3, the Christians are warned against three sins: sins of the flesh, sins of the disposition, and social sins. To be effective witnesses we must be as free of the latter two as of the first.

Paul tells in I Thess. 4:11, 12 that as Christians we should aspire to live quietly, mind our own affairs so that we may command the respect of outsiders, and be dependent on no one. The legality of certain courses of action is not the most important question Christians should ask. Rather it is the question: "Will my actions in community relations and business life meet the tests of Christian morality and the social implications of the Gospel?" Many Christians could well make improvement in these areas of life and thus become effective witnesses of Christ. Beginning at Jerusalem may we be His witnesses also in Judea, Samaria, and to the uttermost parts of our earth—witnesses unto Him in every situation, in every area of our total life, home and abroad.

How and When?

You asked me how I gave my heart to Christ,
I do not know;
There came a yearning for Him in my soul
So long ago:
I found earth's flowers would fade and die,
I wept for something that would satisfy and then, and then, somehow I seemed to dare
To lift my broken heart to God in prayer.
I do not know,
I cannot tell you how;
I only know He is my Savior now.

You ask me when I gave my heart to Christ,
I cannot tell;
The day, or just the hour, I do not now remember well.
It must have been when I was all alone
The light of His forgiving Spirit shone
Into my heart, now crowded o'er with sin.
I think, I think 'twas then I let Him in.
I do not know,
I cannot tell you when;
I only know He is so dear since then.

WHEN WERE OUR GREAT HYMNS WRITTEN?

You ask, "When were our great hymns written?"

We don't know, not the exact time. We were surprised, during the process of editing the materials for the new HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY which is to appear soon, that they were written at "various and sundry times." For example, they were written:

"Before embarking on shipboard for the last earthly voyage"
"While lying sick, in mind and body, on the deck of a sailing vessel"
"While walking through the strand of London"
"By the sea, on the island of Arran"
"At the age of ten,"
"At the age of fifteen"
"At the age of seventeen"
"At the age of twenty"
"In times of sorrow"
"In the kitchen"
"Only three years after his conversion"
"At a child's funeral"
"On a barn floor where a mule was at work on a horsepower"
"While his wife was preparing the dinner"
"At the death of a friend"
"Before daybreak"
"During a period of revolution and the Reign of Terror"
"In imprisonment" (During the French Revolution)
"On the veranda in the deepening twilight"

The above suggests that one never knows when the Spirit of God is going to inspire someone to write a hymn. Perhaps He will inspire you, if you are listening! Great thoughts, or great music, may come to you at any time. As one who knows music has told us, "You have to catch them when they come to you, because they may never come again."

Western District Conference, October 13 and 14, at Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas. Minister's Conference on Friday, October 15.

(Announcements for this calendar must reach the editorial office at least three weeks in advance of the date mentioned.)

—Grace Mennonite Church, Enid, Oklahoma: Our church is happy and thankful to again have a minister. Reverend Unruh and family recently moved into the renovated parsonage. Our annual Sunday school program and picnic was held in the latter part of August at Springs Park. At a recent evening service Levi Koehn brought us an inspiring message. Rev. Sam Goering, of North Newton, and Rev. Phil A. Wedel, of Goessel, who were on their way to the Indian Missions at Weatherford and Clinton, were with us at this meeting.

—Rev. H. Albert Claassen and family have moved from 140 Victor Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, Canada, to 1508 Elk Street, Beatrice, Nebraska. All mail for the Toronto United Mennonite Mission should now be sent to Rev. Frank P. Dyck, who took over Rev. Claassen's place on September 1st.

—Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio: Miss Mary Elizabeth Amstutz, who spent two years in India under the auspices of the MCC, returned home recently. Pulpit visitors the past few Sundays have been Rev. Vernon Sprunger, Dr. and Mrs. Merle Schwartz, representing the work in the African Congo, and Dr. Walter Schultz. The church has been redecorated. Twenty-one Good Will Christmas Bundles have been packed by our Sunday school and sent to Akron.—Susan Basinger, Corr.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri: Due to the lateness of the threshing season, our young people's retreat was cancelled, but in place of it a Youth Bible Conference was held in our church. "Truth for Youth" was the theme of the Conference, with Rev. Frank Fotoplos, of Milwaukee, as the guest speaker. August 20 we enjoyed a program given by the boy's quartet of the Oklahoma Bible Academy. Rev. Alvin Regier, superintendent of the school, also showed some slides of the school and told about the work they are doing in the field of Christian education and missions. —Corr.

The General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America has a membership of 44,014. There are 576 ministers, 159 of which have no regular charge, an average of about 1 minister for every 75 members, figuring only those who have a regular church there are about 1 minister for every 105 members. The Conference is supporting 66 missionaries on the foriegn field and on furlough, 18 missionaries among the American Indians, and 7 in South America.

HOW WE MAY WIN OTHERS TO CHRIST

By J. W. Bergen, Goltry, Oklahoma, "Winning Souls for Christ."

1. We must have a personal, experimental knowledge of Jesus Christ as Saviour. We must have experienced the forgiveness of sin ourselves. We must have found a way of of sin if we are to show other The Way.

2. We must love Him with all our heart. We must be greatly in love with Christ that we do not try to live unto ourselves, but rather for Him and others.

3. The way of winning is the way of prayer. It is not eloquency of speech and fine culture that will lead souls to Christ, nor is it the letter of the word. It is the power that God gives to us as we commit the case into His hand.

4. To win others we must wait upon the guidance of the Holy Spirit. The very secrets of the hearts of man are unfolded by the Holy Spirit.

5. To witness we must know God's word. The Holy Spirit takes the Word and makes it a life-giving reality. It is the Spirit that "maketh alive."

6. To be a winning witness we must be surrendered. We cannot be winsome as long as we live for ourselves.

7. A love for the lost is necessary if we are to be winsome. It is one thing to love to preach, but it is another thing to love the sinners. All tongues, knowledge, gifts, faith, and sacrifice will be "as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal" and of no profit if there is no love. What we need in our church today when the world is in confusion is to have more love for God, more love one for another, and more love for the sinner. Jesus said. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye love one another."

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY NEWS

This is a month of travel and vacations for members of the Mennonite Seminary family. Rev. John T. Neufeld and family are spending several weeks in Kansas with relatives; the Mennonite World Conference in Newton was included in their trip. Miss Frieda Claassen, office secretary, is visiting at the home of her parents in Beatrice, Nebr. Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Waltner and sons, Bobbie and Buddy, left Friday for Mountain Lake, Minnesota and Marion, South Dakota, to visit at the home of their parents before the beginning of the fall school term. The Don Smucker family will vacation the last week of August at Little Eden Camp in Onekama, Mich. Mrs. Marvin Dirks and children, Carole, Anna, and Stanley are spending a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Pannabecker in Peoria, Illinois. The oldest son, Marvin, Jr., is visiting his grandparents in Halstead, Kansas.

The large, green, Seminary lawn has been a real retreat for children of the neighborhood this summer. Located as it is in the midst of tall and crowded city apartments where children play on the sidewalks or in narrow cement courts, the green grass and tall shade trees of the Seminary property are a refuge of beauty and out-of-door joy. This week the children shouted with delight when a strong wooden slide was erected on the lawn. It came as a gift from the Junior Intermediate Department of the Women's Missionary Association of the General Conference of Mennonites. On the morning of its arrival, fifteen children were counted standing in line waiting their turn for a slide.

A neighborhood family, Mr. and Mrs. Ching Pong Pei, whose little sons enjoy the use of the lawn, expressed their appreciation this week by giving a contribution toward equipment for the yard.

The Seminary Women's organization met for the third time Tuesday evening in the large living room at the Seminary Home, at 4614 Woodlawn. Mrs. Irvin Richert read religious poetry during the devotional period, and Mrs. Orlando Waltner related in a interesting fashion the everyday experiences of a missionary's wife and family in India. The organization plans to continue with monthly meetings during the winter school term.

Visitors at the Seminary during the past week were: Albert Roland, of Turin, Italy a student last year at Bethel College who plans to continue another year of study in this country at Kansas University; and Paul D. Hertzler of Goshen, Indiana. He will sail in September for Beirut to teach in the American Community School.

The foreign delegation to the Mennonite World Conference accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Orie Miller were guests for lunch at the Seminary Thursday en route from the Conference meeting in Newton. President S. F. Pannabecker traveled from Newton to Chicago with them.

The newest member of the Seminary family is infant John Pannabecker who arrived August 12 at Mercy Hospital in Chicago. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pannabecker.

Mrs. David Habegger has recently been employed as assistant bookkeeper at the University of Chicago Press.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Dr. J. E. Hartzler Goes to Bethel

The President's Office announces the appointment of Dr. J. E. Hartzler, of Goshen, Indiana, as visiting professor of Bible at Bethel College for the fall quarter. Dr. Hartzler will also give the message at the opening ceremony on Sunday, September 5.

Dr. Hartzler, who is widely known throughout the middle west through his books and his lectures, holds the A. B. degree from Goshen College, the B. D. from Union Theological Seminary, a masters degree from University of Chicago, a law degree from Hamilton College, and the Ph. D. from Hartford Theological Seminary.

Dr. Hartzler has served in the capacity of president of both Goshen and Bethel Colleges, as well as that of Witmarsum Theological Seminary. He has also served on the faculties of the American University at Beirut, Palestine, and the Near East School of Theology, of the same address.

Since 1936, he has taught philosophy and religion at Hartford Theological Seminary.

School Opening Activities Announced

"The problems and the task of Christian Education" will be the subject of the address of Dr. J. E. Hartzler, of Goshen, Indiana, at the formal opening exercises of the new college year at Bethel in Memorial Hall, Sunday evening at 8:00, September 5.

Though classes do not start until Monday, September 6, campus activities began Wednesday, September 1, with a freshman assembly at 8:30 in the morning, followed by placement tests and physical examinations the rest of the week, with enrollment on Friday. Juniors and seniors will register on Thursday, while sophomores will enroll on Saturday.

Fellowship hours in the evening, in charge of the public relations department and the director of physical education, and late-in-the-afternoon teas, sponsored by the Women's Association of Bethel College, will give new students that "home away from home" feeling that they may already be in need of.

A reception Friday evening, sponsored by the Student Christian Association, will be in the Student Union Room and the annual Fall Mixer, on Saturday night, sponsored by the Student Council, are intended to help get the students acquainted before they start their year's academic work.

Faculty Retreat Held

A consecration service, directed by President Kaufman intended to prepare the faculty members for the new and added tasks of the year ahead was the climax for the Faculty Retreat, an annual event marking the beginning of the school year at Bethel. This retreat was held at the Salvation Army Camp near Wichita, Saturday, August 28. Earlier Dr. J. H. Langenwalter had given messages entitled "Preparing to Teach" and "The Church of Christ in a time like This." The day's program also included introduction of new faculty and staff members by President Kaufman, general singing, a discussion of the work and problems lying ahead, and a lunch on the camping grounds at noon.

North Newton, Kansas.—Application are still being accepted by Bethel College for Junior-Senior Mennonite Scholarships amounting to $25 per quarter for each of the last six quarters of the college years, by upper-level Mennonite students. A total of $150 will be awarded to those that qualify for the scholarship.

Students wishing to receive this financial aid must complete the entire four-year curriculum for a degree by uninterrupted attendance at a Mennonite college, the last two years of which must be at Bethel. They must also maintain an average grade of B for the four years and maintain a consistent record as an active member in good standing of his home Mennonite congregation and by supporting the ideals and standards of the school.

North Newton, Kans.—August 14—Pres. Ed. G. Kaufman, of the Bethel College, announced today that Prof. H. A. Fast, B.D., Ph.D., chairman of the division of Bible and Christian education at Bethel College, has been appointed acting dean of the college. He is to fill the vacancy left by the death of Dean P. S. Goertz on August 4.

A graduate of Bethel College, Dr. Fast continued his education at Witmarsum Theological Seminary, Garrett Biblical Institute, and Hartford Theological Seminary. He has taught in high schools in Minnesota and Kansas, and the Witmarsum Theological Seminary. After serving as field secretary of the General Conference of Mennonites in America from 1936-1940, he became general director, Civilian Public Service Camps, joining the Bethel College faculty in 1943.

Twice during the past few years has Dr. Fast been a relief commissioner for the Mennonite Central Committee of which he is the vice-chairman: in 1945, to South America, and in 1947 to Europe.

AUGUSTA SCHMIDT SENDS APPRECIATION

June 28, 1948.—I have received many good letters, Christmas greetings, and birthday greetings that I have not answered or acknowledged. I thought I would get to do a lot of letter writing and catch up with my correspondence sometime. However, I see I have to send this little note to serve as first-aid at least and thank you each and all heartily for the much appreciated messages.

School has started again and our yard and schools and church are filled with children and older students. It is cool and sultry by turns since we have rainy season now. Nature is at her best—it looks like the Garden of Eden here, not a dry blade of grass anywhere. All the dust is gone, flowers appear again, and farmers plant grain and vegetables in hope of reaping.

We live in a new India. There are many changes, some are good, others are not good. But efforts are made to correct undesirable conditions. We pray that the Christians may be lights and salt that can be used to help the country in this difficult transition period. Never before have our Christians been so anxious for education. May they have visions of selfless service too in larger number and in a greater measure. Thank you for financial and prayer support. —Janjgir, C. P., India.

ciplines and the deeply spiritual quality of Ganhi's performances. Another example of the effectiveness of non-violent civil disobedience as a method in political reform can be found in Australian history after the passage of the Defense bill in December, 1909.

> The Act (conscription for military service) was so unpopular that in two and a half years . . . . there were no less than 27,749 prosecuttions, involving fines in most cases, but also 5,732 imprisonments of boys . . . By June 30, 1914, there were approximately one prosecution for every four and one-half boys at drill.

As a result of this non-violent civil disobedience "members of Parliment began to question and then to oppose universal military training." A bill calling for a referendum was finally passed, and the referendum defeated conscription in Austrialia in 1916.

Non-Cooperation, Expedient

Mennonite history too furnishes much evidence that when conscience was threatened, Mennonites have not hestitated to break civil law and to accept persecution. In the critical situation in which we find ourselves today, when all civilization is at stake, is there any reason, except that of self-protection, of not making our protest at the first point where we run up against the war system? Our military government is very anxious to make everyone think there is no opposition to the draft. The government learned during the first world war that one pacifist can break the morale of a military group; therefore, they want to keep pacifists, especially large groups such as the Mennonites, as isolated and as ineffective as possible. General Hershey remarked to Milton Mayer in 1941:

> I know about you conchies . . . My mother was a Mennonite. As long as I have anything to say about it, every conchie will be rejected for flat feet. There is no way that any government can contend with conscientious objection. There never will be. Our only hope is to pretend it isn't there.

The government is actually very anxious to give deferment to Mennonite youth. As in the last war, the decision as to whether a young man is classified as a conscientious objector is left in the hands of the local draft board. It is very certain that many conscientious objectors who do not have the backing of the historical peace churches will be persecuted under the present draft law, which does have a discriminatory clause favoring those from peace churches. Can we conscientiously take a place of relative freedom and safety when other pacifists are forced into prison? I know that I could not accept such preferment without a feeling of defeat even though I would offer myself for a year or two of Christian service. It seems to me this voluntary service should always be performed more as a conviction than as a substitute for military service. Should we not, young and old, volunteer for service in a disciplined peace army which will be ready for every emergency? When people care enough and are ready to sacrifice for peace as much as our soldiers have sacrificed to the war system, then I believe peace is inevitable.

If the hour of the extinction of our civilization does come, and we have not done all that was within our power to stem the tide of militarism, will we not be responsible before God for a share in that catastrophe? Before we reject the challenge of a revolutionary Christianity in this hour, before we fail to give support to those who exemplify Jesus in their devotion, commitment, and spiritual power, we should make sure that we like Peter are not merely afraid of being unpopular, or, worse yet, like Judas in that we would sell out for a few pieces of silver. The revolution which can precede a genuine spiritual regeneration is working. Indecision and inaction in this hour are impossible. Although we need to move carefully, thoughtfully, prayerfully, we must move. Let us not be caught slumbering in this hour of agony. Let's not let one young hero who carries the cross of Christ into this suffering world say to us as Jesus said to the three disciples in the garden, "Could ye not watch with me one hour?"

Mrs. Selma Platt, minister's wife, social worker, teacher in both high school and colleges, including Doane College, Crete, Nebraska, Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, and Freeman College, Freeman, South Dakota, now homemaker and active worker for peace says, in this article, "Without bitterness or contention Jesus broke one sacred Jewish law after another." In this article she challenges what is probably the modal position of Mennonites on registration.

AN INTERVIEW WITH BROTHER P. H. RICHERT

For over two and one-half years Brother P. H. Richert has been confined as a patient at the Bethesda Hospital, Goessel, Kansas. For many years he served as secretary of the Foreign Mission Board.

At the invitation of Brother H. B. Schmidt, pastor of the Tabor Mennonite Church, near Goessel, Kansas, it was recently my privilege on a Sunday morning to occupy the puplit of the congregation which was also served by Brother Richert during these many years.

During the Sunday school hour I spent an inspiring thirty minutes at Brother Richert's bedside. Receiving answers to four questions that I had prepared in preparation for this interview.

I had just greeted Brother Richert when he immediately asked two questions, "How is the mission treasury?" and "Do you suppose the harvest will help?"

"The treasury is low," I said, "but we certainly hope that the Lord will provide for our needs."

My questions to Brother Richert were the following:

"In view of the condition of our Foreign Mission treasury at the present time, would you suggest that our foreign mission work be made smaller?" His answer came quickly and decisively in three words, "It should not."

My next question followed logically: "How will we be able to meet our budget of $330,000 for 1948?" Again he had a ready answer: "If each member would tithe ten per cent, then it would be possible."

I continued, "What is your great concern about General Conference missions?" After a period of quietness his answer came calmly, "I am praying for the leading of the Spirit, that the mission board may be led aright."

My interview closed with the question, "Have you a word to our constituency?" The answer: "With the bountiful harvest this year we should not decrease missions. I am happy that two new sisters are going to India." Brother Richert here referred to Miss Duerksen and Miss Kornelson.

Brother Richert continues an active ministry of intercession. At an earlier interview he greeted me with the words, "I have just been spending the morning in prayer for South America."

Mission friends will wish to continue remembering Brother Richert both before the Throne of Grace as well as with an occasional word of encouragement either in person or with a letter or card.

Yours in the interest of missionary advance,
Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL DIRECTORS

As many of you know, the Board of Education and the Board of Publication of the General Conference are jointly sponsoring the publication of the Daily Vacation Bible School materials to appear as follows:

In the spring of 1949: (For both pupil and teacher)
- Nursery
- Primary
- Grades I, II, III
- Grade V
- Grade VII
- Grades IX to XIII

In the spring of 1950 (for both pupil and teacher)
- Grades IV, VI, and VIII

In order to keep all of you informed as to the progress being made, and to give you instructions as to how these are to be ordered and how they will be distributed, it is very important that the Board of Publication at the Mennonite Publication Office have a mailing list of all people interested in Daily Vacation Bible School materials. Will you please take a post card and send it to us, saying, "interested in Daily Vacation Bible School materials"; and then give us the name and addresses of anyone you know who is interested in this line and would like to receive publicity.

Certainly, we want all those who were teachers or directors of Daily Vacation Bible Schools the summer of 1947 and anyone else who you think will become active in the Daily Vacation Bible School program next year. We are building a mailing list and we don't want to miss anyone.

"BOSS" OR JUST "SECRETARY"?

If you are a boss, you can do as you please. That is a boss's privilege.

But, if you are a secretary—let us say a Sunday school secretary or a secretary of a church—then here is a suggestion to you:

Will you, always when corresponding with our General Conference Headquarters Office, specify the name of the Sunday school or the name of the church in whose behalf you are writing. Also, when doing any business for your Sunday school or your church with Sunday school dealers or supply houses, this is a good practice.

In connection, be sure also that you always give the name of the church in the same way. Do not, for example, in one letter call it Mennonite Sunday School of Greenwood and in the next letter call it the Greenwood Mennonite Sunday School and in a third letter call it Greenwood Sunday School and in a fourth, Greenwood Church.

"Behold, I have given you a name which is above every name." The right name of your church is above every other name for the office clerks who take care of the correspondence when we are trying to serve you "more perfectly."

The Challenges of Exemption

by Hugh Hostetler, North Newton, Kansas

Hugh Hostetler served during the war in the C.P.S. units of Grottoes, Virginia; Mulberry, Florida; and La Plata, Puerto Rico. He has had teaching and pastoral experience and is at present attending Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

One of the most frequently heard complaints during the tenure of Civilian Public Service was directed at the compulsion involved. Men sucked into the whirlpool of a wartime draft could hardly feel that they were "offering themselves" to the service of God and country when the only alternative presented was imprisonment.

On the surface it would appear as though the provisions in the new draft, in which C.O.'s are totally exempt, would be the answer to the older C.P.S.'ers prayers. A closer scrutiny of the total picture, however, reveals points of differences both background and content that are well worth examining.

For one thing, this is a peacetime draft with only one parallel before— the pre-World War II call. No amount of viperous name-calling on the part of the American press or of high Washington officials can convince the majority of American people that war is as imminent with Russia today as it was with the Axis back in 1940. As citizens in a country where democratic procedures still are pertinent to a surprising degree, we owe to all a peculiar responsibility to voice our protest against this peacetime usurpation of our individual liberties.

Again, the draft exemption was based not on the "good" record of C.P.S. but more principally on its "bad" record. It was a measure of expediency on the Congress to put aside the relatively few C.O.'s that would be called up, because by and large the previous experiments proved to be headaches rather than cures. It must be observed further that the "bad" or "troublesome" aspects of conscientious objection were furnished mostly by groups other than Mennonites. By and large we were content to go along with the government, including in many situations where real substractions from our already well-compromised position were threatened. As such, we cannot congratulate our own record as being contributive to the present exemptions. Rather, it was the strikes, slow-downs, walk-outs and refusals to register of others, notably among Friends and their affiliates, that led the Congressmen involved to take the action they did. (We realize, of course, another large, and possibly the most important, factor was the haste with which Congress disposed of the last few legislative acts before adjournment. Nevertheless, we feel the aspects mentioned above is also important, and particularly instructive for us Mennonites.)

A third point to consider is one closely related to the above two. During the war a fear psychosis was very prevelant among both the men most directly involved and their home communities, some feared the wrath of the community if they did not bear or support arms; others feared the wrath of God if they did! And between these two pressures our Mennonite "peace witness" oscillated like a tennis ball. With comparatively few exceptions, the new draft law will be carried out in a much calmer atmosphere. Communities will tend to overlook exemptions this time; and the watchful eye of God will be less apparent to us in a non-crisis situation. Work done under the types of pressures so strong during the war can scarcely evoke a love for service to either the church or the country. With these forces off, the natural reaction is assume that we are now scot-free to do as we please—provided no counter pressure from somewhere is exerted.

We must also view another facet. The demands of our faith have always been higher than our actions on any specific issue. If we have "left undone those things which we ought to have done, and have done those things we ought not to have done," that has simply been the meaure of our lack of faith and its propellent, love. We did not mean to be fearful in the presence of hosility; nor did we mean to be quite so seubseverient to a government bent on waging viciously a total war. Church men and women who supported both the war effort and C.P.S. (and sometimes both), felt deep within themselves that either cause was far from the "works" demanded by a truly Christian faith in love. And therein lies the seeds for more promising growth in the future.

What courses of action are open to Mennonites in the coming months under the impetus of the new draft exemptions?

1. "We'll sit tight." This will be the easiest, and the most profitable—financially. All sorts of excuses will be found: "Dad and Mother need me on the farm"; "I am just out high school and want to get started on my own"; "I can't get married on a service-to-church salary"; ad infinitum. A still more demoralizing attitude will be that of seeing in the exemption an escape clause from what should be normal acts of service to the Kingdom of God. "I don't have to give up anything, therefore why should I?" The Moravian Brethren of another century used to consider the "folks back home" as the suppliers of the physical needs of the tremendous numbers of missionaries sent out to the ends of the world. If that were the reason for staying home in the present situation, it would be commendable. But, barring that, it is unnecessary to point out that these attitudes will play directly into the hands of Mennonite critics who deeply suspicioned that our conscientious objection to World War II was based not so much on a real love for the enemy as it was a love for mammon. Nor will it edify the lives of those whose intentions rise no higher than self.

2. Refusal to register. The pro's and con's of this issue have been discussed amply elsewhere. Let it suffice here to say that in previous discussion on this subject among Mennonite circles the rather supercillious viewpoint that we are above most demands of our citizenship is prevalent, resulting in a tendency to disregard our obligation to "let our light shine" in the total community. The moral consequences or refusal to register have been seen principally as effective of our own interpretations of certain Pauline passages of Scripture related to Christian-State relationships, rather than in the light of a total Christian witness for peace. The issue pro or con is not clear. Those who feel inwardly compelled to refuse registration should not hesitate to do so; for who can truly say they are not thereby fulfilling a higher and more noble demand?

3. Fight for repeal of the draft law. No matter what course of action we may take, this is an imperative laid upon all. We should rejoice that a group of over a hundred leading clergymen and theologians the country over have declared their intentions to do just this. Through the offices of the National Council Against Conscription many non-Church groups also have united their efforts to remove this stumbling block to real Christian freedom. We as members of a peace church should lend all the aid possible to this work. This is election year, and Congressmen should be let known in no uncertain terms what aspects of their voting records we disapprove, and approve of.

4. Set up a Church Service Program. There is practically no precedent for this on the voluntary level among Mennonites. Even in times of crises in the past we have tended to choose self-isolation rather than the more Christian path of activity seeking service to the "world" (See our buying of substitutes in American Civil War; agreements with Czarists Russia, etc.). One of the better examples of what might be done is our relief work after this war; but, as pointed out before, this has been under crisis, and is not strictly analogous to what must be undertaken now (though granted, this work must also continue; for the crisis still exists in altered form).

More concrete instance may be found in the Voluntary Service Program set up by the Young People's Union and M.C.C. It would be wise to broaden its base, now fundamentally that of evangelism, to also include striking at some of the grave social issues confronting us. For example, our inter-racial experiments such as at Gulfport, Miss., have pretty well conformed to Southern traditions regarding segregation, rather than attempting new approaches to this all-important problem.

Whether we like it or not, our traditional isolation, long since abrogated in Europe, is also a thing of the past here in America. We can choose to run from the dilemna through migrations, or we can choose to put sinew and flesh on our skelton of faith through its exercise. In this shrinking world, we cannot continue to survive by running away from it; nor can we hope to justify our present position with works, if justification be our purpose. For sooner or later God in His justice will strike us down for our self-centeredness. Let us try the better way of leavening the whole loaf with a living message of Christian love in action.

When the King of Denmark Forgave

The Rev. Henry Carter, Chairman of the Refugee Commission of the World Council of Churches, has a good story to tell. The officers of this Commission were received by the late King Christian X of Denmark. Mr. Carter writes:

"One of our four representatives was Propst Gruber (of Germany), who was liberated from Dachau concentration camp by the Allies and is now a member of the Berlin Town Council. As we awaited the moment of reception Propst Gruber asked me, as Chairman of the Commission, whether he might have opportunity to thank the King for the care which Denmark had given to nearly two hundred thousand war fugitives from the Baltic ports, who reached Copenhagen in 1945 while Denmark was still under Nazi occupation. King Christian, despite manifest physical weakness, graciously assented to the request which I ventured to make. What followed is surely significant at this hour. Porpst Gruber, speaking in German, said:

" 'I am deeply moved by having the honour of being received today by your Majesty. Being the first German allowed to appear before your Majesty after the collapse, it is my heartfelt duty to ask forgiveness, on behalf of my nation, for all that my nation has inflicted on the Danish nation, and of which I know I bear my share of guilt. This guilt is indeed so great that men alone cannot bear, and men alone cannot forgive it. It was with a heavy heart that I came to Denmark but also with a confident heart, knowing that I was allowed to come as a Christian to fellow-Christians. I also beg to give expression to the grateful feelings all of us have for all that has been done by the Danish Government and the Danish nation for the homeless people. We well appreciate the difficulties involved in this war. I may humbly ask you to accept, with these thanks, the assurance that the men who are now bearing responsibility in nation and Church in Germany, are firmly resolved to repair the sufferings brought into the world, and we request you to have confidence in these men who are of good will. We need, all of us, individuals as well as nations, forgiveness, and we should like to remain united with the men to whom we have done wrong, in praying: Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us.'

"King Christian, who answered in German, said, 'I believe you are sincere, and that it is from your heart and not only from your lips.' Then, turning to us, he said in English, 'Are there many more Germans like him?' I replied 'There are many leaders of the German Evangelical Church, your Majesty, who would say and mean the same.' The King, with a smile, said, 'Then I must tell my Foreign Minister that they can come and see me.' " J. H.Arnup

Service at Skillman -- an Evaluation

by Roland Krause

When one looks back and tries to evaluate an experience, he should compare his beginning aims and purposes with his accomplishments. When these accomplishments are compared with our Perfect Standard, we can but realize the small way in which we have arrived at His perfect will for us.

One of our purposes in Summer Voluntary Service is to gain a vision of the needs of some people who are unfortunate and handicapped, often through no fault of their own. Each one of us must take inventory of our own experiences on the ward and see if we have made an advance in our appreciation of the needs of a suffering world. Have we always ministered to those needs when the opportunity arose to do so?

We have been made aware of the problems of the mentally ill. Our own Village has presented its own specific aspects of these problems, but they are basically at one with those met by all the various hospital units. These problems include patient-attendant relationships, relations with other attendants, and attitudes of the administration and the staff.

Another purpose of our being in Summer Service is to grow in Jesus' "Way of Love." This love should not be demonstrated only to those of our own fellowship, but to those for whom and with whom we work and live. We should have learned, if we were not aware of it before hand, that the "Way of Love" is not to be used only in isolated occasions or circumstances, but that is a way of life, to be lived throughout the entire day.

Another aim we had in coming was to deepen our own spiritual experience. This again can only be measured by introspection. Each one of us knows best what advances we have made. Our group devotions have been a constant reminder of our deeper mission here in the Village. Certainly we should have learned to trust more completely in God's guidance, as we realized the shortcomings we had time and again on the ward.

A source of genuine inspiration is the fact that during these short summer weeks we have worked together as a team. I have been happy to work with a group of Christian young people of various denominations, presenting a solid front and showing a united effort to be witnesses to the Lord and His goodness. Expecially have I appreciated being part of a program that is drawing the entire Mennonite family closer together, not with a minimizing of differences, but with the emphasis on the common fundamentals of faith which are ours.

The contacts we have made with persons in various phases of the total program of the Church have indeed been valuable. If through these weeks we have not come to a new appreciation of the work of the Church in its entirety, we have not made the fullest use of the privileges of this summer.

The personal contacts of the various members of the unit with each other have been, I think, of lasting significance. I shall long remember the summer for the fine friendships which have been established and the widening of our field of personal friends.

Finally, in conclusion, I think we may say with Peter that "it is good for us to be here." May we, as did Peter in that day, have gained a new vision of Christ and His purposes for us by our summer.

Roland Krause is a member of the Summer Service Unit which served at Skillman Village, New Jersey. This institution cares for epileptic patients who have a mental deficiency as well. This is Roland's evaluation of his experiences.

News About Youth . . .

Youth Conferences are being held again in Germany. One of the first of such Conferences among German Mennonite youth was held at Hamburg, May 18-21 of this year. About 75 young people were in attendance. Others, held at Krefeld and Neustadt earlier were sponsored by the M.C.C. This one was organized and sponsored by Germans themselves. Such leaders as Rev. O. Schowalter of the Hamburg church, Rev. Christian Schnebele, head of a Bibelheim in South Germany, Miss Erna Fast and the late Dr. P. S. Goertz both M.C.C. workers. The central emphasis of the conference was the study of the Bible and a consideration of its application and significance to the present situation and time. This indicates again as has been indicated repeatedly before that the common ground of inspiration for the church is the Bible. It was one that common ground that the youth conference at Oslo, Norway found each other.

Twelve college students have been sponsored this summer in a mission to Hawaii by the Southern Baptist Convention. Their mission consists of preaching and teaching and is planned as practical mission experience for the students as well as an aid to churches on the Island. A similar expedition has taken place on the An Andres Island off the coast of Colombia, South America. To this island four young men and a married couple went. A third group is in California working with Southern Baptist groups there. And three hundred other college students have been enlisted by the Baptist Mission Board of Atlanta, Ga. for summer mission work in the twenty-state area of the Southern Baptist Convention. These students work primarily among rural, frontier and foreign-speaking groups.

The average American doesn't feel there is any relation between his religious beliefs and his conduct during business hours. That was the decision reached at a conference attended by 100 foreign and American students. The meeting was sponsored by the Metropolitan Student Christian Council and the Committee on Friendly Relations With Foreign Students.

A number of foreign students asserted that one of the "most disturbing" impressions they had received since their arrival here was the frequent contradiction between accepted moral principles and actual behavior. The students were agreed that America, while it was contributed to the material improvement of the world through relief aid, was not exercising "urgently needed" spiritual power. They said "one world" could be realized only through increased knowledge and understanding of "the other fellow's ways of living," and called on students to promote such understanding.

A program of Summer Bible School work has been undertaken in Vermont the last two years by the Franconia Conference of the (Old) Mennonite church. This Eastern Pennsylvania conference has sent eight workers to Vermont in 1947 where they taught Bible School in abandoned churches or in cooperation with functioning churches. They worked at five different locations and have returned to this same work again this summer.

OUR CHILDREN

We will not fail them if we trust in God,
Relying on His strength for all we need
In guiding these young lives with humbleness,
Planting within their hearts the fruitful seed
Of honesty and courage, teaching them
To be devoted to the good and true.
If we ask help from God in earnest prayer,
We gain His power, we guard our children, too.

"If It's No Trouble"

PEOPLE HAVE a maddening way of saying, "I'd be glad to have you do this or that for me, if it's no trouble." The sting is in the last four words. What kind of things are they which we can do for others without trouble?

If it is only the dropping of a letter into a mailbox, even that to an already overburdened person may prove to be like the last straw which broke the camel's back.

A minister was about to take a trip home to England. He had saved for it for years, had only a month for it all, and had to travel third class. A parishioner came to him and said ,"When you are in London won't you look up my brother, and tell him all about me and our family? I've written his address on this paper."

The minister promised. In London, on learning that the parishioner's brother lived far from even the metropolitan borders, he was tempted to give up the task as too expensive of time. The search would take the best part of a day. He had to choose between visiting one of his own kin—very dear to him—or keeping his promise. He kept his promise. It cost him the whole day and a half-pound note.

On his return he was able to bring news to his parishioner about her brother. She seemed gratified and said, "Well, that's fine, and I hope it was no trouble for you to do it."

The minister said, "On the contrary, it was a great deal of trouble. I promised to do it. I wanted to do it for you; I was glad to do it, but I had to sacrifice to do it."

The parishioner was highly offended. She mistook her minister's words as insulting. Instead, he was scotching a shallow phrase and telling the dispassionate truth.

No trouble! The phrase is a sign of how lightly we take so much that is done for us! Under the surface is lack of appreciation— ingratitude—no sense of what things cost.

Imagine some of the church at Rome saying to Paul: "It's fine to have heard the testimony of Christ from an apostle's lips. We hope you took no trouble." Perhaps Paul was often incensed at such shallowness. What wonder that he breaks out with, "For ye are bought with a price."

No trouble! How lightly we cast aside something that cost blood— our faith, the Gospel, the Church, and what the Church offers freely. Let's turn the saying around and make it: "With how much trouble all this was done for me." —The Living Church.

Central District Conference Sessions Family Centered

To the Conference motto, "For Christ and the Church," theme of the 49th annual session of the Central District Conference of Mennonites, held at Danvers, Illinois, August 20 to 22, the phrase "and the family" may well have been added, for side by side with the business sessions and the inspirational part of the Conference program there was a carefully worked out Conference children's program which included children's devotionals, object lessons, stories, handwork, recreation, and other features especially geared to children's interest.

Hollander Is Special Guest

A special guest of the Conference was Dr. Felix van der Wissel, of Leeuwarden, Holland, who spoke at the 11 o'clock worship service on Sunday morning. One of the delegates of the Conference of Mennonite Churches in Holland to the Mennonite World Conference recently held in this country, Dr. van der Wissel told of the life and work of the Dutch Mennonites before the war, experiences during the Nazi occupation, and state of the church in this post-war era. He was himself a prisoner in a concentration camp, thrice threatened with execution, but he turned the experience into an opportunity to bear an effective Christian witness.

Leading Conference Addresses

Rev. A. E. Kreider, as devotional leader of the Conference, gave expository messages from I Corinthians, showing how Paul dealt wisely and effectively with the problems of the church of Corinth by lifting them from the human to the spiritual plane. Other leading addresses given during the Conference were as follows: Friday morning, "My Version for the Central Conference," by Rev. Harry Yoder, President of the Conference; Friday evening, "The Bible and Our Day," by Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, President of Mennonite Biblical Seminary, Chicago; Saturday morning: "Teaching the Way of Peace," Rev. Russell Mast, Pastor of First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio; Saturday afternoon: "Experiences in Home Visitation Work," by Rev. Samuel Ummel, Superintendent of Mennonite Gospel Mission, Peoria; "Work of the Christian Nurse in Congo," was given by Miss Kornelia Unrau, R.N., missionary on furlough from Belgian Congo; Saturday evening: "The Growing Christian," by Rev. Herbert Roszhart, pastor of the Pleasant View Mennonite Church, Aurora, Nebraska. Sunday's topics were: "The Country Church and the Future of Rural America," delivered by Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, pastor of the Silver Street Mennonite Church, Goshen,. Indiana. Rev. R. L. Hartzler delivered an address on, "A New Day Breaks in Congo." The closing address on Sunday was delivered by Dr. J. E. Hartzler, well-known Bible lecturer, on the subject of, "The Church and the World."

Lantz Directs Massed Conference Choir

Prof. Russell A. Lantz, head of the music department of Bluffton College, directed a massed choir from constituent churches in Central Illinois, which was featured in the Sunday morning and evening sessions of the conference. Professor Lantz was also in charge of the conference music, assisted by the conference music committee.

Conference Statistics

The secretary's statistical report for the conference year ending June 30, 1948, showed a membership of 3324 with 19 of the 20 churches of the conference reporting. Eleven members of churches entered into some phase of special religious service during the year, viz: Ministry, 2; Home Missions, 1; Foreign Mission, 3; other, 5. Total contributions for various purposes were as follows: Church Running Expenses (pastors' salaries, special meetings, repairs, maintenance, and conference assessment), $61,945.39; Home and Foreign Missions, $37,144.14; Institutions (Mennonite Hospital, Bluffton College, Mennonite Seminary, Old People's Home), $16,197.51; Relief and Resettlement, $21,138.07; other benevolences, $8090.13; total for all purposes, $144,515.24.

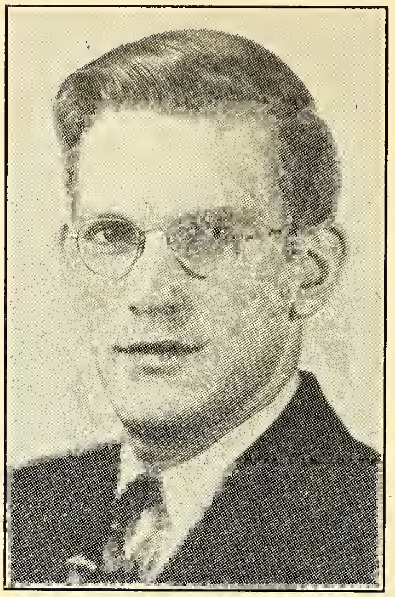
Conference Budget

In the delegate business session on Monday following the general sessions, the following appropriations were voted: Evangel publication, $1,480; MCC overhead, $250; Peace Committee, $100; conference officers' travel, $200; conference portion of field secretary's allowance, $720. These items, with any other conference expenses, made up the budget for the coming year which was allocated to the churches on the basis of 80 cents per member.

New Conference Officers

In the reorganization, Rev. Harry Yoder was granted his request to be relieved of the duties of president and was given a vote of thanks for his seven years of service in that capacity. Rev. W. B. Weaver, pastor of North Danvers Mennonite Church, was elected to serve as president for the current year. Other officers are: vice-president, Rev. Lotus Troyer, Carlock; secretary, Rev. Robert Hartzler, Goshen; Treasurer, Mr. O. J. Sommer, Pekin; and field secretary, Rev. R. L. Hartzler, Bloomington, chosen for a three year term beginning September 1, 1948.

A Message from the New Acting Editor



When the hand of successful experience places into the hand of youthful inexperience a major responsibility, the words of Elisha as he accepted the task of Elijah are the almost inevitable response: "I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me."

That expresses the deep desire of new acting editor of THE MENNONITE as he in the present issue, takes over the responsibility from Rev. Reynold Weinbrenner who has successfully and helpfully guided the paper in recent years.

The new acting editor will need the sustained prayer of the people. For if THE MENNONITE is to continue to keep before the forty-four thousand or more members of the General Conference their responsibility for sharing the full Gospel—the Gospel that speaks with thundering power against every human sin from the most private personal sin to the huge, ghastly social sins—if THE MENNONITE is to continue to do that, it will need mighty men of prayer behind it.

Let the editor count on you to breathe a prayer for THE MENNONITE at least every time you receive an issue.

A Message from the Publication Board

by H. J. Andres, chairman

The Board of Publication is responsible, among other things, for the publication of The Mennonite, our official Conference publication.

This paper, going out weekly to the members of our constituency bringing the story of the various Conference activities as well as appeals for support and inspirational messages, is a vital and uniting influence—the importance of which cannot be overestimated. It is, therefore, also important that the editor of this paper be fully aware of the magnitude of his task in order that our paper fulfill its full purpose.

For the past seven years, Reverend Reynold Weinbrenner has served conscientiously, efficiently, and unselfishly in this capacity, giving his time and strength to this important work.

We are now happy to announce that the Reverend Jacob J. Enz has consented to serve as acting editor of The Mennonite. Reverend Enz is not entirely new in this work, having served as associate editor of this paper for some time. He is well qualified by experience and training for this important task. Above all, he has the love of Christ in his heart.

The editorship of The Mennonite is not unlike many other positions of responsibility. It is not a one man's task. In order that the editor may do his best, it is necessary that we as members of the Conference also give our best in that service which has been entrusted to us and in our support of our conference activities.

It is our hope and prayer that we may all work together for the glory of God and His Kingdom, and that our Conference paper may be a vital and compelling influence to keep our hearts united in Christ Jesus whose we are and whom we serve.

For the Board of Publication
H. J. Andres, Chairman

"No One Believes As You Do"

(CO's in France)

by Marvin Wasser

HOW MANY CO's are there in France now? How many CO's were there during the war? These are difficult questions and almost impossible to answer because of the French Government's attitude toward CO's and the CO position. During the war and even now the French Government has steadfastly refused to recognize the position of an individual who is conscientiously opposed to war for any reason. If an individual is called for induction and refuses to appear at the appointed time he is sentenced for failure to appear for induction. Or if the CO appears for induction, but stops at the point of putting on a uniform, or if he puts on a uniform and refuses to shoulder a gun, he is sentenced for refusal to obey orders. Philippe Vernier, the most outstanding pacifist of France, says that during the war the government tried to make the individual CO feel that he was entirely alone in his position. "No one believes as you do" was their continual retort. This unyielding refusal to recognize the right of individual conscience by a democratic government has made the position extremely difficult. Only those who are willing to go to prison for their conviction can register their objection. Unfortunately the number is few who are in that category. But what may be lacking in number is balanced by the steadfastness of conviction of the individual. In world War II there was one French Mennonite CO, Jean Paul Kramer of Colmar, who spent 2 years in the Nazi concentration camp of Buchenwald for his refusal to fight during the occupation of France. And with the inspiring story of Philippe Vernier almost all Christian Pacifists are acquainted. Perhaps with this small, consecrated beginning the CO movement may develop into a strong moral force in the country of France.

Through Our Windshield

Part I. How Do You Explain This?

by Missionary S. T. Moyer

SINCE we have returned from India on furlough, we have traveled at least the distance around the globe. Some has been behind smoky windows of railroad coaches, some behind the bright new large windows of famous express trains. And considerable of this travel has been from behind the windshield.

As I go about, I hear some complaints about the weakness of the Mennonite Church. I have heard a few who see very little good in it, and stay with it only because they were brought up in it. I find some who have wandered off to seek grass pastures elsewhere. I find those who see so little in it which is different from other churches that they would be willing to disband at once and merge with non-Mennonite groups.

That, according to the teachings of Christ, gaps and weaknesses exist in the Mennonite Church I freely admit. That other non-Mennonite churches have much good in them, this too I am happy to admit. But amidst the clap trap of certain other religious groups, the weaknesses of others, and the sterility of still others, everywhere I go I find Mennonites following the full message and program of Christ doing marvellous things. How do you explain this?

(1) Near Vineland, Ontario, we drove into the yard of acting Pastor Franzen, perfect strangers. The dog almost prevented us from getting off the car.

Our brother told us a story that amazed us. Fourteen years ago he came here with his wife and five little children, the oldest being five years of age. For seven years previously he had been a laborer with a fruit grower. He started with nothing. He dug three cisterns, two wells, and with a little help, not too much, he built his own house, barn, and three chicken houses. He owns these and six and a half acres of land. He planted these acres and the Lord blessed mightily.

He and his good wife are rearing a family of five boys and two girls. Last year they earned sufficient from these six and a half acres, with the income from about two hundred and fifty hens, to spend $1,600 for the education of five children away from home attending Mennonite schools and to meet all obligations at home. He is getting ready to build a new house. Canadian neighbors could not explain this in any other way but by believing that he must be subsidized by Hitler. Now that Hitler is dead, they cannot explain how this family gets ahead.

How do you explain this?

(2) The churches in one of the Western states had a young people's retreat in a certain city. This was the first Mennonite Young People's retreat for the entire state. The people of that city had had young people's groups meet, representing other churches, and were more or less disgusted with their presence in the town.

But the Young People of the Mennonite Churches made such an excellent record for themselves by their clean habits and exemplary behaviour that the business men of that city declared that they had never seen such a fine group of Young People. They heartily invited the Mennonite Young People back for the next year, but would not be too happy to see other groups return.

How do you explain this?

(3) There is a little rural Mennonite Church in Nebraska. It has only fifty members. It is located in a small rolling prairie town, in which is another church, non-Mennonite, which boasts of two hundred members. On any Sunday morning this Mennonite Church of only fifty members has more in attendance than the church of two hundred members. On Sunday night, the Mennonites carry on, have their "meeting" to hear the Word of God. If the pastor of the non-Mennonite Church of two hundred members wishes to meet his members on Sunday night, he will find them at the movies. It is impossible for him to have Sunday night worship; his members just will not come.

How do you explain this?

(4) Go with me to South Dakota to the Salem Church, near Freeman. Here these Mennonites are mostly Swiss.

During the 1930's, an epic of courage and perseverance was enacted as drought and grasshoppers did their best to try to drive out those whose forebears had settled here some sixty years previously. For almost a full decade they hung on. Since 1930 or 1939, the years have been better. And during the years, especially the recent years, this rural church has spread and fanned out almost like the spread of lowland flood—a flood of Mennonites. Other farmers, of good Protestant stock, sold their farms discouraged. Mennonites bought them up. The settlement expanded. In 1925 this church had 374 members. In twenty years time the membership has almost doubled, while the offerings for the work of the Lord Jesus have multiplied at least five times.

These Swiss came not directly from Switzerland as those in Ohio, but came via Poland and Russia. How explain this sturdy congregational growth, with Sunday congregations packed by row after row, section after section, of men, as well as with women worshippers, with hearty singing and liberal giving?

(5). Seventy years ago there was only one Mennonite Church in the counties of Allen-Putnam, Ohio. This was surrounded by churches of four other denominations, non-Mennonite. These Mennonites were Swiss directly from Switzerland.

What have the seventy years brought forth? Not counting the Lima Mennonite Church, this one church has grown to four. Each church has a church-owned parsonage, and each church has its own pastor. In these years, the membership grew from 500 to 1,727, more than trebled. There is hearty congregational singing, and just about as many men worshippers as women. A score or more young people have gone out into the Christian ministry, and hundreds as Christian teachers. Not one of the other four non-Mennonite churches has a record which can anywhere equal this record—in growth, in attendance of men, in giving, in young peo-

Will They Ever Go Back?

(OBSERVATIONS OF A MENNONITE RELIEF WORKER IN CHINA)

The Mennonite
722 Main Street
Newton, Kansas

If I recall correctly, your first letter said this thing was to be quarterly, which would make the attached offering somewhat tardy. I hope you won't be inconvenienced in any way by its being late.

Dr. Henry, the director of American Advisory Committee, flew to United States this week to confer with Church World Service heads and leaders of constituent denominations. Contributions from CWS for the China program have fallen off so drastically that we have had to curtail our activities rather sharply. There are a number of reasons, I suppose. For one thing, the term "Operation Rathole" seems to have taken hold in the American public's thinking on China relief, and the civil war and soaring inflation help to bolster the idea. The U. S. government ECA program has also caused a reduction in voluntary contributions. Adding to this is fatigue after so many years of giving for relief, and of course the stronger cultural ties with Europe where the needs are also great. According to the ECA treaty with China, the only welfare work to be done by that organization was indirectly, through grants of transportation funds to voluntary relief agencies. It now seems that a refugee feeding program will also be undertaken by them. It is the feeling of Dr. Henry J. Leighton Stuart, and the other Christian leaders in China today that now, more than ever before, the Chinese people need the help, support and confidence of the Church people in America. The Westerners who have been out here for a long time, who know the Chinese people and Chinese history, have unshaken faith in the integrity, the strength and the quality of the Chinese people. It is the newcomers who throw up their hands in hopeless resignation; at least that is my observation.

Night before last the new currency regulations were announced. Banks are closed yesterday and today. Everyone is adopting a wait-and-see attitude, and most people are frankly skeptical, they don't think the Gold Yuan will stop the inflation. This lack of confidence will of course contribute greatly to the instability.

With kind personal regards,

Sincerely yours,

Dallas Voran

It is increasingly clear that a clear-cut military victory in the struggle between the Nationalist government and the Chinese communists is impossible, and that some sort of a coalition government will be formed. Voluntary relief agency and mission leaders are recognizing the necessity of re-thinking their policies in regard to this political tempest, policies which have ranged from neutrality to an outspoken anti-communist or pro-nationalist stand. There are large areas in Northern and Northeastern China from which nearly all Christian missionaries have fled from communist occupation. These areas are being extended further and further into Central China and the Northwest. Many are now questioning the wisdom of abandoning their stations in places taken over by the communists. They are asking if it would not be better to remain even if some of their activities are curtailed, and try to establish working relations with the new regime. The people, and the needs of the people which the missionaries came to minister to, remain no matter what political party is in ascendency.

So the question is, if they abandon these areas now, will it be possible ever for them to go back. Those who decide to stay must be willing to accept the possibility of living under unsettled, even dangerous, conditions, and being cut off from foreign contacts for long periods. They must be adaptable, tactful, resourceful, courageous and strong.

In recent years the Church in America has awakened to its responsibility in the field of labor relations. This interest is reflected in the appointment to China of a new kind of missionary by the Northern Presbyterian mission board. His work is in Shanghai, where it is his job to become acquainted with industrial and labor leaders, discussing their problems with them and introducing into their negotiations the Christian message for industry. The industrialization of China is still in its infancy. This is a good example of a Christian organization's being alert to its opportunities.

(6). There is a great overseas Christian mission with work in Africa. It is known as a faith mission, and has under its jurisdiction hundreds of missionaries and stations. The candidate secretary of this large and growing mission has declared that if any Mennonite young people come applying for acceptance as missionaries, if they have had Bible school training, and if their folks have been Mennonites for three or four generations, they will surely be accepted. Why? Because experience has shown that all Mennonites now in service in that mission are doing a superior piece of work.

How do you explain this?

Occasionally I get into non-Mennonite churches: offerings are just about half what Mennonites give, women worshippers far exceed the men, singing is weak. I have met all the people referred to, and have been to all Mennonite churches referred to.

How do I explain these things? If we have eyes to perceive that behind the physical manifestations there are spiritual factors, then we must conclude that "faith is the victory." What kind of a faith? Will that kind of a faith be operative in the future as it has in the past?

Native Chinese Pastors

by Mrs. W. C. Voth

GENERAL Conference mission friends were happy and enthused last winter over the prospects for mission work at Paoki, Shensi. The missionaries had arrived safely, property had been acquired, meetings were being held in Mo Tien Yuan (translated, "Touch Heaven Yard"!), the Gospel was being preached in street and home.

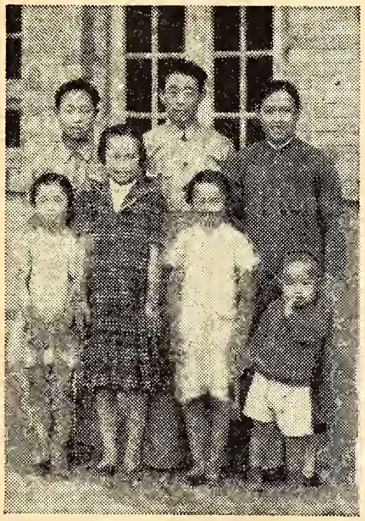
Then suddenly invasion threatened and the missionaries had to leave. How much they yearned to stay and develop the work so promisingly begun!

Already in March they had decided as a mission to invite additional Chinese help. Workers called were the Rev. and Mrs. Li Kuang Ming (Life sketch in Mennonite of August 10,p.8). With the five youngest of their family of eight living children the Li's were refugees from our South Hopei field.

Not Without a Witness

Although the missionaries and the Chinese workers too, temporarily had left Paoki, the Lord did not leave Himself without a witness at Paoki. Even while the fighting was going on this family was on the way.

Brother P. J. Boehr writes: "Our brother (Pastor) Li Kwang Ming and family started from Chengchow, Honan, on a perilous journey of 15 days through "occupied" territory to Tungkwan, 300 miles west of Chengchow. They were in a caravan of 21 mulecarts, with about 100 people. There were many dangers from robbers, and twice the inns in which the carts "overnighted" were robbed; but, as brother Li puts it, the Lord had so willed it that they should not be in those inns on those nights, but in Christian homes. Even though this long journey was, as it were, behind the "iron curtain" the Lord brought this family through safely; and not only so, but gave them opportunity for testimony. At Tungkwan they got the train to Sian, and on west to Paoki, arriving on the first "through" train, after damaged rail-bridges had been repaired temporarily."



So Rev. Boehr found Pastor Li and his wife happily located in "Touch Heaven Yard" when he made a trip back to Paoki in June to look the situation over. Regular meetings were being held on Sunday and during the week Mr. and Mrs. Li did street deputation work. With their eldest son back in the Kaichow, Hopei area and two sons in school at Kaifeng they were greatly concerned when that city (Kaifeng) had a severe battle and was occupied for a time. They were anxiously awaiting news from their boys and others of their close relatives there.

Mr. Boehr continues: "The Li family is a singing family, and have already won their way into hearts young and old. He and wife (Bright Light and Flourishing Flower) are products of our missionary work in South Hopei, but mostly of the work of the Holy Spirit. Under God we could be of some help to them, materially and spiritually, when, as orphan lad, this "Mee Loo" (meaning "lost the road, or way") came to our attention as a boy of about 10. He soon was given a new name, "Kwang Ming" (Bright Light). By the grace of God he and family, have been such a light for Christ for a number of years, and through varied and trying circumstances. Pray for them!"

MINISTRY TO MENTALLY ILL TO BEGIN

To the Churches of the General Conference of the United States

For years the members of our churches have urged that our General Conference take energetic steps to establish a home for the mentally ill where people so afflicted might receive loving Christian care.

At the 1945 session of the General Conference this question was again discussed and the following resolution was adopted:

> That our General Conference cooperate with the MCC to establish a Mental Institution and that if this is impossible, that our own General Conference go ahead as a Relief Board to establish a mental institution.

This resolution was subsequently submitted to the Mennonite Central Committee. In response to this request that MCC contacted other Mennonite groups with the result that all of them urged MCC to take active steps to establish such a service for all of us.

Careful study involving many months of work has since been carried on by MCC in order to discover how best to proceed and meet the desires of our people. This study covered such matters as the following: 1. How large is the number of the mentally ill or the mentally deficient among Mennonites. 2. Do our people generally desire the establishment of our own institution to serve the mentally ill. 3. Should we think of one large centrally located institution or several institutions suitably located in larger areas of Mennonitism. 4. How much would this program of service cost and how would it be financed. 5. What type of patients should we provide for, the chronically ill or the hopeful cases. 6. What experience have other church groups had with institutions for the mentally ill. 7. What counsel do men in government service in the field of public health have to offer to our program. 8. Will we be able to find qualified personnel to give adequate care to such institutions.

In all this study and in the formulation of plans of action, the guidance of the Spirit has been clearly evident. We are thankful that we can now report that the institution in the East near Leitersburg, Maryland is about to open. On the West Coast we have been very fortunate in securing a very favorable site near Reedley, California, to serve our needs in the West. Appropriate folders discussing this project are about ready for distribution. In the Middle West in the Newton, Kansas area, there is promising possibility that MCC may be able to secure a farm desirably located and with suitable buildings which, if purchased, might be available almost immediately to receive patients. We are thankful for these doors which the Lord has opened.

Great interest in this project has been manifested in our Mennonite circles and a considerable number have strongly urged that this service to the mentally ill be pushed so as to receive patients as soon as possible. We hope that our people will therefore respond generously and freely by contributing as the Spirit moves them so that this work may be placed into operation with promptness and vigor. Please inform others about the progress of this program so that they also may know that the long-hoped-for Mennonite institution for the care of the mentally ill is becoming a reality. We hope that many will now respond by prayerfully, sacrifically and wholeheartedly supporting this venture with their gifts.

Please send your contributions promptly to our General Conference treasurer at 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas, indicating that they are to be used for the support of the work of the hospitals of the mentally ill.

Sincerely yours,
H. A. Fast, Chairman
Emergency Relief Board of the General Conference

Relief Notes

Volendam to Sail Again

This vessel which has become well known among Mennonites, for transporting the first group of Russian Mennonite Refugees to Paraguay over a year ago, and more recently caried 279 more Mennonite refugees from Europe to Canada, is again scheduled for a sailing from Europe to South America on about October 8. The passenger group will be made up of Mennonite refugees, part of them being formerly from the Russian Ukraine, while others are formerly from the Danzig area of Germany. Most of these will probably settle in Paraguay.

Refugee Immigration to the U. S.

The Akron office has received some response to the recent announcement to the effect that any available housing and employment opportunities in Mennonite communities should be made known for possible use by Mennonite refugee immigrants. The office is eager to receive descriptions of any additional housing and employment openings into which refugees might be placed. It is not possible now to state when the refugees will arrive, but recent discussions with the newly appointed displaced persons commission indicate a favorable attitude toward Russian Mennonite immigration to the United States. (Those not eligible for the IRO assistance must apply under the regular preference quota, in which case applicants are subject to the usual political screening and other requirements.) The regulations of this displaced persons commission will be announced later, probably in September. Immigration teams will be sent abroad to select the immigrants. Plans are made for the IRO to provide transportation to the United States, with ships making regular calls at Bremerhaven and New York to keep the flow of immigrants moving.

Relief Shipments

The following MCC relief materials with an evaluation total of $161,622.23 were shipped from the United States and Canada during June, July, and August:

Food: 30 tons flour to China; 30 tons flour to Austria; 33 tons mixed foods to British Zone of Germany; 30 tons minute oats to British Zone of Germany.

Clothing, shoes, bedding: 36½ tons to the British Zone of Germany, 8 tons to the French Zone of Germany.

Books: 4 tons, mostly to Paraguay, with a small amount also to Belgium and the British Zone of Germany.

Tools and equipment: a total of 108 tons, including 4 saw mills and 4 traction steam engines, two ¾ ton International trucks, aluminum sheeting, and other tools and materials, all to Paraguay.

Relief Workers Departing and Returning

Edmund Zehr returned from Paraguay on August 23; Truman Diener from Ethiopia on August 25.

David and Hilda Schrag of McPherson, Kansas left for Paraguay on August 20. Arlene Shoup of Orrville, Ohio left on August 20 for Puerto Rico. Sailing for Europe on August 21 were: William and Ruth Dick of Newton, Kansas; Louis and Bertha Britsch of Archbold, Ohio; and Ruth Frey of Abilene, Kansas.

Service Opportunities and Needs

There is immediate need for four construction workers, both skilled and unskilled, for assisting in housing development, under the supervision of a construction foreman. The work will continue from about September 15 to December 1, and may be on a volunteer basis or at prevailing wages.

A dietician is needed at Brook Lane Farm. The work will include planning and also assisting in the preparation of meals.

Additional men and women can be used in the Voluntary Service Unit at Skillman, New Jersey, for the fall term of three months beginning September 1. Applications should be made before September 15.

For further information on any of these types of service, write to the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Needs Increase in China

Dale Nebel, MCC Relief Director in China, writes that "The need has increased during the summer and this winter will be the most critical of all." In spite of the fact that usually in summer the relief needs are less acute, there is already starvation in evidence now. These critical conditions are brought about by the continued and intensified warfare in China. Many thousands of refugees are being helped by MCC workers through feeding programs, medical care and other ways.

Bro. Nebel appeals urgently for supplies of food, clothing, bedding and soap. One carload of flour has already been sent, and more supplies will be sent to China, along with other countries, during the coming months as such supplies and the necessary funds are available.

Serving New Areas in Ethiopia

On several occasions the Ethiopian relief unit has received calls from surrounding districts for medical help. On one recent occasion, an urgent call was received and Dr. Conrad together with Truman Diener and Daniel Sensenig made the journey, in spite of nearly impassable roads. Several cases of malaria were treated and 31 persons were given anti-typhus injections. While the need for medical assistance was not as acute as expected, it is felt that such occasions provide good opportunity for extending the service and witness.

Service Opportunities

Young people may wish to give a period of voluntary service, as a contribution to the work of the church, and as a special witness at this time in view of the draft. Various Mennonite conference groups offer service opportunities for their young people. The MCC operates service units in a number of locations, both in the United States and abroad, all of which are of an experimental nature or offer opportunities for persons not otherwise thus provided for. These projects are further developed and enlarged as individuals volunteer to serve. Persons interested in such service should make application to their conference headquarters, or to the MCC office at Akron, Pennsylvania.

The wanderings of two Migrant Workers in Michigan and Wisconsin

By Leonore Friesen and Ruth Bixel, Omaha, Nebraska

At our next meal, when you thank God for the abundant and delicious food, remember in your prayers the migrants whose hands plucked those beans or tomatoes or peas or corn.

There were more than fifty at the migrant workers orientation camp at Camp Warren located near Benton, Harbor ,Mich. Was it ever cold. No heat! We appreciated the well-planned program, its flexi- morning ATTIRED by reversing the order of apparel. We appreciated the well-planned program, its flexibility, and the contagious enthusiasm of staff and workers. Obviously, Mr. Marshburn had done plenty of planning.

The other Mennonites at the camp were: Mildred Brenneman from Peoria, Ill., Frieda Yoder R. N. just graduated from Bluffton College, Charlene Unruh from Newton, Kansas, and Franklin Wig graduate of Pepperdine College in Los Angeles.

We Begin at Marshall, Michigan

We had been informed earlier in the summer that we were to do pioneer work among the migrants in Battle Creek, Mich., but alas, the migrants were not to arrive until August. We were sent to Marshall temporarily until something else opened. Here we found the work well developed. It had become a community project. Camp Wilder is located five miles from town. Mothers, fathers, and children of school age weeded onions all day and later would be working in the pickles. A man in Marshall had given the workers his pickup truck for the summer. So each day three or four of us trucked out to Wilder Creek. When it did not rain (which happens occasionally in Michigan) two of us would sit in the back part of the truck on boxes or ash bucket turned upside down.

Five churches supplied three and four workers each day to help in the nursery provided for the Mexican babies and young ones. Money had been provided through the community chest and by the churches. Milk was supplied by local dairies. All of the gas and oil and servicing for the truck was given free-of-charge by various companies.

How Migrants are Transported and Employed

One truck carried over forty Mexicans from Texas. Imagine over forty people of varying ages riding for 48 hours in none too comfortable positions in the back of a truck — plus their baggage. The trucks have canvass covers to shield them from the sun and rain and in some cases from the highway patrol and interstate commerce . . . . We do not know much about their independence in Texas but we are reminded of the early American Indians with their chiefs. Upon leaving Texas the migrant families are at the complete mercy of the truck owners. A trucker owns two or more trucks. earns his livelihood "hauling" people like so many cattle. Sometimes they make repeated trips to Texas for more "loads." The trucker arranges for their living and employment in mass.

Here were the fields ready for the planting of the Word, and our services were confined to tending babies. We did not mind taking care of children. They are precious, and we loved them. Samuel — pronounced Sam-Well' — became Ruth's charge. Samuel's smile of appreciation after the changing of flannel flags will not soon be forgotten. Little Mary Francis went everywhere that Leonore went. We fell in love with three year old Cruz. In his small pants pocket, Cruz carried a huge man's size handkerchief which at frequent intervals was pulled out with a sweeping flourish and transported to his nose as the Star-Spangled Banner in the breeze "fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses."

We Go to Rosendale, Wisconsin

The first morning on the field we visited all of the Mexican homes and procured the names of the children, their ages, and their grade level in school. We discovered that the average grade level was about two but after having them in school for several days we wondered if the teachers had not just pushed them along. Their ability did not come up to that. There were about 15 Texas Mexican families and 159 Jamaican men.

The 30 or 35 houses are arranged in four rows. Of course some of these houses were partitioned and housed two families. On the whole, we felt that the Mexicans were cleaner than some others we had seen this summer. There was a nice-looking building just erected, with washroom facilities for men and women and a laundry room.

Daily Bible School Begins at Rosendale

Monday morning we started the day at six and committed it to the Lord. We unlocked the hall wondering . . . . . "Will any come?" "How many will come?" "Will we need to go after them?" At nine o'clock Leonore crossed the street and to our surprise found them on the school playground. Leonore lined them up by two and two, and marched them across the street to school. One, two, three — ten — fifteen, sixteen, seventeen. "Could it be? We couldn't believe it!"

We had asked for Bible pictures and Bibles in town. None could be found. On this Monday morning a whole box of supplies came from Mrs. J. Neufeld in Chicago. PICTURES! That noon a roll of large pictures came from Topeka, Indiana, Mennonite Sunday School.

Tuesday — "Will they all be back?" All of them but one small child who could not speak English! Truly the Lord was helping us.

> "When we saw you, we thanked God."

Wednesday — Same seventeen there. How we feel the language barrier! We used the visual method almost exclusively - - - flannelgraph aids to tell the story and learn scripture — pictures for everything!!! Ruth wrote in her diary, "Finally recognized the tune of Jesus Loves Me."

We took a tour through the cannery in the evening, and also visited Mexican homes. Mrs. Villalobos, one of the young mothers, in expressing her appreciation said, "Children play together so nice since they go to school — less fighting." This mother is Protestant. Here we might add that in our school we found that at least one third of the children had had some Sunday school or V.B.S. experience, although most of them were born Catholics.

Sidney Stacey, a Jamaican working at the "pea pack" told us that when he saw the Mexican children he so much wished they could have a Sunday school for them and then added, "When we saw you, we thanked God."

Thursday — We had so much desired to have scissors but neither school nor churches had any in their possession except the four from the Congregational church. This morning in particular we had wished for scissors. The Lord again met our needs. That morning before school started the second box sent by Mrs. Neufeld of Chicago arrived. It contained pictures leaflets, tablets, pencils, crayons, and six scissors. Now we had ten — the very number of boys and girls in our larger group. (We always divided the group for the activity period.) The children joined us in thanking the Lord for the scissors.

One of the Jamaican deacons — there were four in the camp — visited the school. We placed before him a stack of Sunday school quarterlies which had been sent to us. Our children were poor readers and we had no use for the printed material. We suggested to the deacon (preacher) that he might pick out a few for himself and for his friends. He said, "I'll take all of them if you can't use them. I'll give them to the others."

The Migrants Move on to Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin

Saturday — "Salinas came with his truck this morning." This from the children on the playground at 8:30. We called the office to have the news verified and made an appointment with Frank Salinas for one p. m.

"Yes, they're leaving in the morning."

We were encouraged to follow the group to Sturgeon Bay.

"I appreciate what you are doing for my people."

Daily Bible School Continues

Our children, the Rosendale group, greeted us warmly and thus our school was in full swing again. This time our headquarters were in a beautiful hall. The carpet was green and the trees and shrubbery furnished the right setting for our alcove. Thirty, all sizes, were there.

The housing was excellent for five families who lived in a new building. The rest lived in a dilapidated chicken house and a huge barn which accommodated families on the ground floor, first floor, and in what was formerly the hay mow which now was reached by stairways and small balcony-like platforms. The floor had such large cracks that some children got down on their hands and knees and observed the family below. The rooms on the first floor were partitioned by old and new apple crates (Ruth's intelligence recognized the boxes; Leonore had never seen the like before) with their own blankets for doors. One young mother remarked, "Horses lived there before we moved in."

Why Migrants Become Discouraged

Now we know how the migrants feel and why they at times become discouraged. Our hands were tried at the art of picking cheeries in the morning. We averaged only two pails (six quarts in one pail) an hour. At 20 cents a pail we wouldn't much more than make our board for the day. At Reynolds Bros. they only get 15c a pail unless they stay through the entire harvest—then they get the extra nickel. Some small growers pay 25 cents. The large concerns attract migratory labor and we feel that it is almost a case of exploitation. Of course the average Mexican and Jamaican, we are told, averages 40 pails a day. But they work from early until late.

Along the Tongue River

CAMPING AT BIRNEY OR LONG FOOT CITY

Birney—a big house, water from a pump, coal oil lamps, eight miles from the store, no mail service every day, out in the sticks. "Oh," it is just like camping, they told us. We were looking forward to camping in that big unfurnished house, especially after we began to gather together all our food, clothes, bedding (even a mattress) tables, buckets, pots, pans, Bible School material and a dozen other things. And then one Saturday we packed the car with the first load and went down to look things over.

Birnev is one of our four Mission stations on the Tongue River Réservation. At the present time there are no workers stationed there, hence the uninhabited house to camp in. The station has not been neglected however, for during the winter months the Habeggers drove the forty miles from Busby to hold services every Thursday.

On Monday, we, the Habeggers, Ella Heppner and Christine Duerksen, made our second trip over the "divide." This time to stay for two weeks. Our life here at Long Foot City as the Cheyennes call Birney Camp was all they had said it would be and more. The house was big so we had plenty of room to spread out. A neighbor lady's refrigerator supplied us with nice ice water on those hot days. We entertained guests twice and learned to know some interesting people in this out of the way place. Our visits to camp gave us a chance to see the homes from which some of our Bible School students came. We saw a Montana ranch and attended an Episcopal church service Sunday afternoon at Birney.

Most of our time was spent in Bible School. The group of children who came on Tuesday morning were divided into two classes. Ella Heppner took the younger class in the front of the church while Christine Duerksen had the older class in the opposite corner. The attendance was comparatively regular, at least until it was time for the rodeo in Sheridan, Wyoming, seventy miles away.

Mrs. Habegger had a class with the women from the camp. By the end of the ten days some of the women were able to read a passage of Scripture in the Cheyenne. They all had some sewing to show, pillowcases, towels and one old lady even had a quilt.

Mr. Habegger was again a great help in the classes. Birney children still use and understand the Cheyenne better than English. In fact Mr. Habegger's stories told in Cheyenne helped to keep order in the class of older children. We will never forget the very worthwhile lessons learned there. We will never forget "camping" at Birney. We trust that the Lord will bless the work done in Birney Bible School this summer.

RETREAT AT ASHLAND

Several weeks ago an invitation was extended us to spend a week-end at Ashland. This week-end was looked forward to with much anticipation and we could hardly wait for someone to come and get us.

We arrived Friday evening and before we could talk over the many little things one always has to talk over, it was bedtime. Here as usual and as has often been the case in our work here unusual things happen, so going to bed was not as simple as it might seem. The sky was ablaze with fire and we all stampeded out of the house and into the car to see the fire. At the farm station a low frame building was burning. The building contained several irrigation pumps and several tanks of gas and oil.

At ten-thirty Saturday morning three cars from the Glendive and Bloomfield, Montana churches arrived to retreat with us for the week-end. Tables to seat thirty were set out of doors under the trees. Some slept three in a bed and some out on the porches.

Sunday services were in charge of the Glendive and Bloomfield young people. Morning services at Ashland and evening services at Lame Deer were a great inspiration to us.

We had a wonderful time of relaxation and fellowship—singing songs around the tables and times of testimony. The time passed altogether too quickly.

Although we as unit workers were utter strangers when we began our work together this summer, we did not remain strangers long. Having the same interests, being of one mind and purpose soon knit us together as workers striving to win the boys and girls to a love and knowledge of the Saviour.

We count it a rare privilege to have been chosen of God and to have been brought into a mission field for these few short summer weeks. To live with the missionaries and to see mission work first hand is an interesting experience. Every sacrifice is being made to bring these people to a saving knowledge of Christ. The people are welcome to come for help at any time, night or day, and you find them coming.

Our Non-Resistance Witness In India

by Martin H. Schrag

A few days ago, I discussed with an Indian Christian professor the attitude non-Christian Indians have toward Christianity. Both of us were concerned about prevailing indifference and irreceptivity among the educated and higher castes to the message of the Gospel. He stated that one of the greatest inconsistencies seen by the educated non-Christian Indian is the church's proclaiming of peace, love and goodwill and at the same time endorsing modern warfare. To Indians who have seen Gandhi and his numerous followers renounce military force in upholding and toward the fruition of non-violence this appears as a glaring contradiction and a flinching in the crisis.

Here in India where there is a closer relationship between religion and the State than in America, and where the large mass of the people are born into their religion (Hinduism), the actions of other nations are looked upon as the outgrowth of the prevailing religious philosophy. Therefore, when the Christian nations (so considered) go to war and destroy civilization, it is difficult for the non-Christian Indian to reconcile such actions with the gospel of love for which Jesus stood.

In the land of Gandhi I had thought there might be a strong pacifist or nonresistance movement in the Christian church. Although Gandhi's nonviolence and Christian nonresistance are two things, Gandhi has crystalized the thinking of the Indian nation in the realm of nonmilitary methods and one hoped that this would have been the needed motivation to the Christians to develop their genius. But one finds very little carryover. One is rather surprised that, percentage wise, a larger number of Christians are in the army than among some of the other religions in India.

It is, therefore, not surprising to note interest and receptivity to the Mennonite nonresistance concept. We, who feel that Christ's teachings on love mean nonparticipation in war and a positive expression in our concern for fellowmen, can be of great help in moulding the thinking of those who see the conflict. (Mr. Schrag, who is a member of the Eden Church of Moundridge, Kansas and member of the M.C.C. unit in India, wrote this article for the "India-Java News.")

LESSER MOMENTS

The special moment blazes, then
Its splendor dies away again,
While lesser moments calm and slow
Burn steadily with constant glow.
So when we seek our happiness
In daily, common things that bless
Not transient brightness, briefly found,
We see God's glory all around.

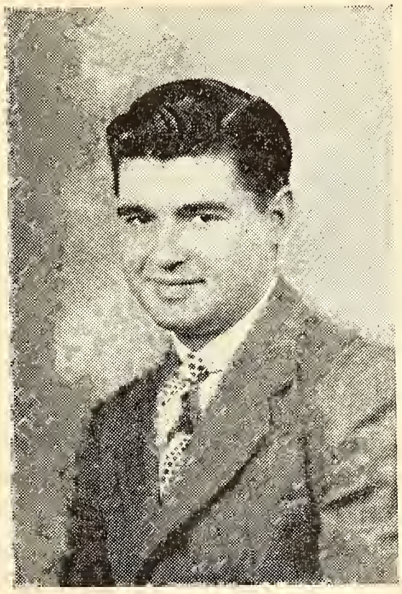
Alvin Moyer, Jr., President of State FFA



Alvin Moyer, Jr., of Chalfont, Penna. was recently elected president of the Keystone Association of the Future Farmers of America. This is the Pennsylvania organization of the FFA. Alvin, son of Alvin and Ethel Moll Moyer and grandson of Abraham and Susan Fretz Moyer lives with his parents and grandparents on a beautiful farm with fine buildings which has been in the family for at least 100 years. The Moyers are active members of the Deep Run Congregation of the Mennonite Church of which Herbert Fretz is pastor.

Alvin graduated from Quakertown High School this last Spring. He was selected leader of the 8200 FFA members in over 250 local FFA chapters because of his interest and activity in local, state and national FFA work. Many young people of the church are active in 4-H and FFA. Alvin's leadership in this work is significant.

FOR FAMILY REUNIONS

These are the days when family reunions are being held. This is the time for commemorating the coming of the pioneers. It is the season of so-called "Founder's Days" for which occasion no better music could be found than the special number by Heinrich Krehbiel, "Wo Du Hingehst."

This song, specially dedicated to the American Mennonites in gratitude for what they have for their suffering brethren in Europe, is prepared both in German and in English, carries a message which our people, particularly, can understand and appreciate. Written by a Mennonite for Mennonites it speaks a language, direct to the heart!

You can get copies of this song through your Conference book stores or write directly to the Publication Office at Newton, Kansas. It is especially designed for smaller groups and choirs which are in the habit of practicing together and it promises to become one of the truly loved songs of our people.

Our Colleges and Seminary

For the first time in three months the Seminary is beginning to resume its normal situation. New and old students are coming to the campus for the start of our 1948-49 school year. Among those that have already arrived are Ronald von Riesen, Executive Secretary of the General Conference Board of Education, who will finish his degree this year transferring from Central Baptist in Kansas City, and Erwin Goering, Extension and Alumni Secretary of Bethel College, who expects to take a Master's Degree.

Last Thursday the Seminary Quartet returned after its outstanding 14,000 mile tour which took it coast-to-coast through the United States and Canada. This very long journey of three months served to acquaint many people with the Mennonite Biblical Seminary and to glorify God through song and testimony. The school is deeply grateful to these men for the sacrifices they made in this trip and also to their families. This quartet will not resume its personnel during the school year since several of the men will be taking a church assignment.

The life of the Seminary continues to be greatly enriched by the visitation of foreign delegation of the World Conference of Mennonites. Dr. Dirk Cattepoel, of Krefeld, Germany, has been here this week; also Mr. and Mrs. Hendrik W. Meihuizen, of the Mennonite Church at the Hague, Holland; and then from Switzerland has come Samuel Gerber, teacher for a number of years at the Taeuferfschule in La Paturatte, Switzerland. Many of us are finding that these informal visits with delegates to the World Conference are actually the most valuable experiences we have had in inter-Mennonite relationships thus far. We commend the Mennonite Central Committee once again for bringing these men to us and for the privilege of sharing Christian convictions and experiences. Dr. Meihuizen addressed our prayer meeting on Wednesday and then spoke to the Mennonite Bible Mission on Friday night, while Dr. Cattepoel is expected to preach at the same church Sunday evening. He will speak at the First Mennonite Church on Sunday morning.

President S. F. Pannabecker has announced the following schedule for the opening events of school. The first chapel service will be held at 9:00 a.m. on Tuesday, September 7, and on that same day will be registration for the Mennonite Bible students. On Wednesday students will register for Mennonite Biblical Seminary. At 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday will be the Autumn convocation in which Professor David Wieand will speak on the topic, "The Bible Today." Class work then starts at 8:00 a.m., on Thursday, September 9, and later in that day all Mennonite students will have a mixer and reception here at the Mennonite Headquarters, 4614 Woodlawn. We look forward to an outstanding school year and praise God for the privilege of study and fellowship together.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Among those who have applied for admission to Bethel College this fall, the men outnumber the women considerably. A total of 333 applications have been accepted thus far, of which 183 are boys and 150 are girls. Twenty-eight married couples have been assigned housing. Both the dean of men and the dean of women report that housing will be at a premium this year because of the heavy outside enrollment. Old students outnumber new ones 2½ to 1, with a total of 137 new students enrolled up to the time of this writing.

The Adventures on a Missionary's Vacation

by Janet Soldner, Missionary in Colombia

IT IS A rewarding, though seemingly risky, undertaking to make the trip to the department of the Chocó which lies along the western coast of Colombia. In the heart of the Chocó the Mennonite Brethren have their mission station in a small town populated by people who appear to have come from the heart of Africa.

Miss Annie Dyck and I together with three national workers who serve as colporteurs and evangelists made the four-day trip starting from La Cumbre where the Mennonite Brethren have their rest home. (After a five-month period of labor in the hot malarial climate of the Chocó the missionary needs one month of rest at La Cumbre.) Traveling through the Cauca valley we saw numerous rice fields which were dotted here and there with white cranes. In Palmira it was a strange sight to see the two-horse buggies in the plaza which take one anywhere around the city for fifty cents. At the end of our first day's journey we enjoyed a typical Colombian meal in the hotel. It was served to us in the patio of the hotel which served as a dining room enclosed by tropical lattice work.

The second day we traveled by train along the Cauca River. The last lapse of the trip that day was by bus. For a while we thought that perhaps we would be obligated to lodge in the bus that night as it seemed that the driver just couldn't coax the car to go any further. Everytime the bus stopped, some one would blow into the gasoline tank. This was repeated about eight times. After each "Blowing" the bus would go for another mile or two. The poor vehicle was loaded down with cases of whisky and about thirty-five passengers; it did its best under the circumstances. Its chauffeur hadn't even taken a single tool along in case of emergency. The men were able to do enough "Blowing" until we arrived at a store where we could borrow some tools. Eventually we arrived at our destination and were still able to get a good night's rest. The hotel keeper couldn't understand why we didn't want to be wakened for the early mass for the celebration of Corpus Christi.

The following morning our bus supposedly was to have left at six o'clock; but since the same chauffeur which we had the afternoon before first wanted to do some celebrating for the religious festival, we didn't start until eleven o'clock. We felt very lucky that he decided to go at all that day. Unfortunately there was no other bus to the same place. It made our hearts ache to see how the people in that town were carrying the images out of the church, and putting them on platforms for a big celebration—worshipping only His statue.

Finally we were off for Quibdo, the capitol of the Chocó. The bus wound its way through dense forest or jungle-like territory. The road was treacherous to say the least. One might say that the road was like a ribbon flung around the mountains. My sympathies were with the driver of the bus, who kept the steering wheel constantly twirling. Looking over the fender to nowhere one would see that the wheel had a little less than a foot of mother earth to spare.

Upon arriving at Quibdo, the capitol city of the Chocó, there were about fifty little black boys ready to grab our baggage, eager for a tip. They seemed so insistent. The surroundings made me feel as though I had arrived in a different world.

As we were walking toward the pastor's home, I suddenly felt a stone hit my back. It was a woman who thought she did her duty by throwing a stone at an evangelical.

The pastor's wife gave us the best beds she had — she made us comfortable on church benches, giving us all the pillows she possessed.

The last day of our trip I believe was the most interesting. A man who looked more like a slave than anything else kept us from falling into the mire as we stepped into the launch. The first five hours consisted of a launch ride up the Atrato River. There were no special seats for the passengers — we sat on the baggage or on the freight that consisted of lumber. We were glad that not the entire launch was full of dried fish. After getting off the launch we had a forty-five minute trip by truck. Miss Dyck and I were able to sit in the cab. The rest of the passengers either stood or sat on the baggage back of the truck. After this the freight and baggage had to be unloaded and put on canoes. We passengers also had to cross the river on canoes. After crossing this river we had another trip of about three hours before actually arriving at the mission station in Istmina.

All the houses in Istmina, are built on stilts over the river, including the missionary home.

The missionaries here are doing a noble piece of work. Very few people attend their Sunday services At first large crowds attended as they were attracted by the music. On Sunday afternoons quite a large number of people are reached during the open-air service on the streets. They are able to reach the largest number of people during the days that they have the clinic for treatment. Here they are always given a gospel message.

The prevailing sins that make the missionaries' heart ache in this community are stealing and immorality. One night robbers broke into their house and stole articles from their bed-side.

It is only because of the love which constrains them that the missionaries are able to continue their work in Istmina. Awareness of such widespread want brings the responsibility of Christian outreach to rest much more heavily upon every believer. It was this same attitude of self-forgetfulness and self-abandonment that Paul urged upon the Philippians when he wrote, "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others."

One of the outstanding events which I cherish is the Communion service which I attended on my return trip at the evangelical church in Quibdo. I was the only English-speaking person in the congregation. Although I felt like a stranger as far as race and language were concerned, I felt a common bond — that we were brothers and sisters in Christ and could partake of the same communion. There were only about ten other people participating in this communion service. I was happy to see how the Word of God is penetrating in a very difficult part of Colombia, and that in these sections there are some who are acquainted with the truth of the Divine Message. We need to pray that the Seed already sown may grow and that there may be lights that will shine in the dense spiritual darkness of these regions.

Behind the 100% Plan

Inman Mennonite Church
Rev. Aaron J. Epp, Pastor
Inman, Kansas
(Serving 88 homes)

OUR church adopted the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN several years ago. As all other ventures, it was not received with too great an enthusiasm, but now the plan is received wholeheartedly. A misunderstanding, thinking that the plan was to permit church members to receive it cheaper, caused only those members to receive THE MENNONITE who contributed the subscription rate into the treasury. This has been corrected and as far as we know every home is a receiver of THE MENNONITE. The one in charge of the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN needs to be alert so that subscriptions are either added or canceled as the situation might arise.

We want THE MENNONITE in every home because our people need to be informed what others are doing in church work. Every home needs to be enlightened in doctrine, theology, and current thought found in THE MENNONITE. Thus I fully endorse this plan for three reasons: (1) This is one way of getting our church paper into every home, for every church has members who will not subscribe to the church paper either through neglect or indifference; (2) a young married couple is very apt to overlook this great essential in the home and the PLAN makes subscription certain; (3) and to those non-resident members who otherwise would not subscribe to THE MENNONITE, this PLAN serves as a way of keeping our people united in the faith.

Out of the Soul of a Leper

This hymn was originally written in Bengali by one Masidham (to use his Christian name), a simple peasant who contracted the disease of leprosy, suffered its ravages, and found himself, like so many other lepers in India, increasingly cut off from his fellows as the effects of the disease become more and more manifest. In his distress of body, mind and spirit, he at last found sanctuary at the Home of the Mission to Lepers at Purulia in Bihar. There he found much more than ever he had dared to hope. Above all, he found a faith to redeem him from the slough of despond in to which he had sunk, and from which the religion of his fathers was unable to rescue him.

JESUS THE SEEKING SHEPHERD

"For the Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lost."

To the tune of "Just As I Am"

To us thou cam'st, O Christ our King,
Thy love and saving help to bring;
Thy mercy of Thy name we'll sing,
To Thee, O Lord, be praise!

O goodly Shepherd, we were lost,
Of all mankind despised most;
Thou cam'st to save us, Heavenly Host,
To Thee, O Lord, be praise!

Thou found'st Thy lost ones 'neath a tree
Loathed, dying lepers then were we;
Thou gavest us fair shelter free
To Thee, O Lord, be praise!

Sweet are the homes where now we stay,
Sweet is the food Thou giv'st each day;
Sweetest Thy voice to hear alway,
To Thee, O Lord, be praise!

We sought Thee not, O loving Lord,
Thou didst seek us, by men abhorred;
Freed us from error by Thy Word,
To Thee, O Lord, be praise!

Still dost Thou call men by Thy voice,
In Thy full freedom to rejoice;
May they all make their wisest choice!
To Thee, O Lord, be praise!

Masidham prays that at Thy feet
All men may find salvation sweet,
And all at last in heaven may meet.
To Thee, O Lord, be praise!

THESE WORDS UPON THY HEART

by Howard Tillman Kuist

This book comes from one of the greatest living Bible teachers in America. Dr. Kuist is especially noted for his unique approach to the study of the Holy Scriptures. In 1946 Dr. Kuist gave a series of lectures at the Union Theological Seminary in Virginia for the "Sprunt Lectures." These lectures are found in this book. In these messages Dr. Kuist presents his philosophy of Bible study. He holds that men must re-create the Bible message for their own hearts. There must be a practical response, a "behaving" of the Word, for "the Scriptures come alive for the reader with real urgency as the word of the living God only as they function in him." Exact observation and comparison in the study of the Bible the author considers essential for an understanding of the Holy Scriptures. The process of inquiry he advocates includes a discovering of compositional units, identifying relations between the units, and recognizing characteristic features which reveal underlying designs. The laws of composition as given in Ruskin's Essay on Composition are to be applied in the study of this divine Composition, the Bible. No haphazard methods are tolerated. Original powers of observation are to be developed. The student must concentrate on matter, form, and content in a scholarly approach to re-create the message of the Word.

The study of the Bible is ever to be a spiritual adventure; and therefore, spiritual laws must be closely adhered to if the Sacred Scriptures are to be re-created into the art of Christian living. For this reason the author dwells at length upon the loyalties of heart and its importance in the study of the Bible. The Bible may be studied without commitments, but that is a matter very different from a study with commitments of heart. Ideas that influence people most are those to which they give their loyalty. Response to the Scriptures is the paramount requirement for a full grasp of its meaning. "In Jesus we see the perfect response, and because of that, also the perfect revelation."

Dr. Kuist presents a method of Bible study which has as its goal a re-creation of its message in life. The book comes from the heart of a great teacher whose insight and grasp of the Scriptures has often astonished his students. Those of us who have been his students know how rewarding this method of Bible study can become.

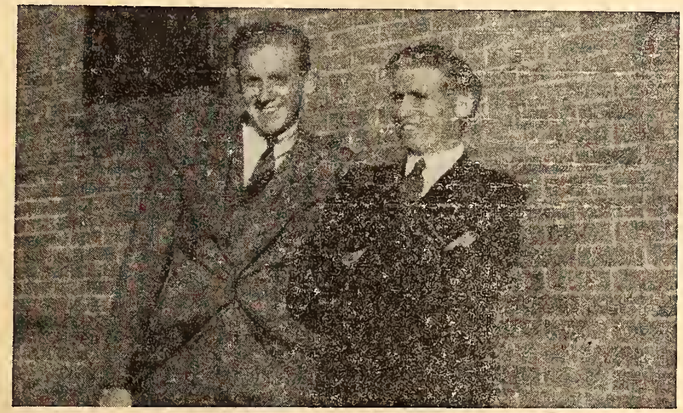
The Student Exchange Program

by Lloyd L. Ramseyer

One of the most interesting developments in the American Mennonite colleges in recent years has been the student-exchange program. This program has been an important factor in helping Mennonites in different countries to learn to know each other better. If the church is to be a united church, it is important that the youth of today who will be the church leaders of tomorrow should secure a world-vision of the Mennonite cause. The student exchange program is an important factor in bringing about that understanding.



Foreign College Students at Freeman College

During the war the Mennonites in America were drawn closer together through support of camps for those who chose the non-resistant alternative to war and through work of relief and rehabilitation. These activities were handled through the Mennonite Central Committee. Early in the war, Mennonite colleges also saw the need for closer cooperation. At a meeting held at Winona Lake, Indiana, on August 8, 1942, the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges was formed. This organization included nine schools. During the war the Council worked in close cooperation with the Mennonite Central Committee, particularly with relation to educational programs for men in Civilian Public Service Camps. Through the cooperation of the colleges courses were outlined, instructors were provided, and standards were established by means of which college credit could be given either upon completion of courses given in the camps or by appropriate examinations at the college itself.

The various colleges felt that they had benefited greatly by this working together. Through these joint efforts the administrative staffs and faculties of the different schools had become better acquainted and had learned from each other. With the close of the war educational leaders had a vision of a larger cooperative effort in education among Mennonites which would cross international frontiers. They were convinced that such cooperation would increase the bond of fellowship between Mennonites throughout the world, and that all groups would be strengthened in the faith through this closer tie. The most logical step in this plan for closer fellowship seemed to be to bring some of the European young people to America to attend our schools and eventually to encourage our own students to visit Mennonite groups in Europe.

With this in mind the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges authorized two representatives to go to Europe during the summer of 1946 to start this exchange movement. Dr. E. G. Kaufman, Bethel College, and Dr. E. E. Miller, Goshen College, were selected as the representatives to undertake this work. As a result of their efforts twenty-six European young people came to the United States to attend Mennonite and Affiliated colleges. These young people were either Mennonites or had become closely associated with Mennonites through

As we learn to know each other better we become increasingly convinced that the important thing is not the earthly allegiance which we give to any government nor the language which we speak, but the fact that we have a common God and a common Christ who died for all of us without respect to man-made differences. We are all under Christ as we clasp hands beneath His cross. May God grant that this exchange of students may strengthen our faith and our evangelical zeal, and make the church of tomorrow a better representative of Christ on earth.

I Am a Conscientious Objector to Comics

an editorial

It is 4:00 p. m. My Chevrolet has just climbed a long hill with a few extra "pings," and come to a stop in the peaceful farm yard of a parishioner. The dogs bark. I am not sure whether they are anti-religious or not. I trustingly get out and make my way past the largest which has all the markings of a German police dog. I reach the door. With my eyes on the dogs, I knock modestly. A woman answers the door. She looks inquiringly at me. I announce that I am the minister. I am invited into the house. This is to be my first contact with the family. The family is composed of father, mother, three daughters, and a son.

This could have been an ordinary pastoral call except for one thing. I encounter a great obstacle. There is a stack of comic books which seem to possess the seventeen-year-old-high school senior. She looks up briefly when I am introduced. Now her attention is again focused upon her comic books. Wildly her eyes run across page after page. I note the expression on her face. It changes constantly. There is mirth, excitement, anxiety, anger. There are some expressions which puzzle me. I cannot read them. I almost forget to visit. My thoughts are always running to this girl and her comic books. I wonder what she is reading. Do the pictures show her how they kill animals or are they killing people. Are they using a super machine gun or a gun which shoots out a ray which instantly kills many people. Are somebody's eyes being gouged out with blood running all over the face, or is it some woman shooting it out with the police.

The mother notices that my attention is repeatedly drawn to this girl. She explains that these books are given to her daughter by some relative. She wonders whether my children have become interested in comics.

My pastoral technique is not equal to the situation. Shall I leave this girl to her comic books? Will it be possible to establish any kind of personal relationship with her? Shall I simply denounce her comic books and leave?

I discover that she is interested in 4-H work and is a club member. She is especially interested in raising steers. I begin to ask questions. She lays aside her comic book. I ask every question of which I can think, which is related to raising steers. (Thank God I was raised on a farm.) She becomes enthusiastic. Now the family and I are out in the lot looking at prize steers, noting the good points of each.

My car coasts down the hill along the road that leads away from the farm. I ponder the experience of the afternoon. Will the girl go back to her comic books, or is the spell broken?

I am a conscientious objector to comic books. I know that comics fill young people's and children's minds with poison. That poison is so powerful that my preaching is to no avail. Comics nullify the teachings of the Gospel. Through them the children are taught to cheat, steal, kill, and practice all kinds of brutality. Always the crook is the hero. The killer gets praise. The most brutal person comes to be admired. Through these pictures unhealthy sex attitudes are stimulated. The excitement always comes from action against the law or accepted customs of the community. Children easily become anti-social and anti-Christian. I am a conscientious objector to comics because they are the husks which we give to children when we could give them nourishing food. I object to comics because they poison the wells of childhood by filling the mind with gruesome pictures that crowd out the lovely and beautiful. I object because they exaggerate the beastly. They put before the mind the most devilish designs and plans which the human mind can conceive.

Let every lover of children protest the sale of this literature in our towns and cities. Some cities have already banished the sale of comic books deemed harmful. We cannot let our youth absorb these dreadful pictures and then expect them to become acceptable citizens or even Christians. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

The Holy Spirit and Rally Day

an editorial

Is Rally Day a whipping up of enthusiasm for the Church School through human instrumentality alone or is it an infilling of the total program of the church with the Spirit of God so that human instrumentality becomes God's means of arousing the people to the opportunities and responsibilities of the church of our Lord and Saviour? Rally Day can be another Pentecost if the conditions of Pentecost are again fulfilled. The spiritual equation that has Pentecost as its outcome is much time spent as a disciple or learner (study) with Jesus plus experiencing (experience) the resurrection power of Jesus plus the great commission (strategy) plus the unity of believers (fellowship) in prayer (Personal resources). When the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ again fulfills these conditions, it will again speak the common language of the Gospel that will rally all men to the blood-red standard of the Cross. And rally days will become Pentecost.

No Alternative Service

an editorial

It takes only one honest look at the Christ on Calvary's cross where the blood of the son of God was poured out for the sins of mankind to become convinced that there is but one way to deal with evil in the world. That way is the way of redeeming love pouring out its life blood for those who are evil. There is no other way. This is the glorious service of the man of God; let us not cheapen it by calling it alternative service.

Too long has there been confusion as to what constitutes service for the man of God. Now as never before that question must have a forthright answer, and the church of our Lord Jesus Christ must give that single answer! Young men again are in the process of deciding for themselves what service means for the Christian young man. Does it mean conversion, following Christ, working redemptively in the church, living a clean-cut life, witnessing for Christ and then suddenly adopting another 'master' who orders the performance of a service that destroys life—the very lives God has commissioned him to win to Christ? In the past, many sincere Christians said yes. Many will probably say it again. The life, death, and resurrection of Christ say an unconditional NO to that question. Such a service does not make sense. It is as if Simon of Cyrene had dropped the cross back on Jesus and had run away. Will the Church, will sincere Christians join in the answer that Christ is giving?

I cannot take part in war program because I have pledged allegiance to Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, but as a citizen of the United States and the Kingdom of God, I deem it my duty to do the best I can for God and my country. Therefore I want to support a constructive program that will help to further the cause of peace and missions and bring about better understanding among individuals and nations.

I therefore pledge to lay aside of my income each week as the Lord has prospered me (I Cor. 16:2) to be used for redemptive activities toward peace and good will and if God calls give my time for service for peace and missions.

Sample of a Pledge card of Tabor Church, Newton, Kansas

For the Christian young man who refuses to join the armed forces there is technically no alternative service in connection with the present draft. Actually, however, there is an ever-growing responsibility for him with the backing of the Church to witness to the only kind of meaningful service. The time is here for courageous, pioneering, Spirit-filled young men to give a witness to our pagan world concerning a kind of service that will reveal the world's kind of service for what it really is—the work of antichrist!

If this is to happen, there will be need for a much more genuine kind of Christian witness.

In a recent young people's meeting a question was asked as follows, "How much time should I give to the service of the church and how much to my work?" The answer might have been put in another question, "How much time does a young man give to his work at home when he is in the armed services?" One reason for the poor understanding by the world of the Christian way of service is that the world has not seen the Church serious enough in its enlisting of men for missions, for healing, for Christian teaching for the ministry, for relief, and other areas of vital need today.

It is time that the world saw a militant, marching Church that really means business. Only when the world sees men all along the line attacking the citadels of sin in the lives of men with the Gospel, only when the world sees mounting millions given for the help of the needy and the spread of the Gospel, only when the world sees men pouring out their life's blood because of their conviction regarding redemptive love in Christ Jesus, then—and only then—will the world begin to see that there is only one kind of service!

Die for my country?
Yes, of course, I would!
But not the easy way,—
Bands playing,
Flags waving,
And the cheers of war-mad thousands in my ears!
And not the useless way—
My body splattered over foreign fields
Or hung in shreds on barbed-wire barriers,
That rabble-rousing slogans be proved false
And millionaires make profits from my blood!
God give me strength to die the hardest way—
To die for peace,
Conviction,
And dream of brotherhood—
My only crime that I refuse to kill!
The Pioneer of Peace died on a cross—
That was before the day of firing squads!

What We Should Learn from Germany

by Peter S. Bartel

At the time of this writing there are several German Mennonite ministers touring throughout the United States and Canada. One would hope that they are not received as people who are to be shown what "real Mennonitism" really is. It is to be hoped that the Mennonite communities will be wise enough to learn from the experiences of these people in Europe.

German children gleaning garbage cans.

Neglected Her Youth

The first thing that we learn from the experiences of German Christians is that the Christian church must never shirk its responsibility to its youth. The reason that the Hitler Youth was such a success in Germany was that the youth was not being offered a challenging program within the framework of the church.

Neglected Her Poor

Another thing that we should learn from Germany is closely related to the above mentioned—namely, that the church should not neglect the opportunity of serving the poor and needy in the community. If the church that preaches the Golden Rule and brotherly love cannot translate its preaching into action, the world has every reason to doubt the sincerity of its preaching. There are many people who tell us it makes a difference whether welfare work is being done in the name of Christ or in the name of the State. The most dangerous attitude that any people can have toward the church is one where the church represents a tradition handed down throughout its generations. Since it is a tradition one does not expect that it has any present-day message. In America the people say it is old-fashioned. Here they say it is the "traditional" point of view.

America?

After having been in Germany for some time one shudders to see how closely the same pattern is being spun in America. About all that seems to be lacking is an aggressive government that will assume for itself credit for every constructive act whether it be in politics, welfare work, or religion and we will be well on our way toward bringing our cities into ruins. One can only thank God that our government is not like that. Along with that one should pray that we in America may see in Germany of what happens when the churches go to sleep in their traditions.

The Heroism of Faith

"Blessed are they that mourn." Translating this beatitude literally from the German it might read, "Blessed are they that bear their sorrow." We profess that we would follow Christ at all cost. The richest experiences of relief work are those that make one realize how much strength and comfort people have in their faith. If any of you are interested in seeing how much heroism it takes to "bear your sorrows" look into the lives of the many thousands who have lost everything as the result of the war. The thought has often been expressed that Germany's suffering should be a lesson to the rest of the world. If this could be the case — and I think it should — then we will have much to learn from Germany.

On Holy Ground

by Willard Kraybill

ON JULY 2 forty young American Mennonites stood quietly at the simple, yet impressive, shaft in memory of Menno Simons near Witmarsum, Holland. None of us who were present at this occasion will ever forget it. An atmosphere of great reverence seemed to pervade all, and each of us seemed to sense that here we were on holy ground. After singing "Faith of Our Fathers," we prayed silently that God might use us in more zealous service for Him, after the example of the great leader whose life is here memorialized.

This occasion was only one of the many that the European Voluntary Service group, sponsored jointly by M.C.C. and our Association of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges, will long remember from their stay in Holland. The bond between the Mennonites of the United States and those of the Netherlands was greatly strengthened by this visit. Our group lived in the homes of the Dutch Mennonites, worshipped in their churches and participated in their daily life. We can tell about the fine hospitality we enjoyed, but it is impossible to convey to the readers of this column the sincerity and warm friendliness shown us by our Dutch brethren. Sometimes we could not converse with them due to the anguage barrier, but even then their expression and acts of kindness made us feel at one with them. The American students joined the Dutch young people in a week-end conference at the Aalsmeer church, visited the Mennonite churches in numerous villages and cities and were the privileged guests of Dr. ter Meulen, a Mennonite, for a tour through the Peace Palace at the Hague, of which he is head librarian. But these are only a few of the high spots of our visit. We are especially grateful to the Dutch students who have studied in our American Mennonite Colleges the past two years, and who were our hosts in Holland. No effort was spared by these friends of ours in our behalf.

At every stop our Dutch brethren and sisters expressed the most sincere gratitude for all that the American Mennonites, through M.C.C., have done for hem during the difficult post-war years. We in the United States do not realize how much this aid has meant to our fellow Mennonites in need. One of our last visits in Holland was to the Mennonite retreat at Elspeet, the place which has come to be known as the spiritual center of the Dutch Mennonite Church. Here we sang together, ate together and prayed together. As ur buses drove away the people waved in a warm farewell that moved each of us. It was farewell to our Dutch brethren and sisters.

"For ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another, and indeed you do it toward all the brethren hich are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more."

Beyond Our Own

"Beyond Our Own" is a new feature that is being introduced in the present issue of THE MENNONITE which is intended to give the readers of THE MENNONITE news items of significant happenings in other Mennonite conferences, other denominations, and news of significance to the Christian church from the world at large.

The Defenseless Mennonite Church has adopted a new name, "The Evangelical Mennonite Church," at its recent Conference held from August 25 to August 29, at Fort Wayne, Indiana. The basic tenets of the church, however, remain unchanged.

Initiation of Mission work in Japan and the acceptance of the churches of Paraguay and Brazil were among the important actions taken by the 368 delegates to the 44th General Conference of the Mennonite Brethren Church of North America, convening at Mountain Lake, Minnesota, August 28 to September 2.

War-battered tanks by the hundreds, according to a recent Associated Press item, are being rehabilitated in a new program to revive the strength of the armed forces.

Religious organizations of America, pioneering in the use of multi-purpose food for relief feeding in twenty-one countries of Europe and Asia, have made a major contribution in introducing this new scientific food to the world by distibuting nearly thirteen million of these "three cent meals" during the past two years. Clifford E. Clinton, president of the non-profit Meals for Millions Foundation has announced 16,500 of these were distributed by the Mennonite Central Committee in Germany.

"That the First Assembly of the World Council of Churches be declared to be and hereby is constituted in accordance with the constitution drafted at Utrecht in 1938 and approved by the churches: that the Assembly consist of those persons who have been appointed as official delegates of churches adhering to the council; and that formation of the World Council of Churches be declared to be, and hereby is, completed." Such is the resolution introduced by Pastor Marc Boegner of France at the first business session of the Amsterdam Assembly on August 23. The Archbishop of Canterbury put the motion and some 450 delegates, representing approximately 150 communions, arose to adopt it and the World Council of Churches became a reality. The World Council of Churches traces its ancestry back through a number of inter-church organizations to the Student Volunteer Movement which was organized in 1886.

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

The Canadian Mennonite Bible College will have its formal school opening on October 1st. On the basis of the large number of applications received and inquiries from all parts of Canada, a good enrollment is expected. Launching on its second year, the school plans to continue its construction program for two years on the college level. Miss Pauline Juhnke, who will serve as registrar and Dean of Women, and David Janzen, who will teach social sciences, have been added to the faculty this year. Those on the staff last year and who will be serving again this year are Arnold J. Regier, I. I. Friesen, Henry Wall, and J. Conrad.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Five foreign students will attend Bluffton College this fall under the student-exchange program of the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges. Three of these will be men students from Holland. They are J. Karssiens, Breukelen; Jacob Rote, Rotterdam; and Joan de Monchy, Rotterdam. The last-named is a brother of Rene de Monchy who was a Bluffton student in 1946-47.

There are two students coming from Germany. They are Herta van Delden, Gronau, Wesfalen, and Hermann Neff, Regensburg, Bayren. In all, fifteen German students are to come to Mennonite schools in America this year. The United States government is very enthusiastic about this program and would have been happy to have had Mennonite schools take twice this number.

"Even he shall build the temple of Jehovah; and he shall bear the glory and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne and the counsel of peace shall be between them both" Zachariah 6:13. The above text was used by President S. F. Pannabecker in opening the school year in chapel. His message challenged the student body to live to the glory of God, and to reject living on merely human strength, He pled for a more radical doctrine of grace to permeate the whole life of the school with Jesus Christ as the Lord of glory. Other addresses during these early days were by Dean William Beahm and by Dr. David Wieand, son of the founder of Bethany Biblical Seminary, Dr. A. C. Wieand. These addresses served to start the school year off with a highpoint of inspiration.

On Thursday night, September 9, the Seminary had a special reception at the Woodlawn Headquarters. Brief addresses were given by Don. E. Smucker, Marvin J. Dirks, and John T. Neufeld, climaxed by a devotional address given by President Pannabecker. The honored guest at the meeting was Gustav Reimer, Sr., a lay-leader of the Prussian Mennonites, who is now a refugee and commissioner of the German Mennonite Conference for the migration of his people. Brother Reimer was introduced to the group by Benno Toews.

The Young People's Union of the General Conference met here this week with Ronald von Riesen, executive secretary of the Board of Education, who is now pursuing his studies at this school.

This year our commuting to Bethany is done in a fine bus which replaces the number of passenger cars it took to transport our students. Jacob D. Goering is the driver of this bus. It was purchased second-hand from a local company.

The registration of approximately thirty-five full-time students indicates nearly a 33% increase over last year. We rejoice in the further manifestation of God's blessing on this institution.

On Saturday, September 11, Hanno Klassen, of Heidleberg, Germany, arrived to take up residence at the Seminary and to take the regular course of theological studies. He has studied at Heidleburg University and comes through the Mennonite Central Committee. Traveling with him was Hugo Musselman, of Munich, Germany, who went on to Freeman Junior College. Visiting briefly with us on Saturday also was Ernest Hege, of Germany, who is en route home after a year at Freeman College.

Miss Ellen Harder of Whitewater, Kansas, a student in our Bible School will serve as school nurse for the term of 1948-49. She is a graduate of Bethel Deaconess Hospital.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Campus Guests

Dr. W. Leendertz and Dr. Dirk Cattepoel, Mennonite leaders from Amsterdam, Holland and Krefeld, Germany, respectively, spoke at the morning chapel services on Thursday and Friday, September 9 and 10.

Campus Activities

The cabient members of the Student Christian Association held their annual week-end retreat on Saturday and Sunday, September 11 and 12 at Harvey County Park. Rev. J. J. Ensz, instructor of Bible, was the guest speaker for the occasion.

Thursday evening has been set aside for the meeting of the various organizations of Bethel College. On Thursday evening, September 9, many of the clubs had their first meetings of the year. The following met to plan their functions for the year 1948-1949:—Alpha Psi Omega, Commerce Club, Home Economics Club, International Relations Club, Physics Club, SCA, Student Ministers Fellowship, Student Volunteers, and the Student Council.

The 21st annual presentation of Haendel's Messiah by the Newton Community Chorus will be given sometime in December. An invitation is being extended by Dr. W. H. Hohmann, director of the chorus, to choirs and individuals in neighbouring communities to the first practice in the Bethel College chapel, Monday night, October 4, at 8 o'clock.

Enrollment Statistics

Enrollment for the fall quarter may reach the 400 mark, statistics released from the dean's office indicate. Approximately 385 students had enrolled at the end of the first school day, with number of others not arrived yet on the campus. Several students from Canada and Germany, as well as local students are expected to come yet.

Men enrolled outnumber women considerably notwithstanding the pending draft of college-age boys. No details pertaining enrollment are available as yet, freshmen courses, however, are very crowded indicating a large freshman class.

Governor to Speak

The Honorable Frank Carlson, Governor of the State of Kansas, will head the list of speakers at the 60th anniversary celebration of Bethel College, speaking Tuesday afternoon, October 12, at 2:30 p.m. Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, of the Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church of Wichita, has also been engaged to speak in connection with this event.

One hundred and eight foreign mission boards, representing every major Protestant denomination, have approved a joint campaign this fall for a vast five to ten year expansion program in overseas work, according to Rev. Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield, secretary of the Foreign Missions Conference, an inter-denominational Protestant body with headquarters at 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. This is the first time Protestantism has made a joint appeal for church and public support for foreign missions. The goal for the appeal, by the participating boards, is expected to be in the neighborhood of $150,000,000 for the first five years of the cooperative Protestant undertaking.

Before You Decide

—"Convinced that our young people should carefully study Before You Decide, the Western District Peace Committee, meeting Friday, September 10, decided to send five copies of this excellent M.C.C. publication to each of the pastors of Western District Churches for distribution to young people of draft age."

Retreat: Mission Version

by Herbert Dalke

The first Indian Bible Camp in 7 or 8 years was held August 26 - 29 at the Longdale, Oklahoma, Indian Mission Church. The Camp began with a prayer-meeting on Wednesday evening, preceeding the opening sessions of the program, led by the Rev. Arthur Friesen of Clinton with an attendance of about 25.

Mountain Top Experience

From the very first when plans were being formulated for such a camp until the close we saw God answer our prayers all along the way. We thank Him for the prayers of fellow Christians everywhere for the success of the Camp. God provided the speakers for us in the John P. Suderman family of Mountain Lake, Minnesota. He directed in all the messages and Bible classes. He gave us favorable weather and protected all of us from accident and serious illness. And we experienced the beginning of a revival among us. Some who had gone into sin were restored to fellowship with the Lord. We had mountain top experiences but we are also well aware of the temptations of the devil as we live and labour in the valley. We need your continued prayers for this work that many others may also be revived.

Thursday it was rainy and the attendance was small but the attendance increased throughout the Camp days. At the close of the Saturday evening service those who desired to be baptized were asked to give a public statement of their faith in Christ. It was a blessing to hear these testimonies. One of the young men made his decision during the singing of the song "Just as I am" at the close of the Friday evening service.

Daily Program

Our daily program consisted of morning devotions by the Indian leaders; a message by the Rev. Suderman; Bible classes for each group conducted by the Rev. Wiebe, Mrs. Suderman, the Rev. Dalke; discussion periods; handcraft by Mrs. Wiebe, Mrs. Dalke and the Rev. Friesen; recreation; evening prayer-meeting led by Indians; a singspiration period for the young people led by John Mark and Edith Elsie Suderman; and the evening message by the Rev. Suderman. Mrs. Friesen also assisted by teaching one of the Sunday School classes.

We all had our noon day meals together, being served by the Indian women.

Baptism and Communion

Sunday morning ten of our young people were baptized. The attendance was good at all the Sunday services. In the afternoon musical program eighteen of the young people sang two special numbers, the children sang a number of action choruses under the direction of Mrs. Suderman, and the older people sang several Indian songs. Our Bible Camp closed with a very impressive communion service.

Members of the Council were well pleased with the results of the close association which resulted between our own youth and the visitors who had come to our schools. The fellowship had broadened the horizons of our own young people and it was felt that those who had come to us from other countries had gained a new and sympathetic understanding of American Mennonites. It was therefore decided to invite another group of European youth to our schools for the year 1947-48. The program was to be further extended by having some of our own students go to Europe for a summer tour to get acquainted with Mennonite groups there. Dr. L. L. Ramseyer, Bluffton College, was chosen as the leader of this group, assisted by Miss Lois Gunden, faculty member of Goshen College. A group of 29 persons, including the leaders, made this European trip. Dr. Ramseyer was also given the responsibility of chosing European students to be invited to American schools for the 1947-48 term. As a result twenty-three young people from six countries have been in our schools during the past school year. The accompanying table gives the number from each country and the school which they attended. In addition to these European students some of the Mennonite youth of Paraguay and Brazil were also in our colleges.

The question is sometimes raised as to why American students go to Europe for only a summer whereas we ask European youth to spend an entire year in America.

There are two reasons for this. One is the handicap of language. Whereas European students can commonly speak several different languages reasonably well, American students, having less opportunity to use languages other than English, have not acquired this linguistic ability. The second and even more important reason is that Mennonites in Europe do not have church-controlled higher education. If our students went to Europe to school it would be necessary for them to attend the regular state schools. They would thus not have the opportunity to get acquainted with our own people that is provided by attendance at our own Mennonite schools in America. Because of these two factors the alternative of summer trips for our students has been chosen.

During the summer of 1948 another group of American students went to Europe, this time under the leadership of President Milo Kauffman, Hesston College, and Miss Edna Ramseyer, Bluffton, College. It is hoped that this interchange between European and American Mennonites can be continued indefinitely.

A number of agencies have cooperated in this exchange program. Chief among these has been the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges and the Mennonite Central Committee. The function of the MCC has been that of arranging passage, clearing necessary passports and visas, arranging for the transfer of funds, and making available its facilities, both in Europe and America. Although it has been a clearing house for necessary funds, it has not provided the money needed. This last year three members of the MCC staff in Europe functioned as a committee to select students to come to American schools this next year. These men were the late Dr. P. S. Goertz, Dr. Harold Bender, and Atlee Beachy. The chief change in the program as planned for this year is that more German students will be included, seventeen being scheduled to attend our schools during the 1948-1949 school year.

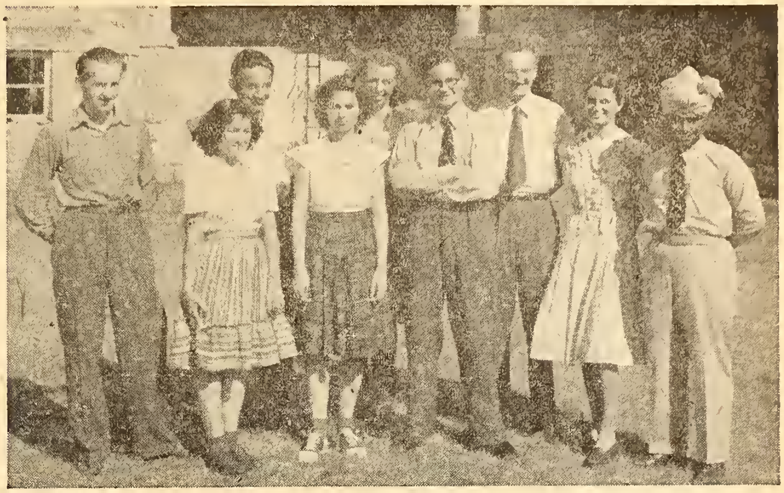
The function of the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges in this program has been to designate the number and nationalities of students who would be invited, determine the educational and other qualifications necessary, delegate the authority to make selection to some specific individuals, and provide leadership for student groups. Member colleges have made themselves responsible for funds above that which individual students could pay. In every case at least free tuition has been provided. Although individual colleges guaranteed money for this program, in many cases it was actually provided through church boards or contributions from church congregations. The summer trips of American students to Europe are financed by the individual students taking these trips.



Foreign College Students at Bethel College

While other objectives, important in themselves, have been served by this exchange program, the main purpose has been for strengthening of the church through giving its youth first hand acquaintance with their brethern in other lands. As one thinks of the program his mind turns to the symbol of the Mennonite Central Committee, the clasped hands beneath the cross. As we learn to know each other better we become increasingly convinced that the important thing is not the earthly allegiance which we give to any government nor the language which we speak, but the fact that we have a common God and a common Christ who died for all of us without respect to man-made differences. We are all one under Christ as we clasp hands beneath His cross. May God grant that this exchange of students may strengthen our faith and our evangelical zeal, and make the church of tomorrow a better representative of Christ on earth.

European Students Arrive

Four Dutch students, three girls and one young man, arrived at Bethel College, Monday, Sept. 6, and enrolled immediately for the fall quarter. They left Rotterdam, Holland, on the S. S. Leerdam, August 21, and stopped over at M.C.C. headquarters at Akron, Pa.

Erna Franken, daughter of a government inspector in the Dutch East Indies, studied gymnastics and massage at Zeist, near Utrecht. She enrolled in psychology and Bible at Bethel. With her in the same class is Mary Schulz, the daughter of a high school teacher at Utrecht. Miss Schulz is a graduate of a gymnasium, the equivalent of an American high school.

Miss Teatske van der Zijjp, daughter of the Rev. van der Zijjp, Rotterdam, who toured Mennonite churches in the United States a year ago, is studying for the ministry. She has attended the Mennonite Seminary at Amsterdam for three years and is enrolling for a general course, with special emphasis on music and psychology.

Son of a dairy products manufacturer and experimental farm owner, A. G. Homan, 22, is enrolling in economics genetics and Bible. He is a graduate of the Agricultural State College at Groningen, and has been studying agricultural engineering at the Agricultural University of Wageningen.

A bicycle' stamina and

with service in Germany

by John Sommer, Chicago, Illinois

We, in the "Balkans" Group, are all members of American Youth Hostels, Inc., an organization primarily for young people who like to hike, or to bike, or to travel in any other manner under their own steam. In cooperation with the International Hostel Organization, American Youth Hostels, Inc. (A.Y.H.) sponsors and provides leaders for Alaska, Canada, South America, various parts of Europe, and to every corner of the U.S.A.

Our group was called the "Balkans" group from the start due to our plan of travelling in the Balkan countries. But after the original plans were made, a few well-known events occurred in some of these countries and the consequence was that our trip was to take us not to the Balkan countries, but to a German work project. Although we have retained the name "Balkans" group, it no longer applies.

Our group is composed mainly of students — engineering, law and premedical (like myself). We have also a dietitian, two teachers, a journalist and our leader (the Executive Director of American Youth Hostels, Monroe Smith), and his wife Isabel, who is the co-leader of the group. None of us had known any of the others before the group met at the airfield. We represent Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant religions and many walks of life.

We Fly Switzerland and Itlay

On the big DC-4 "Sky Master" that took us to Europe there were two other A.Y.H. groups — the "German Work Project" group and the "Western Europe" group. This chartered plane flew from Bradley Field, Connecticut, to Gauder, Newfoundland, to Shannon, Ireland to Bovington, England, to Paris, France, and to Geneva, Switzerland, where our group officially began its journey in Europe. We reassembled our "broken" bikes, which were stored in the aft baggage compartment of the plane, and soon learned our way about the city of Geneva. By plane we crossed the Alps — and Mt. Blanc — and came down a few hours later outside of Rome, Italy. Three days in Rome and then a most memorable bicycle trip down the Via Appia to Naples passing through regions of heavy fighting during the last war — places like Velleti, Casino, Anzio Beach. From Naples we took an overnight boat to Palermo, Sicily, sleeping in our sacks on the deck in the moonlight. From Palermo by plane, again to Tunis, Tunisia, where we walked with camels, Arabs, veiled women, and where we saw 30c steak dinners. Here we had to be on the lookout for dysentery, a thing which hit each of us in turn. We traveled to the Arab village of Nabeul and to the ancient city of Carthage. Our noses were worked overtime during the whole of our stay in Tunisia.

COULD HAVE STAYED LONGER HERE

We traveled back to Palermo, to Naples, across Italy by train to Bari, and by train along the Adriatic till we came to Venice. Twenty-three hours in thet crowded third-class compartment made us a grumpy bunch of hostelers. But the day in Venice on the canals put us all back into good humor. The next day found us in Switzerland at Lake Lucerne. The fantastic natural beauty of this region made Switzerland seem "extramundane' — a jewel set down in the rather poor mounting of poverty-ridden Italy, dejected Germany, and nervous France. Switzerland with its serene beauty, absence of ugliness, wholesome and well-fed people, and story book nature appealed to us all. As we bicycled the 88 miles to Basel, these early impressions were fixed in us. At Basel (where my sister, Lois, and her husband, Robert Kreider, live at the M.C.C. office and home), I had the first hot bath since I had left the States. Here also several of us washed all our clothing — living the while in swim suits or borrowed garments. In the fair city of Basel we saw what might be a "swan song" that our journey sang before it plunged into the despair and desolation of Germany.

We Enter Germany

We bicycled to Freeburg in the French Zone and most of us that evening were hungry because all we could buy was weak tea and beer. Some of us had brought bread, cheese, and jam from Basel. This we shared with all. The whole of the next day was spent pedalling with all of our waning energy toward Karlsruhe in the American Zone where we could get food. We did, fortunately, get noon meals at a French officer's mess that day.

In these German cities one has a feeling of incredulity. Railroad stations, cathedrals, apartment houses, stores, sumptuous homes are burned and blown apart. Only, dead, unusuable shells, of building remain in many cases. For miles one sees this sort of thing in the heart of a city. People live in the midst of it — sullen and dejected. In a city like Karlsruhe, it is easy to sense resentment toward the conqueror who can be seen at every hand in the form of some tactless G. I.

Our bicylces took us to Heidelberg, a city totally un-touched by war, to Mannbeim, which is utterly destroyed, and to Frankfort, a sad remnant of the glory that is obviously was.

Overnight we were whisked by train to Bremerhaven in the northern part of Germany in the part of the U.S. Zone known as "Euclave." By bike we travelled to Wremen, a small village of thatched-roofed houses, 10 miles to the north. Here we came to our long, long-awaited work project.

Cleaning Brick in Bremerhaven

The German Hosteling Organization, the German Youth Assistance of the Military Government, the City of Bremerhaven, the Village of Wremen, and American Youth Hostels had all contributed to the planning of this project. When we arrived it was already in full swing. Two Danish students, 25 German Young people, and 20 American Youth Hostelers make up our group now. We live in a large thatched barn-farmhouse combination. The men have quarters on the second floor and the girls have theirs on the third floor. The "Balkans" group has joined the American "German Work Project" group. During the mornings we work. "Work" consists of a number of jobs. On some mornings 20 volunteers ride on a trailer truck to Bremerhaven, get picks and shovels and go to work at digging whole bricks out of the rubble of bombed buildings. (Bremerhaven had one big night raid with 600 Allied planes dropping bombs. Bremerhaven is kaput as a result.) These bricks are piled in order on the truck and are hauled back to our camp. There the bricks must be cleaned of mortar and cement and repiled for the professional bricklayers who take over from this point. An addition to the main building is being constructed during our days at the project (in all we will spend three weeks here). The whole building will someday soon be used as a German counterpart of an "American Youth Hostel." It will then be one of many Deutsche Jugend Herbergen. From the wreckage of the past we build for the future.

Free-Time Activity

Afternoons are free time for us. Our evenings, however, are filled with scheduled activity. During part of the excellently—planned scheduled of events we have had the following:

1) "German Economy," a talk (with discussion) by a member of the Economic Board of the State of Bremen.

2) "The Crisis in German Art," a talk by a local philosopher and thinker.

3) Four American films for German Youth. The Germans were mainly interested in the reactions of the Americans. They wanted to know if these things they are being told are true.

4) Program and "general sing" led by a choir and its director from a church in Bremerhaven.

5) General discussion on "Youth in America."

6) A night at the Bremerhaven Opera: Verdi's "Il Trovatore," in German.

7) "The Opera comes to us at Wremen." The five leading singers and five musicians gave us a full program right there in our little dining-room.

We also have spent an entire day at the Bremerhaven Fischereihaven ("fishing harbor") where we saw the unloading of an Icelandic vessel and the newly built processing plants. We have, as a group, seen a German film, "Und Oper Uns der Himmel" concerning Berlin and the struggle of the individual in the past war days. Our working group has toured German Schools, has visited an active "youth hostel" 30 miles away, and is going to visit the all-German denazification trials here in Bremerhaven tomorrow.

On Sundays we are free to attend the 496-year old-Lutheran church in Wremen or to attend some church in Bremerhaven. It is an unforgettable experience to sit in a service inside a tiny building erected inside the wreckage of a proud old cathedral.

We have a full and varied program, yet there is an element of freedom that is heartening. All of these activities are on a voluntary basis. Practically everyone participates, however. We have made many friendships that are bound to last. We are living simply — blue jeans and T-shirts for clothing — lard on bread for a large portion of our diet — cold water on our faces in the mornings. The little niceties of life are secondary these days because we are living for a change.

Many of our American group are attempting to discover some way whereby they can stay here in Germany. There is a fertile field here in which much can be done. Germany is fascinating to us — almost a challenge. Several are considering teaching in the army high schools (for civilian personnel) thereby remaining in Germany. One person is getting a job with Friends Service Committee in Stuttgart. But the remainder, like me, will return to the States thinking the summer was all too short.

Mental Hospital Service and Thoughts on the Meaning of Love

Over and over this summer we have heard love emphasized. Mr. Karl Menninger in the handbook for psychiatric aides says, "If we can love; this is the touchstone. This is the key to all the therapeutic programs of the modern psychiatic hospital." Love is that power which enabled us to work effectively with patients in spite of any barriers or lack of appreciation which may have existed. Love is the quality which goes beyond the realm of self-interests in a desire to serve God by serving others. Love seeketh not her own.

This fall, young men of the nonresistant faiths will be facing up to the issue of choosing to whom they will give the highest loyalty. Because of the sacrifice of many others before who were willing to stand for what they felt was right, we shall have freedom of conscience. We often pause to pay tribute to those who have insisted on "their own" rights. We praise them for the fortitude which led them to give up even their lives. It is apparent however, that they did not give their lives for "their" rights but for the right of God to claim their lives above the claims of others. The great issue for which Christians like Stephen, Conrad Grebel, Felix Manz, Clayton Kratz and Marie Fast died was not their right or themselves but rather because they ignored them and gave up all of themselves. It is not hard to give up one's own rights but it is hard to give up oneself.

The choice, then, which young nonresistant Christians will be facing must be faced by all Christians. It is the choice between one's own things or serving God. It is a choice between loving others through service or loving one's own things. For young and old alike it is imperative that we face the issue, now. Will we continue in the complacency of modern Christendom or will we rise to meet the challenge of a needy world?

M.C.C. Position Regarding Selective Servie

MCC Statement of Position concerning the Selective Service Act of 1948, including recommendations on registration and relations with other agencies and Government.

1. We deeply regret the passage by Congress of the Selective Service Act of 1948; and commit ourselves to prayer and other ways of influence consistent with our Christian profession, to the end that Congress may be led to repeal this law, and cease to depend on conscription for defense purposes.

2. We regret the Act's limited definition of conscience, but do deeply appreciate its recognition of and provision for all whose sense of obligation to God forbids their participation in the military training and service.

3. Subject to our highest loyalty to God, we deem it Scriptural and right to obey the laws of government. For this reason we counsel our young men, subject also to this highest loyalty, to register under this law.

4. We direct our MCC administration:
   (a) to inform our constituency on all the implications and details of the Act and its regulations.
   (b) to serve all our young men fully in all problems relating to the Act.
   (c) to stand ready to serve similarly any others needing and desiring such service.
   (d) to continue the relationship with the National Service Board, and to maintain friendly relations with other agencies concerned with the problems of the conscientious objector.
   (e) to stand ready to meet Selective Service administrators to inform and attempt to clarify our viewpoints and attitudes, regarding this act, its regulations, and implications.

RESOLUTION

Whereas we believe that present provisions in the growing desire on the part of our people to contribute a special period of service to the Lord and the Church; and

Whereas we believe that present provisions in the draft act whereby conscientious objectors are deferred, together with the continuing challenge for consecrated service to human needs, will tend to increase the desire on the part of many for voluntary service opportunities;

Be it therefore resolved as our unanimous sentiment, that in order to use effectively all who feel led to render such service in the name of Christ and as a witness to Him and His Gospel, we encourage our several groups to develop service opportunities and direct our administration to continue in pioneering and experimentation in this service area and in providing the supplementary service facilities that may be required.

July 17, 1948.

Sample of Draft Questionnaire Forms Available

Two important forms which young men of draft age will need to fill out are the General Classification Questionnaire (SSS Form 100) and the special form for Conscientious Objectors (SSS Form 150.) Sample copies of these forms may be desired for purposes of advance study or as duplicate records.

Such samples of SSS Form 100 are available now, and samples of SSS Form 150 are expected to be released within the near future. Requests for these may be addressed to the Peace Section, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Receive Over 12,000 Christmas Bundles

A tentative count indicates that approximately 12,700 Christmas Bundles have been received at the Akron center, and about 3,000 have been reported by the Canadian center at Kitchener. Allocations have been made to send these bundles to China, Paraguay, Germany, the Philippines, India, France, Holland, Belgium, Italy, Austria, Poland, and possibly a few other countries. At present the bundles are being packed for ocean shipment.

The hearty response of the church to this special call for Christmas Bundles for relief will be much appreciated both by the needy children and young people, and by the Mennonite relief workers who have the privilege to distribute them "In the Name of Christ."

Folder on Brook Lane Farm for Mentally Ill

A General Informational Handbook has been published to describe the objectives and facilities of Brook Lane Farm, the Home for mentally ill which is about to be opened near Leitersburg, Maryland under the direction of the Mennonite Central Committee. The folder may be secured free of charge by writing to the MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania, or to Brook Lane Farm, Route 5, Hagerstown, Maryland.

Relief Notes

Newton Clothing Center Moved

The MCC Clothing center at Newton, Kansas has temporarily moved to the Food collection center at 314 Main Street, Newton, until the completion of the permanent building which is now under construction.

For addresses to which relief contributions from other parts of the United States and Canada may be sent, consult the folder "Relief Needs in 1948" which was issued recently. Cash contributions for relief should continue to be sent through the conference treasurers.

A View of Relief in China

Recently P. P. Richardson, a representative of the American Advisory Committee visited the MCC relief unit in Chinkiang, China, and in his report wrote the following observations:

"The work of the Mennonite Central Committee at Chinkiang is divided into three parts:

"(1) Food distribution. Each day from 8 to 9 a. m. 1100 carefully screened and selected needy refugees are fed steamed rolls . . . . Each ten days the case of each refugee is reviewed and new tickets are distributed on the basis of the need of each individual. As I stood and watched the lines slowly moving to receive the bread, I was impressed with how needy the men, women, and children were who are patiently standing in line waiting for their turn.

"(2) Clinic. After the bread distribution a clinic is operated by Miss Lehman and hundreds of people are treated for their diseases free of charge. Their cases needing hospitalization are referred to Goldsby King Memorial Hospital, operated by the Presbyterian Mission at New West Gate.

"(3) Work Relief Project. About 50 male refugees, carefully selected on the basis of need, were repairing one of the main roads on Windmill Hill, when I was there. The Mennonite Central Committee group inherited thousands of flour sacks from CNRRA and UNRRA. Mrs. John Friesen uses the flour sakes as wages, paying each man 6 flour sacks for a day's work on the road. Every ten days or two weeks the entire crew of 50 men is changed and a crew of other refugees are given opportunity to work on the road and receive flour sacks in payment as wages. Refugees use the flour sacks as cloth to make their clothes or they can sell them and receive a little money to buy other needed articles. It is surprising how much work the refugees do in a day, and 2 or 3 main roads on Windmill Hill have already been put in good repair. The secret in this operation seems to me is the close supervision given the relief program by Mr. Friesen."

Relief and Service Personnel

Cornelius and Elizabeth Lohrenz and daughter Ruth of DeWitt, Nebraska, and Evangeline Matthies of Virgil, Ontario, left on September 10 for Paraguay.

Elmer Ediger returned on September 5 from several months work in Europe, directing service units there and laying plans for future service projects.

Peace Literature

Just off the press is a revised edition of Think on These Things, an 8-page pamphlet which was widely distributed a few years ago, giving counsel to young men on the question of military service. It carries a strong challenge to you men facing this same issue anew today. The pamphlet is free, although a contribution covering printing and mailing costs is appreciated. Order from Peace Section, MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

European Voluntary Service

The Summer Voluntary Service units at Hamburg and Ronnenburg, Germany, have been closed and most of the American workers have returned. However a similar European Service Unit is being continued at Sembach, Germany with a total of fifteen young people participating: four Americans, one Swiss, one Dutch, one Alsatian, seven German Mennonites, and one non-Mennonite German. The Unit under the direction of Boyd Nelson, is to continue from October 4 to 24. The work will consist of helping in the repair of a meeting place and conference room. The completion of this will provide facilities for conferences and youth meetings for the Mennonites of the entire Pfalz area.

Walter H. Dyck, Executive Secretary

It is a great thing in life to have friends who are above us in some things, they will be likely to draw us up to higher levels of character, instead of dragging us down to lower levels.—From Zion Church, bulletin Souderton, Pa.

CHRIST'S METHODS OF TEACHING

There's nothing new about visual aids. When our Lord walked by the sea of Galilee. He saw the fisherman casting their nets, and said: 'Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." As He talked to the woman at the well, He promised that "whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst."

You may talk with your class beside the sea, or stand with them beside the well. You cannot, as a rule, take them to locations that will illustrate your lesson message... but through modern visual aids, you can bring these specially-adapted scenes to them.

All of this, and much more, is possible through modern publications. Through the efforts of the General Boards of Education and Publication, our church publications are constantly seeking to improve the effectiveness of our religious education through better-prepared materials. Through the centralized purchasing functions of the Mennonite Publication Office, it is possible for you to secure, on one order, all of the teaching supplies that you need in your Sunday school or week day religious education program, or your summer daily vacation Bible school materials. Are you sure that you are using all of these services to the maximum?

It appears that Christ used every possible device to secure attention, and to make holiness beautiful. Are we?

Book Notes

BEHOLD THE MAN by Dr. Toyohito Kagawa is a Life of Christ in the form of a novel. A person cannot help but wonder how this novel will influence people in the reading of the Gospel stories. The novel is fascinating. Literary skill is at its best. The scenes are vividly portrayed and will not be easily forgotten. They are bound to be recalled as one reads the Gospel records. It will be hard, for instance, to forget that Mary Magadalene was a harlot so wicked that people said of her that she had seven devils in her. It will be hard to forget that Judas Iscariat lived in fornication with this harlot whose haunts are so vividly described. Literary license may permit novelists to describe such imaginary scenes, but one cannot help but wonder what it will do toward an unbiased reading of the Gospels. The novel is the part an interpretation of human character, and the interpretation may not be accurate at all points. The things Judas Iscariot does in this novel will color the thinking of the reader when he reads about him in the Gospels.

The novel carries a deep reverence and awe for the Lord Jesus Christ. But here, also, one wonders whether not wrong impressions are created In his suffering, especially in the scourging and crucifixion scenes, Jesus is pictured as almost above and somewhat oblivious of the bodily pain that is inflicted. Although this novel may create problems, it will do much good. It will be read by many who do not take time to read the Gospel records of Christ, and in this way many will become acquainted with Christ who otherwise would not know much about Him.—W. F. Unruh —Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pennsylvania: September 5 we were privileged to have with us Rev. Felix van der Wissel, Pastor of the Leeuwarden Mennonite Church, Holland. Jacob Friesen, a student from South America who spent the summer in this community, was recently presented with a typewriter by the members of the Friend's Class as a going-away gift. Mr. Friesen is returning to college to continue his studies.

Wedel, pastor of the Alexanderwohl Church of Goessel, Kansas. Rev. D. J. Unruh, pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Newton, led the devotionals. Because the remodelling of the parsonage is not completed, Reverend Nyce will not be able to bring his family here from Pennsylvania until the first of October.—Ralph Krehbiel, Corr.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: Our former pastor, Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, and his wife were with us on Sunday, September 5. Rev. Rosenberger spoke on, "God's Hallowed Name," pointing out how all else falls into its proper place when God and His name are made the central source of strength in our lives. Rev. G. T. Soldner, of Bluffton, Ohio, has been our supply pastor and will continue to act in that capacity until the weather makes his trips impossible. Mr. Irvin Richert, who will become our full-time minister after graduating next June, will be with us some Sundays during the fall and winter On August 29, twenty-three persons went to Greenwich, Ohio, to help Rev. A. R. Keiser, a former pastor of this church, celebrated his 25th year in the Christian ministry. The Women's Missionary Society sent 260 pounds of relief clothing recently. Our congregation observed Christian Education Sunday and used the bulletins furnished by Bluffton College.—Corr.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: Rev. J. J. Esau, well-known blind evangelist, will hold meetings in our church from September 19 to the 26th. We are looking forward to receiving great blessings from these meetings.—Wilfred Ewy, Corr.

"I do not pray for these only, but also for those who are to believe in me through their word, that they may all be one; even as thou, Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us, so that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. The glory which thou hast given me I have given to them, that they may be one even as we are one, I in them and thou in me, that they may become perfectly one, so that the world may know that thou hast sent me and hast loved them even as thou hast loved me. BEYOND OUR OWN

The 50th anniversary of the establishment of the church of Rhodesia under the work of the Brethren in Christ denomination, a working member conference of the Mennonite Central Committe, is a prominent event in the life of that conference at this time.

Torrey Johnson was succeeded by Robert A. Cook as president of Youth for Christ International at its annual convention at Winona Lake. A budget of $872,000 was voted, and forty teams are to be sent to foreign lands, including a Negro team to Africa.

The Greatest Story Ever Told, popular Bible broadcast last year, was resumed over the American Broadcasting Company at 6:30 p.m., Eastern Daylight Saving Time, EDST, Sunday, September 12.

The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors, whose address is 2006 Walnut Street, Philadelphia 3, has recently been established to help such men who feel that the greatest contribution which they can make against conscription and war, and hence for livable world society is to refrain from compliance with the draft law at any point. The already existing National Service Board for Religious Objectors is prepared to service those who seek recognition under the Act and fall within its provisions.

The Christian Century, in its new division, gives prominent headlines on the first page and two and a half columns of material to cover the recent Mennonite World Conference held at Goshen, Indiana, and North Newton, Kansas. This may very well be the largest single block of material devoted to the Mennonite denomination ever to appear in this widely read weekly. This material was prepared by Dr. Cornelius Krahn, member of the Bethel College faculty.

One thousand four hundred conscientious objectors, as well as 4,300 Jehovah's Witnesses and the 7,900 other Selective Service violators who did not receive pardons, are today actually worse off, so far as the restoring of their civil rights is concerned, than they were before the Roberts' Board was set up. The Department of Justice today will not even consider individual pardon applications from these men on the ground that the Roberts' Board has already gone in to the matter and turned them down.

New Windsor, Md.—The Heifer Project Committee, an interfaith organization which has been shipping heifers to war-devastated areas in many nations, has accepted an invitation from the government of Venezuela to send a number of heifers to El Trompillo for use in an area now being thrown open to displaced persons from Europe. Benjamin G. Bushong, executive secretary of the committee, has just returned from Caracas, where he consulted with Venezuelan officials about plans for participation in the program. Bushong said the Venezuelan government is now providing transportation and giving a plot of land to approximately one thousand immigrants each month. Each immigrant is also given approximately ten dollars. It is proposed that a total of 50,000 persons be accepted.

BOMBING MISSION OR CHRISTIAN MISSION

September 2 was the third anniversary of V-J Day. V-J Day was the result of the pouring of millions of men, billions of dollars worth of material, and the blood of hundreds of thousands of men into a great crusade. Those men were on a colossal mission. V-J Day represented probably the largest single undertaking of mankind judged in terms of men participating, men giving their lives, and expenditure of material. While that colossal mission was executed, the Christian mission was practically eclipsed.

In the three years since that day, the Christian mission has in many ways had an unparalleled opportunity. But if the number of missionaries that Protestantism has sent to Japan in the three years since the war is an indication of the degree of seriousness with which the church intends to use this opportunity, then the future does not look good! Only some four hundred persons in three years sent in behalf of Jesus Christ who will give freedom from the sin which is at the root of the world's ill while millions were sent into the mission to deal with a symptom without eradicating the cause.

It is surely true that we dare not measure our Christian mission only in terms of numbers and dollars. But when in a time of inflation giving for the work of the spread of the Gospel is not keeping pace with the mounting incomes, when in a time of opportunity to freely choose the greatest mission there is no beginning of comparison between the millions of men who give their lives to the mission of Mars and the hundreds of men who give their lives to the mission of Christ, then there is still a question: Is the church choosing bombing missions or Christian missions?

THE CHURCH LOOKS FORWARD

Everyone has had their vacation. Now it is time to bring the people back into the churches for another nine month's program. Such is a common conception of the average person about the church's year-round program. Perhaps even some Sunday school officers and education committees have this conception. But have we made sure that the people are being rallied to a program that is thoroughly grounded in the Christian faith, borne of prayer, and executed by men and women completely committed and yielded to Jesus Christ? It is an imposition on people to ask them to participate in a program that is not absolutely sure it has a real relationship to the deepest spiritual needs of man. If the people are to become thoroughly sold on the Christian Gospel, then the inner circle of the leadership—the church boards, education committees, church school teachers and officers, and leaders of various organizations—all these must first be thoroughly Christian. When this happens, the claims of the church for year-round spiritual significance will be unquestioned.

Arise and Eat

A Meditation for World-Wide Communion

by O. A. Waltner

Through the thoughtfulness of others our lives are constantly enriched. Through the preparations of our friends we are spared many inconveniences and discomforts in our tasks. Through loving provisions by co-workers we receive courage, guidance and strength for the demands that life makes of us.

Christians can well rejoice in the thoughtfulness of God who being conscious of man's need of strength provides him with "a cruse of water and a cake baken on coals." Of even greater significance is the kind invitation of Jehovah as He calls, "Arise and eat because the journey is too great for thee." God's thoughtfulness is tender, it is challenging, it is purposeful. Elijah needed to journey to the mount of God, and God understood His own responsibility in helping Elijah get there!

On the World-Wide Communion Sunday, believers in Christ worshiping in beautiful cathedrals in cities; in simple church buildings in villages and countrysides; and in grass or mud structures in jungles or in open meadows will again rejoice in the thoughtfulness of Christ as He provides the broken bread and the cup of wine, "for the journey is too great." Christ knows the weariness and difficulties that face His Church in Africa, South America, China, India, Europe and America. His concern is for all the churches and His provisions of love, wisdom, and strength are ample for every church and individual believer in the world.

Christ bids the churches receive the bread and wine. In commemorating His death on the Cross, the Church is empowered spiritually. It is clearly evident that the churches which faithfully and prayerfully come to the Lord's Table at His bidding are they which labor in the consciousness of His joy, strive with spiritual understanding and are victorious in His strength.

In the face of social reforms, educational progress, world peace, racial understanding and evangelization of the world still to be achieved and attained, the churches dare not neglect Christ's tender call to receive His spiritual provisions for the task before them.

Christ understands that the journey is too great — but it is His thoughtfulness that provides the Lord's Table. It should be our thoughtfulness to be prayerful guests and to partake of His provisions for in them we shall have strength to "walk forty days and forty nights" and in them we shall come "unto Horeb, the mount of God."

It is advisable for a conscientious objector to exhaust all of his procedural rights of appeal for getting proper recognition of his conscientious objections if he is otherwise classified. Such a person will be in a much better position for getting recognition if and when the draft tightens up and men deferred as farmers and married men are put in I-A. Concerning the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN for our church papers. I am grateful for it. The first time this plan was presented by our Publication Board, I felt it was a good plan, but I was not able to see how this could ever be done. I kept on speaking in favor of our church papers, and the need for having one in every home of our church members, with some good success, but yet to far from the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN. Some years ago this plan was presented to the church at our annual meeting with the suggestion of paying it out of our church treasury, and was favorably accepted.

We as a church are garteful to know that our Mennonite or Bote is going into all our homes. Before we had adopted the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN so many of our people thought of the church papers only as the Mennonite or Bundes Bote, but now these publications have become OUR church papers.. At present 396 homes receive either the Mennonite or Bote. Now we can refer to certain articles in our church papers and people know which article is used, thus we have a common cause.

Rev. Jacob J. Banman, 74, former minister of the Alexanderwohl Church and a teacher in that community for many years, passed away at his home at Newton, Kansas, early Monday morning, September 20. Reverend Banman was born in South Russia January 14, 1874. He was associated with the Herald Publishing Company for a number of years. In 1942, after serving as minister of the Alexanderwohl Church for some thirty years, Reverend Banman retired from active service. Funeral services were held September 22, at the First Mennonite Church, Newton, of which he was a member at the time of his death.

WHERE IS OUR GOD?

Has God any relevance to the world situation of today? Can we see him anywhere at work? This twofold question, which we took up recently, deserves further consideration.

"Look at the world of today." men say. This is the third year of the war's close, yet the peace is not yet made. The enemy is conquered but the former allies are divided. We are giving bread to Europe, but we have not set the conditions under which work and self-help and recovery are possible. Japan, like Central Europe, is occupied and administered by the military. Hunger, strife, war are present in the Near East, Palestine, India. Men say, as Israel's foes did, "Where is thy God?"

But now let us ask some questions: What kind of God are you looking for, and what kind of help do you expect? Are you thinking of a benevolent autocrat who will reach down from the skies and set everything to rights? Surely by this time we ought to know that human problems are never settled by force. God himself cannot save by sheer power, else why was there need for a Christ and his death on the cross?

Where does the source of all this evil lie? Not in one country, not in one man, not in one particular theory or form of society—Fascism, Nazism, Communism, or whatever the particular apocalyptic beast of the day may be. The evil is inside of man, and it is everywhere. It is made up of ignorance, folly, selfishness, greed, fear, hate, and unbelief. It expresses itself in many forms: social, economic, political, in evils like slavery, intolerance, needless poverty, worship of state or nation, war; and it is our business to change these. But the big job, and the first job, is to change the mind and heart and will of men. — Harris Franklin Roll in "The Christian Advocate"

Through Our Windshield

Part II. Redemption: Hindoo vs. Christian

by Missionary S. T. Moyer

In my library in India is a book with the above title. The title itself is thought provoking, especially as one observes everyday Hindooism and its fruits.

Few will deny that Hindooism is a religion of works. You make an offering to the gods to appease them; YOU do something. You sit on beds of spikes, or practice suttee, or stretch yourself on the dust of the earth and thus travel from one holy place to another. You give to beggers. Thus all you DO gains merit for yourself. Finally, when you die, your oldest son must DO something. He must have a funeral feast for the freundschaft, the caste brethren. At the proper time he must carry your bones to the Ganges River, or some other holy river. All is what YOU do.

As we travel behind the windshield in this highly mechanized land of North America, our eyes are riveted on the ribbon highway for 500 feet to the fore and 500 feet to the rear. But sub-conscious mind finds time to meditate. We rejoice in the splendid development of Conference Work, in the marvelous numerical growth of from only 10,000 members in 1900 to 47,000 members in 1947. The splendid work programs for youth, and the growth of retreats is most significant. We are urged to give, to show loyalty, to live for our fellowmen, to honor organizations, to plan for a world in which our children are to live. All is spread out as a program of activity of what we do.

All this is fine and good so far. I can never forget the words of Dr. Francis Wei, president of a Chinese University, when he said, "Communism is making greater headways in parts of China than Christianity. Why? Because Christian representatives fail to show the brotherliness Communism shows." Let us make no mistake, only those with clean hands and hearts, with untarnished ethics and morals — only such will sojourn in God's holy tabernacle. Most certainly, the Holy Spirit is given to them that DO — do what? God's will.

But, when we come tired and weary to the end of the road, and are driven into wits-end corner, we ask, "Just where does God come into the picture?" We turn to certain devotional literature, and to some literature connected with Christian Works and we do not find Him doing much. It is we who are urged to do, all too often with no reference to God. We turn to certain printed prayers, and find these filled with pious phrases of may we do so and so. At wits-end corner, having tried our hardest to do, yet having failed, we ask, "Is there really anything He does for us, or is all merely what we do for Him, or for him? Shall our entire program consist of what WE DO, or does God also do?"

Is God a god who is like the president of the U.S.A., who is brushed aside once every so often and thus makes place on the pedestal of our affections for some other great loyalty, or passion, or program, some ideal which reigns supremely instead for a while (and then when things do not go too good, we blame it on the times in which we live, saying it is almost too much to expect human nature to act differently)? OR is God like a King Who reigns eternally, yet as a Father? Who is active now, Who is supremely active, Who not only dwells amongst His people (as well as above them) but goes amongst them, visiting them in times of trouble, standing by and supremely active in times of seeming disaster, and Who gives hope of glorious things for the future?

If God is like some near ancester, whose picture hangs on the wall, Whom we admire, Whose attributes we well know, Whose precepts we believe are worthy of our following, knowing that He did mighty works in His day, but we have no testimony to give that He is active here and now in a dozen special ways, — how far different is the essence of such a faith that merely urges us to do this, do that, follow this program as our religion, from the essence of Hindooism? If it be said that Hindoo gods are to be feared, but our God is a God of love, it is well to remember that in the ancient Vedas, they too had one God, there was no caste, the social position of women was high, — but by the time the Upanishads were written, God, as Creator had ceased to live with His creation, but was sleeping, or had gone off on some shikar, then the multitude of gods and evil spirits came into being.

Oh! for the wings of a dove, that I might find God in this my age. My soul and my bones cry out, where can I find Him? Whither shall I flee? And if I find Him, what can He do for me? — not His precepts, worthy though they be; nor His example, necessary though this be. How is He now active? What can He do for you and me?

In the weariness of the hour I turn to the Psalms and the Old Testament and read,

"I sought Jehovah, He heard me, and delivered me." Ps. 34
"Prove me now — I WILL pour out a blessing." Mal. 3
"Jehovah hath done great things for us." Ps. 126:3
"By my Spirit, said Jehovah" Zech. 4:6

Then I turn to the gospels and New Testament and find:

"If two agree — and ask — it shall be done — by My Father."
"God loved — He gave" John 3:16.
"It is God that worketh — in you — for His good pleasure." Eph. 2:13.
"Our sufficiency is from God" II Cor. 3:5.
"He is able to deliver."

Then I hear Walter Lippmann saying, "Unless

Ethel Abrahams, Hillsboro, Kansas, is chairman of the Recreation Committee. Religious Life Committee, from the students, Ronald von Riesen, of Newton, Kansas, and Jacob D. Goering, of North Newton, Kansas. David Habegger, of Busby, Montana, has been elected our representative to the Inter-Seminary movement.

Last week Dr. Leendertz, of Amsterdam, lectured here on the topic, "Kierkegaard and the Meaning of Existence." Recent visitors have been Puran Banwar, of Champa, India, who is on his way back to his native land, and Helen Kornelson, of Canada and Bethel College, who is en route to India as a missionary. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Ediger of Akron, Pennsylvania, were Seminary visitors, Thursday, September 16.

Sunday, September 19, marked the expansion of the Seminary Sunday School. Previously we have had only an adult class, but because of the large number of children here this year three new classes have been added.

Bluffton College

College enrollment now totals 300, not including music students below college rank. This total is almost exactly the same as that of a year ago. Students come from 18 different states in addition to Puerto Rico, Hawaii, India, Germany, Canada, and Holland. The college mixer, sponsored by the YM and YWCA's, was held in the gymnasium the evening of September 10. The evening of September 14, a meeting was held in the college chapel for the purpose of explaining the position of the church to prospective draftees. After Rev. Paul Shelly presented the Biblical basis of the peace stand. Prof. Lantz, Harvey Bauman, Carl Lehman, and Stanley Bohn explained why they have taken the non-resistant stand; Edna Ramseyer explained the voluntary service opportunities of the church, while Dr. Bauman acted as chairman of the meeting. Rev. Shelly gave the Education Sunday message at the Summerfield, Illinois, church on September 12. Rev. Harry Yoder conducted special meetings at the White Oak Union Church near Carlock, Illinois, during the week of September 19. He also carried on solicitation work in the interest of the building fund in several Illinois communities. The building fund now stands at $138,247.61, all but $14,326.85 of which is in cash gifts.

Freeman College

After three months of summer vacation, 113 academy students and 41 college students have registered at Freeman Junior College to resume their studies. This past week, 23 college freshmen have written their entrance exams and 18 college sophomores started attending classes. There are new faces among the student body as well as on the faculty staff. Esther Bohn, Elvera Voth, Adeline Quiring, Vernon Wiebe, Edmund Miller, Richard Berky, and John Ewert are new members joining last year's faculty.

Margarete Schnebele, an exchange student from Baden, Germany, has joined the college freshman class.

On Friday, September 10, a mixer was held on the campus from 2 to 4 p. m.

Bethel College

Bethel College has entered its 60th school year with an enrollment of 405 with a number of others still expected to register. Last year's total of 427 at the end of the fall quarter may be reached. Men outnumber women enrolled 230 to 175, with the men predominating in every year.

Excavation has been started for the foundation and basement of a $200,000 library to be erected on the Bethel College campus. Pouring of the concrete is expected to be completed in time for the corner stone laying ceremony on Founders Day during the 60th anniversary celebration, October 12.

Freshmen of Bethel College were properly initiated at a capping exercise held on Saturday evening, September 18 in the Student Union room.

A program of orientation is being presented at chapel exercises during the months of September and October.

Voluntary service projects of the summer of 1948 were presented by Bethel College students in a Sunday evening program in the Student Union Room.

Grattan Building, a modern 61' x 172' brick building being erected on the Bethel College grounds from endowment funds donated by the late G. F. Grattan, McPherson lawyer, will be partially ready for occupancy within a few weeks. While the entire structure may not be completed until about Christmas, the Mennonite Central Committee's food and clothing depot will move into the center section shortly.

We Cannot Give Up!

by H. J. Brown

Shanghai, China—Sept. 16, 1948. Greetings of peace in Christ! We have come back to Shanghai from our extended trip to Ch'engtu, Szechuen. The dear Lord has been very good unto us during the whole trip and now here in Shanghai. Amidst all the rush in placing our Mennonite refugee-students in suitable schools here in Shanghai and in other cities in Central and West China, we have finally managed to acquire an apartment. Below is our new address. All letters and papers should hereafter be addressed to 1331 Fu Shing Road, Shanghai, China. Thank you all very much for taking notice of this change of address! In the new and strange place we shall feel somewhat lonesome, unless your letters show their faithful appearance.

Our responsibility remains scattered. If we had not been so busy right here, I at least would have already gone on a trip to Kaifeng, Honan, For a time it seemed rather peaceful in the north, but of late the reports have not been quite so good. The railroad is again interrupted by a derailment of a train. Those poor people in the north have already suffered very much. No wonder, that some of our Chinese Christian leaders have laid their work down and left the country for the south. But we cannot thus give up and just quit. We have thousands of Christians suffering there. Further there are still millions without Christ. Communism is forced upon them. They do not want it. They are mistreated and forced under the yoke. Even many of the Christians are severely persecuted, and some have been killed. We hear of the power of the gospel and the conversion of souls. It surely behooves us to stand by in prayer and help. God blesses us, so that we may bless others in bringing them Christ the way of life! Will you stand by in prayer every day, say for five minutes?

RELIEF NOTES

Spiritual Ministry to Refugees

Helping the Mennonite refugees in Europe in their spiritual problems is the work in which Cornelius Wall is presently engaged. The desire for consultation on spiritual matters is expressed frequently by the refugees. The result of having until recently spent their lives in an atmosphere antagonistic to Christianity has had its influence upon them. Their acquaintance with the Bible is meager. But the longing for a real experience with God is indeed deep and sincere.

Visitation work is being done within the Gronau camp, but it is hoped that individual families scattered over a wider area may also be visited later, and that a similar ministry can be given in Backnang camp.

Mennonite Aid Notes

John W. Warkentin, who had given a term of service in Paraguay in the direction of the refugee resettlement program, and had returned to the United States early in August, left again for Paraguay on September 17 for additional service there.

The work done by Elfrieda Dyck in directing the recent movement of refugees to South America aboard the Charlton Monarch, was quite strenuous. After her return to Europe it was necessary for her to rest several weeks rather than return immediately to her former work at Gronau refugee camp. It is planned that Peter and Elfrieda Dyck are to accompany the group of 1700 Mennonite refugees which will sail from Europe for South America on the Volendam on about October 7. Their experience in the movement of previous groups will be helpful in this continued work.

Clothing Distribution in Austria

In Austria the clothing distribution program consists of two aspects which supplement each other. One phase is designed to reach large numbers of needy people, and is therefore well systematized and categorized for utmost efficiency. However there are some cases of real need which do not fall within the general categories. For this reason individual and special cases are referred to a second smaller center where their needs can be reviewed in a personal manner. Thus not only the masses, but the needy, lonely individuals can be given proper attention.

Relief Worker Departures

Peace Literature in German

Recently completed has been the booklet Muessen Christen Kriegen, a German translation of Must Christians Fight, by Edward Yoder. This booklet will be of particular value to the Mennonites of Europe and South America, but will be of interest also to the German-speaking Mennonites of the United States and Canada. Copies may be ordered from the MCC, 10 Union Street, Waterloo, Ontario, or MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

GOING HOME

A year and a half did not seem so long, and if I had no obligation to my family in India, I would have liked very much to have stayed a couple of more years in this country and go to school. I had given up school some fourteen years ago, but it did not take me long to come back to school life. I will be homesick for the Bethel College campus.

I have been very glad to have been the first man from the mission field in India to come to school in America. The people here have heard about the mission's achievements from the words of the native from India—or have seen the actual fruit of the mission work. I feel sure that this has initiated many friends in mission work, and that it has brought India much closer. Many were concerned about the fate of the mission in New India, much more so because of the new law that was passed in our Province about the legal procedure in changing one's religion. Let that not trouble you. Many churches in India would be happy for some persecution, because "all that glitters is not gold" in India, either. But what I think is that you should be concerned about doing some missionary work in your own land, and showing to the foreigners that this is a Christian country. Right now there are hundreds of students from India. They are the future leaders of the great nation. Their stay in this country will have revealed many things. It provides the best opportunity to do missionary work among them—if not, the missionary work will be much harder when they return to India.

Opportunity means responsibilities. I do feel that the Lord has given me this opportunity for greater service, and I certainly enjoyed the opportunities here. I visited the churches in many states—Kansas, Nebraska, Montana, Minnesota, Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, and Pennsylvania.—Then, I attended district conferences, the General Conference, and the World Conference. I visited in homes, studying in Bethel and speaking in camps—all of which contribute much in enriching my experiences. I was so much impressed how the churches give for missions, how the young people have organized themselves, and how the pulpits have become occupied by young people. How I have wished many times that the young people in our churches in India should come forward like this.

I am going back to a different India. There have been many changes since I left a year and a half ago. I solicit your prayers for any work that will be awaiting me in this new India, and may the Lord make me humble and make use of me in the way He wants. I wish to express my gratitude to the members of the Foreign Mission Board, the Bethel College Faculty, the Mission Conference in India, the Women's Mission Society in Moundridge, the Sunday School in Portland, and all the churches who invited me to speak to gain an insight of the mission work. My thanks are also due to the folks who adopted me as their own as long as I stayed in America—Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner, Rev. and Mrs. A. P. Waltner, Mrs. Abe Klassen, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Claassen.

For me it was a very happy stay. People surely showed great love to me, and for many things I will be homesick for America. I know that I have made many friends. To them all now I bid "Goodbye."

Dear Helen,

Today you are sailing for India. It is for you the realization of a firm, definite purpose, not of a vague and distant dream. After years of preparation you are entering into a full life work.

Your preparation has been manifold. There were the summers of D.V.B.S. teaching; there were the two years at the Rosthern Bible School and later the Rosthern Junior College. The Student Volunteer Movement which you enthusiastically and prayerfully called into existance here has grown and will continue to grow as a lasting tribute to your efforts. Then there were three years at Bethel College to give you the final touches for a well-balanced education.

These years of study, and practical preparation, too, at times seemed too long for your zeal and desire to get out and work. But these are over now. Henceforth you will be faced with more practical issues of life.

For this your calling, we the Mennonite churches of Saskatchewan; we the students of the Rosthern Bible School and Rosthern Bible College; we the students at Bethel extend our best wishes and pledges of faithful support in prayer.

The ship is pulling out of the harbor. A last wave! Farewell, Helen!

Marie Klassen

In a recent letter to the Conference Secretary, Miss Kornelson wrote:

"Gratefully do I accept your good wishes and your intercessory prayers. Oh, how I do need them! Especially was I conscious of the many prayers on my behalf on the day of my ordination, July 15. Thank you so much.

"It was a lovely and most blessed day. Even though it was on a week day, and during a busy haying season, the large country church at Drake was filled for the occasion. Rev. J. J. Thiessen officiated at the ordination. Other speakers were Mrs. Anna Isaac, Rev. J. G. Rempel and Rev. Paul Schroeder."

GOING ABROAD

My dear friend, Helen, spent her last three years at Bethel College, where she graduated with an A. B. degree. Besides her studies she was an assistant to Dr. H. A. Fast in the Bible Department, and for one year served as the president of the Student Volunteers.

Though studies commanded much of her attention, she always found time to mingle with the students, to help and encourage them in their every need. Her life of self-sacrifice, lived as a missionary right here at home, has been a source of inspiration to all who knew her.

We pray God's richest blessings to follow her as she journeys to India, her new home, resting on the precious promise of John 10:4, "And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them."

Elaine Waltner

"But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then said he unto his disciples, 'The harvest truly is plentious, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.' "

God's Help in Home Missions

by A. J. Neuenschwander

Months ago the Board of Home Missions knew that a new worker would be needed for the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Cuauhtemoc, Chih., Mexico. Contact was made with a mission couple, Rev. and Mrs. Cornelius Boldt, Osler, Saskatchewan. The new couple, were engaged to take up this field. The Hoffnungsau church also agreed to the new workers for a three year period.

Application was made to the Mexican consul for a permit to enter Mexico as teacher and minister of the Gospel. Whether the time was too long or what, is difficult to say, but the application was canceled and returned. What now? More fervent prayers were sent to the Throne of Grace.

More letters were written. Another approach to the problem was made. If entrance might be obtained for a six-month period, the leaders of the congregation in Mexico agreed to make an appeal to the proper department in Mexico City for the Boldts to carry out their proposed assignment.

A new application was made. This time a passport was granted and Rev. and Mrs. Cornelius Boldt were in the Hoffnungsau Church in time for the Sunday Services on August 22. Truly the Hand of the Lord was seen in all. Praise Him for it!

Their address: Apartado 110 Cuauhtemoc, Chih., Mexico.

Your prayer support is desired and will be appreciated.

Peace Rally Initiates District Program

—Souderton, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1948: For the benefit of the young men subject to the draft, the peace committee of the Eastern District Conference held a peace rally at the Zion Mennonite Church, on September 8. Although held primarily for those subject to the present draft, anyone interested was welcome, and the attendance was very good, representing many congregations in this conference. Rev. Wesley Ewert, chairman of the committee and in charge of the meeting, briefly outlined the future plans of the peace committee. The executive committee of the conference has already approved a plan whereby, in cooperation with the education committee, an outline for a continuing program to meet the problem of peace education would be submitted to the various congregations for their approval, after which it would be distributed.

Rev. Andrew Shelly, of Kitchener, Ontario, spoke on "The Scriptural Basis or Non-Resistance," opening his remarks with the statement that the present draft law was a challenge to all Mennonites and similarly minded people. The principle of non-resistance, said Reverend Shelly, is based on two indisputable facts: that the Bible teaches it in all its parts, and that Christ lived and taught it at all times. Participation in war is not an isolated evil but a part of total evil—sin. The Bible is loyal to truth at all times, and does not pursue a policy of expediency. Reverend Shelly closed his challenging message with a plea that all young men of the church, as well as their parents, serve the Lord and not the world.

"The Relationship of Young Men to the Draft," presenting a practical discussion on how the present draft law treats religious objectors, the reasons underlying the present deferment, rights of objectors under the law, the importance of securing proper classification, and the challenge to our young men to do voluntary service through avenues available under MCC, was treated by Mr. Paul Goering, of the N.S.B.R.O. Office in Washington, D. C. Mr. Goering stated that never again should Mennonite young men be able to say that non-resistance was not preached and lived in our congregation and homes. Although unpopularity may be the result of embracing this cause of a minority group, Mr. Goering encouraged everyone to develop the proper spirit to meet this problem of life.

A general discussion period followed with the two speakers answering questions concerning education on non-resistance, what is being done in other churches and congregations on the question of this education, source material for study, availablility of alternative service opportunities, challenge of projects under alternative service program, and other questions raised by those present. —reported by Henry S. Detwiler, secretary, Eastern District Peace Committee.

Boys' Town of Dangerous Nobodies

Paul Bock

It is better to be a gatekeeper in the tent-village of Boys' Town than a profiteer on the Frankfurt black-market.

The fact was evident from the smile of the slightly ragged, but clean lad who raised the railroad type of barrier at the "city limits" and proudly directed visitors down the "main street." Like the other 120 boys in the village, he had come to this new life from the streets and black-market in Frankfurt.

From one of the tents emerged Alfred Rahn, the young churchman who serves as director of this new venture in character training for homeless boys begun by Hilfswerk, the Protestant Relief Agency. Himself a refugee from the part of Eastern Germany which was given to Poland, Rahn understands the plight of the boys among whom he and other youth leaders work.

> "It is better to be a gate-keeper in the tent-village of Boys' Town than a profiteer on the Frankfurt blackmarket."

There were few of the "citizens" in the camp during this particular day since most of them were out working in road or building-construction, but those left on the grounds were doing work for their community. Several of the lads were building the foundation for a new barracks which had been sent by Die Junge Kirche, the youth organization of the Reformed Church of Switzerland.

Gunther from Dresden

One of the boys passing bricks up the line to the bricklayer was sixteen-year-old Gunther from Dresden. He had lost his father, mother, and two sisters in the terrible night when his home city was virtually wiped out in a raid which left 200,000 to 300,000 dead. He had safely escaped and had gone to his aunt's home, but she had no understanding of boys. He ran away to Frankfurt, joined the black-market gang, and later was invited by a Boys' Town member to "join up." When he arrived in Boys' Town, he was as small as a boy of twelve, because he had been retarded in his physical development. He was dirty, neglected, lacking a sense of moral behavior or cleanliness.

Then, in a month's time, his weight increased from 68 to 90 pounds. His attitude changed so that he is a clean, cheerful, and sociable citizen taking pride in doing a good job at his post in the kitchen crew. It was a happy moment for Gunther when he was given a pair of trousers which had been sent by Church World Service.

Uprooted by the War

All of the Boys' Town members have had terrific war- and post-war experiences. Some have lost their families in the flight as refugees from the East. Others have been prisoners-of-war in Russia, France, or England and are now uprooted and alone—unable to find living relatives in post-war Germany where an additional thirteen million new refugees have been crowded upon the population of 40 million in the western zones.

Then, lost and uprooted, these boys have wandered aimlessly and later joined gangs in cities. In Frankfurt alone, there are 6,000 of these homeless youth, most of whom are engaged in blackmarket activity because it is much easier to make a living that way to work. They trade chocolate, cocoa, cigarettes, and other scarce items for 50 to 100 times their official prices. Even potatoes sometimes slip out on the blackmarket with the result that one person does not get his share in the store because someone else is making a big profit selling illegally. A blackmarketeer could get twenty marks for a box of chocolate or a cake of soap—equal to almost half a week's wages. A small sack of potatoes was worth 100 marks or twenty weeks' wages in factory work.

Hilfswerk Aids Youth

Seeing youth in such a situation, Rev. Otto Fricke and Mr. Adelbert Fischer, of the Frankfurt Hilfswerk office, realized that preaching to vagabonds would not be enough. They needed a chance to work for themselves and for each other. Thus, on a former Nazi military training ground at Vilbel near Frankfurt has grown up the boys' town. Adjacent to it is a community also begun by Hilfswerk for homeless families from the East. Here refugees are building their own homes from sunbaked bricks.

The Christian basis of the town is reflected in different phases of the camp program. Early in the morning all gather in their nissen hut for morning devotions. Then each goes off to his day's work to jobs which camp leaders have helped find. Each boy is given fifteen marks, out of fifty marks earned in a week, as his allowance. The rest is saved for the boy to take when he leaves the town to settle down somewhere. Boys not able to do heavy work perform tasks in the camp.

In the library at Boys' Town, Vilgel, Germany, Gunther who lost his parents and sisters during an RAF raid on Dresden, works with some other Boys' Town Nobodies. Gunther came to Vilbel almost starving, weighing 68 pounds, and sixteen years old. Now by special care and additional food, he is vigorous and growing and weighs 90 pounds.

On certain evenings there are discussions and joint planning for the welfare of the camp. Democracy, war, and honesty are common topics. One person in each tent is elected as a responsible leader and representative in the Community Council.

Their First Commission

A welcome and regular visitor to the Boys' Town is Adolf Freudenberg, who serves as pastor of the nearby refugee community. One of the communion services which he administered in Boys' Town was to him a "moving experience." It was rather late before the worship began because the boys had to unload a truck first. Only two candles provided the light in the room. Most of the twenty-four who attended had had communion only once before. During recent years life had been very abnormal. When Dr. Freudenberg gave a short instruction on the Lord's Supper and administered it, some wept as children. All that was dear to them returned in their conscience —the teaching of their parents and church school teachers in their childhood. They had not heard such words in many years. Dr. Freudenberg said it was a real experience of Christ who asks us to go into the highways and byways and bring them in.

While the Boys' Town life has changed many young men, there have been real obstacles in the way of successful community life. The working day doesn't offer enough oportunity for real fellowship, and the boys are too tired to do much in the evening but "hit the hay." Sometimes, boys leave the camp before they have caught the spirit of the place. Stealing has not yet entirely disappeared.

Many Activities

Nevertheless, some of the problems are being solved. Carl Merryman, a young American from the Congregational Church who recently joined the staff, has been helping to form regular discussion groups, a chorus, and various classes. Craft projects will begin as soon as materials are obtained. Personal counselling is increasing. German and American leaders are determined to work together to realize their goal of a true Christian and democratic community that develops "dangerous nobodies" into responsible citizens with a Christian world outlook.

This summer Boys' Town members will have contact with youth who will come from France, America, and Britain to join in an international workcamp in the nearby refugee community of Vilbel,

International Voluntary Service For Peace —Its Aims, Purposes, and Origin"

This peace organization was born in the same year our own Mennonite Central Committee was formed (1920). Its founder, Pierre Ceresole, was a Swiss pacifist who refused military service in World War I. He was repeatedly cast into prison, suffered severe persecution, was often held in filthy, damp cells where he contracted various diseases. Although his health was partly broken, his tremendous will power drove him through many years of hard and devoted work for peace. Several years ago Pierre Ceresole died a middle-aged man.

> "Here one lives together with Swiss, Belgians, Dutch, English, Germans." — an I.V.S.P. work camp.

In 1920 Le Service Civil International was organized, with a work camp in France. Almost immediately similar camps were set up in Switzerland and Belgium. Its aims was to choose a community where the need was acute; secondly, selecting a project requiring hard physical (pick and shovel) labor, and striving to do that which would make the greatest contribution to the community; third, this service was to provide an alternative service in such countries where military conscription was enforced. Quoting from an I.V.S.P pamphlet we read thus,

> Its aim is to create a spirit of friendship and a constructive attitude towards peace by giving practical help in emergency or by doing work of public usefulness in whichever country it may be needed. Membership is open to all who accept this aim, without regard to race, religion, or political beliefs. All service is voluntary and wages are not paid. No work is undertaken which would be prejudicial to normal paid labor.

The Camp at Mulheim—Ruhr

The camp at Mulheim was opened on October 1, 1947, in what was formerly a restaurant. This building suffered only a few shell holes during the war. On the facade one read in large letter DORTMUND ACTIEN BIER; below in smaller print appeared the usual emblem depicting a shovel and a broken sword, with the words INTERNATIONAL ZIVILDIENST. Accommodations were quite sufficient. Two large dormitories served as sleeping rooms; in addition, we had a small kitchen and dining-room, plus a wash-room and toilets. The camp was located fifteen minutes (by tram) from the center of Mulheim, near a public school, which offered us three evenings a week with showers and baths. The camp was equipped with electricity and water. It was an unusually mild winter; we had a sufficient amount of fuel. Mulheim is located midway between Essen and Duisburg. Being one of the principal manufacturing cities in the Ruhr area it suffered one twenty-minute air raid, which destroyed more than one half of this city of 170,000 inhabitants.

The Work

Our project was to supply the unskilled labor for a large firm called the Rheinische Wohnstaette, which was several thousand residential homes in the Ruhr. This included digging out brick from rubble heaps, cleaning them, hauling them to wherever needed, and later putting them within reach of the bricklayers. We mixed mortar and at times become hod carriers. Another project was with the roofers; this included carrying tile up into the attic, and handing them out through the roof to the workmen. The workday amounted to eight hours. Time began when one left the camp until one returned again. As our work was thirty minutes from our camp, from one to two hours were spent walking, each day. The unusualness of this project was the matter of men and women working together. Side by side we cleaned brick, hauled rubble, mixed mortar, etc., although in every case the girls would do only the lighter part of the work.

I.V.S.P. supplied one truck on this project, which was kept busy from morning till night. Cement, gravel, cinders, brick, iron beams, etc., had to be moved from place to place. Three men were steadily taking care of this part of the work.

In a program such as this one has a splendid opportunity to observe the average German workman. It will take him more than one day to tell you all his troubles and sorrows. He will tell you how many weeks he has been unable to buy any fat. At 10:00 a.m. when all German workmen eat sandwich, you see him eat his dry bread, chokingly. He'll show you his heavy workers' ration card, and says he has five or six more at home, but he can't use them because there is nothing in the stories to obtain. Often he goes home early in the afternoon, for he has no energy or ambition to go on. He will tell you about his good wife, and how she would like to have a nice meal waiting for him, but what can she prepare from empty shelves? He will probably end up saying "Alles hat kein Zweck" ("Germany is poor; America must be a beautiful land to live in"). It does little good to agree on the beauty of living in a land of plenty. At the moment one was unable to help much in a material way. So far I haven't found a good answer to give to the poor man; it's also very painful to just remain silent. The skilled laborers receive less than one mark an hour or, converted into our money, less than 10 cents.

Food

We were informed that we'd live on regular German rations, but it was soon evident that we were getting supplementary food. The English I.V.S.P. team in nearby Duisburg occasionally brought extra rations, also the Quakers and Mennonites. As a whole we ate mostly soup, potatoes, and bread; seldom any fatty meats or vegtables, and no fruit. Morning cereal was eaten dry but with sugar. After four weeks of this, one begins to realize why the German people crave anything containing fat; one left the table satisfied, but within a few hours one felt the lack of certain foods. One began to feel more and more the consequences of an unbalanced diet. Even so we knew we were eating better than the average German.

Camp Activities

Every Monday evening we had our house meeting, where the week's agenda was planned. We would decide who must rise early in the mornings to start fires and wake the rest. This little task was equally shared by the girls and boys. Seldom had we a free evening, for there were so many things to do and talk about. One of the first evenings we had to tell them all about the Mennonites. Another evening I showed them slides on our relief work in the Netherlands. As a rule, one evening was spent singing, and sometimes we played folk games. Two or three times a week we had our discussion period. The theme always consisted of present-day problems, e.g., tension between East and West, numerous German problems of today, pacifism from religious and other viewpoints. Occasionally we ventured to the near-by Quaker Center to hear special lectures, or partake in discussions.

Because of its open membership, such a camp is made up of all types of people. One is given complete freedom to speak and demonstrate his beliefs. Our key word was tolerance.

Because of the mild winter we were able to make several long hikes through the countryside. One day was spent visiting a Ruhr coal mine; it was all very interesting to crawl around on hand and knees and examine the bowels of the earth. We emerged looking like experienced miners. If American miners think they have it hard, they should visit the Ruhr. The American miner earns in one-half hour what the Ruhr miner receives in eight.

Summary

These short six weeks at Mulheim are an unusually good opportunity to get a true picture of the Germany of today. Here one lives together with Swiss, Belgians, Dutch, English, Germans. Germans not only from the Ruhr area, but all parts of the Russian Zone, Berlin, Hamburg, Frankfurt, and so on. One learns from them the existing conditions in the different zones. Finally, one understands why people steal coal or wood, and deal on the black market. The prevailing situation almost dares the Christian to live an honest, consistent life. I regard this experience very valuable, and feel it's one way we can help span the bridges between countries.

Closing with what I've told many a German youth, with an almost unbearable picture lying before us, depicting such a dark future, we can find solace by turning to God, there seeking guidance, forgiving one another, and obtaining vision to mend this bleeding world.

"That You Might Believe" —a Book Review

by Malcolm Wenger, Busby, Montana

That You Might Believe, by Henry M. Morris, Chicago 7, Illinois: (Good Books, Inc., $1.50)

"Always be prepared to make a defense to anyone who calls you to account for the hope that is in you, yet do it with gentleness and reverence" (I Peter 3:15).

Young people especially in universities and some colleges are taught scientific theories which seem to discredit the Bible. Often they are left with the impression that the Bible is full of scientific errors and that the Christian faith is an outmoded superstition which can be held only by those ignorant of modern science and philosophy.

With this need in mind author Henry Morris, instructor in Civil Engineering in Rice Institute, Huston, Texas, has written this volume. In the brief space of 156 pages he seeks to set forth "some of the more convincing evidences for the inspiration of the Bible and the truth of Christianity, a rational and conclusive refutation of the pseudo-scientific teaching against the Bible which the modern college student must meet, and finally, a setting forth of the basic truths of God's way of salvation and His eternal plan, as revealed in His inspired Word."

His discussion includes: modern scientific truths hidden for centuries in the Bible, creation and the theory of evolution, the Flood and geology, the historical accuracy of the Bible, fulfilled prophecy, and a concluding presentation of God's plan of redemption. In a book of this scope the author could not give all the detailed evidences pertinent to each subject discussed. A bibliography appended to each chapter will point the way for further investigation by the interested reader.

Here is a book that will help Christian young people to give a reason for the hope that is in them.

Something for Young Men to Think About

Martin Luther was 33 when he nailed his theses to the church in Wittenburg, Patrick Henry was 29 when he made his speech against the Stamp Act. Thomas Jefferson was 33 when he drafted the Declaration of Independence. Alexander Hamilton was the first Secretary of the Treasury at 32. Napoleon was 27 when appointed to command the French Army in Italy. Benjamin Franklin wrote "Poor Richard's Almanac," at 26. Newton grasped the Law of Gravity at 24. McCormick and Westinghouse were 23 when they respectively invented the reaper and air brake.

the nation rediscovers a sense of God, sheer anarchy is ahead." I hear another say, "If a man plays God, instead of obeying Him, he soon acts like the devil."

Then I remember Stradivarius, a violin maker, whose violins made two centuries ago are now worth almost their weight in gold. Said Stradivarius,

> If my hands slacked
> I should rob God, since He is fullest good,
> Leaving a blank instead of violins,
> He could not make Antonie Stradivarius violins,
> Without Antonio.

And I find it is written, "I planted, Appollos watered; but God gave the increase.'" That Timothy, it is also written, was to abide in the things he had learned from Mother Eunice and Grandma Lois, and in "the sacred writings which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."

And memory turns to the stories of the pioneers on the Dakota prairies and their privations. God was there in person. He protected. He saved. He healed of disease in those days. The Mennonite pioneers did their best, but it was God who also did His full best. They knew Him, not merely about Him. And I recall that my own father, the sixth generation in this country, working in a civilization two hundred years old, going about as a town-and-country doctor. He came to the house of an unbeliever. His medicine failed to cure the man. He told the man that he had no hope, except through prayer. The doctor then and there got down on his knees by the bedside of that sick man, asked the Lord to heal, if it be according to His will. God did heal that unbeliever. The man accepted Christ, and today, after thirty some years, he is in the Church of Jesus Christ. (To be continued.)

where Dr. Freudenberg is pastor. Here they will help work with refugees from East Prussia, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, and elsewhere to build homes and community centers. This work-camp is being sponsored by the Congregational Service Committee in co-operation with the Youth Department of the World Council of Churches.

Boy's Town Possible Through Our Aid

This significant step in Christian rehabilitation would not be possible without the gifts of food and clothing from Church World Service in America, Swedish and Swiss and other church relief agencies, as well as the collections of the German churches themselves. Despite the drought and universal hunger, the church people in Germany have given considerable quantities to the relief program.

As Mennonite youth here in America support our church relief program, we not only help to relieve suffering but also make possible such projects as Boys' Town in Vibel for M.C.C. funds are helping to support Hilfswerk. Thus we help to replace cynicism and hopelessness of many youth abroad with the new confidence and Christian understanding needed for a peaceful world.

September 14. Under a new Selective Service regulation conscientious objectors opposed to noncombatant service will be examined and considered on their claim for conscientious objections before they are considered for any classification except Class V-A (overage) and Class IV-F (unfitness).

The new regulation requires the local board to classify the registrant in the lowest classification for which he is determined to be eligible with V-A considered the lowest class and I-A considered the highest class. This regulation reverses the wartime practice of putting every man in I-A first and then examining his fitness for service or his claim for dependency or occupational deferment.

The theory back of the new regulation is that Selective Service does not want a lot of potential VI-Fs or deferable men in Class I-A; rather, it wants only men who have been examined in every way and found clearly available for military service in Class I-A. This process will furnish a more accurate inventory of registrants actually available for military service.

Since IV-E (conscientious objector to noncombatant training and service) is a lower classification that III-A (dependency deferment) or II-C (farm deferment) this new regulation means that the conscientious objections of a registrant will be considered before his eligibilty for a dependency or farm deferment is considered. If a local board classifies a conscientious objector who is opposed to noncombatant service in any classification other than IV-E (except V-A or VI-F) it means that his conscientious objections have been denied. The registrant should then use his right of appearing before his local board or appealing to the appeal board.

A conscientious objector may be willing to accept a II-C or III-A thinking that he can apply for IV-E if the local board later sends him a I-A. Legally, he is still eligible for consideration as a conscientious objector but the local board may logically feel that he waived his conscientious objections in accepting another classification without appealing for IV-E. The attitude of the National Appeal Board on such a case is not known at this time since the members of the Board, which will make its own policy, have not been appointed.

It is advisable for a conscientious objector to exhaust all of his procedural rights of appeal for getting proper recognition of his conscientious objections if he is otherwise classified. Such a person will be in a much better position for getting recognition if and when the draft tightens up and men deferred as farmers and married are put in I-A.

NEW YORK CITY, September 15—More than ten million women throughout the United States will gather at their radios November 5th to join in prayer for world peace.

Ted Malone, Westinghouse Roving Reporter, in cooperation with the United Council of Church Women, will devote his broadcast that day to a special program on World Community Day. Malone is heard regularly Monday through Friday at 11:30 a. m., EST, over 209 stations of the ABC network.

The ten million members of the UCCW are scattered throughout the United States. Home offices for the Council are in New York City, with branches in forty states and more than thirteen hundred local interdenominational councils. Organized only seven years ago, the Council is built on the principle that "ten million women working together can change the world."

Hillsboro, Kansas: Special jubilee services to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Mennonite Brethren Conference mission effort in India will be held on Sunday, October 31, by the Mennonite Brethren churches throughout the United States and Canada.

CHICAGO—The mass movement of food trains for overseas relief will reach a climax between Thanksgiving and December 10, it was announced here today by John D. Metzler, national chairman of the Christian Rural Overseas program (CROP), sponsor of the trains.

Metzler said a minimum of eleven trains is scheduled to be assembled during this two-week period.

Trains are estimated to contain from 50 to 150 cars. Most will originate in the Midwest and in the Far West.

Although a number of Southern states are organizing to conduct campaigns, it is not believed that trains will be formed in these states. Individual cars and trucks will carry contributions to Southern ports.

Among the trains which have been named are the following: Pershing Memorial CROP train (Missouri); Iowa Christian Relief train; Nebraska Goodwill train; and the Will Rogers Memorial train (Oklahoma and Texas).

To date, the largest train has been the Abraham Lincoln Friendship train, whose four sections carried 283 carloads of foodstuffs from Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, and South Dakota. This train was assembled in February.

In July, Wisconsin contributed a milk train. In August, Kansas and Ohio gave 50 and 52 carloads of wheat, respectively.

Editorials

"THIS IS NONE OTHER but the house of God and this is the gate of heaven . . . . and he called the name of that place Bethel: but the name of that city was called Luz at the first." What made this place to which Jacob came as a fugitive from an angry brother, as a young man leaving home for the first time, as a young schemer whose scheming had caught up with him and threatened his future—what made this place a Bethel, a house of God. Was it not the revelation that God gave him there concerning His own presence with and provision for Jacob in spite of all his frailties, his fears about his past, and his fears about the unknown future. God would see him through all these. Bethel ever stands for the opportunity opened wide by God for stumbling, inexperienced youth who is nevertheless sensitive to God's call to set a milestone in life that marks the spot of a genuine experience of God and puts the stamp of indelible Christian character upon the rest of life. Every higher institution of learning that calls itself Christian should be a Bethel in that sense of the word. Let us pray that all our Conference schools may be Bethels in that sense the word.—J.J.E.

RECENTLY CONSIDERABLE SPACE in this publication was devoted to the problem of the co-operative system. There has been wide reaction pro and con on the question involved as well as the place such a discussion has in a church paper. One observation that seems to stand out has to do, not with the validity or non-validity of the system under discussion, but with intense feelings that come as a result of malpractices within each of the respective systems involved. Neither system can be correctly and objectively evaluated if it has any crooked people in it. At this point, the voice of the church can speak, the gospel is crystal clear. An enlightened society with an enlightened economic system can come about only as individual people are enlightened by the light that shines from the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ and as they gather their light.—J.J.E.

BIRTH PAINS OF CHRISTIAN UNITY

WHILE THE WORLD IS FALLING APART, the church is drawing together. In the month of August there were at least four major Protestant interdenominational and international conferences meeting in Europe. These were the American Council of Churches, the National Association of Evangelicals, the World Council of Churches, and Youth for Christ International. Evidences of the tendencies for bodies within a denomination to draw together were manifest in the recent Fourth Mennonite World Conference. While it is true that these various groups seek unity according to various points of view, the significant fact is that they all want unity.

This is in sharp contrast to the situation fifty years ago or even more recently. There are still those who say even in the face of Christ's prayer for unity that every movement toward unity is inspired by Satan. To a certain extent it might appear that they have a case. God's word says, "Come ye out from among them, and be ye separate." But that is not all. Christ also prayed, "That they all may be one." Separation usually means purity and consequent strength; but pressed too far it means inability to meet the needs of the world and consequent uselessness as far as the plan of God is concerned. Unity also makes for strength due to larger resources but it exposes to possible contamination and squandering of personal resources. Yet the Master must want us to fearlessly go through with it if he prayed repeatedly in his high-priestly prayer. "That they all may be one."

The world is too strong for a divided church, as someone has put it. There must be a way by which the various elements. of Christendom can be drawn together under the Lord Jesus Christ and the banner of the cross so that the world can see that there is a way through which all may become one with each part making its individual contribution to the whole. Will the Church of Jesus Christ be the answer to the world's problem?—J.J.E.

ARE YOU BUSY LOSING A BOY?

Not kidnapped by bandits and hidden in a cave to weep and starve and raise a nation to frenzied searching. Were that the case, one hundred thousand men would rise to the rescue if need be. Unfortunately, the losing of the lad is without any dramatic excitement, though very sad and very real.

THE FACT IS, HIS FATHER lost him. Being to busy to sit with him at the fireside and answer his trivial questions during the years when fathers are the only great heroes of the boys, he let go his hold upon him.

Yes, HIS MOTHER lost him. Being much engrossed in her teas, dinners and club programs, she left the maid to hear the boy say his prayers, and thus her grip slipped and the boy was lost to his home.

Aye, THE CHURCH lost him. Being so much occupied with sermons for the wise and elderly, and having good care for dignity, the minister and elders were unmindful of the feelings of the boy in the pew and made no provision in sermon or song for his boyishness, and so the church and many sad-hearted parents are now looking for the lost boy.—Child Welfare Magazine

The Value of a College Education to a Minister

by Loris Habegger

In our day there are still those who would belittle the value of a college education for the minister. This is illustrated in the young man who was attending a Bible school and who declared that the other factors in our social life are of no significance, therefore he was going to get only as much education as would be necessary to peruse the Bible. When asked why he preferred to go to school to get even this basic ingredient in the Christian ministry he replied that one could not study at home; the atmosphere is not conducive to good and productive study.

> "Christ is among us waiting to be reborn. There is only one decision remaining in this sad world, namely, the decision between Christ and Anti-Christ. In making this decision we shall find that Jesus Christ is the fulfillment of all of God's promises through the ages." — Dr. Dirk Cattepoel, Krefeld Germany.

This young man inadvertently admitted to his companions one of the basic contributions in a college education for the minster. That is concentration of effort. Jesus had a little to say about the concentration of effort. He was casting about for those who would do His work here on earth. He sought successful followers but they had not concentrated their efforts; other matters took up their time. Jesus said, "No one who puts his hand to the plow and looks back is fit for the kingdom of God," (Luke 9:62). While not all college students become ministers or full-time Christian workers, it is true that a college education is putting our hands to the plow and concentrating our efforts in single channels of future usefulness to society and the church. Paul further expresses concentration of effort when he reminds Timothy thus, "Do your best to present yourself to God as one approved, a workman who has no need to be ashamed, rightly handling the word of truth. Avoid such godless chatter, for it will lead people into more and more ungodliness." Scattered effort is not enough. "No soldier on service gets entangled in civilian pursuits, since his aim is to satisfy the one who enlisted him" (II Tim. 2:4).

College brings a revelation of the great areas open to the Christian ministry. Few of us stand in a position to see the need as Jesus saw it. Only a study of the civilizations come and gone and of our society with its vast superstructure can give us an understanding of the almost insurmountable task. It is a revelation to discover that certain situations will never respond to "preaching the gospel" in its literal sense. Jesus preached and He healed. Often the healing was the thing which made the individual respond to the preaching. A revelation of the broad interrelated areas of man's existence opens vast new areas of preaching in its broader sense. To refer our people to other places, to other people, for proper care will make our ministry more effective in bringing about a response to our preaching and counsel. There are many avenues to bring Christ to the multitudes, just as there are many spokes to the wheel. Yet each spoke is essential if the wheel is to carry its weight. In our revelation Christ is the hub of the wheel and we have revealed the "spokes" which complete the service.

Along with revelation must come maturation. I use the term, maturation, in the sense that a minister who is to be successful must be able to see the broad implications of his work and then be able to isolate the incident with relation to its basic components. It is in this area that study in the aspects of man's behavior in psychology and sociology brings about more effective ministering. It is fine to know what God's word says about a given situation. It is another thing to apply it so it is of healing value to the individual. A good understanding of psychology helps to make proper conclusions. English helps us to state what we desire to be done and to read Scripture so it carries meaning, and the discipline of college helps us to go ahead. Let no minister feel he has the answers without proper study. Good work demands it and the process of study with maturation in mind is a never ending process. In this connection it might be of interest to note that one famous Bible institute encouraged college study as a continuing maturing process to one of the ministers with whom I am acquainted.

A minister must have satisfaction if he is to be effective. An unhappy individual is not successful. One cannot be happy if he must labor under the burden of inadequate training to cope with the educational level of his people. While indications point to a lack of formal training in Jesus' life, we must remember that the Father of this same Jesus chose Paul, one of the best educated men of his time, to make a Jewish Christian gospel meaningful to a Gentile Greek world. Let us not be naive; we can only be satisfied if we can answer a modern world's problems and needs with the ageless wisdom of God, rather then the personal prejudices of Hugo Musselmann, an exchange student from Bavaria, Germany has arrived. Hugo is classified as a college sophomore. His main interests are agriculture and English.

In previous year, every Tuesday was designated as Y.W. and Y.M. day. This year the organization was slightly altered. The young men and women of the college group will meet by themselves and the academy youth will have meetings within their own age-group. This arrangement tends to give each age-group an opportunity to use their organization to the best advantage. This new organization was named the Christian Student Association. Lillian Ortman was elected as president.

The student body has elected Joyce Kaufman as editor of the school paper, "The Star." Willis Wipf has been selected for the business manager vacancy.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Recent campus visitors have been Rev. and Mrs. Meihuizen and Dr. and Mrs. Leendertz from Holland; Rev. Ulrich Hege from Germany; Samuel Gerber from Switzerland; and Rev. Pierre Widmer from France. On the afternoon and evening of Friday, October 8, the College will have open house. The public is being invited to visit the College at that time. Student guides will be provided, faculty members will be in their laboratories and classrooms to answer questions, and refreshments will be served. Many local people have never visited the college and others will welcome the opportunity to see recent changes and improvements to the plant. The improvements include extensive remodeling of College Hall, a new floor in the Ropp Hall dining room, new equipment in the foods laboratory, new Science Hall offices, and the like. Saturday, October 9, will be homecoming. The following day, October 10, is Parents' Day. All parents of students are being invited. The special feature will be a vesper service in the afternoon at which Martin Baumgartner, North Wales, Pennsylvania, a graduate with the class of 1917, will speak on Choosing a Career. Bible lectures will be the week of November 14 with Rev. Charles R. Bell, Jr., pastor of the First Baptist Church of Madison, Wisconsin, as the speaker.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

The highlight of this week was the chapel address delivered by Dr. Dirk Cattepoel, Krefeld, Germany. His address was of particular interest to our combined student bodies because Krefeld was an early point of contact between Mennonite and Brethren in the 18th century. Following the address, Dr. Cattepoel lectured to Don Smucker's class on, "Christianity in Russia." He based many of his observations on his life in Russia between 1924-44.

Monday night Maynard Krueger spoke to some of the Seminary people concerning his candidacy for Congress from this District. Mr. Krueger registered as a conscientious objector during the Second World War. He is professor at the University of Chicago.

Rev. Orlando Waltner, of Champa, India, our president of the student body this year, also delivered a very impressive message to the student chapel on Thursday called, "The Dirge in the Bengal Jungle" the story of the recent terrible starvation in Bengal.

Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker has been spending the past week participating in a combined Missionary Rally of five of the Oregon churches.

Professor Marvin Dirks is making preliminary plans for the placement of our students in various fields of service. Discussions are also under way concerning the type of deputation work which the Seminary will bring to the churches this year. Announcement of these placements will be made at a later date.

Eldon Graber, North Newton, Kansas, has been elected superintendent of the newly re-organized Sunday school.

THE VALUE OF A COLLEGE EDUCATION TO THE MINISTER

narrow and individualistic interpretations of the Scriptures. How can we say we have fought the good fight, we have run the race and finished it keeping the faith (II Tim. 4:7) when we have through lack of training been unable to win one with whom we have run. Satisfaction is not pride or selfish aspiration; it is inner peace that comes from fulfilling a "calling" well.

All of life is training. College pursuits enable present application of our future God-inspired vocation. Where are we better able to integrate our knowledge then in the application of our principles while in college? We apply through the integration of various fields in the liberal arts school. We further apply in actual practice in the field of the student ministry. In purifying ourselves of what is ignoble as Paul speaks in II Timothy 2:20, 21, we find ourselves in the process of fitting together through application rather than taking away from ourselves some things.

Finally, the attribute of humility is given to us in our college experience. We recognize what mortals we be, and dedicate what we have for its greatest potentiality. Humility in learning comes as we study together the vast, uncharted areas and strive to make a testimony for Christ in our day.—All Scriptural quotations from Revised Standard Version.

OUR CONFERENCE-WIDE MISSIONS SUNDAY

by A. E. Kreider

The Board of Foreign Mission of our General Conference has asked the churches throughout our brotherhood to set aside a Sunday in October as Mission Sunday. The second Sunday, October 10, has been designated as our conference-wide Mission Sunday. If this date is not suitable for any church then another day may be chosen. This call has gone forth to the churches that we might face unitedly our divinely appointed task of carrying the gospel to the peoples on the several fields for which we are responsible. We have fields in India, China, South America, Belgian Congo, and among the American Indians. Some ninety workers are laboring in these widely scattered areas. God has wonderously blessed the work. A great company of souls have come from darkness into the marvelous light of Christ. The task of evangelizing these areas, which has been intrusted to us, is not completed. The work must go on. We must extend the work if we would discharge our responsibility. New workers must be sent. Other fields are calling to us saying, "Come over and help us." This is again a day of open doors. In order to meet the urgent challenge of our day we need the prayers and the sympathetic support of every member of the churches east and west, north and south. The Lord's work requires funds. The cost of our missionary program has increased. The work is growing on each field. Living costs on mission fields have risen even as in the homeland. Our treasury is low at the present time. Your mission board is calling upon the churches for your prayerful support, that the Lord's work in no place need suffer. Souls everywhere need Christ. Men are perishing without knowing Him who is the Saviour of the world. What will you and your church do?

We regret that on account of the dock-strike on the west coast, the sailing of the Albert Jantzens had to be postponed. Your prayers will be appreciated in their behalf. Pray that the strike may be settled so that they can be on their way to China.

We are happy to announce that Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf will sail on the MARCHEN MAERSK from the east coast on October 13. The boat may be delayed for a few days but we can definitely count on her sailing about the middle of the month. We praise the Lord for this open door.

We are glad to report that Miss Marie J. Regier has arrived from China. She will be doing deputation work in some of our churches soon.

—Howard G. Nyce, Secretary
Foreign Mission Board

RELIEF NOTES

Relief to Orphans

Weiler Children's Home continues to be one of the MCC relief projects in France. Harold Weaver, working there at present along with several other MCC workers, feels that the work is very much worth while. Many of these children, having been orphaned through the experiences of the war, find this the first place they have known where they are cared for and taught about Jesus and the way of love. To help these innocent victims of war both physically and spiritually is truly a valid and significant relief work.

Goodwill Christmas Bundles

The number of Goodwill Christmas Bundles received in the United States and Canada this year has reached a total of approximately 16,050. In 1946 the total was 14,885 and in 1947 there were 12,961. In the United States, the bundles have not all been packed, but volunteer groups from the community are assisting, and within the near future the work should be completed. The shipment of bundles to Paraguay has been sent, and those to other distant countries are also being prepared for shipment. It is hoped that these bundles will reach the fields for distribution by Christmas.

European Students Enter Mennonite Colleges

Within the past week five Mennonite students from Germany and several from Holland have come to the United States for a year of study in Mennonite colleges; on September 29 seven more students are to arrive from Germany, and later a few more from France and from Italy. This student exchange program, including these and other students from Europe, is sponsored by the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges, with the MCC assisting in making some the arrangements in connection with the coming of the students. This is the third year for this student exchange project; it is the first year however that students from Germany have been able to enter the United States.

Bluffton College . . .

Bluffton College extends greetings to you on the sixtieth anniversary of your founding. The church has created educational institutions in order that its young people might be strengthened in the faith, be taught the way of life, and be inspired to give their lives to Christian service. The fact that you have been true to this charge is attested by the hundreds of your graduates giving themselves in sacrificial service in school rooms, churches, mission fields, in imparting a definitely Christian service motive to many other vocations, and in the creation and maintenance of Christian homes. Through them your influence is being extended to inestimable hundred of others whom they contact. May Godly men and women always be found, as now, to sacrifice through gifts and service that your work might increase in scope and power. It is our prayer that God may continue to bless you and make you a blessing throughout the years.

What Is Caesar's?

One interesting fact which ought to be of current interest to Mennonites is their own history in regard to refusing to pay war taxes. Though tax refusal was a potent witness of earlier Mennonites, today it is little recognized that such a testimony ever existed.

From Guy Franklin Hershberger's Mennonite history entitled War, Peace and Non-Resistance (1944) we have the following information, summary:

Two questions arising out of the American Revolution were easily and definitely answered by the Mennonites. The first was, Shall we take up arms? The answer to this was a postive "No." The second question was, Shall we give aid to the suffering? This time the answer was a positive "Yes". But there was also a third question not so easily answered. This was the question of war taxes. The Mennonites, with little objection, seem to have paid their fines for not joining military associations, at least in localities where they were strictly and regularly collected. In addition to the fine the Pennsylvania Assembly levied a special war tax on all inhabitants. Should a nonresistant Christian pay this tax?

Hershberger goes on to tell what they did:

> The war tax issue became a serious issue in 1778. Some of the ministers said that they could not conscientiously pay the tax, but Bishop Christian Funk said it should be paid. Funk said: "Were Christ here he would say, "Give to congress that which belongs to congress and to God that which belongs to God." Bishop Andrew Ziegler, the spokeman for the opposite group, said, "I would as soon go to war as to pay the three pounds and 10 shillings."

In regard to what the Mennonites actually did, he said: "It seems that the Quakers generally refused to pay the tax, then when the government came and seized their property in payment of the tax they let them take it without resistance. What the Mennonites did is not so clear. Apparently most of them objected to the tax and followed the same plan which the Quakers did."

That Mennonites did refuse is confirmed by Margaret Hurst in her detailed and accurate history of the Quaker entitled, The Quakers in Peace and War:

> It is true that in Virginia the early draft laws of the war exempted Quakers and Mennonites. But they endured every distraint and their general refusal to use Continental paper money or to pay war taxes involved them in great difficulty.

Some Mennonites are now becoming particularly sensitive to the import of sending their tax dollars to the U.S. Treasury when they know that 75 cents of every dollar is for financing past present and future wars. They realize that they are directly contributing to the stockpiling of bacterial and atomic weapons and the rapid growth of militarism in almost every area of the national life. Rev. David Goertz

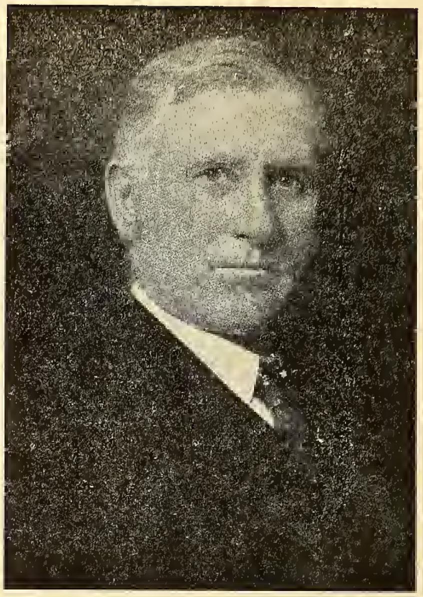
Barely three years after they had arrived on the treeless, windswept Kansas prairie in search of freedom, a group of about 70 sober-minded pioneers met in a schoolhouse near the present Alexanderwohl Church. Uppermost in their minds was not the economic plight in which some of the Brethren found themselves, nor other questions of an economic or even of a political nature, however important they might be, but the intellectual and spiritual welfare of their children.

It had been for the sake of their youth that they had undertaken the long trek from Russia across the ocean. They had been in search of freedom—freedom of conscience and of the mind. Now that they were in possession of this priceless liberty, how would they go about to be worthy of it? That was the theme upon which they had come to deliberate.

A month earlier, Nov. 15, 1877, a group of ministers and teachers met in the same location to discuss in a preliminary way matters pertaining to education and related subjects. They went on record as recommending "the teaching and study of the English language in order to facilitate social intercourse with Americans and to make work for the Kingdom of God possible among the English speaking people." They added that "the Conference recognize the necessity of establishing a "Fortbildungsschule," e.g, a continuation school, in which capable young men could acquire the necessary training and teaching."



Bernhard Warkentin

The aims of the founders of oldest Mennonite institution of higher learning in America was preparation for citizenship, training of young men for mission work and the teaching profession.

It took sixteen years from the time the first meeting was held in the little district schoolhouse at Alexanderwohl, until their dream was realized and the magnificent stone structure prominently located on "Mount Hebron," a knoll on the otherwise level prairie, opened its doors to the young people of the Mennonite faith. They were years of toil and devotion, of disappointment and failure, but the time came when these men of vision who carried the brunt of the task, their hands steadied by a host of loyal friends, had cause to rejoice. Their objective, that of creating an opportunity for young people to train themselves for the glory of God and the welfare of mankind, had been achieved.

Some of the old pioneers had answered the call, "well, done, thou good and faithful servant . . . . " before they could behold the fruits of their efforts, their mantle fell upon younger shoulders, while others remained to continue to put their shoulder under the burden.

Today, 60 years after the laying of the corner stone of Bethel College on Friday, Oct. 12, 1888, the college, its officers, students and friends, pause to examine themselves in the light of the high aims of their forefathers. In how far has Bethel succeeded in being a "House of God" for young people who have entered its portals? What influences, such as religious, cultural, social, has it had upon its constituency, the nation, the world? Has it played a significant role in the cause of higher education among Mennonites? Has it kept pace with the educational progress elsewhere during these years? What if Bethel had never been?

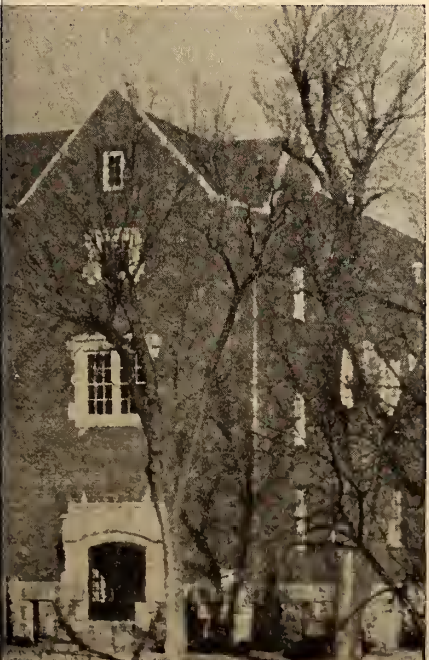
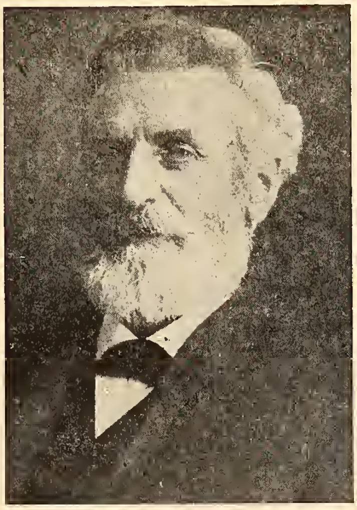
Bethel College had to chart its own course—there was no other Mennonite institution of higher learning in either America or Europe to which it could look for guidance, or whose example it could follow. If mistakes were made, and there were some, it was because few, if any, of the men had any experience of founding or piloting a school of university level. David Goertz, J. J. Krehbiel, Bernhard Warkentin, and others—they were men of the soil, of the pulpit, versed in business, but building a college was outside the realm of their experience. Yet they have succeeded in setting up an institution that stands as a monument to their foresight and wisdom. Faith, vision, purpose—these stand out as the great motivating principles of the founders.



etings will be held



J. J. Krehbiel

Being the first and only Mennonite school aiming at a university level curriculum, the Fathers of Bethel College did not dedicate the school to this or that branch of Mennonites, but to the youth of the Mennonite Church of America. Even during the first school-year students from seven branches of Mennonites enrolled, as well as Baptists, Methodists, Evangelicals, Presbyterians, Catholics and Lutherans. The aim of the founders, that "of making work for the Kingdom of God possible among English speaking people" was realized the first year. Bethel College has never wavered from that mission.

Any attempt to appraise the contribution of Bethel College to the moral and religious tone of our churches, to the lifting of the cultural level of the community, or in the field of science, is at best only relative. What manner of judgment, what gauge must one apply to evaluate the things of the spirit? ". . . . for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal." II Cor. 4:18.

Prof. C. H. Wedel,
first president of Bethel College

Not to evaluate but to illustrate in some measure the contribution of Bethel College to the Mennonite church and to society, some data is gleaned from the forthcoming book in the history of Bethel College by Dr. P. J. Wedel.

During the first decade of Bethel 631 students enrolled, of these 112 took up teaching, while 24 went into ministry or into missionary work. Five years later a total of 984 young people had enrolled, and again the pulpit, the foreign mission field and the school claimed a large number of graduates, 190 became teaches and 70 went into active religious work. In 1911 a full four-year college course leading to a bachelors degree was introduced into the curriculum and today 912 have received a degree at Bethel.

Again quoting from Dr. Wedel's manuscript, at least 184 former students and graduates have entered the ministry, 102 have become missionaries, and 68 entered the field of medicine and dentistry. These figures, however, are not absolute because in a number of cases especially if the students were not Mennonites, it has been impossible to trace their activities once they left the college.

Many changes have come about on the campus in these 60 years. The number of permanent buildings has grown to more than 20 in addition to many temporary housing units for students. The curriculum has been extended with courses leading to degrees in liberal arts, science and theology, as well as a number of pre-professional courses in the field of medicine, dentistry and law. The number of instructors and staff members has risen to about 70. Nearly 7000 young people have at one time or another attended Bethel College as students.

In a three-day celebration, Oct. 10-12, Bethel College will observe its sixtieth anniversary, to give thanks to Him from whom all blessings flow, to take stock of its resources, to check its course with the Master Plan, and launch out again into another period of service.

Evangelism - Which Way?

(Report of Eastern District Ministers' Fellowship)

The ministers and wives and several other Christian workers of the Eastern District Conference met on the Freeman Swartz farm on Sept. 20th for an afternoon and evening of fellowship and discussion. The afternoon revealed that those ministers who excelled in volley ball were quite deficient in the playing of soft ball. After a picnic lunch, ice cream and coffee was served.

The meeting has been called by the executive committee to discuss "Methods of Evangelism for our Eastern District Conference." Rev. J. J. Plenert of Lansdale opened the discussion in presenting a comprehensive paper on the ways and means of spreading the Gospel — through the pastor, the laity and the various organizations of the church. The ministers then participated in a very helpful and inspiring discussion. As the various pastors clearly declared their convictions, it became more evident that we were one in our conception of the Gospel and salvation. The use of the catechism was thoroughly discussed. Its good points and weak points were pointed out. Mass evangelism, the altar call and other types of invitations were also discussed. The dangers of too much or too little emotionalism, of too much or too little intellectualism, in the way of salvation were considered. Some felt the use of the catechism was too closely associated with "confirmation." It was pointed out however that our church stands strongly and securely on baptizing only upon the confession of faith.

The trend of opinion seemed to be that the catechism should be used as a means of showing the individual his need of the Saviour and then praying the Holy Spirit would effect a work of grace. Great importance was attached to having private personal interviews with the catechumens both before the period of instruction and at the close. Some pastors have the candidates for baptism give a personal testimony concerning their faith at a meeting prior to baptism. Personal voluntary decisions to join an instruction class, to accept Christ and to join the church were stressed.

It was pointed out that we should not confine ourselves to one method of evangelism. We should use the catechism; but also use evangelistic meetings and Bible Conferences "that we might by all means save some." This meeting of Christian workers seemed to assure an advance for Christ in the Eastern District. As we closed our meeting on the farmhouse lawn with a prayer service we saw that many difficulties and misunderstandings had been cleared away and with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" the moon that had been struggling all evening to climb over mountains of clouds, was now shining on the assembly.—Rev. Ward W. Shelly, Sec.

"A pseudo-solution" is what the International Walther League, Lutheran youth organization, has called universal military training, at its fifty-sixth annual convention.

PROGRAM

Western District Conference

MEMORIAL HALL, NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS
October 13, 14, 1948

The conference will open on Wednesday morning with the conference sermon by the conference president, Rev. Henry Hege, this to be followed by the preliminary business of the conference, the reception of new churches, etc. The afternoon program will include an address by Rev. Don Smucker. The evening program will be in charge of the young people's organization, and Dr. J. E. Hartzler will speak on the subject, "The Other Side of the Hill." Thursday the business of the conference will be resumed. Beside the different reports to be given there will be further addresses by Rev. Don Smucker, both in the morning and afternoon. The Women's Missionary Organization will have charge of the Thursday evening program. Of special interest will be an address by Miss Marie J. Regier, a missionary recently returned from China. The morning sessions will all begin at 9 o'clock, and the evening program at 8 o'clock.

The Western District Minister's Conference will this year convene on Friday, October 15, in the Inman Mennonite Church.

The Women's Missionary Organization business meeting will also be held Friday, October 15, in the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas.—Rev. Arnold Epp, secretary.

Eastern District Organizes for Peace Education

The Peace Committee, together with the Education Committee, have worked out a program to further the cause of Peace Education. It is felt that this can best be attained on the local congregational level. Thus, we have worked out a suggested program of action to meet this need.

1. Peace committees should be formed immediately in each local congregation. This committee be charged jointly with the pastor to carry out peace education program in all of its phases. Those congregaions already having relief committees can probably increase scope of activity to include this new phase if this would seem desirable. The main point is to get laymen interested in jointly shouldering this responsibility on local levels without delay.

2. The local peace committees should organize study groups of from three to six weeks duration. If combined meetings with other congregations is deemed desirable, well and good. It is our opinion that a freer approach to problems involved will be gained by keeping the study groups small and composed of local, acquainted individuals.

3. The Eastern District Conference Peace Committe will stand ready to cooperate with local committees on all problems that may arise. Concerning the study groups, we will be very glad to help the local committee work out a program regarding the study material and available personnel upon invitation to do so.

September 22. Major attention has shifted to Paris this week where the United Nations General Assembly opened yesterday in the Palais de Chaillot. Problems to be considered include modification of the veto, a UN police force, and next step on atomic energy control. Possibly the Berlin, Palestine, Korea, and other political problems in which East-West friction is involved will come before the Assembly in one form or another.

Secretary Marshall and John Foster Dulles are both in Paris. Dulles is Dewey's adviser on foreign affairs and is mentioned as his likely Secretary of State. Apparently the State Department has agreed with the Republicans to have Dulles attend conferences and to keep foreign policy out of the election campaign.

The Un-American Activities Committee is continuing to investigate Communists. The Communist hearings make good publicity and divert attention from more difficult problems. Some of the members of the Congressional committee, it is reported, have stopped their investigating since winning their primary. Some persons are asking why it was so bad for Russia, when she was our ally, to get military secrets through espionage when our generals were shoving them over the counter. (See also p. 14.)

Jottings

—Ebenezer Church, Bluffton, Ohio: Attendance at our services the past week has been greatly reduced due to the polio epidemic in this community. One of our young men, George Grismore, is at present in an iron lung in serious condition. Each of the girls going away in training for Christian service was presented with a Daily Devotional Book by the girls of our church. On August 29 a farewell service was held for six young people leaving for Grace Bible School, in Omaha, Nebraska. Rev. Landolene Amstutz, pastor of the Mennonite Church in Mountain Lake, Minn., was the speaker. At the close of the service, each of the young people was presented with a Christian Worker's Testament. August 24, about 25 members of our Youth Group, with their advisor and pastor, motored to Winona Lake, Indiana, for the day. Rev. and Mrs. Hendrik Meihuizen, of Holland, were with us on September 12.—Anona Landes, Corr.

—Salem-Zion Church, Freeman, South Dakota: The Men's Club of our church will present a musical program in our church on Sunday evening, October 3. Our community is again having its relief drive for flour. E. W. Crackett, director of the Victory Service Center, brought an inspiring Gospel program on a recent Sunday evening. Rev. Solomon Mouttet, who represents the "Go Ye Mission," brought our Sunday morning message on September 19.—Corr.

—Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Epp are the happy parents of a baby girl, Barbara Kay, born September 25. Rev. Epp is pastor of the Burrton Church.

—New Hopedale Mennonite Church, Meno, Oklahoma: Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Unruh were our guests on September 19. Reverend Unruh brought inspiring messages at both morning and evening services.—Corr.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: Construction for the church addition has begun. The east side has been excavated and formed, ready to pour concrete. The north part is also excavated and work is progressing. The Choral Society has been rehearsing several evenings to make recordings. The records are made on the sound mirror tape recorder which the various clubs of the society purchased several months ago. Thirty minute programs are put on record which will be transcribed on the "Eden Devotional Hour" over radio station KSAL, Salina, Kansas. Beginning on the first Sunday of October, the programs will come over the air each Sunday morning over Station KSAL at 7:30 a. m. Dr. Herbert Schmidt presented an interesting lecture and his movies about Paraguay on September 19.—R.H.K., Corr.

—Schoenwieser Mennonite Church, Winnipeg, Manitoba: Rev. Isaak, of Paraguay, brought the Sunday morning message on September 19. He then gave a brief talk on the first Mennonite settlements in Paraguay and their progress during the last twenty years. In the evening, Rev. Koop, of Brazil, brought the message and a brief outline on the work of the young people in Brazil. At a tea which followed, Mr. Bahnmann, of British Columbia, recited some of his own poetry to our young people.—Justina Hildebrand, Corr.

—Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa.: The love-offering for Missionary and Mrs. Samuel T. Moyer totaled $533.

—Zion church, Elbing: On Sunday, September 26, Pastor Emil Haendiges from Germany gave the morning message in our church. Since he was pastor of the Mennonite church at Elbing, Germany, it was of special interest to this audience as the ancesters of many came from that community.—Dorothea Dyck, Corr.

—On September 20. and 21. Rev. and Mrs. John P. Suderman from Mountain Lake, Minnesota, coming from Langden, North Dakota, were in Winnipeg to visit their relatives and friends and also gave two appreciated messages and showed pictures from the mission station at Oraibi, Arizona at the Bethel Mennonite Mission Church.—Benjamin Ewert.

"God Will Provide for Me"

By Lois Snelling

The story of a successful man who gave up security because he had faith

His trust in God was absolute. The hour had come when he felt that he must give all of his time, talent, and energy to the salvation of human souls. Turning his back squarely upon worldly resources, he placed his destiny in the hands of God and from that moment his faith never faltered.

Dwight Lyman Moody was twenty-three when he dedicated himself to missionary work. His life, though laid out on rugged lines, had been fruitful, with his efforts pleasantly rewarded. He was born on a farm near Northfield, Massachusetts. When he was four years old his mother was left a widow, with nine children to care for. At seventeen, young Dwight went to Boston to work in the shoestore of his uncle.

During his stay in Boston, Moody acquired two qualities which were to direcently and powerfully influence his future life. One of them was the art of being a good shoe-salesman. The other was the habit of regularly attending church and Sunday school. When his uncle employed him in the store, one of the agreements between them was that the young man attend religious services. The agreement was willingly kept, and when Moody's work led him to Chicago two years later he continued the practice. In Chicago he became intensely interested in welfare work. Always a kind, gentle man, sympathetic in other people's troubles, he longed to help those about him. In the new location he saw many who needed help, both spiritual and material. Moody established the North Market Hall Sunday School, where most of the pupils came from the poor families, and many were young hoodlums learning the various trades of crime.

Moody followed his work as shoe-salesman in Chicago. He was successful as a businessman and had a goal toward which he was earnestly striving. This goal was a definite amount of money—for he had a desire to accumulate $100,000! He was married now and had a family. His own boyhood had been stinted, and he wished for better things for his children. Particularly did he want them to be well educated, since his own lack of schooling had always been a thorn in his flesh.

When Dwight L. Moody had saved $3,000 toward the desired hundred thousand, a crisis occurred in his life. He came face to face with the conviction that he must abandon his own pursuits and devote himself entirely to God's work. Financially, he must throw himself on the mercy of the Lord. In resigning his position as salesman he explained the situation to his employer.

"But how are you going to live?" he was asked. "Where will you get your support?"

Confidently Moody replied, "God will provide for me if he wishes me to keep on, and I shall keep on until I am abliged to stop."

This drastic move of Moody's was no simple, impulsive thing. He later declared it was the most difficult decision he ever had made. He had a family to support. He was now earning $5,000 a year. He had not forgotten that dream of the $100,000. If he gave up his work, he would have no income at all.

SIX HUNDRED EIGHTY MILLION CHRISTIANS!

According to Whittaker's Almanac there are six hundred and eighty million Christians in the world today and we are making nothing like the impact on our times that the first Christians made on theirs Six hundred and eighty million Christians and we can neither prevent the outbreak of wars nor shorten them when they have broken out. Six hundred and eighty million Christians and we have failed to find the solution to the International problem or to deal energetically with the great social evils which lie like a blight on the lives of men. Six hundred and eighty million Christians and there still are a multitude of men, women and children who have not heard that this world has a Redeemer. What does all this mean? Is it that a large number of the six hundred and eighty million Christians are only nominal Christians not much more than Christian in name, ignorant of what Christianity stands for, apathetic and indifferent to its teachings?

Besides, he had only a meager education, and was not trained as a preacher or teacher. He tried to persuade himself that he was doing well enough with the talents he possessed, in giving his evenings and Sundays to the Lord's work. His arguments were to no avail. He knew that there was but one course for him to follow.

It was shortly before the outbreak of the Civil War that Moody entered upon his evangelistic career and became an independent city missionary. With the coming of war he devoted his time to the soldiers. At Chattanooga, Shiloh, Murfreesboro, Pittsburg Landing, he talked with men before they went into combat, soothed the wounded in their agonies, prayed with the dying in their last moments.

When the war ended, Moody returned to Chicago, where he soon gained fame as an evangelist. At a Y.M.C.A. conference he met a young man who was to be closely associated with him for many years to come. This was Ira D. Sankey, an employee in a government office. Sankey was a talented singer; after hearing him, Moody persuaded him to dedicate his voice to evangelism. When the great preacher was invited to come to England for a series of meetings, Ira Sankey went with him. Thousands were converted during this trip. The two men compiled the famous Moody-Sankey hymnbook, of which 5,000,000 copies were sold the first year of publication. Royalties for the hymnbook and religious tracts which Moody published were given to charity and endowments. The evangelist took great delight in endowing schools, always remembering his own lack of education. He founded three schools: the Northfield Seminary for Girls, the Mt. Herman School for Boys, and the Bible Institute for Home and Foreign Missions in Chicago.

"He that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

Moody was a tireless worker. "There is no use asking God to do things you can do yourself," he said, and he assumed the responsibility for an amazing amount of work. He was a strong, sturdy man, but even the strongest must at last weaken. He was sixty-two at the time he collapsed in Kansas City where he was conducting a meeting. "God will provide for me if he wishes me to keep on, and I shall keep on until I am obliged to stop." For thirty-nine years he had faithfully kept on, but on his gravestone they engraved the words, "He that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

NEWS BITS

Can you believe it? The Air Policy Commission appointed by President Truman, stated in its report made public on January 13, 1948: "We believe that the United States will be secure in an absolute sense only if the institution of war itself is abolished under a regime of law. World peace and the security of the United States are now the same thing."

"My Name Is Han," is the second major production by the Protestant Film Commission. It shows China missions at work. A simultaneous world-premiere was held in one hundred cities on June 15. The picture was filmed in China and only Chinese are seen in the picture.

Fairfield Osborn says, "Many regions around the Mediterranean that now pass for deserts were forested and fertile before man got in his dirty work."

Draft Classifications

The following classifications have been adopted under the Selective Service Act of 1948:

Class I-A: Available for military service.

Class I-A-O: Conscientious Objector to combatant service only.

Class I-C Member of the armed forces, the Coast Guard, etc.

Class I-D: Member of reserves or student taking military training.

Class II-A: Deferred because of civilian work other than agriculture.

Class II-C: Deferred because of employment in agriculture.

Class III-A: Deferred because of dependents.

Class IV-A: Veteran or sole surviving son.

Class IV-B: Official deferred by law.

Class IV-D: Minister or divinity student.

Class IV-E: Conscientious objector to all military service.

Class IV-F: Physically, mentally or morally unfit.

Class V-A Over the age of liability for military service.

Each registrant will be classified in the lowest class for which he is determined to be eligible, with Class I-A considered the highest class and Class V-A the lowest (as in the above list). Thus a registrant's claim as a conscientious objector (IV-E) will be given early consideration. If the Local Board decides the registrant is not eligible for Class IV-E, he is then considered for higher classes such as dependency deferment (III-A), occupational deferment (II-C or II-A) or actual military service. It seems therefore that if a young man accepts one of these higher classifications such as Class II-C without objection, his chance for securing a Class IV-E later, (in case he later becomes ineligble for the II-C or other deferment), may be seriously jeopardized. It is important therefore that non-resistant young men request, and if necessary appeal for, for IV-E classification at the outset.

Comic Magazines A Cultural Slaughter of the Innocents

By Sterling North

Virtually every child in America is reading color "comic" magazines— a poisonous mushroom growth of the last two years. Ten million copies of these sex-horror serials are sold every month. One million dollars are taken from the pockets of America's children in exchange for graphic insanity.

Frankly, we were not perturbed when we first heard about the rise of the action "comics." We imagined (as do most parents) that they were no worse than the "funnies" in the newspapers. A carefull examination . . . . shocked us into activity. At least 70 per cent were of a nature no respectable newspaper would think of accepting.

The bulk of these lurid publications depend for their appeal upon mayhem, murder, torture, and abduction—often with a child as the victim. Superhuman heroics, voluptuous females in scanty attire, blazing machine guns, hooded "justice," and cheap political propaganda were to be found on almost every page.

The old dime-novels in which an occasional redkin bit the dust were classic literature compared to the saddistic drivel pouring from the presses today.

Badly drawn, badly written, and badly printed —a strain on young eyes and young nervous systems— the effect of these pulp-paper nightmares is that of a violent stimulant. Their crude blacks and reds spoil the child's natural sense of color; their hypodermic injection of sex and murder make the child impatient with better, though quieter, stories. Unless we want a coming generation even more ferocious then the present one, parents and teachers throughout America must band together to break the "comic" magazine.

Of course, the children must be furnished a good substitute. There is nothing dull about "Westward Ho" or "Treasure Island." Sinbad the Sailor didn't need spinach to effect his feats of strength. The classics are full of humor and adventure—plus good writing. Never before in the history of book publishing have there been so many fine new books for children, or better-edited children's magazines.

The shame lies largely with the parents who don't know and don't care what their children are reading. It lies with unimaginative teachers who force stupid, dull twaddle down eager young throats, and, of course, it lies with the completely immoral publishers of the "comics"—guilty of a cultural slaughter of the innocents.

The antidote to the "comic"-magazine poison can be found in any library or good bookstore. The parent who does not acquire that antidote for his child is guilty of criminal negligence.

Editor's Note: Published eight years ago this month on the book page of the Chicago Daily News, the above editorial by Sterling North made crusading history. It appeared under the title, "A National Disgrace—and a Challenge to American Parents." Forty-two newspapers and magazines, including the Reader's Digest, republished it in whole or in part. Women's clubs, parent-teacher organizations, churches, libraries and school distributed reprints in enormous quantities. It was translated into more than a dozen langauges and eventually reached a very large audience.

The menace of the comic magazines has continued to grow with the years. Since this protest was written, the number of individual comic titles has more than doubled while the total sale has quadrupled. Despite scattered attempts to improve the medium, the average comic-magazine today has lower ethical, artistic, and literary standards than it had before the war. Everything Mr. North said in 1940 is doubly true today.

When Giving Is Real

Two wealthy Christians, a lawyer and a merchant, joined a party that was going around the world. Before they started, their pastor earnestly asked them to observe and remember any unusual and interesting things that they might see in the missionary countries through which the party was to travel. The men promised—carelessly, perhaps—to do so.

In Korea one day they saw in a field by the side of the road a boy pulling a rude plow, while an old man held the plow handles and directed it. The lawer was amused, and took a snapshot of the scene.

"That's a curious picture! I suppose they are very poor," he said to the missionary who was interpreter and guide to the party.

"Yes," was the quite reply. "That is the family of Chi Noui. When the church was being built they were eager to give something to it, but they had no money; so they sold their only ox and gave the money to the church. This spring they are pulling the plow themselves."

The lawyer and the business man by his side were silent for some moments. Then the business man said, "That must have been a real sacrifice."

"They did not call it that," sand the missionary. "They thought it was fortunate that they had an ox to sell."

The lawer and the business man had not much to say. When they reached home, the lawyer took that picture to his pastor and told him the incident.

"I want to double my pledge to the church." he said. "And give me some plow work to do, please. I have never known what sacrifice for the church meant. A converted heathen taught me. I am ashamed to say that I have never yet given anything to my church that cost me anything."

A Ladder to Wholesome Recreation

E. Stanley Jones in his Book, Abundant Living, gives a ladder for decisions concerning wholesome recreation. The steps of his ladder are:

1. No recreation should be an end in itself —it should subserve the ends for which you really live.
2. Any recreation that takes from one part of your life to add another is false.
3. Any recreation from which you have to recover is false.
4. Any recreation which leaves you with a sense of normal letdown will leave you physically let down—they react.
5. Expensive recreation is usually expensive in more ways than one.
6. The Sabbath is psychologically sound as a means of quiet and recuperation.
7. Anything . . . . must be judged according to the direction it moves you.
8. Any recreation that merely kills time kills you.
9. Gambling is not recreation—it is an attempt to get something for nothing, and that is not recreation—that is sin.
10. Any recreation into which Christ cannot be taken is not for a Christian.

LIFE

The toiler toiling in the fields all day
Moves slowly on with downbent head and eyes,
Intent upon the task that near him lies,
Nor letting any look beyond it stray;
Till, the day fading into evening gray,
He leaves his work to mark the light that gleams
Down in the lane beyond the stile, with beams
That bid him welcome on his homeward way.
And in this life of ours we too must pore
Over the immediate task with straining sight;
And shall not we, the long day's toil who bore,
Rising from work to meet the enfolding night,
Ah, shall not we, with steadfast look before,
Catch some faint glimmer of a far-off light?

PEACE EDUCATION . . . . From p. 11

4. The local peace committee be included in your organizational set-up each year, and that this study group project be continued annually. Thus over a period of years a large segment of our membership should pass through these groups.

5. Due to time element, we urge that each pastor immediately call a meeting of young men in his congregation to discuss the draft and problems connected therewith. Some pastors have already done this and report a good interest and response. It is important that our young men receive as much encouragement as possible from our congregations and pastors to counteract the intense military propaganda met on every hand.

6. Help your young men to see the dangers involved in accepting draft deferment accorded religious objectors. Impress upon them the need of furthering their WITNESS by a term of service in Voluntary Service program provided by M.C.C. This program is open to all and includes service areas both within the United States and in foreign countries.

The foregoing program has been submitted to the Executive Committee of our Conference and has received their unqualified approval and promise of support. We trust that it will merit the support and interest of all pastors and congregations. These are indeed trying times for the Christian Church. It would seem that Mennonites have been given a special job to do for Christianity in this matter of Non-Resistance. Are we good stewards?

RESERVED!

There is good reason why some Sunday schools select the thirteenth Sunday in each quarter—that would be September 26th, in this quarter—as the Sunday on which the collection in the Sunday school is specially designated "For Conference Publications."

A very major portion of our General Conference publications are devoted entirely to the good of the Sunday school. If our Conference is to maintain and extend—and constantly improve—its offerings in this field, it means that by some means there must be a constantly increasing working-capital with which the Board of Publication can operate. Sunday schools recognize this, and realize that every dollar of contribution for Conference publications means better Sunday school work—in the long run.

BEYOND OUR OWN

NEW YORK, September 27 — Local church councils in forty-seven cities have announced plans for mass meetings on or near Reformation Day, Sunday, October 31, uniting Protestant churches in a country-wide Mission for Protestant Witness.

The Dry Tornado in Kansas is a caravan of Kansas young people who have been touring the State against the repeal of prohibition. In the Southeastern section of the State, the caravan was led by three great athletes: Gil Dodds, Archie San Romani, and Glenn Cunningham. In stirring, earnest words, these three great mile-racers urged Kansas not to sell out its young people to the whiskey trust.

According to a survey by Miss Laura Lindley, Research Secretary of the Temperance League of America, the final and revised figures on local option elections in 1947 are: 1,848 elections in 1,092 units in 23 states; 394—net dry gain in 12 states; 38—net wet gain in 4 states. There is a total of 4,934 dry units in 35 states. The estimated population in dry territory in 1947 was 26,500,000.

With national income running over 211 billions, Americans are giving up less than one and one-half per cent of it to support hard hit churches, colleges and charities. All drives for money report road blocks of an unexpected variety. It is shocking to note that 5:3 per cent of income went to churches in a year like 1932—when the national income was a fifth of the present total.

NEW WINDSOR, MD.—For three and one-half years this little town in Maryland has been the overseas relief capital of America.

The Church World Service center here is the largest processing depot for overseas relief goods in the nation. Originally launched by the Church of the Brethren in March, 1944, the center now handles contributions from 21 church groups.

The peak of activity was reached in July, 1947, when 566,600 pounds of materials were handled. The biggest day at the center was July 15, 1947, when 29,467 pounds went out.

Since the center was opened 16,000,000 pounds of materials have been handled.

—THE HANDBOOK OF INFORMATION (YEARBOOK) of the General Conference for 1948, giving statistics for the year 1947, together with the latest list of the officers of the Conference and ministers of Conference churches, is now in the process of being distributed. Copies are available for 25 cents each from your three Conference book stores—Berne, Newton, and Rosthern—or from the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

Editorials

Unbelief is not so much the product of a brilliant mind as it is the end result of a corrupted life.

Jesus Christ is God's living sermon to mankind.

Nothing is truly mine till God has it.

Faith is truth planted in the heart.

IN MANY HOMES THE RADIO is replacing the "family sing" around the piano. Thus a great power in the molding of the life of young people is being lost through the radio. This is an unfortunate trend. Much is accomplished when the family sings hymns. Young people are quietly but nevertheless greatly influenced by the songs they sing. The words and the message of the song are brought to their hearts when they are in a mood to give expression of a great message in loud vioce. That does something to people. Someone said that he thinks we shall some day find that more people have been sung into heaven than have been preached into heaven. Family singing is a great power for good and should not be allowed to be crowded out by the radio.—W.F.U.

THE WHOLE NATION LOOKS TO KANSAS. Will this island, "dry" state be engulfed by the ever rising satanic flood of "fire-water," that threatens to burst the dam of Kansas' prohibition stand?

Perhaps members of the constituency of THE MENNONITE in other states may be interested to know what the people of Kansas are being told in order to be sure that this dam which has held since Kansas became a state may be scrapped. They are being told that "decency" demands the end of a law which is disregarded by a large portion of the population; they say that the state is guilty of the worst sin-hypocrisy. "Decency," they say, demands that restrictions be taken off this personality-wrecking, soul-wrecking, family-wrecking, and nation-wrecking liquid. How can they say such a thing when they know that even small, "moderate" amounts slow up reaction time enough to snuff out lives on the highways? Is it not infinitely worse hypocrisy to know such facts and work for the removal of restrictions on such poison of society. Laws may not stop the wrong particularly where the enforcement is not too great; but it must ever be remembered that the repeal of a law can never make a real wrong right! The Christian conscience will never give the green light to anything that tears down.

Furthermore the usual process of "stacking the cards" is going on. For example, when one of the country's greatest religious editors speaks to thousands in a straightforward way about the thoroughly unchristian tendency to repeal then his meeting is headlined (and covered up) as a revival. But when a representative of the federal government's judiciary department speaks favorably of repeal he receives prominent and accurate reporting. Nothing is supposed to be wrong when week after week Kansas citizens must be subjected to the liquor adds that are interspersed in their news magazines—ads. that are planned by some of the nation's best advertising experts hired by the liquor industries. But when men who are deeply concerned about the church life and the moral life of the whole nation are brought to the state to help in this great struggle then it is said that "imported 'dry' propagandists" are "confusing the issues" and "running the people's personal business." How dare we place the so-called right of a man to imbibe something that makes him a menace to society on the same level with the great freedoms for which our country stands?

The writer has not been so long in Kansas but what he can vividly recall the condition in the state where he formerly resided. In a small community hundreds of signatures including the names of some of the city officials and most of the prominent businessmen were calmly ignored by the country and state liquor control boards when the citizens asked that the board reduce the number of outlets for intoxicating beverages in the community by refusing to grant renewal of permits as well as a new application. It was not uncommon to see four or five places in one city block in a small community where wine and liquor were available; yet, supposedly, there were liquor "control" boards! In that state it is legally imposible for counties to vote on the question of local option. Democracy faded when the liquor interests took over.

Against such legalized paganism, as someone has called it, every Christian should stand firm and especially the Christian businessmen on mainstreet who want to remain true to the Lord Jesus Christ. If church members on mainstreet will continue to countenance this evil, then pronouncements from the churches become but empty echoes. In the face of this perversion of the law of God which Isaiah condemned as calling good, evil and evil, good, let Christians stand firmly, shoulder to shoulder.—J. J. E.

ONE OF THE FOUNDERS of Alcoholics Annonymous is reported to have said that he was cured of alcoholism by the "hot-flash treatment."

What he means is that he kept sending out radio calls to God for help, and all of sudden, God came in.

To tell the truth, that is just about the only real cure for alcoholism and it is a cure for everything that ails us, if the ailment involves the human psychology. A great many people wonder all their lives whether or not there is a God. If they just keep trying to contact Him, eventually, they will find out.

Yes, there is a God, and strange to say, He sometimes reveals Himself to men and women and children in a way so very definite that it may be well described as a "hot-flash." If you need help, send out your S. O. S., and keep on trying it until it works, which sooner or later, it will—Selected.

MISSIONARY DEALS IN BIG MONEY

By Elisabeth Goertz

Just a few minutes ago I heard over the radio the name of the piece which was to be played was called "A Handful of Keys." That is what I wish I had—a handful of pens to tell you of all the experiences which meet us as we come back to China this time. Let me tell you some.

We, Rev. W. C. Voth and I arrived safely in Shanghai March 30 after seventeen days of quiet sea voyage. Did you all pray so that we had such an easy journey? Thank you. Please continue to ask the Father, for He said by His Son: "If ye ask, I will do."

On board the boat we were told to change some of our U. S. gold into Chinese National Currency (CNC). So we did. The officers of the Chinese bank (Central Bank) awaited us in the lounge and I changed ten dollars I got CNC $247,000 for every dollar — CNC $2,473,500. I held it in my hand. I was a millionaire! That same evening I went over to the MCC hostel and we talked about the exchange. There they told me that I should have gotten $CNC 480,000 for every dollar. This was the Mission (or preferred) rate for that day. Ach, so there you are! First thing you get a small deal.

Next came the experience of going through customs. Well, I had heard a lot about it. I knew some of our missionaries were two weeks getting through them. So I started from the beginning and went the round, day after day, from one desk and office to another—met some thirty officers, men and women and secretaries until on the fifteenth day I was told that I might go to the Baggage Party and get my things. I had been to the China Inland Mission and had the doctor there write a letter stating that I was a regular nurse and that I knew how to use hypodermic syringes. Then I had to go to the Bureau of Health to get permission to import them. There they told me that I needed a letter from a Mission Hospital and doctor stating that I would use them in a right way. Dr. Adolph, whom I had met in concentration camp, supplied such a letter asking the officers to kindly assist me in getting the nesessary papers. Then I had to go to a drug store company here in Shanghai where I was known and whom the officers knew and get a guarantee that I would take the syringes from the customs to a Bureau of Weights and Measures to have them tested for accuracy in measures! That, I thought, just about beat all! New, 2 c.c. syringes from one of our best American firms to have to be tested here, where there is so little of standard! I was told later that some syringes from countries have different markings, so they need to be tested here for use in China. This time the officers were in the right.

Well, I learned a lot those days, where to go, what street cars, which streets and best of all, I learned to know some of the people here in Shanghai who are at the head of things. I prayed for special grace, not to get impatient, and I believe I won the day (that is, My Lord and I). We won. I took the opportunity to speak of spiritual things, gave out a few tracts, "The Most Important Things in Life." One man said he had never paid any attention to religious things, another smiled and said happily. "I am a Christian, too." The last officer from whom I received the goods—radio, transformer,strychnine tablets and hypodermis syringes—said in a very kind voice, "Too much formality!" I said, "Yes, very much!"

This is what such trip cost me in one day (all in CNC dollars): From home to customs hous 10,000 to bureau of W. and M. 70,000, back to customs 20,000. Home for dinner 10,000. Back to customs 10,000 and home again 10,000. This went on for days and all the time I was told I must wait till the next day, come back for the papers, then go to the next desk. So I kept coming and going, keeping after my papers, watching them go from desk to desk and department to department. What was my great concern too, how much was I going to have to pay at customs for storage, for such a long time! When finally I got the permission to import, it was fifteen days. I heard one other missionary say he had been at it for six weeks and no end in sight. I went with a wondering heart, asked the cashier how much was my customs storage and he figured; then he said, "Not very much" — it was CNC $183,000; at 580,000 exchange it figured to about U. S. $.31. What a relief! I brought the radio, etc., home and we set it up, connected with the current and the first words I heard were, "Thank Him, thank Him, all ye little children — God is love, God is love." How fitting!—Sincerely, Elisabeth D. Goertz

A STATEMENT OF
THE POSITION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE MENNONITE CHURCH OF NORTH AMERICA ON PEACE, WAR, MILITARY SERVICE, AND PATRIOTISM
AS APPROVED BY THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

There have been numerous requests from pastors, and from the young men of our Conference, as well as from their parents, for a statement on peace, war, military service, and patriotism. The following is the official statement of the General Conference on this subject. The statement is in pamphlet form and is available upon requst from the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

Introduction

In view of the present troubled state of world affairs, and the present European conflict which threatens the peace of the world, we as representatives of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, desire to set forth in the following statement our faith and convictions concerning participation in war, military service and our concept of patriotism.

In stating our convictions, we establish no new doctrine among us, but merely reiterate an age-old faith of the church which has been held precious by our forefathers from the time that the church was founded in Reformation times in Switzerland (1525) and in Holland (1533), and which we have set forth on a number of former occasions since our settlement in America.

WASTE OF WAR

Waste of muscle, waste of brain
Waste of patience, waste of pain,
Waste of manhood, waste of health,
Waste of beauty, waste of wealth,
Waste of blood, and waste of tears,
Waste of Youth's most precious years,
Waste of ways the Saints have trod,
Waste of Glory, Waste of God.

Our Position on Peace and War

1. Our peace principles are rooted in Christ and His Word, and in His strength alone do we hope to live a life of peace and love toward all men.

2. As followers of Christ, the prince of Peace, we believe His Gospel to be a gospel of peace, requiring us as His disciples to be at peace with all men, to live a life of love and good will, even toward our enemies and to renounce the use of force and violence in settling our problems as contrary to the spirit of our Saviour and Master. These principles we derive from such Scripture teachings as: "Love your enemies"; "Do good to them that hate you"; "Resist not evil"; "My Kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight"; "Put up thy sword into its place; for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword"; "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves"; "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head"; "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good"; "The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle to all men"; "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal"; "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not"; "Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise blessing"; "If a man say I love God and hateth his brother, he is a liar . . . . And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also"; and other similar passages, as well as from the whole tenor of the Gospel.

3. Peace within the heart as well as toward others is a fruit of the Gospel. Therefore, he who professes peace must at all times and in all relations with his fellow men live a life that is in harmony with the Gospel.

4. We believe that war is altogether contrary to the teaching and spirit of Christ and the Gospel; that therefore war is sin, as is all manner of carnal strife; that it is wrong in spirit and method as well as in purpose, and destructive in its results. Therefore, if we profess the principle of peace and nevertheless engage in warfare and strife, we as Christians become guilty of sin and fall under the condemnation of Christ the righteous judge.

Our Concept of Patriotism

As members of an historic peace church we love our country and sincerely work for its highest welfare. True love for our country does not mean hatred of others. It is our conviction that only the application of the principles of peace, love, justice, liberty, and international good will makes for the highest welfare of our country; and the highest welfare of our country must harmonize with the highest welfare of humanity everywhere. Our faith is in security through love, protection through good will; and for such we are willing to make the necessary sacrifice. We are opposed to war as a method of settling disputes because it is un-Christian, destructive of our highest values, and sows the seed of future wars. We feel that we are true patriots because we build upon the eternal principles of right which are the only foundation of stable government in our world community.

Our Position on Military Service

In the light of the above principles of the Scriptures, we are constrained as followers of Christ to abstain from all military service and all direct means in support of war. Specifically, our position entails the following commitments:

1. We can have no part in carnal warfare or conflict between nations, nor in strife between classes, groups or individuals. We believe that this means that we cannot bear arms personally nor directly aid those who do so, and that, as a consequence, we cannot accept service under the military arm of the combatant, which ultimately causes us to be responsible for the destruction of the life, health, and property of our fellow men. This applies to all wars whether they be designated defensive or offensive.

2. On the same grounds consistency requires that we do not serve during war time under civil organizations temporarily allied with the military in the prosecution of the war, which, under military orders, become

The Center of History

One of the hardest things for modern man to accept is the Christian claim that once, and once for all, at a definite moment in the distant past, there emerged the ultimate criterion by which all history and all human achievement must evermore be judged. Yet Christianity makes no less a claim than this for the historical person of Jesus Christ. The inhibition on accepting this claim arises from the fact that we possess a vast body of knowledge which was unknown to the ancients. It is assumed that our salvation will be found in present knowledge, not in past history. The fallacy here, I believe, lies in the modern way of thinking of history as a long line of evolutionary progress. In this view, we stand at the pinnacle of history, and from our eminence we are able to pronounce judgments on the past. The idea that a criterion could have emerged in the distant past by which we are to be judged is repugnant and humiliating. It seems to me that modern man has deceived himself by his obsession with a linear image of a progressive historical ascent. We would have a truer image if we conceived of history, not as a line but as a vast plane upon which human life deploys itself in all directions away from and toward a center. The historical process would then be envisaged, not an ascent, but as an approach to the center or a wandering away from it. The character of a civilization would be measured by its distance from the center— far away would spell chaos, suffering, war; near by would spell order, happiness, justice. What, then, would be the center? Nothing else than God and his will for man. As Christians, we are left in no doubt concerning the precise location of this center of history. It is marked by the historical figure of Jesus Christ, in whom the living God definitely unveiled authenticity. "I," said Jesus, "if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me!"—editorial in The Pulpit.

MILITARY SERVICE . . . From p. 5

a part of the war system in effect, even in method and spirit, however beneficial their peacetime activities may be.

3. We feel that we cannot consistently take part in the financing of war operations through the purchase of war bonds, and we are very sensitive to making voluntary contributions to organizations or activities which may indirectly make us supporters of war and the military program.

Instead, we urge that we make our contributions to civilian and church organizations which are directly engaged in administering relief to those in distress, or to other constructive enterprises.

4. We cannot knowingly sanction the participation in the manufacture of munitions and weapons of war whether in peace time or in war time.

5. We can have no part in military training in schools and colleges or in any other form of peacetime preparation for service as part of the war system.

6. We ought carefully to abstain from any agitation, propaganda or activity that tends to promote ill-will or hatred among nations, which leads to war, but rather endeavor to foster good will and respect for all nations, peoples and races, being careful to observe a spirit of sincere neutrality when cases of war and conflict arise.

7. We ought not to seek to make a profit of war and war-time inflation, which would mean profiting from the shedding of the blood of our fellow men. If, however, during war time, excess profits do come into our hands, such profits should be conscientiously devoted to charitable purposes, such as the bringing of relief to the needy and the spreading of the Gospel of peace and love.

Our Substitution for War

In so far as our convictions are based on religious principles, in which we hold that war is contrary to the spirit, life and teachings of Christ, who renounced the weapons of worldly passion and used methods of love and self-sacrifice in their place, we therefore express our willingness, as a substitute for carnal warfare, at all times to aid in the relief of those who are in need, distress or suffering, regardless of the danger in which we may be placed in bringing such relief, or of the cost which may be involved in the same. We are also willing to render such services as housing, road making, farming, forestry, hospitalization, and recreational work during time of peace as well as during time of war. Whenever we render such service it shall always be our purpose to spread the Gospel of Christ by word as well as deed.

An Expression of Appreciation

We want to express our appreciation to the governments of the United States and Canada to which we are grateful in that they have recognized our desire to exercise the freedom of our conscience in not bearing arms, or taking any part of service in the military machine, and that, in lieu of such service, we render service of national importance to our country and relief to those who are in need, distress or suffering at home or abroad in the war zones. We also pray that the blessing and guidance of a beneficent God may continue to rest upon these nations, their institutions, and their people.

Immigration -- Just What Does It Mean?

by Magdalen Friesen

Cut courtesy MENNONITE LIFE

One often hears of anxious relatives on the western side of the Atlantic waters wondering, with some impatience, just what is keeping their refugee relatives in Europe from joining them immediately. The purpose of this writing is to give you people at home a more detailed picture of what is involved in getting a person ready for immigration. It is not as simple as just securing passage on an American bound ship and seeing to it that the people get on the ship, even though we sometimes wish it were.

Eligibility

The first step that must be taken in immigrating to any country, be it Canada, the United States, or Paraguay, is the securing of a DP (displaced persons) eligibility certificate from the IRO (International Relief Organization). In order to have our people appear for this IRO screening, we called all the Russian Mennonite refugees in the US Zone of Germany to our Mennonite camp at Backnang and had the IRO board screen them there. Since the IRO team in our camp stated that they would screen only Mennonites, we first had to set up a one man screening board in order to ascertain the validity of their Mennonite status. This was not as simple as it might sound. A good number of the Mennonites in Russia married Russians who, in most cases, did not join the Mennonite church, but still consider themselves Mennonites. When such people had to be regretfully informed that they could not be recognized as Mennonites, it was quite a shock to them for they had always considered themselves as Mennonites. Also some few persons tried to ride in on the Mennonite bandwagon who could make no claim whatever to Mennonitism. An almost infallible test was to see whether such people could speak Plattdeutsch, which tongue, by the way, has been dubbed the Mennonite language by our brethren from Russia.

Establish DP Status

After receiving a paper stating that he was a bona fide Mennonite, the individual appeared before the IRO team, for the purpose of establishing his DP status. In order to be DP's our people must be able to prove: (1) that they were forcibly removed from the Ukraine—that they in no cases came of their own free will, (2) that thy are not Volksdeutsche, but are of Dutch origin (It is impossible for any Volksdeutsche or Reichsdeutsche to get DP status.), and (3) that they have not served in the German Wehrmacht or particularly S. S.

Determine Prospects

Having gone through two drillings the poor victims would then gather what remaining strength they had and appear before the third "commission" namely Marie Funk and myself who would then determine what their prospects were for Canadian or U. S. immigration. As a sidelight might be added the fact that it was difficult for many of the people to realize that we were Mennonites and that we were trying to help them. So first of all we assured them that we were also Mennonites and that in order to be able to help them, we must hear the "whole truth and nothing but the truth." "What," I hear you say, "don't Mennonites always tell the truth?" Unfortunately, the harrowing experiences which our folk from Russia have undergone in the last decade and more, have lead them to believe that the telling of the truth is a shortcut to exile in Siberia. For this reason many have denied their Russian nationality and have instead claimed Poland or Germany as the country of their birth. A large number of our people, especially those living near the Russia Zone, still live in mortal dread of being claimed by the Russians and being "verschleppt" to the wilds of Siberia.

Many heartbreaking tales are heard during these interviews. Few families remain in which the circle is unbroken. In most cases the father has been taken to Siberia, or it may be the mother and the little children who are somewhere behind the iron curtain. Others live under severe economic need. One father with a family of six to support told me that he earns only 45 marks a month. Officially a mark is worth about 10 cents, but in reality much less than that. Another man had had photos made for his family members for the purpose of U. S. immigration. When told that they were

Through Our Windshield
III. When Mary Jane Visited a Cafeteria
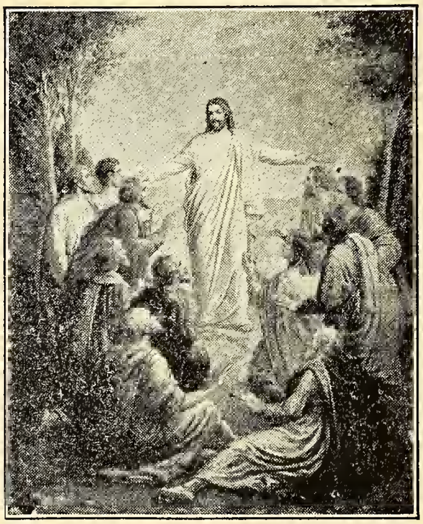
by Missionary S. T. Moyer

Mary Jane had gone from her farm home to the large city. It was her first visit to a cafeteria. The rest of us chose our food carefully, and in those days we got ample for forty cents. But my, oh me! How wonderfully good everything appeared to Mary Jane,—how enticing the salads, how delicious the vegetables and side dishes, and drinks, and so many different kinds of deserts. She was irresistibly drawn to all, and loaded her tray. Her bill was twice what the rest of us paid, and when she came to eat, she could eat only half of what she had taken.

As we went on our way it seemed to me that so the world often treats us. All the enticing things appeal to us. That which clamors loudest gets our attention. We overload our time, our program of activity, our souls get surfeited, we get fed up, and we can scarcely pay the bill. And my sub-conscious mind muses,—is there no law of Primacy?

Does God's revelation have primacy of value? Or does His relevation through the conscience, through nature, through science, history and philosophy have just as much validity as that through our Holy Bible?

What of organizations? Does the Church actually have primacy of Value? Or are there competing organizations which offer just as good a life as does Christ through the Church?



"Go Ye Therefore . . ."

Are all types of Christian service equally valid? Or are some endued with primacy of value,—which if we do not accord them this, sooner or later we run up blind alleys, and our work comes to a dead standstill?

We know that certain highways have right-of-way, and all other traffic must respect this. If not, disaster awaits us. Doctors do not act as though the legs or the toes have the same value as the heart and brain. A bullet may pass through my legs. But that same bullet through the heart or brains is fatal. A man recently sued and received compensation from a railroad company for $38,000 for loss of both legs. Patients live on for a long time though the doctor removes the stomach.

In the last world war, shipbuilder Kaiser had the power to get the right-of-way for shipments of materials on the railroads. Hundreds of his agents were scattered all over the country. As soon as any freight shipment stalled in some freight yard, his agents spotted it, and it got right-of-way. By thus commanding priority, he amazed the country by the speed with which he turned out Liberty Ships and helped win the war.

Yes, there is another STOP sign right ahead of us. We stop! And now as we are again cruising down the beautiful highway, the words of Jesus my Lord and Saviour come to me—"Seek ye first . . . . ." And when one asked Him which law was greatest, He again posited priority and said, to love God is the first command, to love one's neighbor is like unto it, but was the second command.

When came the words of St. Paul "first of all" he delivered a certain message unto the Corinthians. "The Gospel which I preached unto you—by which ye were also saved, if ye hold fast." That Gospel was first. And St. Paul is very careful to define just what that Gospel is. I Cor. 15:1-8. And I wonder whether sometimes our spiritual food is not like the diet of India. Many children get plenty to eat. Their little naked stomachs distend like a balloon. But they do not get the balance nor the prime essentials, and in India we call that malnutrition.

Never can I forget the ringing words of Dr. John R. Mott, in Nagpur, C. P., India, about 1936, when he insisted that certain lines of work must have primacy of value,—if not, he said, you are going to run up blind alleys, come to a dead stop, and your consecrated efforts will sooner or later let you down.

Let's make no mistake. Primacy does not mean arrogant domination. Humility and love go together, as pride and self belong together. If the "first" comes first, then of course those things which accompany salvation MUST follow. Heb. 6. If not, we crucify the Son of God afresh.

Evening time has come to a Kansas farm house. The children gather about their mother for the story hour. Sometimes she tells them the grand old Bible stories,—sometimes she ties up the book of Acts with mission stories, and applies this to the call, the work of those children. From that home one son is now Pastor of the old home church, and two girls went into the India mission field.

A building contractor from Ft. Wayne, Indiana, a former Berne boy, returned to his old home town. Early the next morning he drove out to a certain farmstead in the country. No one was in sight. The cattle and horses were there. The dog came out bouncing and barking. The place seemed deserted "Where is everybody?" he asked himself. He called in through the barn door, and got no response. Finally he bypassed the dog and went toward the house. Looking in through the door, he found all

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The College Corporation meeting was held Friday, September 24. The presiding officer for the meeting was Adolph Preheim of Hurley. Newly elected board members are Joe G. Graber of Freeman, Henry Ewert of Dolton, and Rev. M. A. Kroeker of Marion. On Monday, September 27, we were privileged to have Rev. P. P. Tschetter as guest speaker in chapel. He is at present serving as field man for the Grace Bible Institute. Softball is still the thing of the day for students at Freeman College. In the games played so far the College has won two games and lost two. The Academy has also won two but lost only one game. In Miss Bohn's art class the students have been wood carving. The College art class has been doing linoleum-block printing, letter printing, and poster making. They have finished the textile painting project. The dramatics class under the direction of Miss Kaufman has been acting out short skits and doing impersonations.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Dr. Dirk Cattepoel, of Krefeld, Germany, was a recent campus visitor. He spoke in chapel October 5 and the faculty held a reception in his honor on the 4th. Herta van Delden, of Gronau, Germany, recently arrived on the campus as an exchange student for this year. Herman Neff, another German student, arrived in August. Two Dutch students, Jacob Rote and Joan de Monchy, have also arrived. A meeting of Mennonite ministers of this area was held recently to plan the program for the Ministers Conference to be held on the campus November 17, 18. A Women's Missionary Conference will also be held at the same time. The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of the college is set for November 19. Twenty-seven students accepted the privilege of associate membership with the First Mennonite Church on Sunday, October 3. This is in addition to students who had previously accepted this relationship. Rev. Harry Yoder had charge of the communion service at the Nappanee, Indiana church October 2.

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

Through the halls of the Bethel Mission Church have been relatively quiet during the summer months, they have witnessed renewed activity and preparation for the school opening on October first. New chairs and tables have been purchased, a practice room and a piano installed, additional reference books placed on the library shelves and some needed renovations made to meet the needs of an increased student body. Also, additional student residences have been considered near the school for men students and married couples. These are a few of the preparations which have been made in anticipation of a rich school year.

In making such preparations the college staff has been continually reminded of the great responsibility placed upon it. It has sought God's guidance in each step that it took. The work, however, has been encouraging due to the fine support which the conference has given it and the good response from prospective students. A good student representation is expected from the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Dr. Harold F. Bender, Dean of Goshen College Biblical Seminary, was the first outside speaker in our regular Vesper Sunday services which meet every other Sunday afternoon at the new church. The title of his address, "The Future of European Mennonitism and American Responsibility." The next service will be held October 17 with Don E. Smucker as the speaker.

President S. F. Pannabecker brought the communion message for the Lord's Supper which was celebrated at the Mennonite Bible Mission on Sunday, October 3, at 7:30 P.M. This was a part of the World Communion Sunday. The Seminary rejoices in this opportunity of worshipping God through this most holy of Christian ordinances.

Esko Loewen attended the funeral of his father, P. C. Loewen, in North Newton, Kansas, last Saturday. Esko Loewen is pastor of the Topeka, Indiana, Mennonite Church and resides there with his family while commuting to the seminary during the week days.

John Sommer, of Pekin, Illinois, has returned to the seminary after a summer of cycling through Europe. He travelled nearly nine hundred miles on his bicycle. He is rooming with Ronald Rich of Washington, Illinois, a graduate of Bluffton College of the class of 1948. Ronald Rich is taking graduate work in chemistry.

Elwin and Ruth Hartzler, of Bloomington, Illinois, announce the arrival of Timothy Ray, born on Monday morning, September 27. Elwin Hartzler is the son of Rev. Raymond Hartzler, Field Secretary of the Central Conference. He is attending George Williams College, a school for the training of Y.M.C.A. workers.

Another Greeting:

Hesston College and Bible School hereby exteds congratulations and best wishes to Bethel College upon its sixtieth anniversary, with the wish and prayer that she may be led and blessed of God as she honors Him in an increasingly larger service in the future.

RELIEF NOTES

Most Urgent Relief Needs

First in the priority list of material contributions essential in the relief program for this year are: Meats, fats, and powdered milk. Other materials which are also urgently needed include sugar, wheat products, jams, jellies, dried fruit and vegetables. Relief material contributions should be made in view of this priority.

A special folder describing also the need for funds in the relief program, has been distributed to each congregation.

Year-round Relief Activity

During this time of the year the large scale relief feeding programs are not in active operation, making it possible for workers to concentrate on other forms of help to the people. One of these activities is home visitation, in which personal contact is made with the homes of needy families. Often such visits reveal conditions of dire need which are difficult to detect merely from the appearance of people on the street.

Anna Wiens, worker in Krefeld, Germany, describes one such home, where a mother with two children was living in one room of a cement bunker, with no windows, very meager furniture and bedding, and no source of heat. To see the actual living conditions under which many of these people live is evidence of the need for continued relief work.

Eligibility of Mennonite Refugees

A recurring problem in the Mennonite Refugee migration work is that of establishing the eligibility of our people for assistance by the international agency responsible for assisting refugees. Since Mennonite refugees are of Dutch ethnic origin, they are eligible for IRO assistance. At various times however, this status has been questioned, due to the shifting of personnel within this agency. It then becomes necessary to interpret to the appropriate officials the unique background of the Mennonites: that since their origin they have been persecuted and have fled from one country to another for sake of religious freedom; that they have no political or nationalistic motives. This eligibility for IRO assistance is important because of the financial aid involved, but also because this is a basic criterion for eligibility to migrate to the United States.

In spite of the difficulty in maintaining this status for our Mennonite refugees, our workers have found governmental officials, shipping company agents, and other responsible individuals very cooperative and in many cases willing to make sacrifice for the sake of helping people in need. Many times the Lord has opened doors in wondrous ways in the movements of these refugees.

Service Opportunities

The recently enacted draft law has challenged many young people anew to consider service sponsored by the church. Numerous inquiries have been received from ministers and young people regarding service opportunities sponsored by the Church, open to young people who wish to volunteer. An informal folder is being prepared and copies will be sent to the pastor of each congregation by about October 15, outlining in considerable detail the present opportunities and application procedure. Additional copies may be secured from the Akron office.

Voluntary Service Personnel

Recently appointed have been Mr. and Mrs. Ernest E. Yoder of Fisherville, Virginia for service at Brook Lane Farm; Laura Metzler of North Lima, Ohio, and Marjorie Yoder of West Liberty, Ohio, for service at Gulfport, Mississippi; Mary Falk of Steinbach, Manitoba, for service in Mexico; and Orrville Shoemaker of Dakota, Illinois, to serve as leader at Richmond.

Present specific needs for personnel include a head cook for Brook Lane Farm, a nurse for Gulfport who is interested in doing public health work, a mature German-speaking nurse to serve in Mexico, and a man to serve in Mexico as electrician, maintenance man, ambulance driver, etc.

Released October 1, 1948, via Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

smaller than regulation size demanded, he gave a gasp of dismay; the cost of the pictures had been almost a whole month's wages.

Let us not lose sight of the fact that the purpose of all the above interviewing is to help these people find a new home in another country. Because United States immigration laws are stricter than those of any other country, we first of all find out who has relatives in Canada who would be willing to supply an affidavit of support and otherwise help the person immigrate to Canada. (Immigration to the United States requires first of all, an original birth certificate, and secondly residence in the U. S. Zone of Germany since April 21, 1947. Until just recently the date was December 22, 1945.) Only non-quota immigrants such as parents or children of U. S. citizens, are accepted from the other zones. Thus immigration to the States is severely restricted.

Forms, Questionnaires and Vaccinations

At the present time we are in the midst of processing what we hope will ultimately be over 1,000 Mennonites in the U. S. Zone of Germany for Canada. Before this processing of the individual refugee begins, we must have been notified that his papers from Canada— the M 55 Form—have been received at the Canadian consulate in Germany. After this word has been received, the person can finally be processed for immigration to Canada. First comes seemingly endless filling out of forms and questionnaires at our Backnang office and acquiring of vaccinations and health certificates. Then the individual is taken to the IRO Resettlement Center where he receives his CIC or political screening and a medical examination. After these have been passed successfully, he has another thorough examination by the Canadian medical board and finally appears before the Canadian consul from whom, if health or other reasons do not hinder, he receives his visa. Because of the poor health of many persons, their cases have had to be appealed or deferred until later. After the visa has been received, the person must wait for shipping which is obtained through IRO. This last wait may vary from several days to several months.

Sympathetic Treatment

We of the MCC who work with the imimgration of our refugee people, are most grateful for the consideration which is being shown them by the various officials and boards with whom we must work. The history and experience of our people have been unique; after their story has been told to these officials, they invariably treat them with sympathy and understanding, often giving them preferential treatment.

Immigration—yes, its costs much hard work, but, looking on the lined face of this old grandmother who prayerfully hopes to spend the evening of her life in a land of peace and quiet; into the fearless eyes of the young man who dares to believe that he will find a place where an honest day's work well done will receive its just pay; on this little child, all unaware of the tragedy of the past and facing the future with a smiling confidence, I feel it is work that is eminently worthwhile.

September 28. The following questions are frequently asked concerning conscientious objectors under the new draft:

Do ex-CPS men have "veteran" status?

No. The present law, which exempts certain veterans from registration, does not exempt men who served in Civilian Public Service. Deferment for conscientious objectors in Class IV-E has the same effect as exemption as regards service.

Should registrants who served in CPS give this information on the Classification Questionnaire (SSS Form No. 100)?

The Questionnaire does not contain items dealing with service in CPS. Neither does this information properly belong under Series III of the Questionnaire which deals with Prior Military Service. Such information may be useful in obtaining a IV-E classification and may be relevant if "credit" for service in CPS should be given in the future. The registrant may submit this information in the space provided under "Registrant's Statement Regarding Classification" or he may attach a separate page with the information. The dates of assignment and discharge from CPS should be given.

Should conscientious objectors who are farmers or married men answer the "Registrant's Statement Regarding Classification" in the Classification Questionnaire and request a IV-E classification?

Answering this statement is optional but if the registrant wants recognition of his conscientious objections to military service he should request a IV-E classification. If IV-E deferment should end and deferment for farmers or married men be continued he could immediately request or appeal, if necessary, for a III-A (dependency) or II-D (farming) classification.

When is it necssary for a person who helps a registrant complete his Questionnaire to sign it?

A person who helps a registrant answer the questions or statements on his Classification Questionnaire or the Special Form for Conscientious Objectors (SSS Form No. 150) should sign it. The purpose is to protect the registrant in case any of the information is false or the facts misrepresented. A person who merely discusses with a registrant what he should do does not need to sign. A minister, counsellor, or friend who is asked to help may indicate his relationship and give the registrant's request as the reason.

It would be unfortunate for ministers or church groups to furnish written (canned) anwers for registrants. Local boards might well question whether the statements represented the registrant's convictions in such cases.

The Implications of Registering for War and the Alternatives

by Roland Brown, Chicago, Illinois

With the passing of the Selective Service Act and beginning of national registration it has become urgent for pacifists, particularly those of draft age, to determine their position relative to conscription.

It seems to me that there are two fundamental factors in the total picture:

1. War is evil. Conscription is for the purpose of war, so it is evil. Registration is for conscription, so it also is evil.
2. Whereas the rest of the Nation is girding for war and destruction, it is our duty as Christians and pacifists, following the example of Christ, to have a positive witness and constructive service or program.

The Choices

From these two points it can be seen that the ideal situation would be that in which we need not register, but could and did carry on a positive program of our program of our own. Under present legislation, however, this arrangement is not possible, so let us look at the available avenues. They are covered by four categories: (1) straight military service; (2) non-combatant service; (3) alternative service; (4) non-registration, also registering but refusing induction. I will not discuss the first, since this article assumes that as wrong. In-between groups, such as registering but staying out on deferment, will not be discussed because when the issue really arises, whether at registration or induction time, they will fall into one of the four categories.

As far as my personal convictions are concerned I cannot differentiate between regular and non-combatant service because one is just as much an integral part of the war machine as the other.

Registration First Step in Conscription

The position taken by the majority of CO's in the past war, and probably will be under the present draft, was that of alternative service. Many feel that this is a compromise with the military program. This sentiment grew definitely stronger in Civilian Public Service toward the end of that program and since its termination. In his article, "Should Mennonites Register for the Draft?" The Mennonite, June 8, 1948, Gordon Kaufman questions such a compromise. In summary of his article he says:

> First, we have noted that the purpose of such a registration is only to provide a list of names from which to draw an army. Such a purpose is in conflict with the historic Mennonite pacifist position. Second, we have observed that the aim of conscription is to destroy the unique aspects of personalities and to make men into automatons, whereas the aim of Christianity is to bring out these very same unique characteristics in the Christian life, so that each man can make his contribution to his fellowmen. Registration, being nothing but the first step toward conscription, shares with it its anti-Christian aims . . . . Third, we have noted the effect which conscription will have on the possibilities of world peace, and have also noted the possible beneficial effect the refusal to register by a large number of people might have.

By accepting conscription then, we are sanctioning the act of conscription. Since registration is the first step in conscription, it is open to the same criticism.

The question is raised, "Why draw the line at registration? How about taxes, food for the armed forces, etc.?" I think it is essential to distinguish between what is given to Caesar, and entering into active participation ourselves. Caesar is responsible for how he spends the money received. Even Christ paid taxes to Rome, which had one of the largest military machines of ancient history.

Make Registration the Issue?

Another point of view is whether we should make registration the issue, or whether we should drawn the line just short of military service. In his article, "Should We Make Registration the Issue?" The Mennonite, June 15, 1948, Paul Goering replies to the article by Gordon Kaufman. Briefly to summarize his article, he says that if the law made no provisions for CO's then we should not register. Since, under the law, we have the alternative service program, if it is the program we cannot accept, he recommends that a person register but refuse the induction to the program. He does not agree that conscription violates the personality, but he holds that it is rather the attitude of the individual that is important.

With respect to the argument of the impact that non-registration would have on others, he terms it one of political effect. He feels it would be ineffective because there would be so few participating and that alternative service would be just as effective a witness. He contends that "efforts to frustate the government's policy for political effect has a tendency to change Christian grace to bitterness, Christian hope to despair, and Christian love to negativism."

In a comparison of alternative service to non-registration, he says under the first the pacifist is (1) permitted to discharge his obligations but still oppose its evil purpose; (2) permitted to continue his job of reconciliation; (3) permitted to remind the people that war and military service are wrong. Whereas, by non-registration he is put in prison and out of the way.

The Implications of Non-Registration

I think there are several points in his argument that should be considered. In the first place, I agree that we cannot expect such large numbers to refuse registration as to impress the world. That is not a valid reason or excuse for non-registration. In no way does that invalidate the charges against registration and conscription.

If we begin our testimony by having already compromised with war to the point of conscription for alternate service, our demonstration against war cannot be as effective as in the case of a total break.

It seems to me that "political effect" is a rather misleading statement due to the common usage of the term political. Rather, it is an attempt to express to others, foreign and native, that we are opposed to a "show of muscles" as an international practice because it is opposed to the teachings of Christ and because of the consequences. We believe rather in reconciliation. If, therefore, we cannot agree with government policy and must act according to our consciences, it does not call for a change in our Christian grace, hope and love, but should rather increase them.

Refusing to register for the draft is an extreme position and must be carefully considered before being followed. We are aware of the criticism of war, and we have discussed the relationship of conscription and registration to war.

To me, the criticism that refusing to register is not Biblical is not valid. We cannot expect to find the New Testament or Christ saying, "Thou shalt not register." The situation in Israel at Christ's time was one where there was no draft or even Jewish army. Christ's saying, "When you are compelled to go on mile, go two," is in an entirely different situation. He was referring to a Roman law that a Roman soldier could compel a native of whatever land he was in to carry his pack for a mile, but no farther. This is a situation to teach love for one's enemy, not an injunction for greater service in one's own army. I have already discussed the saying, "Give unto Caesar. . . ." and I think that applies here also.

The fact that you can be deferred or take an alternative service does not alter the relation of registration to conscription and war, and so does not free it of the charges against it. The fact that CO's are now deferred and so have a chance for positive action, does not lessen their responsibility for positive action before registration or without registration.

The Weakness of Non-Registration

So far we have considered the various possible positions from the perspective of my first fundamental point in the total picture—that is, the evil nature of war and what is associated with it. What is the relation of the second point to the situation as it stands? We regret again that there is no possible arrangement of positive service without registration. This would be the best expression of true Christian conviction. Under present arrangements the result of not registering is prison. This certainly seems to put limits on the amount of service and testimony we can give of our position. However, I believe our testimony would be stronger to those with whom we did come in contact.

Although registering does make a compromise with conscription, it does afford a greater variety of methods of service, most of which the non-registrant does not have. Whether they are as effective would depend upon the individual case. They would perhaps reach more people, but whether they would be as pointed as the second is doubtful. I think a very important factor, that should not be omitted, is the injunction of Christ to minister and serve.

The choice to make is not an easy one. It is necessary to look at all the factors involved and to weigh each on the balance of our own conscience. Then with God's help, make the decision and carry it out.

Why I Am a C.O.

by Stanley Bohn, Pandora, Ohio

There are three reasons why I take the C.O. position. The first reason, and probably the most natural reason, is that of my family background and training and the influence of my church and friends.

The second reason, which is probably an outgrowth of the first, is one of religious conviction. The life of Jesus, his teachings and especially the Sermon on the Mount, make plain he brought a new message and a new ethic—one of love. With this way of love, war seems inconsistent. If the teachings of Jesus are to have any value to me I should be able to apply them to this important problem of our day.

The third reason is practical. War never decides any issue (if any real ones happen to be involved!) but only determines who is the stronger.

The last war certainly could not justify its suffering, cost, and human degradation. The next war shows every indication of being worse if not fatal to civilization.

Force is an inappropriate tool to stop any ideology. It is especially inappropriate to stop communism, for communism, by its very nature feeds on the suffering, despair, and poverty brought on by wars. This is evident right now.

Furthermore, I believe that by taking a position as a C.O. I am not being a drag on the public any more than the Mennonites in this country who stood against slavery when such thoughts had never been voiced before, or than the early leaders of the reformation who cried against the existing order—or even the Christ who faced Pilate.

Rather, I believe, it is a contribution to the progress of this Nation and to the brotherhood of nations, contributiing to a higher ethic, greater happiness, and a deeper spirituality.

Labrador's Missionary Doctor

By Bertha Blanchard

The fisherfolk of Labrador cherish the memory of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, who, through his great love and sympathy for humanity, came to their land to heal their bodies, direct their lives, and build their poverty-stricken region into a prosperous community. Now, to people all over the world, Dr. Grenfell and Labrador are inseparable.

The young doctor sailed from England in 1892 to fight God's battle against disease and poverty among the fisherfolk who lived along the rocky coast of Labrador. Grenfell knew that there are many ways to do God's work. He chose practical Christianity as the best way for him to serve the Master. He believed in doing his work by helping others to live healthful and happy lives. He expressed the real reason for his great missionary work in these words:

> There is no question that today we need the message of Christ's love in ways we can understand: access to milk for children; access to garden produce for the undernourished; clothing, schooling, better prices, and cash dealings for the underprivileged.

While still a medical student in the London Hospital, he was divinely guided to a tent-revival-meeting being conducted by Dr. Dwight L. Moody. His interest was so aroused that he attended other religious talks and finally decided to give his life to Christ, saying, "What use is any man in the world if he has no mission in it?"

He became interested in social work and established holiday camps and other organizations for poor boys. Then, as medical officer to the deep-sea fishermen, he sailed his little ship out in the North Sea, where he worked for three years.

But God had other plans for the young doctor. When Grenfell heard of the wretched conditions of the fisherfolk in Labrador, living in dire poverty and disease without any doctor to relieve their suffering, he eagerly decided to work among them.

Arriving in Labrador he found several thousand white men living on the coast. The people were living in hovels with none of the comforts of a home. Treating patients in such surroundings was almost impossible; and yet, undaunted, Grenfell worked laboriously saving lives and gaining the confidence and love of the fisherfolk.

The young doctor had another difficult situation to meet. During the fishing season the fisherman took their families in their tiny fishing boats and sailed up and down the coast. Grenfell, in order to treat his floating patients, had to sail up and down the coast in a whaleboat. The coast of Labrador is rocky and dangerous even today, and Grenfell didn't know much about sailing, so he had a hard time keeping his boat from being dashed to pieces or blown out to sea. Later a little steamer was given to the mission.

A hospital was so desperately needed to care for his patients that Grenfell went to St. John's, the capitol of Newfoundland, to tell the people about his work and his great need. As a result, a house was donated for his first hospital.

In winter, Labrador became a mass of ice and snow which did not thaw until spring. Sometimes the doctor was called out in raging blizzards and thick fogs. The people lived so far apart that sometimes it took the doctor days to reach his patients by dog team. Always the faithful doctor carried on, doing his work for the Master.

The fisherfolk believed that the Lord watched over the doctor, for he miraculously escaped death so many times. Answering a call one day to a sick boy some distance from the town, Grenfell set out with his dog team and sleigh to cross the bay on the ice. Suddenly the ice began to crack up into huge cakes that floated and crashed dangerously. Grenfell cut the the dogs loose just before the cake on which they floated broke into several chunks. Desperately, he tried to untie the dogs and finally succeeded, but he had lost his coat and was on the verge of freezing to death. So that he might live, he had to kill three of his dogs and wrap himself in their skins to keep out the cruel wind during that long bitter night. The next morning he tied his bright-colored shirt to the frozen leg of one of the dogs and waved his flag to signal the shore. Hours passed and no one noticed his frantic waving. He floated about twenty miles before he was rescued by fisherman. Half-frozen, he was carried to his own hospital for treatment.

Besides being doctor to the fisherfolk, he also helped to improve their lives in many other ways. Upon his arrival, he found the storekeepers were robbing the poor fisherman by charging unreasonable prices for their supplies. They had no money left to buy enough food or clothes. Grenfell established co-operative stores where the people could buy things at fair prices.

Since the fisherfolk were undernourished, the doctor had an opportunity to study the relation of diet and disease. His work attracted the attention of famous doctors in the United States and Europe. Many young doctors and college students came to Labrador to work with Dr. Grenfell. Many people donated money to build hospitals as Grenfell's fame spread.

For nearly forty years, Grenfell worked among his beloved fisherfolk and continued working until the very last. He put Labrador on the map and helped the fisherman to better their condition in every way. All people, both high and low, loved Dr. Grenfell for his courage in danger, his good nature in enduring great hardships, his enjoyment of simple things, and his wholesome sincerity.

Grenfell once said, "The most telling words that any man can utter are acts and deeds of love."

BEHIND THE WINDSHIELD

III. When Mary Jane Visited a Cafeteria

the family gathered together, on their knees, while father led in family prayers. Again we went out to another farm home at the close of the next day. Again he found all gathered together for evening prayers. He recalled that thus they all did, every family, twice per day, for 365 days per year. Then he told me, "Now I know why when any Berne young man comes to Ft. Wayne, his checks are cashed at the bank with no questions, which is not true of checks from other communities."

I recall a mother in Pennsylvania, busy with eleven children, two big gardens, a nineteen-room house, butter and cheese making, who never failed once in 365 days to gather the children at eventide. They sang the grand old hymns. Then she read Bible stories, prayed for and with her children. One son went to China; a son and daughter went to India as missionaries.

What results of Himalayan proportions would result, if our church of 47,000 in all its diversified program of activity would observe primacy of value. In what way will we be running up blind alleys and be coming to dead stops, having the program let us down,—just because we fail to place first things first? What would happen if only one-tenth of the churches, organizations, mothers and fathers would observe primacy of value? (To Be Continued.)

BEYOND OUR OWN

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 8—Long-divided American Protestantism, represented by 3,500 delegates from 65 denominations in the United States and Canada, declared itself united here today in "the greatest co-operative program of world missionary service in church history." Quick to respond to the appeal made by the First World Council of Churches which met in Amsterdam last month, the Foreign Mission Assembly enthusiastically adopted a program of advance in foreign missions which was recommended to it by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America and endorsed by spokesmen of ten foreign countries in which missionary work is now progressing.

Utah—The Mormon Church sent one hundred and nine carloads of food and clothing to the people of Europe. Included was a carload of 80,500 pounds of cracked wheat.

Elkhart, Indiana.—Plans for building a large Mennonite hospital at Elkhart will probably not materialize, J. D. Graber, secretary of Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities, reports. The excessive cost, and the fact that the Elkhart-Goshen community itself has taken up plans for a unified hospital program, are factors which brought about the change in plan. The Mennonite Board is, however, considering establishment of a nurses' training program in connection with the proposed new county hospital set up.

New York.—A new package to help meet one of the greatest single needs of undernourished European families— a 10-pound package of lard—has been announced as now available. The price of this package is $6.50.

Bremen, Germany.—(Sept. 18) Bomb-flattened Cologne resembled a medieval pilgrim city last month as several hundred thousand persons thronged it to witness the colorful 700th anniversary and reopening celebrations of the famous cathedral, greatest Gothic monument in Germany, now repaired after wartime damage. A hundred thousand people were present and numerous high-ranking Catholic prelates took part in the week-long festivities.

Over Our Shoulders

Twenty-five Years Ago

October 18, 1923, THE MENNONITE, Vol. XXXVIII, No. 41: The celebration of the 240th anniversary of the Germantown, Pennsylvania, church during the past week was an event full of interest and enthusiasm. It was brought out that five denominations claim Germantown as the place where they first established churches, namely, the Mennonites, Friends, Brethren, Reformed, and Lutheran. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel gave the anniversary message on October 10, 1923, entitled, "Heirs, What of the Heritage?"

There can never be peace until God has all the pieces of a broken and contrite heart.

"CHRISTIANS MUST BE MORE RADICAL THAN COMMUNISTS." Thus spoke Kermit Eby to the recent Assembly of the Foreign Missions Conference at Columbus, Ohio. The growth of non-Christian and anti-Christian gospels has stabbed the conscience of the Church wide awake to the folly of her reticence in standing forth boldly with the universal Gospel—the Gospel for all mankind. The cry of the conscience is for a satisfying gospel. The Gospel of redemption from sin through the atonement of Christ is God's answer, and the only finally satisfying answer to the cry of the conscience. But where that Gospel is not clearly set forth, the moral vacuum left by sin will be filled by other gospels. Life is found to be guided by some gospel. Because the true Gospel has been passed around as optional dessert instead of the bread of life, others have begun passing the bread around, but it is the poisoned bread of secularism, materialism, statism, and atheistic communism.

Almost every major denomination has seen the need for the Church to get back on the job of giving out the Bread of Life, the Gospel of Christ. In the General Conference, the response to this need has been the setting aside of the month of November as the month of witnessing through the Sunday school and Holy Week as the week of witnessing through the church. Witnessing is not to be restricted to these periods; rather, the sustained effort of these periods is intended to give opportunity to establish the habit of witnessing.

Plans should be made now by education, Sunday school, or evangelism committees in the churches for a program that will help every member see the glorious nature of this task and share in the joy of bringing people to Christ. This issue of THE MENNONITE carries a suggestive article along this line entitled, " . . . . And Your Neighbors," written by the chairman of the Evangelism Committee of the General Conference. A review of Dawson G. Bryan's, A Handbook of Evangelism for Laymen, in also included in this issue.

We may not have it in our hands to bring peace to the whole chaotic world. But we can bring the peace of God to those next to us; and for that task God holds us responsible! No one else can do it for us!—J.J.E.

"JESUS CHRIST AS GOD AND SAVIOUR!" There you have it plainly and simply stated. This simple formula of the Deity and Saviourhood of Christ is the common ground upon which almost one hundred and fifty branches of non-Roman Christianity that make up the World Council of Churches have chosen to work together. Here is forthright uncompromising evidence of the Church's readiness to sound clearly the Gospel that the world sorely needs. Here is confession of the insufficiency of man the sinner. Here is confession of man that his fundamental need is not a change of circumstances without but a new heart within. Here is affirmation of the efficacy of the finished work of Christ that becomes the basis for the unfinished task of the Church to convert the total man to Christ. Here is high affirmation of the faith once for all delivered that sets forth the Christian way of life as grounded in the very laws of the universe! As Rev. Albert Penner reported of "Amsterdam" recently, "No human institution can speak the saving word; we were convinced that Word had been spoken."—J.J.E.

AT LEAST FIVE MILLION MORE young people in the schools of our land twenty years from now—that is the astounding figure that present increases in population indicate as pointed out recently by an officer of the General Conference who is concerned about education. Who will teach this additional number? Who will replace those dropping out of the ranks of the active teachers in the meantime? Are we building the physical plants, faculties, Gospel-principled programs and traditions that will prepare us to serve the ever-growing generation of the future? It should be gratifying to see Christian schools expanding to meet this great challenge of the future. If it is true, as someone has said, that the great advances of the future will be in the realm of the spiritual, then the day of Christian education on every age-level has only begun. If it is true that the whole world is a mission field, including so-called Christian America, then as never before the Christian school becomes another arm of the Church in its fundamental function—the total conversion of people.—J.J.E.

. . . . just as a few deep breaths without constant, normal breathing are not sufficient to sustain life, so I find that premeditated, formal prayers do not satisfy the yearnings of the heart without the numerous spontaneous sentence prayers which the mind and heart prompt one to express.

What I Do When I Pray

How Agenda Prayers Become Up-to-the-Minute Personal Prayers

by Mrs. Edna Schrock

Have you ever stood before an open window with chest out and shoulders back and inhaled deeply the fresh morning air and then just as consciously exhaled, repeating the in and out process until a new vitality seemed to surge within you? Just as sure as I am that you have had such an experience, so am I equally sure that you have never been so stupid as to say when you closed the window, "There, I've done my breathing for today!" Yet haven't we all been guilty of such an attitude in our prayer life, even though not audibly spoken or consciously admitted?

I know that I have, for I have found that in my praying I have been too content to depend upon the "exercising" prayers of formal worship and daily family devotions to sustain my Christian life. However, such prayers are very vital through; them one enters many times into mountain top experiences which revitalize the soul. They are the prayers offered in an atmosphere most conducive for communion with God—in quiet, worshipful surroundings, preceded by hymns and the reading of God's Word, and given in Christian fellowship; they are just as important to the growth of a Christian as deep, controlled breathing is beneficial to physical health.

But I also find such prayers more pharisacial, for many times they are offered with a feeling other than a deep desire for communion with God. In formal worship, perhaps as a leader you are expected to lead a group in prayer; or when a call for prayers is made and the responses are few, you pray from a sense of duty; or when some one else is praying, your mind and heart are closed to the prayer. And in family devotions, the prayers may be offered as a dutiful obligation to God or may become a habitual ritual, done in the spirit of setting an example for the family. Such are the danger spots which I find in audible, formal prayers which leave one with the sense of having prayed and yet also leave the feeling that the prayers have reached out only as far as the sound of the human voice could carry them.

So just as a few deep breaths without constant normal breathing are not sufficient to sustain life, so I find that premeditated, formal prayers do not satisfy the yearnings of the heart without the numerous spontanteous sentence prayers which the mind and heart prompt one to express. An occasional "Round-Robin letter" to a far-distant friend contains only the high points of living—a birth, a death, an unusual experience—but a daily letter to a dear one contains all the intimate detailed happenings of the day. One all-inclusive prayer, I find, tends to becom general in content and interest, but many brief prayer become specific, personal and vital.

Such prayers one can pray anytime, anywhere With eyes closed to shut out distractions and moment of silence for inner quietude, one is read to come before God with an immediate word o praise or thanks, or a plea for forgiveness, or a petitio for a blessing upon someone, or for whatever desire the heart or mind contains. Is that not the kind of prayer implied when we ask of someone "Breathe a prayer for me," or when we ask of God in song, "Breathe on me breath of God?"

One does not set aside some certai time and say, "Now, I will breathe" but instead keeps on breathing constantly; s a certain time for prayer becomes less important as we are more constantly in prayer. Then prayer becomes less forced and dutiful and will come as naturally and as sustaining to our spiritual life as breathing is to the physical. I have found that in this way my praying has changed from an agenda type to an-up-to-the minute, personal method and also becomes the fulfillment of Paul's admonition, "Pray without ceasing."

In Times of Trouble

God's Trusting Child May Say:

FIRST: He brought me here; it is by His will I am in this strait place; in that will I rest.

NEXT: He will keep me here in His love, and give me grace in this trial to behave as His child.

THEN: He will make the trial a blessing, teaching me the lessons He intends me to learn, and working in me the grace He means to bestow.

LAST: In His good time He can bring me out again—how and when, He knows.

Say: I am here—

(1) By God's Appointment.
(2) In His keeping.
(3) Under His training.
(4) For His time.

"And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.—Psalm 50:15.

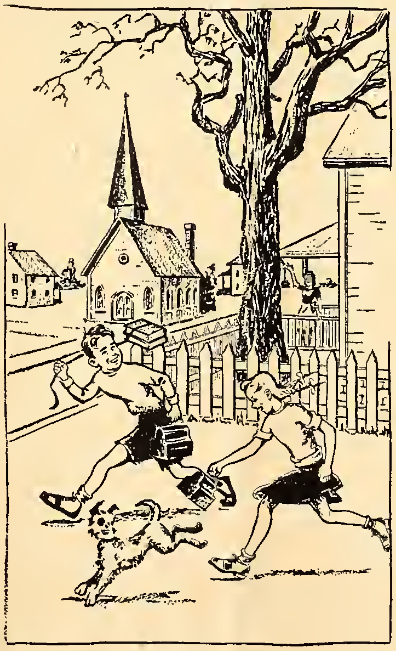
. . . and Your Neighbor

by John T. Neufeld

Who is my neighbor? According to Jesus he is a person to whom you owe a great deal of love. The people in the accompanying picture are neighbors to the church. The church therefore owes something to them. The church owes something to the mother on the porch and to the playing children.

Your church represents the light of the world. This light however works a little different than ordinary light. Does the fact that these people live near the church make them Christians?



May we suggest some questions that might be asked about every neighbor and about every person in the church community:

Who are the people that live in this house? Did anyone from the church ever invite them to church and Sunday school? Were these children ever invited to a children's gathering in the church?

If these people come to our church, will they find a warm welcome? Will the regular church people just stare at them? Will they receive a warm Christian message from the pulpit; one that will warm their hearts toward God and their fellowmen? Is our church a church for people of all nations? Will our love for God and our fellowmen be large enough to overcome all prejudice against other nationalities?

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to all nations." Shall we begin at home?

An effort by every individual is required and also a united effort by the entire church.

The individual church member can do a great deal by a friendly invitation to his neighbor to come to church. This may be done at anytime when you by chance meet your neighbor. Children may do this in school, fathers may have opportunity while in town, mothers may do well to make a personal call at their new neighbor's house. The individual must also do his or her part in making the new visitor feel welcome when he comes to church. Let the love of God be expressed in a friendly spirit.

There are certain times also that the church must make a united, special effort to reach everyone in the community. If the community is a closely settled community, then a house-to-house canvass is in place. A friendly call with perhaps a printed church announcement may be the means. Perhaps at some places a short visit will result. Be friendly, be courteous. Do not argue religion.

In a rural community a group of people working as an evangelism committee may be able to list all unchurched people of the community and to arrange for some one of the church members to make the necessary contacts for the church.

We should make friends with our neighbors now. This means with all that will accept friendship regardless of their nationality. Win them to Christ now. We must not only invite them to church but we must also present them with the gospel in all its fullness. This is in the first place the duty of the ministry, but the Sunday school teacher can also do a great deal. The Young People's meeting offers great opportunities to win people to Christ. Good literature can be wisely used. Our Junior Messenger is a fine paper to give to younger people. There is very much literature available today. A little help from your pastor will be a means of helping you to find the right literature to distribute.

The Evangelism committee has also a large selection of literature for distribution.

One of the first requisites of any church is a neatly printed church invitation. This should have the name and address of the church, the name and address of the pastor, the schedule of meetings and one or more appropriate verses from the Bible. And above all a properly worded invitation.

In all this you are the personal messenger of the Lord Jesus Christ. Feel free to call upon Him for courage and power, and for wisdom. The Lord will bless the work.

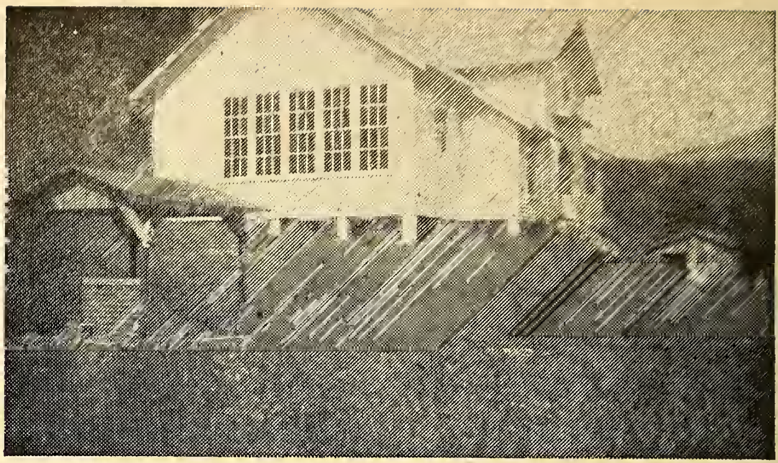
Progress at Paint Rock

by A. J. Neuenschwander



For a year and three months Rev. and Mrs. Andrew Holliman and their three daughters have been on this field at Paint Rock, North Carolina. Miss Elsa E. Grantland had labored here for a number of years before. With the coming of the new workers, it was hoped that a congregation might be established.

A large school was purchased by the Board of Home Missions. This building was remodeled as Grace Chapel and the apartment for the Holliman family. On Sunday April 18, 1948 with Rev. J. J. Plenert representing the Board, a dedication service was held. At this time the organization was inaugurated with fourteen members.

Progress is being made for which we praise the Lord. Soon after the Dedication Service Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Esau, Bluffton, Ohio were there and Rev. Esau conducted a week of Evangelistic services. Attendance reached almost one hundred. During the quarter, July-September the highest attendance was 83 and the lowest 16. Attendance at Sunday school ranges between 25-40. Prayer meeting and Bible study is conducted each Wednesday evening. The organizing of a congregation that can be called "our own" by the local people has contributed a great deal to strengthen the cause of Christ. Those who faithfully stand by the work are mostly young people who have manifested deep love and devotion to Christ. Others stand aloof in spite of many urgent and loving invitations.

All the work on the property had not been completed at the time of the dedication. Since then the outside has been painted, making it a spot of beauty and attraction in the pleasant valley. During the summer a well was dug, a garage and cow shed under one roof was completed as well as some grading and laying of sidewalks. Some work still needs to be done.

Mission work in a new station is subject to many and varied experiences. For a period of time all seems to be going well with attendance on the increase, but without a moment's warning Satan will arouse a group to make trouble for the cause of Christ. It has happened that such sudden outbreaks occur Saturday night and as a result the Sunday attendance is smaller. In Acts chapter 19 we read of an uproar in Ephesus. Satan still starts uproars.

Extension Work

Calls come in to Rev. Holliman from outlying neighborhoods to come and conduct services. These requests are followed whenever it is possible to do so. On one occasion they were invited to a remote place. They drove as far as possible with the car, but it was still a mile from the home. They walked the distance with the aid of the lantern. When they arrived at the place they were surprised and delighted to find 25 persons waiting to hear the Gospel story. Singing was difficult since they had only one small lamp and two lanterns, but where there is a will, there is a way and the Lord blest the endeavor.

Occasionally it is possible for the Hollimans to have fellowship with other Christian workers in adjoining communities. In the past quarter seven such meetings were held. On such occasions experiences are exchanged and all hearts are united in fervent prayer that the Lord might bring unto himself precious sheaves.

"Bring This Along, Will You?"

When it is known that the Mission Worker is going to one of the larger cities, many homes, without cars, make their needs known. On a certain trip Rev. Holliman had to bring the following: a half-bushel of rye and nine light bulbs for one family; a box of cheese was needed by another family; a third family asked for 20 pounds of sugar and some medicine, while a lady sent a note along to the bank that he should bring home all her money. For their own family needs he brought back two gallons of varnish, some sink fixtures and groceries. When merchandise, change, and cash are delivered to all the families, every one is happy.

For about seven months the work of visitation and other tasks could not be carried on as had been planned. Rev. Holliman had been bothered with low blood pressure. The Board advised that all outside manual labor be stopped and rest periods observed in order to regain health. Doctors were consulted and recently a trip had to be made to have a thorough examination by a specialist in Ashville, N. C. We hope and pray that the cause of the trouble can be located and corrected. The family and the Board desire intercessory prayers for the work and especially for Brother Holliman's health.

Rev. and Mrs. Andrew Holliman and the three daughters have made a deep impression on this community because of their steadfastness and devotion to Christ and His Cause.—Reported by A. J. Neuenschwander, on the basis of information supplied by Rev. Andrew Holliman.

Honor -- AND AID -- to the Hoary Head

(Lev. 19:32)

by Erna J. Fast

Today I visited a number of the distribution places where twenty thousand old people of Hamburg come for their thrice-weekly portion of nourishing soup and little white "Brotchen." One of these distribution centers was in the basement kitchen of Frau Schmidt. I am grateful that there are still people like Frau Schmidt who are willing to have folks come through hallway and kitchen in order to get their portion of the Mennoniten-Speise, even if it means daily sweeping and floor-scrubbing. Then there was the basement of the bombed-out church with its single window and dingy walls. There is little left of the building to show that it formerly was a house of worship, beloved by those who came here to meet God and speak with Him. And I must not forget that long line of subdued, bent figures quietly waiting their turn in the wartime barrack now occupied by the German Red Cross. All day the rain had been falling steadily, and these folk revealed that they had been out in the downpour for a good length of time—coats, hats, and shoes were so wet. When one is old and weak and at times crippled and can walk only with great effort and slow step, it does not take long before one is pretty well drenched in these Hamburg rains.

Savings Gone

And yet these people come for their portion—in all kinds of weather! As often before, today I again felt within myself a deep sense of shame. What sort of a civilization am I living in that allows this sort of thing to happen? Why must all this hunger and suffering be? As usualy, I talked with a few of the folk to learn if they are satisfied with that which is offered and also to give them a bit of an idea of the spirit in which these materials are sent. As I spoke with some of them, I sensed in them, too, a feeling of reticence and almost shame. It is not easy for them to accept charity when, after years of diligent effort and careful saving to have something "laid by" for the afternoon years of their lives, they are now forced to depend on ¾ liter of soup and a little white flour roll distributed by a foreign relief agency.

Disregarded

In their lifetime these people have seen much of advancement, of progress, prosperity, and pleasure, but also of struggle, envy, hate, and failure. The last ten years have been the most difficult of all, for the Third Reich saw no value in maintaining the standards of old people and refused to support them. The meagerest of food allotments, no consideration when clothing or shoe rations were needed, and the poorest of accommodations have become a matter-of-fact state of affairs to these unfortunate people. As I spoke with a tiny, grey-haired woman today she told of how she had worked hard as a cook all her life and had hoped that the hard-earnings would care for her needs during her last years. Then with tears in her eyes she said, "I don't want to be dependent on the state. That is one thing I could never do!" As she gripped my hands in parting, I noted how the fingers of both hands were crippled and misshapen from arthritis.

The Neediest of 80,000 Needy

The thank you letters and words of gratitude which we receive from these who have been chosen as the neediest of the needy among the eighty thousand old people of greater Hamburg mean very much to us. However, it is the daily record which speaks far more forcefully than all else—to know that seldom a portion of soup and little 50-gram roll are left when the distribution is completed for the day. This means that they come in all kinds of weather, walking long distances or traveling the dangerously overcrowded streetcars. There are those over ninety years of age, some of them walking many blocks to reach the nearest distribution center. There are those who find it extremely difficult to walk because they are crippled or weak or sick, or because they have not the necessary clothes or shoes. But they come—some of them very early so that they won't miss their share.

So many of the old people who come have no one left to care for them. They

by Mrs. Elizabeth Thiessen

For some time I pondered the question of getting the leading women to help more in solving problems of the church. We have three deacons whose wives are fine intelligent women. After prayer, I decided to try to call the three deacon's wives together with Mrs. John, who is one of the leading women and who has been teaching school in the years past. I also invited the Palak's wife because her husband is one of the leaders of the church. We wanted to pray together and talk over problems on Friday afternoon of each Week.

Everyone Grumbling

Soon after we came from the hills, we had our first meeting. The increased tension and grumbling because of high prices led us to search a new path to help our Christians. We decided to have a special service in two weeks on Sunday and let everyone bring a special offering for the poor in Europe. We hoped to send one food parcel or CARE parcel through the MCC to some poor family in Europe.

A special announcement was made and Exodus 35:20-9 was read before the people. Each one was to bring whatever he or she could from their homes on the Saturday previous to the meeting. Our church bearer went around to remind all the people about the special day.

Everyone Expectant

When the Sunday finally arrived, each one was expectant. Many brought their gifts to the front of the church. We had big baskets all ready for the different articles. One little girl brought up some big, white eggs her mother gave. One family gave a goat, and the church bearer was told to take charge of such things till later when they would be sold. Some gave unpeeled rice and others gave used clothing. There was a generous collection besides some jewelry. We sent around two medium-sized baskets for the collection and when I looked back to put in my share, I was surprised; for the many rupee notes looked more like the Berne Church collection than our own.

The cash collection in the morning was over Rs.40 or about $12. The money from the sale in the afternoon was over Rs.30, or about $10. Now we had more than enough to send two parcels to Europe. After a few days we sent a slip around again among the different people to ask if any wanted to give any cash. Enough was collected so there was a total of Rs.106-3-6, which was more than enough for three CARE parcels. So we at once sent an air mail letter to the MCC office at Akron, Pennsylvania, asking them to forward three parcels as gifts from our church in India.

Everyone Happy

We know our people experienced a real joy in giving and we pray that God may bless these gifts and the people who will receive them.

live all alone in tiny room, cellar, or garret. I recall the little lady who, when I asked her why she did not have someone bring her food to her because she is far too frail and has so far to go, answered that there simply is no one. She told of living alone in a small room among other people who are unhappy to have her forced upon them and continually remind her that she must be very quiet and keep out of their way. Another grandmother told of having lost all—husband, business, home, family—in the bombing attacks and how she now lives in a small, unheated room in the garret of a damaged house. The Red Cross "Schwester" pointed out the old gentlemen who had already gained five pounds since he had stopped cooking the discarded potato peelings. He is over ninety years and also alone.

". . . to Think Someone Remembers Us!"

It is not an easy work—but such a rewarding one—to try to help these unfortunate old people of the city. They have known better times, and by contrast their present plight is made all the more tragic; they have known repression and what it means to be ignored. To hear them say, "And to think someone is remembering us!" cuts deep. They have not the strength to go out into the country to scourge for a peck of potatoes. They have saved nothing from the fire and bombs with which to trade for an extra portion of food. To live on the ration card is absolutely impossible. We realize the truth of the statement made by welfare officials and helpers at the distribution centers—that the old people of Germany are today among the neediest of the needy.

"The halt, the blind, and the lame"—how great was the compassion of our Lord for these who came to Him those days in Galilee. May our compassion be measured by the degree of service and love which we—all of us—give to these who need our help.

Military Training for Three-Year Olds

by Demma Ray Oldham

It is not coming. It is here. It came so quietly, so unnoticed—like Hitler's Youth movement—that it was in effect before we realized it. And since its inception back in World War I, it has produced a most startling number of juvenile criminals

We start any kind of military training by placing a gun in the hands of the trainee, by arousing his interest in it, by encouraging him in the mastery of of it. That is exactly what we have done with the three-year-olds and up.

We have placed toy guns in their hands, showed them how to use these guns, and laughed at their "Bang-bang, you're dead!" We have thrown up our hands and smiled approvingly at their "Stick 'em up!" We have encouraged them in this play and fed them on its emotions. Yet when they have used the real thing in later life and found themselves in trouble, we've shaken our heads and wondered at the cause.

The only difference between military training for adults and military training for babies is that military training for babies is more effective. Babies are more impressionable.

> "The position of the Christian World, with its fortressess, cannons, dynamite, torpedos, churches and palaces in monstrous . . . . Although we have recognized the fundamental, divine commands 'DO NOT KILL,' and the law of Love and Brotherhood, yet, in spite of this, every man of our Europeon world (most, not all, men of the entire world) renounces this divine law, and at the command of a president, emperor, minister, puts on a foll's costume, takes up the intrument of murder and says, 'I am ready . . . . I will strike down, ruin, and kill whomsoever you command me to.'"—Leo Tolstoi.

The psychologist tells us that the first six years mark a pattern for the child's future and that the impressions made on a child's mind during that period are duplicated at certain intervals throughout his life.

Play habits influence thought habits. A child plays first with a toy gun. At teen age his toy gun is too small. He wants the real thing, the grown-up's gun. He has become used to a gun, knows the feel of it. He remembers how it worked over his playmates when he was a child. He used the gun then to get what he wanted. Why shouldn't he use the real thing now for the same reason—to get what he wants now?

He reasons that his parents sanctioned his using the play guns. They filled his play-pen with toy guns, tanks and soldiers. He played hold-up man as soon as he could walk and shout, 'Stick 'em up!" Then he had gone off to the movies to see his favorite crime pictures as soon as he could find his way alone to the theater.

Naturally under such conditions the child comes to look upon crime as a sport, as a game, as something normal instead of something dangerous and destructive. All these impressions lead up to the fatal missteps. And according to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, since the outbreak of the last war arrests of boys under 17 have increased 30 per cent.

In fact, more than half the burglaries committed in our country are by youth under 21. One out of every 22 persons in the United States has been arrested for an offense sufficiently serious to justify being fingerprinted, and in one year one out of every 21 homes has been a victim of this crime toll. Last year in our own country 3,785 serious crimes were committed each day.

If we are to have a peaceful country, certainly we must have a more effective crime prevention program. We have set out to reform Hitler youth by disarming them, by teaching to live without guns, and by directing their thinking into constructive channels. Why do we not become equally interested in American youth and start a movement to disarm them?

M. C. C. in Miniature: Ontario Version

by Don Smucker

M.C.C. in Miniature: Ontario Version

One of the most unique organizations of nonresistant people in North America convened October 5 in St. Jacobs, Ontario, when the Conference of Historic Peace Churches held its thirteenth session.

Amish to General Conference

Organized on July 3, 1940, at Waterloo, this group came into being to provide much more unity and fellowship among the people of non-resistant convictions in Canada. It includes all the groups of Mennonites—from Amish to General Conference—and the Canadian Quakers. The Church of the Brethren is not represented because there are no Brethren churches in the province of Ontario. Most Brethren centers in Ontario joined the Brethren in Christ churches. In this small Canadian province there are thirteen thousand Mennonites of the various branches. A visitor to this meeting is impressed with the profound similarity to the American situation. The problems are basically the same, the opportunities are basically the same, and the conviction of the individuals are the same.

M.C.C. on Local Level

The outstanding feature of this conference is the fact that it appears to give local reality to the unity attained at "the top" by the way of the M.C.C. Here the M.C.C. fellowship is reduced to local terms, where all the different individuals come together for a day of inspiration. During the war years, when the problems were much more complex, the sessions were given over primarily to business matters. Today the messages are basically for inspiration. The Quakers are a very small group in this conference, but take some part in the program to give it a fresh dimension. Among the General Conference people who served on the program were Andrew Shelly, Don Smucker, J. J. Thiessen, and John Wichert.

Church and State Status

The American observer is also struck with the fact that the status of Canada in the British Empire does not materially alter the church and state situation. There is no established Church of Canada, as there is, of course, in Great Britain itself. And while the Anglican or Episcopalian Church is much stronger than it is here in the States, it still does not fundamentally change the church and state situation.

Conference Setting

The Kitchener-Waterloo area is very attractive as a small residential city. The Mennonites were the first white settlers in this community, and came at the very beginning of the nineteenth century. Two of the best known pastors in Kitchener are Andrew Shelly, in the General Conference church, and C. F. Derstine, in the Old Mennonite Church. In Waterloo Jacob Janzen has just terminated a long and honorable pastorate. This is also the home of J. B. Martens, an outstanding peace leader in the Old Mennonite Church.—Reported by Don Smucker.

VOTE NO

For Others—Information

For Kansas—Exhortation

In order that you may be informed as to the issue at stake we include in this issue a copy of the proposal to repeal the section of the Kansas constitution which deals with the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in Kansas. Constitutional prohibition was adopted by the people of the state at the general election of November 2, 1880 and reaffirmed in 1934 by a substantial state-wide majority of more than 89,000. The proposal which is to be brought before the public for a vote this November is as follows:

> "The legislature may provide for the prohibition of intoxicating liquors in certain areas. Subject to the foregoing, the legislature may regulate, license and tax the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, and may regulate the possession and transportation of intoxicating liquors. The open saloon shall be and is hereby forever prohibited."

Note the following items in the above: (1) It would completely repeal constitutional prohibition and take any and all powers over the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages away from the voters and give them to the legislature. (2) There is not a single sentence in the repeal amendment that is directive to or mandatory on the legislature. The next or any future legislature would be enabled to do as it pleases, in legalizing sellers of any and all kinds of alcoholic beverages, anytime, anywhere in the state. (3) The proposal states that the legislature "may provide for prohibition—in certain areas" but does not require it to enact any kind of local option law, which would enable people to vote on whether or not they want their own communities to be dry. (4) The prohibition against the open saloon means nothing, because thereunder the saloon may return with all its evil influences and practices, by calling itself a tavern or cocktail lounge as it has under similar circumstances in other states. —From the Eden Chronicles. New York Mennonite Fellowship Convenes

The New York Mennonite Fellowship had its first fall meeting on Monday night, October 4, in the reception room of the Biblical Seminary in New York. Mr. Stanley Shenk, an instructor in Bible at Eastern Mennonite College for the past few years, was the speaker. Mr. Shenk is now continuing his work at the Biblical Seminary.

A fine group was present at this meeting. The Fellowship will continue to meet on the first Monday evening of every month at the same place. Anyone who has the name and address of Mennonites in and around New York City should send them to Orlando Schmidt, 235 East 49th St., New York 17, N. Y. as soon as possible, so that the Fellowship might continue to grow and serve those Mennonites who are in this area.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Gospel Teams are active and preparing for a year of service, both in regular devotional and discussion meeting on the campus and in deputation work. Prof. Shelly is also in charge of a course for Sunday School workers being put on the combined efforts of the Grace and St. John Mennonite Churches of Pandora. One hundred seventy-five guests attended the Open House activities October 8. Homecoming and Parents Day were also well attended. Dr. C. Henry Smith is ill in the Lima Memorial Hospital, where he underwent an operation on October 6. Prof. Gara, History instructor, spoke at College Church, October 3 on the subject, "Conscience and the Atom Bomb."

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

Ellen Harder, Marie Kroeker, and Stella Schrag serve as Sunday school teachers. Engaged in settlement work are Delbert Schrag and Erwin Goering, Mr. Goering also serving as director of church visitation. Alvin Franz is the assistant choir director and Sunday school music leader for the group at the Seminary fellowship.

FREEMAN COLLEGE

Wednesday, October 6 President Miller spoke to the students in chapel. It was the first of three messages to be given on "Keeping Our Records True." These messages are based on a verse by Henry Van Dyke. In his first message President Miller stressed that in order to keep our records true we must think without confusion and think swiftly.

Kitty Foyle dramatized from Christopher Morley's novel by Christopher Sergel has been chosen as the academy play for this year. According to plans it is to be given in the early part of November. Rehearsals began Monday, October 11.

Friday, October 8, the Speech Clinic was held here at Freeman Junior College. It was a meeting of the Inner State Academies including Western Christian Academy, Augustana Academy, Northwestern Academy and Freeman Academy. Mr. Shenk from Yankton was in charge of this meeting. The purpose of it was to have Mr. Shenk give the contestants and coaches of declam and debate, rules as to what the contestants will be judged on in the final contest. Mr. Shenk is also to be the final judge and in giving these rules and criticisms the coaches will all know what is expected of the contestants and will be able to coach them better.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Dr. Harold H. Gross, dean of Freeman Junior College, was the main speaker at Christian Life Week held at Bethel College from Sept. 27-Oct. 1.

Preceding the evening services prayer meetings were held.

Work in a city mission, the desire of those interested in church service, will be realized for five student volunteers who have been chosen to serve in the project at Lorraine Ave. Mennonite church in Wichita.

Student-nurses from Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton, are in affiliation at Bethel College for the first part of their training period. This new arrangement makes it possible for the students to receive their college degree in addition to their R. N.

Three days of celebration of the Bethel College sixtieth anniversary came to a climax Tuesday evening, Oct. 12, with a Loyalty Dinner, and a pageant portraying the history of the college. Messages of congratulations and good wishes from sister Mennonite colleges and Bethel alumni poured in from China, India, South America and Europe.

The Christian Church in Puerto Rico

The first in a series of articles telling about Puerto Rico and the interest of the Young People's Union in the projected mission there.

By Harry Martens, North Newton, Kansas

In the Caribbean Sea, between the great Americas, there rests a plot of ground approximately thirty-five miles wide and one hundred miles long. On this Island, known as Puerto Rico, one finds God's handiwork—nature's beauty, almost at its best. One almost feels God put forth special efforts in making the Puerto Rican sky, clouds, flowers and landscape. His prize creation, man, seems to have unusual difficulty to enjoy even the bare essentials of life.

Puerto Rico under Spain

History records again and again that after the so-called "modern man" took possession of land formerly occupied by natives, or after one country had wrested control of the government of another, mission work of one kind or another was started. The history of missions and the church of Puerto Rico shows that Puerto Rico is a typical example. I believe it can be said that the beginning of the Roman Catholic Church is from that solemn hour, November 19, 1493, when Columbus implanted the standard of their Catholic majesties, Ferdinand and Isabella, in the soil of Puerto Rico and claimed it for Spain. Puerto Rico has the distinction of receiving the first Catholic Bishop of the New World when in May, 1513, Bishop Alonzo Manso, of Spain, arrived.

Most of the early Spaniards, of course, came to the New World in search for gold, but others were inspired to come with the desire to establish Catholicism in the New World. The earliest founders of missions on the Island were Francisca and the Dominican Fathers. Authorities say that it is beyond a doubt that the Catholic religion has influenced the general culture of Puerto Rico more than any other religion or cult. The Catholic Church is located in the most prominent place in the public "plaza" in every city, and it is a community-center of activity where all classes, races, ages, and sexes are brought together.

Dire poverty and want amidst breath-taking beauty—that is Puerto Rico, the island with over 500 people per square mile. Back in the mountainous rural areas, the Foreign Mission Board has projected a plan to establish a mission. The Young People's Union has undertaken to raise in this next year $2,500 to buy the land for the mission.

A large percentage of the rural people are baptized Catholics, although they have followed the custom of visiting the church only two or three times a year, attending only traditional festivals, which can also be said of many urban dwellers. Even though there stands a Catholic cathedral at the end of each city plaza, it is hardly accessible to thousands living in the hills. There are very few Catholic churches in the rural areas. Although the rural man may say he is a nominal Catholic, the church is seldom visited, if ever.

The Protestant Church Comes in '98

May we briefly review the history of the Protestant Church on the Island. This may be a surprising statement to some readers, because many think of Puerto Rico as being Catholic and nothing else. A booklet entitled The Church of Puerto Rico's Dilemna, written by J. Merle Davis, contains some interesting facts and figures regarding the churches of the Island.

As mentioned above, here again we see typical examples of the opening of new missions. The Protestant Church came to Puerto Rico with the American occupation 1898. A small Anglican church was organized in Ponce, Puerto Rico, prior to that date, but the Spanish Government applied various restrictions, such as never to ring its bell, that services be in English only, etc. With American occupation came religious freedom. A Lutheran leader, Mr. Swenson, came to conduct services as early as 1898,and Dr. McCormic, a Baptist, came in 1899. That was the beginning of the Protestant Church on the Island. Among some others there are represented on the Island the Baptists. Lutherans, Disciples, Methodists, Presbyterians, United Brethren in Christ, Episcopalians, Seventh-Day Adventists, Pentecostals and, of course, some Mennonites by this time. The total Protestant membership in 1942 (the latest figures available to the writer) was estimated at 32,122. The population of the Island now is well over the two-million mark, so the reader can see even though the Protestant Church has had its missions for fifty years much remains to be done.

You may ask, "How many of the two million are loyal Catholics and believe and practice what the Catholic Church professes?" I don't know. I would say fully a million or maybe half again as many are really "unchurched" or are even familiar with the gospel of Jesus Christ, as we know it.

What Can Mennonites Do?

Now, is there a place for the Mennonites in Puerto Rico? You have seen that inspite of the fact that various Protestant groups have worked on the Island for years only a small portion of the small Island's large population has been reached. Space will not permit to discuss the many other needs of the people on the Island. There are thousands on the Island who do not get sufficient daily food, thousands who do not have a chance at making even a moderate living, and many who have physicial wounds or ailments, but no one to heal them. One can tell by the look on many faces that they have no purpose in life. It is right here where the Mennonites come in. They believe in helping their brothers in need with food for the body, helping them to opportunities to make at least a moderate living, helping them to heal their physicial wounds. They believe in the full Gospel of Jesus Christ that also is to be shared. This lack of purpose in life can only be filled in the fullest sense with that Gospel.

The Puerto Rican of the rural areas needs the assistance of a church that preaches the Gospel of love as made manifest to us through our Lord Jesus Christ. He also needs a group of men and women who have accepted this Christ as personal Saviour to live and work with them. They desire for those to come that will make real the Gospel they preach. They long for people who take seriously the portion of Jesus' Gospel, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."

A group of Puerto Rican seminary students with one of their professors requested that they be permitted to live and work with us at our Mennonite Central Committee La Plata Unit for one month, as a part of their seminary course. This was arranged for and seemed to be very fruitful experienc. At the close of the last meal several were called on to say a few words in parting. The Puerto Rican professor, in part, said, "The Protestant Church has been on the Island for fifty years. Your greatest contribution in your few years has been that you have taught us that religion is to be lived."

In summary, we say here is a small, but much overcrowded Island under the American flag with many of its people in need economically, morally, socially, physically, and spiritually. Above all, they need the Gospel of Christ in their hearts to bring forth a reason for living, a purpose in life and joy and peace only the Gospel can give. Who will share this with them? They need more Christ-loving people who are willing to give their time to minister to their many needs.

If you are around twenty years of age and would enjoy corresponding with someone in Germany about your age, write to Helen Tieszen or O'Ray Graber, N. Newton, Kansas. They are in possession of a "barage' 'of letters from Germany seeking American pen pals. Tell them your age, interests, and the sort of person to whom you would like to write.

Letters Looking for Friends

Do not only send them bread, send them letters as well. Such was the sentiment of Pastor Martin Niemoller's parting words when he returned to Germany from America a year and a half ago. Mennonite youth around the age of twenty have the opportunity to find a friend in Germany. There are many letters from Germany looking for a friend. Write Helen Tieszen or O'Ray Graber, North Newton, Kansas. They are ready to find a pen pal for you.

BOOK NOTES

A Handbook of Evangelism for Laymen, by Dawson C. Bryan, Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, price, 50 cents.

Here is the command companion to A Workable Plan of Evangelism, by the same author. With the same clarity it shows the layman—as the earlier book showed the minister—his part in the program that has been winning men, women, and youth to Christ and the Church in all parts of the country.

It offers simple, effective, and clear instructions on: (1) How to make a visit; (2) What to say and how to say it; (3) What not to say; (4) How to achieve results in: securing membership transfers, securing decisions for Christ, winning entire families.

Here in simple and direct language are described specific methods for a lay evangelistic program which has proved effective in thousands of churches, large and small, urban and rural. There are detailed instructions on how to proceed and examples to inspire every loyal churchman to greater efforts to expand the Kingdom.

Concerning the Draft Law

On Conscience and Conscription

By Hugh Hostetler, New York City

On August 23 I registered for the draft. More recently I filled out the general questionnaire and the special form for conscientious objectors. I stand, therefore, in company with those who feel the compromise involved in registration is not serious enough to jeopardize a possibly greater witness under complete exemption. By going to jail over this issue, one is—albeit unwillingly—allowing himself to be dragged out of the arena of life's give-and-take situations, with their inherently countless opportunities for public (or private) witness by word and deed to the pacifist position. Granted my stand is sustained by the draft board, I shall be free to choose my own witness, and my own alliances through which my testimony shall be given. This latter position, undoubtedly, contains less initial dramatic appeal. On the other hand, consider that any "normal" life that is not lived dramatically and zestfully is not in the tradition of Paul, Stephen, and Francis of Assisi.

Yet one cannot choose to live "on fire" with the Gospel message. Our spirits must be kindled to that point. No one will choose the rocky, uphill path of real Christian discipleship unless pricked so deeply by a conscience, wrought out of a profound understanding of God's redemptive purpose and love, that he must say, "I can do no other." This stirring to the inward depths of her members is the prime part of the prophetic function of the Church.

It would be pharisaical on the part of any church to dictate a cut-and-dried solution to the well-faceted problem of conscription and registration. Rather, the Church's job is so to mediate the Kingdom of God to her members that they are bound in spiritual agony until a path to follow is opened to them. Where the decision is made honestly and sincerely, may the Church rejoice in the path so chosen. May her strength and prayerful nurture follow her members, whether to prison, to the work of the world—or to military service.

Draft Classifications

The following classifications have been adopted under the Selective Service Act of 1948:

Class I-A: Available for military service.

Class I-A-O: Conscientious Objector to combatant service only.

Class I-C: Member of the armed forces, the Coast Guard, etc.

Class I-D: Member of reserves or student taking military training.

Class II-A Deferred because of civilian work other than agriculture.

Class II-C: Deferred because of employment in agriculture.

Class III-A: Deferred because of dependents.

Class IV-A: Veteran or sole surviving son.

Class IV-B: Official deferred by law.

Class IV-D: Minister or divinity student.

Class IV-E: Conscientious objector to all military service.

Class IV-F: Physically, mentally or morally unfit.

Class V-A: Over the age of liability for military service.

Each registrant will be classified in the lowest class for which he is determined to be eligible, with Class I-A considered the highest class and Class V-A the lowest (as in the above list.) Thus a registrant's claim as a conscientious objector (IV-E) will be given early consideration. If the local board decides the registrant is not eligible for Class IV-E, he is then considered for higher classes such as dependency deferment (II-A), occupational deferment (II-C or II-A), or actual military service. It seems, therefore, that if a young man accepts one of these higher classifications such as Class II-C without objection, his chance for securing a Class IV-E later (in case he later becomes ineligible for the II-C or other deferment) may be seriously jeopardized. It is important, therefore, that nonresistant young men request, and if necessary appeal for, a IV-E classification at the outset.

Alternative Service for the C. O.

The recently enacted draft law has challenged many young people anew to consider service sponsored by the church. Numerous inquiries have been received from ministers and young people regarding service opportunities sponsored by the Church, open to young people who wish to volunteer. An informational folder is being prepared and copies will be sent to the pastor of each congregation by about October 15, outlining in considerable detail the present opportunities and application procedure. Additional copies may be secured from the Akron office.

Voluntary Service Personnel

Recently appointed have been Mr. and Ernest E. Yoder of Fisherville, Virginia, for service at Brook Lane Farm; Laura Metzler, of North Lima, Ohio, and Marjorie Yoder, of West Liberty, Ohio, for service at Gulfport, Mississippi; Mary Falk, of Steinbach, Manitoba, for service in Mexico; and Orrville Shoemaker, of Dakota, Illinois, to serve as leader at Richmond.

Service Opportunities

Present specific needs for personnel include a head cook for Brook Lane Farm, a nurse for Gulfport who is interested in doing public health work, a mature, German-speaking nurse to serve in Mexico and a man to serve in Mexico as electrician, maintenance man, ambulance driver, etc.

There are several openings for persons to serve in mental hospital units in occupational therapy work. This work consists of directing such activities as reading, sewing, painting, and other types of work and recreation. No previous experience is required. Write Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Penna.

What College Has Meant to Me

The testimony of a Bluffton student about Christian college expierence.

By Helen Bohn, Senior, Bluffton College

Obviously, you might say it means an education. At least I hope that it is obvious. I admit there are some who spend the required number of years in college and even then seem to leave without one. I presume, though, you are the studious, ambitious type— just aching for classes to begin.

To me, college has meant more than simply an education. If that was all it meant, I and you too, might have gone to one of the more popular state schools where they have a football team that actually wins one or two of its games in a season. Instead, we chose Bluffton. Bluffton offers to its students something more than just an education in liberal arts, and something which to me is even more important. Bluffton gives its students a Christian philosophy of Life. That should not be hard to understand. Bluffton is a Christian college. You have, undoubtely, heard that said several times. That does not mean, however, that the content of the courses here is going to be any different from those of a state school. I admit there are some courses such as philosophy and history which can be taught either pro-Christian or anti-Christian; there is no specific Christian chemistry as distinguished from chemistry in general. Neither are any of the languages either Christian or non-Christian. The difference lies in that the professors of a Christian college, such as Bluffton not only attempt to impart knowledge to their students, but along with that they exert over them a Christian influence. Those of you who will be studying chemistry this fall, will find that Professor Berky has a way of making you understand that the earth didn't just happen to fall together in a certain way but that the great Creator planned it that way. It is just little incidents like these, both in the classroom and in outside organizations and activities, which have combined to give one a Christian philosophy of life. I have found through my college years that Christianity is a part of every phase of life. It is not a way of life among a number of equal ways, but it is the way of life—life itself. I have found that to be a Christian means to serve and that it demands everything we have.

To me, college has meant a place where I can develop whatever talents or interests I may have so that I will be better equipped to serve. It has meant a place where I have received a clearer vision of what I am to do with my life and of the happiness which comes through service. More important still, it has been a place where I have learned to know God better.

Kenneth Latourette give us the following definition of a Christian college. He says it is "a community bound together by a common faith in Christ and seeking to prepare its members to serve their day and generation according to the will of God and in the spirit of Christ." This can certainly be said to be true of Bluffton, and I am sure you will find it that way.

College has been for me a source of inspiration. I have learned to appreciate more than ever what the great Christian martyrs of centuries ago underwent in order to preserve for us our great Mennonite heritage. Too often we take our heritage for granted. Did you ever stop to think that if it wasn't Menno Simons, you might not even be? At least you wouldn't be here. College has inspired me to be one of the many who will help to carry on this great work which was started for us by our ancestors. I would like to be able to say that I have helped in some way to bring about Christ's kingdom here on earth.

The third stanza of our "Alma Mater" expresses very clearly what college has meant to me and what I am sure it will mean to you:

Noble thoughts and high deals,
Noble thoughts and high ideals,
Friendships dear we owe to thee.
Clearer vision thou dost give us,
And thy truth shall make us free.

In short, college has given me a Christian outlook and philosophy of life.

Reformation Sunday

October 31

The Unique Mission of the Mennonite Church

by Paul Shelly

On October 31st the Church celebrates Reformation Sunday in commemoration of the ninety-five theses against the sale of indulgences that Martin Luther nailed on the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg These indulgences permitted the people in the established Church to buy forgiveness of sins.

All Protestant churches unite with the Lutheran Church in the celebration of this day which marks the beginning of the Reformation movement. It is well for us to consider three basic principles which were a part of the total Reformation movement and which form our common protestant heritage.

BEYOND OUR OWN

NEW YORK CITY, — The American Bible Society seeks to increase its normal distribution of Scriptures by 1,750,000 Bibles, 2,750,000 Testaments, and 5,500,000 Gospels annually for the next five years, Dr. Eric M. North, executive secretary, announced here today.

He said the step-up in Scripture circulation would be required to meet the Bible Society's share in a five-year expansion program of overseas mission work, being sponsored by the Foreign Mission Conference, through its 108 Christian foreign mission boards of the United States and Canada.

Principal areas to receive the increased supply of Scriptures include Latin America, China, the Philippines, and Japan.

Figures show that the whole Bible has been translated in 185 languages, and some sections of the Bible into 905 more languages. Approximately 30,000,000 Bibles and Biblical portions are sold or distributed free each year throughout the world.

OMAHA, NEBRASKA—On May 24, 1946 a church was organized here under the name of United Mennonite Church. This was especially for the purpose of having a local Mennonite church for the students and workers of the Grace Bible Institute who represent many branches of the Mennonites. On September 12, 1948, Rev. J. J. Esau was installed as the regular pastor.

WASHINGTON D. C.—"Conscription News" calls attention to the following developments: the Army plans new drive for Universal Military Training: recruiting indicates draft not needed; Infantry Journal carries argument against Universal Military Training; World War II Brigadier General opposes Universal Military Training.

ITALY.—Immigration is causing the Waldensian church, oldest Protestant denomination, severe losses. This movement, which is chiefly in the direction of Argentina and Uruguay, has reduced the number of Waldensians in Italy to 15,000 from a pre-war figure of 21,000.

CHICAGO.—A father was forbidden by a court order to let his son read any more comic books or attend ganster movies.

HOLLYWOOD.—Believe it or not there is a Hollywood film producer who prays at the beginning of each day's work. Rev. James K. Friedrich producer of Cathedral Films, who spends around $15,000 to produce a thirty minute film, is the man. His purpose: "for the sole purpose of presenting the message of the Bible to a larger audience in a manner worthy of our Twentieth Century environment."

SOMETIMES A DAY COUNTS FOR YEARS, decades, and even centuries. When a nation approaches election day, there is always that feeling involved in crisis, that the course of the years is wrapped up in one day's decisions. When Kansas faces so fundamental a moral choice as the repeal of prohibition, there is inevitable concern on the part of God-fearing people for the thousands of impressionable lives that will be affected for evil if this wickedness is turned loose. One day will stand for blessings or ruin for thousands. As voters-enter the poll, they should remember the decision of the true heroes of world history—of an Abraham whose decisions meant blessing for all time, of a Joseph who took prison and saved a race, of a Moses who obeyed the call of God and set the pattern of a nation, and of the Lord Jesus Christ the Son of God who in the Garden cast his final decision to die for sinful man providing redemption for all mankind. Election day will find men and women standing on such the terrible, but opportune and holy ground of decision once more. The laws of God, not personal opinion, must be the guide in the polls if this day is to count for months and years of blessings.—J.J.E.

EVANGELISM IS URGENT. "As we have studied evangelism in its ecumenical setting we have been burdened by a sense of urgency. We have recaptured something of the urgency of the apostolic age, when the believers 'went everywhere preaching the word.' If the gospel is so important, it seems intolerable that any human being now in the world should live out his life without ever having the chance to hear and receive it.

"It is not within the power of men to create a new evangelistic movement. But the Holy Spirit is still at work. In the past he has from time to time quickened the church with power from on high. It is our earnest hope and prayer that he will do a mighty work in our day, giving the church again wisdom and power rightly to proclaim the good news of Jesus Christ to men. We have tried to dedicate ourselves afresh to the service of the gospel. We are bold to call our fellow Christians to share with us the venture of taking seriously the command of Christ to make that gospel known to the ends of the earth, of doing whatever he shows to be his will, and of speaking boldly in his name. God does not wait for us to be perfect; he is willing to use very imperfect instruments. What matters is that the instruments should be available for his use. The results of our efforts are not in our hands but in his. But he has given us the assurance that 'it is required in stewards that man be found faithful,' and that where that faithfulness is found, he is able 'to do exceeding abundantly, above all that we ask of think'."—From the report of the First Assembly, World Council of Churches.

THE DUTCH are a stubborn people, and they do not easily forget wrong done them. Since the war they have made no secret of their continuing resentment against Germany for its unprovoked attack of 1940, for the bombing of Rotterdam and other cities, for the treachery with which Hitler's troops fought and won the brief battle for Holland, for German subversion of many Dutch people and for the long and bitter tyranny of occupation. Accordingly, many of the German delegates to the Amsterdam Assembly of the World Council approached the border with some apprehension. They need not have worried. A large number of them were billeted in Dutch homes, and they were treated as honored guests. When they left most were loaded with gifts of food, clothing, and books to take back to Germany. Dr. Martin Niemoeller addressed a large meeting of young people of the Dutch Reformed Church. He spoke in German, which has been taboo in Holland since the occupation. He was the first to attempt to use the language in a public address since the war, and the first German to speak to a public meeting. When the 10,000 present rose to their feet in prolonged applause as he walked on the stage, both German and Dutch realized, as no other people who have not stood in their circumstances can possibly do, that forgiveness is a Christian principle of great power. One Amsterdam delegate was billeted in the home of a Dutch family which came very close to starvation during the final months of the occupation. It is now entertaining three children of a destitute German family. The German children were brought from the Ruhr to enjoy for a little while the comparatively abundant food of Holland. Not the least important result of Amsterdam was its achievement of reconciliation between churchmen of countries which only yesterday were enemies. —reprinted from The Christian Century.

Our General Conference President Speaks

Another goal to set before us is a renewed emphasis on EVANGELISM in our midst and in ourselves. Our unsaved neighbors are as mportant as the far-away heathen.

We need to win people for Christ one by one in our daily personal contacts. Religion must be shown to be practical and workable in our strange world. Our churches should be more deeply concerned in bearing true witness to our Lord. Definite training and assignments should be worked out for practical home evangelism. (quoted for General Conference Month of Evangelism during November from Rev. J. N. Smucker's address to General Conference Council of Boards Meeting, February 1948.)

District Conference Plans For Budget

The Western District Conference held at North Newton, Oct. 13-14, was a good conference. Fine weather encouraged people to attend and the attendance was good. A spirit of Christian fellowship and appreciation prevaded the meetings. The conference gave evidence of a progressive leadership. The Executive Committee recommended that in the future a Budget Committee appointed for this purpose be charged with the task of presenting to the conference a budget for the total work of the conference. The committee recommended further that a conference treasurer be elected who is to receive money for all committees. Such steps would help to unify our work. The implementation of this plan requires a change in the conference constitution and will therefore have to wait till another conference session.

Corps of Home Mission Workers Report

The Home Mission Committee report was very encouraging. Each one of the home mission workers shared with the conference an encouraging experience of the year. What they said gave evidence that they are faithfully at work and that their congregations are working with them.

Educational Work Progresses

The report of the Education Committee revealed that much guidance and help is being given to the young people. The fact that both the Oklahoma Retreat and the Kansas Retreat now own their own camp grounds bears evidence that the young people have a real interest in things spiritual. The insistance of the Sunday School leadership that not mere discussion but real teaching of Bible materials should characterize our Sunday School work is another evidence that high goals are set in our teaching ministry.

Rev. Ronald von Riesen's report on the work of the General Conference Curriculum Committee brought to our attention the tremendous work which has been undertaken in preparing teaching materials for the young people. The Mennonite Biblical Seminary and Bethel College are contributing richly to the total Christian life in the conference. The goals they set out to attain are above the ordinary and bear evidence of divine guidance and much prayer. Bible schools, Oklahoma Bible Academy and the Berean Academy, also make a very vital contribution in guiding young lives into Christian service.

Peace Committee Active

The Peace Committee gave very helpful guidance in making the peace testimony, suggesting ways of preserving our historic peace testimony and keeping before us the dangers that threaten true Christian life. Through its leadership the Conference also has taken a definite stand against the repeal of Kansas prohibition laws.

Program Notes

The spiritual fellowship of the Conference was greatly enriched by the scholarly messages of Rev. Don Smucker of the Mennonite Biblical Seminary. The Conference was pervaded by a spirit of mutual trust and Christian love and concern. The Spirit of Christ was there and the Lord Jesus Christ was glorified in many ways.

Officers Elected

Rev. Henry, Hege of Corn, Oklahoma, was reelected president. The vice-president, Rev. Henry Fransen, of Buhler, Kansas, and the secretary, Rev. Arnold Epp, of Burrton Kansas were also re-elected to their respective positions.

Times of Refreshing for Ministers

The ministers of the Central District Conference met together in four sessions October 6th and 7th at the Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Chicago for their annual retreat. The president of the Ministerial Association of the Conference, Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, pointed out in his opening remarks the purpose of the two-day gathering was three-fold: for fellowship, for worship, and for the receiving of something practical for their work.

The program was purposely planned to leave ample time for fellowship. The worship program was balanced. There was a series of devotional expositions of certain Psalms by respective ministers, and there was group singing of some of the great hymns of the church along with some special music. The practical offerings were in the form of instructive studies. Dr. A. E. Kreider brought a message on "Preaching from the Great Texts of the Bible." Rev. Marvin Dirks, teacher of Church music at the Seminary, gave a message on "the Selection of Good Hymns." There were several fruitful discussions on pastoral work such as the pastor's relation to his community and to his congregation; and the pastor's ministry to the erring. The Home Mission work of the Conference was also studied with an emphasis on possible new fields for service.

Besides sixteen ministers of the Conference, there were a number of faculty members, students, and friends in attendance. The ministers pooled their traveling expenses for the purpose of encouraging all the ministers of the Conference to attend these annual periods of refreshing.

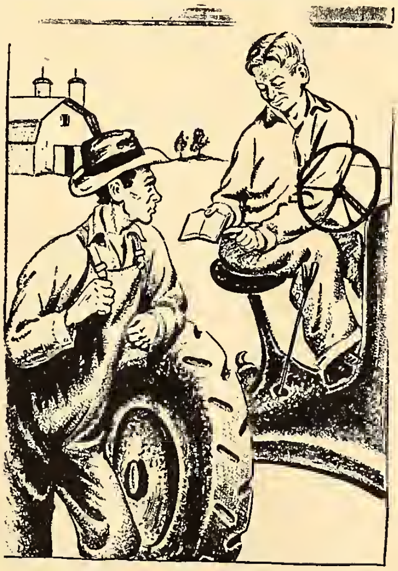
LLOYD L RAMSEYER

PLOWING FOR GOD

This young farmer is doing two jobs of plowing at once! With the tractor he is plowing up soil and preparing it for the seed that will produce life-giving grain. Through his witness by word of mouth and example of life he is plowing up the field of a man's conscience and preparing it for the seed of the Gospel which he himself, or another, will plant.

EVERY MAN WITH A LEGITIMATE CALLING HAS THIS SACRED ASPECT CONNECTED WITH HIS VOCATION. Jesus called the fishmen to become "fishers of men." He is calling salesmen who sell cars, washing machines, etc., to become salesmen of the Gospel. He is calling grocers who provide people with the bread of physical existence to provide people with the Bread of Life as well. He calls service station attendants who keep the cars moving along the highways to the task of lubricating the souls of men with peace-producing love. Christ calls school teachers to make good citizens for two kingdoms. When God calls men to do His work, more often than not, He calls them not to a different occupation but to higher conception of their present vocation or a higher application of the principles of their present calling.



Certainly if the Gospel is to spread to the ends of the earth and to penetrate to every nook and cranny of every land it will have to be by this method —EVERYONE A WITNESS ACCORDING TO HIS OWN CALLING. This method alone makes for coverage. This is the application of the Reformation idea of "the universal priesthood of the believers" to the missionary task. This method alone will assure the possibility of a vital personal contact in a very natural way minus the undue pressure of a professional approach. This way of presenting Christ makes for the highest efficiency in the spread of the Gospel because it makes use of the talents of every Christian, which, when each is doing his part will roll up a tidal wave of witness that will sweep the hearts of sinful men before it, bringing them up on the shores of the Kingdom. This manner of presenting the Good News is most efficient because it clothes the Gospel in the beauty of a rainbow of varied types of witnessing. It gives the Gospel the harmonious sound of a mighty symphony with each performer playing the Gospel refrain with his own particular instrument, thus wooing the sinner to God. The world has not been converted because it has heard an orchestra consisting only of violins or perhaps the trumpets, namely—ministers and missionaries. Let the world hear the full symphony!

This ought to lead to some sincere, heart-searching questions. Have you ever considered that in probably no other one aspect of your life do you witness or fail to witness as much as you do through the motives and actions by which you carry out your vocation? Have you asked God to reveal to you the best possible way by which you, in your circumstances, can be effective in winning people to Christ? Have you considered how you can best employ your individual talents to the advantage of the progress of the Gospel? Have you tried to see the various techniques you employ in your occupation transfigured into methods of reaching people for Christ?

Rise up, O men of God!
Have done with lesser things,
Give heart, and soul, and mind, and strength
To serve the King of Kings.

Rise up, O men of God!
The Church for you doth wait,
Her strength unequal to her task;
Rise up and make her great.

Visual Aids

FOR MONTH OF EVANGELISM

"REACHING FROM HEAVEN," a 16mm sound motion picture which, in the course of an hour and a half will impress every congregation with the grace of personal evangelism in action, is a Christian film which shows a loving God reaching down from heaven with comfort and help. This is a stimulating film which portrays Christian life in action and of which a prominent coast-to-coast commentator stated: "The world is crying for such movies today."

It is a challenging film with a great lesson: God uses ordinary people to accomplish His purposes in the lives of others.

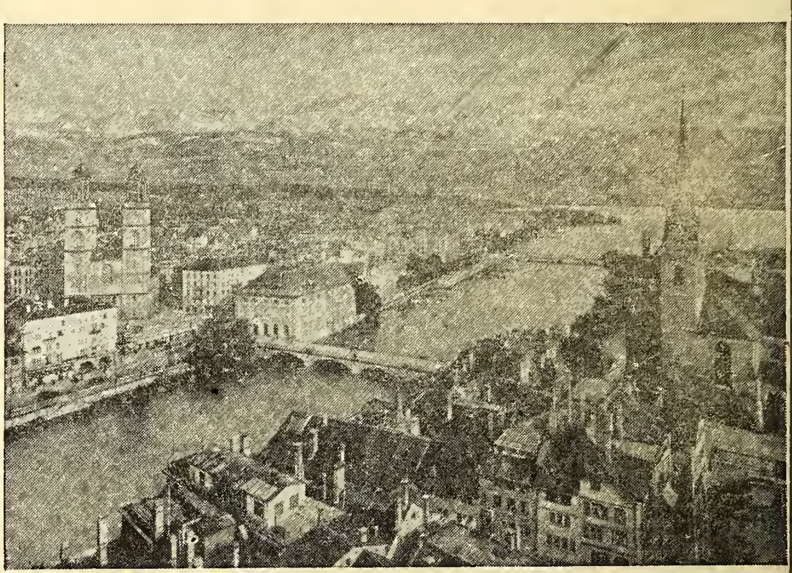
THE MISSION OF THE TOTAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH

1. The Reformation clearly taught that the Holy Scriptures are the sole authority for faith and life. Thus, the Bible became a book which had meaning for each individual member since it alone contained God's eternal message for the human heart, a message of forgiveness for the penitent sinner as well as a message of power for the redeemed child of God.

2. The Reformation also taught anew that we are justified by faith. The established Church had declared that one becomes a Christian by what he does. The Reformation reiterated the New Testament teaching that a person becomes a Christian through his own faith in God through Jesus Christ. He does not become a child of God by what he does but only by accepting with His total being God's plan of redemption.

3. The third great principle of the Reformation as a whole was the teaching of the priesthood of all believers. The church through the Reformation discovered again that a person need not have any earthly mediator through whom to come to God but that the way is open for each penitent heart to come directly to God through Jesus Christ; for, we are taught in His Word that Christ ever liveth to make intercession for us.

We should emphasize here that the Reformation did not teach any new doctrines but simply rediscovered these truths which were plainly and distinctly taught by Jesus Christ and the entire New Testament but which had been lost through the corruption and organization of the church through the centuries.



The Unique Mission of the Mennonite Church

The Mennonite Church does have a common heritage with the other Protestant churches but as we celebrate Reformation Sunday it will be well for us also to consider our unique mission as a Mennonite Church. Let me suggest four aspects of our unique mission which we do well to rediscover and apply to our churches and our individual lives in our day. It should be pointed out here too that these truths should not be followed because they are a part of our Mennonite heritage but rather because they are a part of the teaching of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

1. The Authority of the Bible. Jesus on a number of occasions said: "Ye have heard it said . . . . but I say unto you." Menno Simons also taught that all Scripture is inspired and that anything that is taught contrary to the teachings of the Scriptures as interpreted through Jesus Christ is false. There are a number of considerations in this area. One of them is that this part of our unique mission is basic. Unless the Bible is authoritative we have no permanent and authentic source for our Christian message. The other point that should be stated here is that the closer we stay to the Bible and the more we emphasize the fact that our distinctive doctrines and practices are Biblical truths the more we will be able to maintain them.

2. Baptism on Confession of Faith. We are taught in the Bible that he that believes and is baptized shall be saved. This same truth is clearly taught both in the teachings of Menno Simons and in the Ris Confession of Faith. On the surface there does not seem to be too much involved here. However, this truth means that we have believed that a person is not born into the church but he voluntarily accepts Christ as his own personal Savior and Redeemer from sin and that then baptism becomes an outward symbol of that inner experience. It has meant that at baptism those who accepted Christ knew that this act would mean living according to the teachings of Jesus in all areas of life. As the age for uniting with the churches has been lowered this aspect of our heritage is being threatened for when a person unites with the church too young he has not made his decision with the full comprehension of what it involves.

3. Living a Christian Life. We are told in I John 2:6 that if we claim to abide in Christ that we ought to walk even as he walked. Menno Simons reminds us that Christians ought to live a pious, unblamable life before all men. This was the Anabaptist vision! Our forefathers believed in the three cardinal principles of the Reformation. However, they also believed that these principles were incomplete unless those who claimed they were Christians bore fruit in daily living. They took the teachings of Christ seriously! This was not a new doctrine! The New Testament clearly teaches that a Christian is to live a different life from those around about him and that if he abides in Christ that he will bear fruit. Thus, Paul also mentions the fruit of the Spirit. We need to recapture this vision in our day! The Mennonites are not in any immediate danger of losing their orthodoxy of belief! They are in grave danger, though, of losing their orthodoxy of practice. We have reflected our world too much! We must again be witnesses and lights in our dark world.

4. Nonresistance and Love. We are taught both by Christ's life and by his teachings that we are to live a live of love which will manifest itself both in nonresistance and in positive goodness and compassion. Menno Simons and the Ris Confession also emphasize this same truth in a very clear manner. I have become convinced that our Christian experience and life is of little value unless we apply it to the area of life where it is tested. Our forefathers died because the state would not permit them to baptize adults. In New Testament times people died because they would not worship the emperor. Today the way of love is the part of our heritage that is being threatened in our own country and throughout the world. As we celebrate Reformation Sunday may we rise up with those who have gone before and be willing to live or die for our faith.

For Such a Time as This

In the Book of Esther Mordecai came to Esther with the challenge that perhaps she was brought to the Kingdom for just the particular task that he was explaining to her, the task of interceding in behalf of her people even though it meant her own death. She accepted the challenge!

I cannot help feeling that the Church of Jesus Christ has entered the world for a time like this. The forces of evil are certainly massed throughout the world and from a human point of view there is little hope. I think the message of this Reformation Sunday is to catch anew the vision that the Church does have an eternal message and will triumph in God's own time and way and that He has called us to be His ambassadors in this kind of a world.

The vision comes to me too that in a day when so much of Christendom has lost its witness on so many issues, including the issue of war, that it behooves the Mennonite Church to think through its unique mission. Perhaps we have come into the world for such a time as this! Certainly the message that is ours by heritage is the message the world needs! We have failed to live up to it! The Mennonite Church is at the crossroads. It can choose to lose more and more of the distinctiveness and simply become another church, or unite with another existing church, or it can recapture its unique mission and purify its life and be that "light" and "salt" and "leaven" which the true Church is told to be by whatever name it is called.

Into the Beyond

$7,000 Birthday Present

Bethel College Begins Sixty-first Year

North Newton—Sixtieth anniversary activities at Bethel College came to an end Tuesday evening, Oct. 12, with over 1,600 people viewing a pageant portray, ing the history and progress of the college. The anniversary collection taken that evening together with donations coming in after the event amounted to over $7,000.

Day of Reminiscing

Throughout the day a large number of friends toured the campus amidst a brilliant Indian Summer sun. Twenty-one people who had attended the laying of the cornerstone of the administration building 60 years ago were photographed. Everywhere there were small groups of pioneers reminiscing of the early beginnings of this great institution. The original tree-less campus with mud roads has grown to more than 20 permanent and as many temporary buildings, with beautiful shade trees, paved streets, and well-kept parks.

Day of Progress

Highlights of the day were the dedication of the Health Center, the cornerstone laying, and address by the governer of Kansas, and the Loyalty Dinner. Dr. H. R. Schmidt, college physican, Sister Lena Mae Smith, Mother Deaconess of the Newton Bethel Deaconess Hospital, and Dr. A. M. Lohrentz, member of the board of directors, formally opened the 10-bed student hospital. The Health Center is a project of doctors, dentists, and nurses.

In an impressive ceremony Rev. A. J. Dyck, president of the board of directors, placed the cornerstone of the new library. He was assisted by Rev. Arnold Funk of Hillsboro, and President Ed. G. Kaufman.

Day of Greetings

An unscheduled two-hour short wave radio hookup with South America brought greetings from Rev. Gerald Stucky, a Bethel alumni doing mission work in Columbia. Through the courtesy of the American Embassy Staff, Missionary Stucky was able to converse with Prof. N. Paul Stucky at Bethel.

Day of Challenge

The keynote of the day was struck with an address at the Loyalty Dinner by Rev. A. J. Penner, Holyoke, Mass., giving a brief for higher Christian education. He argued that secular education, separated from God, had led humanity to the brink of destruction, as evidenced by current events. He urged a return to fundamental principles of Christianity. Approximately 700 guests attended the banquet.

Through Our Windshield

Part IV. Seeing Him Who is Invisible

By S. T. Moyer

As we go about, sometimes our windshield is facing West, sometimes East. Sometimes it is facing North, sometimes South. Seven outstanding, maybe exceptional, instances of God's dealings we came upon. I have been in each home and each church referred to.

A God Who Pardons.

As we drove up the entrance, it did not look like a Mennonite farmyard. The place was unkempt. Baskets of old tins sat about the lawn, just outside the house. Doors hung on broken hinges.

Inside we talked for an hour. As we were ready to leave, a brief period of worship was conducted. The Word of God became His instrument.

> The heart for a harp is framed
> With its music never done!
> Else why from above,
> Should God in His unending Love,
> Send us His wondrous Son!
> Bally, Pennsylvania
> —Ralph W. Berky

This past middle aged farmer was completely undone. He knew he had sinned, and felt there was no escape from his sin. He feared loosing his mind. His wife's health had gone to pieces, because of the darkness that came over her husband's mind. They had discontinued going to church. Never have I heard such a wail of despair as he asked us, "Is there any hope for a sinner like me?"

Before we could leave, a second hour had passed. Scripture was made just as penetratingly persistent as the voice of Satan had been to him. But as we left, after two hours, that man was assured that God was a God of pardon. He came back to church. His wife and children came with him. Life took on a new meaning. He had seen Him Who is Invisible.

A God of Mercy.

Thirty years ago a certain young couple were special friends of ours. Just recently we visited them in their home when he told me this story. With another couple they were driving along the highway at night. Darkness had come over the icy roads. The car windows were heavily frosted. Suddenly, lights shone throught the frosted car windows to the left. My friend thought,— this must be a crossing with a car approaching. He stopped his car

Suddenly his wife realized that they had stopped on the tracks of the New York Central, and one of those new diesel powered engines was bearing down on them. She cried out. Her husband started the car. They had just moved off the tracks when the long heavy Cleveland-Chicago Express train shot past. Mercy? Grace is something God does for us, but mercy is that demonstration of His love whereby we are saved from just deserts according to normal law. How many times have you and I been saved by the mercy of a great God. Down across the centuries I hear the voice of Count Zinzendorf asking, "John, do you know the healing of His stripes? Have you tasted of His mercy?"

That same friend in that same parsonage that night told the story of his son. A C. E. outing was being arranged. The son had climbed to the top of a cliff, off the summit of which, at a drop of some six to eigh feet, was a small plateau. Down onto this he descended, expecting to hold himself by some sapling. But the plateau was covered with dew drenched moss. He slipped, the sapling gave way, down he fell sixty one feet. At the base of the cliff was another declivity, down which his body bounced another eighteen feet. At the bottom of this was a triangle of massive rocks and a tree stump.

Ordinarily human spines, and necks and vital organs cannot stand such a beating up. The boy landed not on the rocks, but in the midst of the triangle on sod. Nothing but the mercy of God saved him. And out of that great merciful act God is calling that youth, "Surrender your life to me." The young man is now a senior in college.

How often has God had to use such experiences to call you and me to Him, because our ears are too deaf, our hearts are too engaged in other things to hear His call in other ways. As Oswald Chambers says, "A crisis comes into our lives by God's permissive will, because we heed not the gentler ways of a merciful God."

Joe Koee had decided on C.P.S. He was assigned to a Government Work Camp, near the state Agricultural Experiment Farm. Thus he was reassigned to work in the experimental farm, and gained some very profitable experience at no cost to him with high bred cattle and pure bred poultry. But a case of hernia took him to the hospital. And a lovely nurse was assigned to his ward.

Of course the story cannot end there. Before love went too far, the guardians of the girl demanded that she have him visit her home when they were present. They were highly suspicious of C.P.S. men as unpatriotic or traitors. Things had gone just about far enough. They must have a show down.

The girl, a non-Mennonite, loyal to her lover, had him primed for what was coming. He came on the appointed night, thoroughly groomed, nearly six foot tall, heavy muscular, beaming, looking like a prince. The evening passed pleasantly; the folks were thoroughly taken aback. Never once did they question him on his stand as C.P.S. He got the girl. He was loyal to Him Who is Invisible.

Isaiah 41:10 was fulfilled, "Fear not, for I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee, I will help thee, yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Does not God always do thus? When we stand by what is right, He upholds us by His righteousness.

The God, Ever-Present

We visited the home of a mother in the East who had seen more than three score and ten years. All her children had left the home nest. Her husband had departed this life. As the years took their toll, and her youngest left that home, and she was all alone, there came over her a loneliness that was well nigh unbearable. She had brought up twelve children. Was there not one of them to stay with mother in her old age?

In her agony of soul she cried unto the Lord Whom she had known and served since her girlhood days. He heard. There came into her experience a sweet Presence, that changed her night into day. With fresh courage she faced the future, ever looking forward. Now, with more than four score years, her gentleness is a tremendous benediction. She knows within her home dwells Him Who is invisible.

The God of the Holy.

Mary Baytee was a high school senior, and very much a creature of the world. Born a natural leader, she was much in demand in all social functions. Dancing and the pleasure of the world held her soul captive. Her radio in her room blared forth the trash of a godless age. Many a night her home folks waited her return home with anxious hearts lest evenings of fun might ruin Mary's life. Oh yes, she was baptized and attended church. But she had all the claims upon her life, not Christ.

Then came the Menolan Retreat. After a Spirit-powered message, each high school retreater was challenged to write on a piece of paper some cherished plan which he or she considered outside the plan of God and cast it into the evening camp fire. God had spoken to Mary's heart. She hesitated, then acted. Soon the flames of fire darted out as her slip of paper was consumed with her worldly ambitions. When later a call was given for full dedication, she came through with a decision.

Not in long years did such a change come over any in her church as came over Mary Baytee. Her face changed. Her whole life was altered. She now gave a ringing testimony for Christ. Her face became radiantly joyful. Her radio in her room changed its music. A holy God had laid hold of her life. She had caught an all consuming vision for Him Who is invisible. She had come to realize that Consecration is not giving anything to God but is taking our hands off that which belongs to Him.

A God of Power

We came to the Lincoln Memorial, Washington, D. C. Night had descended upon the Capitol City. We were surprised at first to find nothing there but a statue of Lincoln, and two brief messages cut into stone. But we were soon to learn that the massive Memorial possesses a spirit of power and simplicity which was all pervading.

We were amazed when we read the Second Inaugural Message cut into the wall facing on our right. So much of so-called Christian literature makes so little mention of God and makes so little use of His written Word. In contrast, in a few brief lines, Lincoln speaks of God maybe half a dozen times, and (if memory has played no tricks) he had quoted Holy Writ in from twenty to forty percent of the total message. We were deeply stirred as we left that memorial, and could not help but be convinced that Abraham Lincoln endured as seeing Him Who is Invisible.

Why is it that professing Christians, in their written and spoken speech, so seldom mention God or His gifts, refrain from referring to His written word, while here was one, engaged in tremendous social changes and political and administrative problems was saturated with both God and His Word?

The Mennonite church owes its origin to experienc-

■ URGENT APPEAL ■

The MCC has finally succeeded in its efforts to help the East Prussian Mennonite refugees, long interned in camps in Denmark, to find a new home in South America. They left for South America on October 7th on the S S "Vollendam" together with another group of some 800 Russian Mennonite refugees. Some 3,000 displaced Mennonites have already found a new home and opportunity in Canada, with perhaps 2,000 more to follow. It is expected that some 1,200 or more eligible refugees will find entrance into the United States. According to present plans and prospects this moving of refugee Mennonites will come to a close in a few months.

General Conference Share $60,000

In order to move these people and help them get started in their new homes, the MCC needs urgently and immediately $200,000 or more. Our General Conference share of this is at least $60,000.

Offerings Are Down

Our people have supported the work of relief and resettlement generously, but in this past year offerings have fallen off considerably. The war is over, but hunger goes on. The war is over, but the homeless are still anxious with worry and suffering. "I was hungry, athirst, a stranger, naked, sick, in prison—" said Jesus. What do we want Him to say we did about it?

Gifts and Loans Solicited

Charity gifts, therefore, are still urgently needed. But it occurred to the Relief Board that greater emphasis might be placed on loans as a means of meeting this emergency confronting us. There should be many people in our churches who would be willing to invest money in Mennonite causes.

The MCC has provision whereby people can loan to the resettlement program sums of $50, $100, and larger amounts for ten-year periods at 2¼% interest. These loans should be as secure as the security of the Mennonite church itself. The MCC issues certificates of indebtedness to the lender.

Action Needed Now

We would entreat you to give this request immediate and wide publicity in your church and urge especially that loans are needed. In order to get immediate results it may require active promotion and solicitation. We trust you will take such measures as will be effective.

Please send funds to the Treasurer of the General Conference, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas. Indicate clearly whether they are loans to the resettlement program and give the name, address, and sum loaned of each individual lender.

RELIEF NOTES

Volendam Sails Again

Another milestone in Mennonite refugee migration was reached on October 7 when the Volendam departed from Bremerhaven with a total of 1,678 Mennonite refugees on board — including 561 men, 623 women and 394 children. Of these, 700 are Danzig Mennonites who will settle in Uruguay, and the remaining are Russian Mennonites who will join the settlements in Paraguay.

Peter and Elfrieda Dyck are accompanying this refugee group as they make the ocean voyage to Buenos Aires. In addition to the Mennonite passengers on the Volendam, 115 Hutterites are being helped to new homes in South America under the sponsorship of the International Refugee Organization.

The Relief Program in Brief

As of September 24 there were 259 relief workers abroad, serving in the following nineteen countries. Paraguay, Brazil, Puerto Rico, China, Japan the Philippines, India-Pakistan, Sumatra, Ethiopia, Holland, Denmark, France, Hungary, Beligum, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Poland, and Austria. Of these the countries in which Mennonite relief can do the greatest good seem to be China, Germany, and Paraguay. Therefore the emphasis of relief effort this year centers in these areas.

Relief Shipments.

During September the following shipments, having total value of $66,418.76 left port: To Paraguay 23 tons used tools and utensils, 4 tons Christmas Bundles, 11 tons aluminum roofing, 4 Farmall M. tractors, 8 tons miscellaneous items. To Belgium ¾ ton clothing. To French Zone Germany 12½ tons mixed food. To British Zone Germany 12½ tons mixed food To Sumatra 8 tons clothing.

Relief and Service Personnel

Oliver and Mary Ellen Stuckey of Manitou Springs, Colorado left on October 1 for Puerto Rico. Paul and Ellen Peachey of Springs, Pennsylvania, left on October 6 for a second term of relief service in Europe. Margaret Janzen has transferred from the Italy Unit to Gronau, Germany. Welma Graber Nelson has transferred from the Italy Unit to Holland. Orlo and Helen Goering returned from France on October 4. Ruth Hilty returned from Europe on October 5.

ing God a God of pardon (in the church meeting, in the home, not through priest or pope); a God of mercy (in giving unmerited, land in Penn., Ind., Kans., the Dakotas); a God of the Holy (separated life), a God of power and reward, that when they stood by their convictions based on His word, He was their reward. They so knew Him and His Word that their writings resound with both. They were conscious of His hourly presence and His Word was on their lips.

Will the Mennonites of the future endure, seeing Him Who is Invisible?

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The faculty held a discussion meeting the evening of October 15 on the subject, "Avenues for the College in Religious Community Work." Monthly meetings are held to discuss religious problems of the College. Weekly prayer services are also held each Monday morning. A minister's conference will be held in connection with the Bible Lectures. Topics to be discussed include the Christian nurture of older young people, methods of lay visitation, and the attitude of the ministry toward certain pressing current problems. Dr. O. R. Yoder, medical superintendent of the Ypsilanti State Hospital will lead a half day discussion on "Psychotherapy and Religion." There will also be a women's conference at the same time with the general theme, "Developing Missionary Leadership." Topics include the need for missionary leadership, developing missionary leadership in the home church, and missionary leadership on the foreign field. The conferences will be held November 17, 19. The YMCA discussed the nature of man from both the Christian and the psychological standpoints at a meeting held October 13. Miss Mary Elizabeth Amstutz, recently returned from two years work with the MCC in India will speak in a Vesper service October 24.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The boy's octet has been much in demand and has filled several singing engagements recently. The a cappella choir sang for the first time this year in public at the Sunday School Convention held by the Mennonite churches west of Freeman on October 10.

Tickets for the community concert series have been placed on sale. Numbers included in this season's entertainment course are: Frances Gilman Miller, harpist; Howard Pierce Davis, lecturer; The Ambassadors of Song, Men's Octet; Frank Guariera, Baritone; and as a mid-season special number the combined music, art, and dramatics departments of our school will present the operetta, PINAFORE. Tickets for the the series are $3.60.

For students at Freeman Junior College it is goodbye to school for one week of corn-picking vacation extending from October 15-25.

The school wishes to acknowledge the gift of the senior class of 1948. The Venetian blinds add much to the general attractiveness of the library.

ROSTHERN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The annual school event of the Gabentag (Gift Day) found many parents on the campus. Besides bringing their sons and daughters to school and seeing them placed, they brought a suitable gift to serve for the maintenance of the school or to increase the stock in the larder.

On the opening day approximately 110 students registered. This number has now grown to 128 with several more expected to come later. The majority of the students come from Saskatchewan with a good representation from the larger settlements in this province. About 30 students come from Alberta and one from British Columbia. The first day of school was fittingly opened with the entire school board present. The welcome address, which was given by Rev. J. J. Thiessen of Saskatoon, encouraged the students to continue uprightly on the way that they had chosen. Rev. J. G. Rempel than extended a courteous invitation to the students to make the Rosthern Mennonite church their place of worship while attending College. These warm words of welcome cheered the hearts of all of us and especially those who for the first time found themselves away from their home.

During the first two weeks the various committees dealing with extracurricular work were organized. The Student Christian Volunteers are again active and making plans for full-time work in this service. The sports committee is enthusiastically providing for ways and means to get organized sports operating. The literary committee is functioning too and will present the students with entertainment during the year.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

The major event of the week was the meeting of the Seminary Excutive Committee, composed of A. S. Rosenberger, Quakertown, Pa., President of the Seminary Board, J. N. Smucker, Bluffton, Ohio, E. N. Baumgartner, Berne, Indiana, and R. L. Hartzler, of Bloomington, Illinois. Among the matters brought to light during the meeting of the Board are the following: The report of the President showed twenty-six students enrolled, a distinct increase over last year when the year began with nineteen students. Notable also was the proportion of older men and women of experience in church work. Total population of the seminary family, including other student residents and children, was 89 of whom 81 reside in the Seminary buildings. Six students are engaged as student pastors, six in deputation or other special work, and the balance have Sunday school or Week Day Church School or settlement work. The treasurer's report showed the net worth of the Seminary on September 30 as $110,000 as compared with $92,000 on June 1st, or $66,000 one year previous to that date. Other matters were considered, such as faculty additions, field work, and the use of memorial gifts, but on these no announcement is ready at present. The Seminary deeply appreciates the constant effort required to make a Christian institution function effectively for the glory of God and the service of His people.

October 16. Truman's proposal to send Chief Justice Vinson to Moscow is considered an awful blunder in nearly all quarters. Vinson, it is claimed, knows little about Russia or how to deal with the Russians and his direct discussions with Stalin would cut ground out from under Secretary of State Marshall and bypass the U. N.

Truman is accused of acting like Wallace to get Wallace votes. Marshall threatened to resign if Vinson went to Moscow. Even folks who talk about the career diplomats keeping the Russian and the American peoples from coming together share the general reaction.

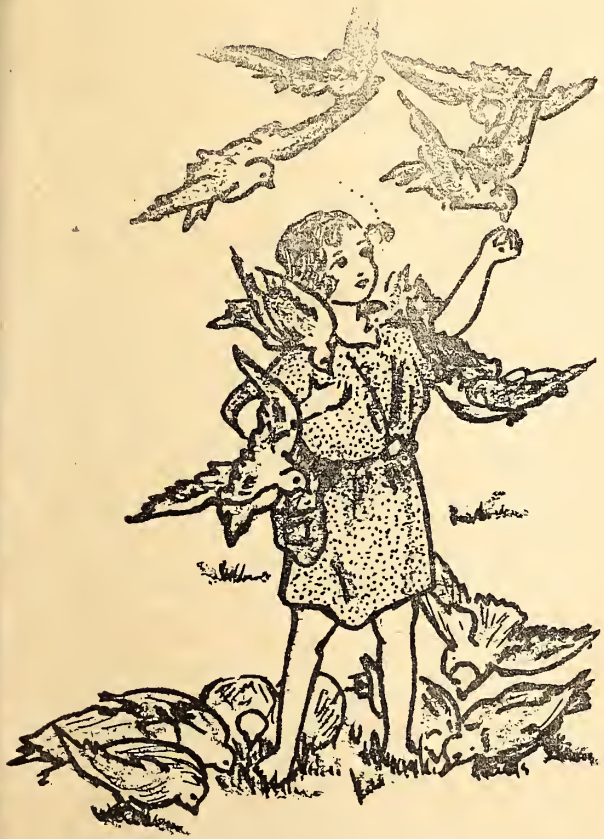
A Vocation for John

By Lois Snelling

John Audubon's father wanted him to be an engineer. He loved birds and wanted to be a naturalist.



John sat down on a stone and opened the box which had contained his lunch. It mid-afternoon now, and the lunch had long since been eaten. But packed carefully inside the box was a collection of treasures that the boy was taking home with him. A round, smooth stone he had picked up in a dry creek-bed, a leaf that he wished to identify, the mummified shell of a black beetle, a long feather from the wing of a moulting blackbird.

"Plenty of room," he thought contentedly, setting a nest of dry grass and lichens in the box. "Mother understands me so well. She knows I have a big appetite, so she always packs a big box of food. And she knows just what I like in food and amusement and everything."

He fingered the nest reflectively. "I'm almost certain it belonged to an indigo bunting. When I was out here in May, I saw a pair of the beautiful creatures fussing around the hawthorne bush where I found the nest. I wish I had one of their blue eggs to put in it."

Closing the box, John Audubon tucked it under his arm and started towards home. All of a sudden he realized that he should have been there long ago. In fact, he should have not have come to the woods today at all. He should have gone to school.

His mouth twisted wryly at the thought. "I dislike school!" he told himself emphatically. "I'm sorry, since Father wants me to be properly educated. But I can't help it if I don't like the schoolroom. I really do try! Of course," and he sighed gloomily, "I suppose I could help playing truant if I tried hard enough. It will be rather unpleasant for me if Father should arrive home while I am away."

He quickened his step. All of the happiness he had experienced during the day was swallowed up in his feeling of guilt and apprehension. He could see the scene in his mind's eye, should his father be at home. He would walk into the house, tired and dirty, his box of specimens under his arm. Rosa would laugh at him, tease him and ask if he were ready for Father's examination. ("Which I certainly am not!") His stepmother would look worried, hover about protestingly, and defend him against any criticisms that might be made. ("And there is room for plenty!") His father would speak sternly, look at him with disappointment in his eyes, and probably suggest a change of schools. ("And I don't want any school at all!") After dinner his father would go into the drawing room and review Rosa and him in their studies. Rosa would go first, and give a perfect performance. Then—

John refused to allow his thoughts to follow his own entrance into the drawing room. Those examinations by his father were always painful. They were never a credit to Captain Jean Audubon's son, and the one which John was now anticipating would be no different from those of the past.

"It's too bad," John thought regretfully, as he turned into his own street. "I love my father dearly, and he loves me. He is away from Nantes most of the time with his merchant ships and when he does come home, his visits are always spoiled because I am not a good scholar! It wasn't like this when I was small—too small to go to school! I went with Father on his voyages. Oh, the beautiful, big, clipper ships sailing far away! There was Santo Domingo, where I was born—New Orleans—America's Atlantic Coast! America—how I would love to go to America again. A great, wild, unsettled country. And there are birds, hundreds of birds which are unknown in France! I have read about them, and I want to see them, hear them sing, draw pictures of them. Carolina wrens, Baltimore orioles, titlarks, towhees . . . ."

As he approached his own home, he saw a carriage drive away from the door.

"Father has come," he whispered, thinking of the examination after dinner.

That night John sat alone in his room, dejected and ashamed. Everything had turned out just as he had known it would. His sister had gone into the drawing room to show Captain Audubon how well she had progressed in her studies since his last visit. She played a selection on the piano, read aloud from a book of fables, and recited the arithmetic tables. The captain was very much pleased and praised Rosa for her excellent performance.

Then it was John's turn. To each of the questions asked him he had given the wrong answer, or was unable to give any answer at all. His father was very angry.

His father said bridges, John said birds. The conflict between father and son over a vocation.

"You are a bright boy, John," he exclaimed. "Why do you never learn your lessons?"

"I can't seem to keep my mind on them, Father," John replied miserably.

"But you must keep your mind on them, my son! Do you think you will ever become a capable engineer if you never apply yourself to the studies that engineering requires?"

John was on the point of saying, "But I don't want to be an engineer!" But he thought better of it, and remained silent. He had tried on previous occasions to explain to his father how he felt about mathematics and his other school textbooks, but the explanations always seemed a little lame. It always appeared as though he were only a sluggard, too lazy to study, too lacking in ambition to wish to prepare himself for a useful vocation. But really it wasn't that way at all. Why, a lazy person would never choose to tramp all day in the fields and woods along the Loire, as he did! And as for study, did he not often sit up half the night trying to identfy some plant or insect from a reference book? Or work day after day to improve a drawing he had made of some bird?

John was annoyed when he heard Rosa's footsteps on the stair. He loved his sister, but he did not like her teasing. Rosa always did things well, while his efforts ended in failure. No wonder their father praised her and scolded him!

"May I come in, John?"

"Yes, if you won't mention my examination."

Rose came in and sat down on John's bed.

"I have to sit on the bed," she laughed "because there is no room anywhere else. John, how do you get around in here? It looks like a museum. Bird pictures on the walls. Birds' nests on the floor and table and chairs. Eggs in the washbowl. Flowers in your drinking glass. Dried seed everywhere."

"I like it this way," John replied quietly. "It looks a little messy, of course, for a bedroom. But I have all of the specimens in good order, and properly labeled. All except the things I found today. Look, Rosa—an indigo bunting's nest!" And he carefully lifted the nest of his sister's inspection.

"It looks like all the others to me," Rosa said. "But Mother will pretend to see something wonderful about it. She spoils you, John. I heard Father telling her so, when he learned that you were not in school today."

"She understands me," John cried defensively, "and the things I like! You and Father don't. Can't you see, Rosa, that there is something for everybody in this world to do—something especially for them? Father is splendid as a merchant. Our stepmother is wonderful as a housekeeper and mother to us. I might be successful as—"

"As what?" Rosa prompted, smiling. "An engineer?"

"No! I have no talents for egineering I should be a—well,I suppose you'd call it a naturalist."

Rosa became suddenly serious. "John," she said, "forgive me for teasing you so much. I don't mean to be unkind. And I am very sorry about what is going to happen to you."

John's eyes grew big as he stared at her. "W-what is going to happen to me?"

"I heard Father telling Mother. You are going to a new school in Paris."

John's heart sank like lead, and he gave a little cry of dismay.

"Not Paris!"

"Yes, and you are to start in the morning. Father thinks it is for your own good, John. He is ambitous for you. Away from the country, where you can put your mind on your books, he thinks you will do better in school."

John did not sleep that night. Lying still and miserable in the darkness, he thought of Paris. A great throbbing city, filled with hurrying, hustling people. Hard, stony streets, where no sprig of grass would ever show. Miles and miles of houses.

"No open fields," he thought wistfully, "no woods, no Loire!" He sobbed a little, as he thought of life without the birds and animals which he had so loved at Nantes.

In Paris, John settled down with a determination to please his father with his schoolwork.

"He wants me to follow engineering," he reflected. "Well, perhaps if I tried hard enough I might become an engineer. I doubt it, but I might. And if I did— there is America. A vast, new country would be in need of engineers. And there would be an opportunity to study the bird life of the United States. I would get a horse and ride—"

And present John Audubon, the engineer, would be completely absorbed by John Aububon, the naturalist. Jacques, or some other of his schoolmates would call out, "What are you dreaming about, John?" before the engineer came back to life again.

John would then shrug his shoulders, as if to shake off his wistful reveries, and pick up one of his textbooks.

But in spite of his efforts and good intentions, John found that his school grades in Paris were no better than they had been in Nantes. On his father's infrequent visits he made no better impression than he had back at home.

"You spend too much time in drawing," Jacques reminded him. "Those sketches will never get you a diploma."

"I suppose not," John agreed sadly. "But I enjoy making them. Drawing pictures of birds helps to make up for never seeing them. What do you think of this song sparrow that I did from memory, Jacques?"

Jacques squinted critically at the canvas the boy was working on.

"Is it a song sparrow?" he grinned. "Well, at least, it resembles a bird considerably more than the nighthawk you drew last week."

John ignored the good-natured ridicule, as he always did. His schoolmates teased him about his class-failures, his love of the outdoors, and his constant drawing, just as Rosa used to do. But John knew that he had a real talent for drawing and painting, and that each picture he made was a little better than the last one. With some instruction from a master, he would become a real artist!

"I'll take lessons someday," he now remarked, as he bent over his canvas. Then he abruptly asked, "Jacques, were you ever in America?"

"No, but my older brother was. He says it is a wonderful country. Fine cities, like Washington, Boston, New York—"

"I wasn't thinking of cities. I was thinking of the big forest and prairies, the Mississippi banks and the Alleghanies."

"I know—and the birds that rest there!" Jacques laughed. "Well, right now, my friend, you had better be thinking of your lessons for tomorrow. Isn't your father coming to visit you?"

"Yes," John sighed. "He is coming tomorrow."

When Captain Audubon arrived the next day, John, as usual, was miserable.

"He will be displeased," he reminded himself with certainty. "About all I have done to be proud of during my stay here is to sketch two hundred pictures of birds. And Father will not be proud of those!"

But to John's surprise, his father did not mention his schoolwork. He did not scold or insist upon closer application, as he always had before.

It was at the breakfast table the next morning that he made a remark which puzzled John and set him to wondering.

"My son," the captain said, "you will never be an engineer."

"No, Father," John replied quickly. "At least not a worthwhile one. I hate to disappoint you. I try."

"Never mind. I have been wondering, John, if you might not do better in some other line of work, in some other locality.' '

"I—I am sure I would, sir, In some other work. As to some other locality.

"I was thinking of a place I own, a farm. It is in Pennsylvania."

"Pennsylvania? In America?"

"Yes. You might get your bearings there get a new start. You don't seem to be able to start at all in France.

"Oh, Father!" John cried, trying to restrain some of the great happiness that was sweeping through his being. "I would, Father. I would get my bearings in Pennsylvania—in America! I am sure I would."

'You like the idea? Very well, then. I have a friend in Philadelphia who will act as your guardian over there. He is a gentleman by the name of Miles Fisher, and you will be in excellent hands. I hope you will be happy, my son, and do well in some line of work."

"Oh, thank you, Father, thank you. And I am sure I shall." To himself he whispered softly, hardly able to believe what was happening, "America—America. A great, open country. A farm to live on. Rivers, hills, trees. And birds—new birds! Cardinal—phoebe—bob-white—" —By permission of Onward, Presbyterian Youth Paper.

Phillipe Vernier of Belgium

We also had the privilege of having Philippe Vernier visit us here at Nancy, France. Vernier was born of French missionary parent in Madagascar. Because of his position as an uncompromising pacifist he has been sentenced to three prison terms including 24 months of solitary confinement. Being a man of profound humility he has a great love for work among boys, under-privileged people, the sick—for broken and shattered lives.

He stated that some of the experiences which he lived through while he was imprisoned was that God's love was true, it is for everyone — it knows no bounds, and we must love as He has loved in Christ. It is said, "His prisons were palaces, and the bolts were precious jewels." "I had joy and wonder," "God was so near and real that I was sometimes overpowered. There was a song in the depths of my heart. The happiness was like that of a rescued child, as though I were on an ocean all drowned, and then, God's arms underneath me lifting me up." The great fact is that through all his trials and misunderstanding with his officials, he has never been condemned as a conscientious objector but as refusing to wear a uniform, or failing to report for duty, etc. In reading his meditations, in conversation, and in listening to his words, one realizes that he has held on firmly to the things which are unseen and which are eternal.

At present he is a Protestant minister working among the invalid coal miners in Mons, Belgium. He has lived and put into action the beliefs that he has written in some of his meditations.

Report of Northern District Young People's Work

The Young People's Organization increased its budget considerably for the fiscal year ending in June, 1948. The total budget for all the projects and activities was $1,500.

The special project for the year was the equipping of the workshop in the Champa, India, Leper Station. A total of $670.90 was contributed by our district for tools and equipment which have been purchased and sent to India for this new workshop.

Included in the budget were funds for the Mission Student Education Fund and for the general fund of the General Conference Young People's Union. The district young people's paper the Northern Light was published bi-monthly in four-page, printed form.

The first all-district retreat was held at Crystal Lake Camp Grounds near Sioux City, Iowa, in August of 1947. Approximately 60 campers attended. The second retreat was held at the same place in August, 1948, with about 80 campers meeting for four days of study and fellowship.

For the coming year the Northern District young people are again planning to co-operate with the Y.P.U. and the projects sponsored by them. Special emphasis will be given to the fund for the proposed Puerto Rico mission station.

As a special project, the district will raise funds to purchase a wire recorder and public address system to be used in the mission work among the American Indians in Montana. The organization has consented to help in the sale of the Handbook of the Mennonite Hymnary which is newly published by the Mennonite Publication Office of Newton, Kansas. The publishing the Northern Light will continue as well as plans for the third all-district retreat during the next summer.

The young people of the district and their organization are striving to render the service they can in the work of the Church and the Conference.

A Ship! A Ship!

The true story by A. Donald Miller, worker in the Mission to Lepers, of experiences encountered on a voyage from Cape Town to England.

An Apology for Writing

Lying before me is a crumpled pink program. Between the printing of items of music there is a very irregular, and sometimes almost indecipherable, pencilled writing in my own hand. It is a program which, in consequence, brings back to me not only the afternoon when, in Durban, I listened to Arensky's "Quintet in D Major," but also the thirteen days and nights which I spent in a crowded open boat not long afterwards. For when I searched for some paper in my pockets on which to set down a log of our journeyings, this was all I could find. This piece of pink paper reminds me of the beauty of music heard and the rigours of hard days experienced. It represents to me the struggle of the sensitive artist seeking to capture and make vocal something of the unutterable beauty of God, and also the struggle of ordinary men and women, in conflict with desolating circumstances refusing to lose faith in His ultimate goodness and power.

From this brief log, and while the memory of our experience was fresh and vivid, I wrote a more extended diary which was checked by fellow-survivors, as we travelled in the ship which finally rescued us. Because of the circumstances which led to our rescue, many friends have asked that I should set down in printed form the narrative of what happened. I have therefore drawn directly on papers written close upon, and even during, the events themselves. In writing this account I have only changed or withheld the names of fellowpassengers, and concealed the exact location of the spot where our ship was torpedoed.

If my narrative quickens men and women to speed to "rush into print" to give publicity to this story. I believe it holds in it elements which may help to strengthen the faith of some readers in the reality of communion between men and God in prayer, and of God's purpose that, as His children and not merely His creatures, we should co-operate through prayer in effecting His divine will. I have no theory of prayer, no special technique, to press. It is my profound conviction and experience that men's prayers, however weak and misguided, but when offered in trustful humility, do open the way for God's action; action which would, were it not for this co-operating act of man, become merely that of a Divine Dictator and rob us of our real responsibility and manhood. It is the wonder of God's goodness that He calls us to bear a vital part in the operation of His will.

I have this other purpose. The work which I had left behind when I sailed from India and the work to which I came after this experience in the deep waters is the same. It is a work for men shipwrecked in the journey of life, cast upon a lonely ocean, and depending for rescue upon other men led of God to meet them in their need. I would that this narrative might quicken men to be more sensitve to God's call, in Christ, to share in the rescue of countless leper men and women, buffeted and lost upon an inhospitable sea of ostracism and physicial tribulation.

If my narrative quickens men and women to speed on its course this saving task, then those days and nights which I experienced in the mighty deep will have been most certainly worth while.

Life BEYOND OUR OWN

CHICAGO.—A special celebration was held during the week of October 17 in honor of Edgar J Goodspeed, now 77 years old, whose American translation of the New Testament has sold almost on million copies. This Bible was published in 1923. Meetings in his honor were held in various places throughout the city.

TOPEKA, Oct. 23—Plans for a "Share You Thanksgiving" trainload of Kansas food for starvin persons abroad were announced yesterday by Leonar M. Lowe, Kansas director of the Chrisitan Rural Overseas Program (CROP).

"In spite of good crops in some parts of Europe people in other areas are starving, and governmen aid will not reach millions who will be cold an hungry this winter," Lowe said.

Milo, wheat, and corn are being collected, wit many counties undertaking to load one or more cars he indicated. The cars are to be assembled and shippe the day before Thanksgiving.

PHILADELPHIA.—Eight denominations cooperating in the National Lutheran Council approved organic union of their various organizations to be attained by the 16th bi-annual convention of the Unite Lutheran Church.

Editorials

Is it any of my concern what other people think? Mr. Lilienthal, chairman of the Atamic Energy Commission, says that what is more dangerous than the atomic bomb is the thinking of people. It is wrong thinking which makes the atom bomb dangerous. In the hands of loving and compassionate people atomic energy would be quite harmless. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The Apostle Paul writes in II Cor. 10:5, "I take captive every thought and make it obey Christ . . ." (Goodspeed) or as the King James translation has it, "bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ."

This is a high ideal and calls for realistic planning and action on the part of Christian people. As we watch the trends of our day, we wonder what may happen to our country as a result of the thinking we are led to do. Much that comes in the press and over the radio tends to direct the thinking of people away from obedience to Christ. Is it enough for Christian people to say, "We will not read the papers and be influenced by them. We will turn the radio off when they broadcast programs which are unchristian." What about our neighbors and the young people of our churches who may not turn the radio dial but listen to such programs? Are we to be our brother's keeper also in this respect?

We are told that radio broadcasting companies are very sensitive to the opinion of their listening audience. They are anxious to please the public with their programs. If enough Christian people would take the time and trouble to write a card to the radio station which broadcasts good programs and commend them on their good work and encourage them to continue, a great deal could be accomplished to improve radio broadcasts. If they would also take the time to write in to express their disapproval and unhappiness over broadcasts which are evidently not "in obedience to Christ," both in spirit and content, it would have a tremendous influence. A great change could be affected. Every Christian has a responsibility here. We dare not say, "It is regretable what is being broadcast, but what can we common people do about it?" There is much we can do. If enough Christian people would express their convictions to the broadcasting companies, a great change in type of radio programs would take place and consequently also in the thinking of people. Is it too optimistic to believe that if every one who reads these lines would do this a change for the better would result? W.F.U.

"OTHER FOUNDATION can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ." This simple scriptural quotation, together with what is known as the "Souderton Statement of Faith," form the basis upon which General Conference churches in conference and through the leaders elected by Conference work unitedly, as one responsible unit of the total mission of the Church in the world today. At the present time, though there is considerable overlapping of effort in the homeland as far as the ministry of the various responsible units which we call denominations is concerned, it must not be forgotten that this is not the case in mission or relief work. At home here we may salve our consciences by saying that someone will reach them if we don't; this is not the case on the mission field or in relief service. There, in most cases, the work is so divided that if we do not take care of those in our responsibility area, they simply will not receive the Gospel witness of saving grace or saving help. The fulfillment of this responsibility and the ever-widening outreach for the Gospel that saves the whole man are the reason for the existence of the whole gamut of the General Conference organizations, institutions, and activities.

Through the united action of Conference each of these has been carefully weighed in the light of fulfilling Christ's mission for us and has been accepted by us. It is our conviction that for the present none of these can be ignored without substracting something vital from our witness for Christ. If this is true, then each of us has a responsibility to the total Conference program. If this is true we dare not practice favoritism in our giving as churches and as individuals to Conference causes. If this is true, then members of our churches will look for a plan of giving in which it will be impossible for a "beyond our own" cause to be represented in a church and take out more money in one collection than the church contributes for the whole year to a part of the Conference work upon which the Conference depends to carry out its God-given task. If the above is true, then churches will plan to give to General Conference causes as a whole, their gifts being divided according to the percentages suggested for each board and committee, as based on their needs in accordance with the program they have planned as authorized by the General Conference. District conferences are moving in the direction of suggesting to churches how their giving to district causes is to be divided. Until there is an adequate integration of district planning with General Conference planning the individual church will have to decide what portion of the benevolence giving is to stay in the district. You say this is too much regimentation? If the alternative is unplanned, only a subject-to-the-inspiration-of-the-moment type of giving, then let us have more of this kind of giving. A satisfactory missionary program—and this is ever the fundamental task of the church—demands converted leaders (evangelism), trained leaders (education and youth program) non-conformed leaders (peace), and leaders who are supplied with the materials to lift up the needy (relief). From this angle there is no phase of the General Conference program that is not expressly mission-centered. To neglect any of them is to make ours only a partial witness to "the Lamb of God that taketh away he sin of the world."—J.J.E.

Peace of Mind

by J. H. Fretz

The world today is playing the old game of blindman's bluff. Blindfolded by indwelling sin and groping for a perfect peace it cannot reach, it eagerly seizes upon man's best imitation. The phenomenal sales of such a recent book as Peace of Mind by Joshua Loth Liebman seems to again indicate this. Though this book is morally stimulating and undeniably comforting, we must add, it still offers only a human peace of mind, a peace of man's best imitation.

Is there not a peace of mind—a perfect peace of mind for man, right now in 1948, in this present evil world, where we hear so much about Peace! Peace! when there is no peace? In 1875, on one August Sunday, an English Clergyman, Edward Bickersteth, asked this same question for his day and found his answer when he wrote:

> "Peace, perfect peace, in this dark > world of sin?
> The blood of Jesus whispers peace > within!"

Bickersteth, moved by a sermon on Isaiah chapter 26, verse 3, had found the answer. Let us this morning, also turn to Isaiah 26:3, our text, and find the answer to God's peace of mind. We read; "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." The prophet Isaiah, faced "a sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity." He warned them and predicted the exile for them in the early chapters. Then after pronouncing doom on the surrounding heathen he turns in chapters 24 to 27 to look in glorious hope beyond to the exiles future return, and still beyond this to the coming of the Messiah, both the first and in the glorious Day still beyond us. It is in this three-fold setting that Isaiah speaks to his people and certainly to us, who have only the last—the Day of the Lord—yet to anticipate.

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee.
—Isaiah 26:3.

The three phrases in the text can be easily placed under the two divisions: the last two phrases, 'whose mind is stayed on thee," because he trusteth in thee" both describing in the repetitious fashion of Hebrew poetry, God's requirement for peace of mind; and, the first phrase, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace" consequently describing God's reward of perfect peace.

God's Requirement for Peace of Mind

Some of God's covenants or promises are unconditional. In Genesis 8:21, 22 God covenanted with mankind never again to curse the entire earth as He had done by flood. God will keep this promise regardless of man. But the covenants concerning redemption, such as we have here and throughout the Bible, are always conditioned upon man's implicit trust and unswerving obedience. Peace of mind can never come until man the creature has unreservedly given himself over to Almighty God the Crator; and that cannot happen until man the sinner has thrown himself upon the mercy of Jesus Christ the Savior.

But what about good Christians who do not have peace of mind? The text is clear. They too are not trusting in the Lord nor have a mind stayed on Him as they should. It is valuable to note that both verbs "stayed" and "trusteth" though similar in meaning, nevertheless add distinctive color separately to the concept of faith.

In the original Hebrew "stayed" connotes the idea of leaning or resting something heavy upon something firm. When the Empire State Building was erected in New York City they not only excavated, as usual for skyscrapers, down deep to rock, but now drilled special shafts still deeper and deeper to a bed rock never before reached. It was only then that the engineers were satisfied that they had found a solid footing for the gigantic structure. Christian friends, you have found the foundation of salvation in Jesus Christ; in his atoning work at the cross and empty tomb, but as the days and years pass with increasing world agitation, you must dig deeper; you must penetrate by faith to a new and firmer assurance in the center of God's great Grace and Mercy! The heavier the burden and the greater your faith, the firmer will be God's resting place and deeper will be your peace of mind!

The meaning of the other Hebrew verb "trusteth" opens up to us another illustration of faith. It means literally "To cling"; not merely "hold" but to "cling!" The man who throws a life preserver to the drowning passenger overboard, momentarily holds it as he throws. But the person struggling for his very life in the angry seas clings to the preserver with every ounce of strength left within him. And we are told that often after the person has been safely hauled aboard, the tremendous shock and mental agitation leave the victim helpless to voluntarily let go of the preserver which has saved his life. Too many Christians are just "holding" God. If you want peace of mind, whatever your particular burden or care, you must not just hold, but cling with all your heart and soul and mind unto the Goodness and Mercy of Jesus Christ who doeth all things well!

God's Reward of Perfect Peace

Let us now give our attention to the main phrase of the text. The inspired prophet tells us that whoever "trusteth" in God and has his "mind stayed" on God, God will "keep him in perfect peace!"

And what is this perfect peace God so wonderfully promises man? First of all the Hebrew word "peace" literally means "physical soundness or health." For that reason it has always been a word of greeting or departure in the orient. In the spiritual sense, it would therefore mean a completeness or inward

All Set to Go

by August Epp

—A privilege to help our ministers—

If our church members could read some of the pathetic letters we receive, and if they fully realized the seriousness of many of our minsters' future, they would lose no time in seeing that their minister get under the General Conference Minister's Pension Plan, and would donate funds more freely to the fund from which we help those ministers who are too old to come under the plan and who need assistance right now.

Churches Must Take Initiative

The General Conference Pension and Ministers' Aid Committee wishes to draw the attention of the General Conference churches to the fact that at the last session of the Conference a pension plan was adopted for its ministers. Since that time, the Council of Boards, at its session in Chicago in February of this year, reviewed the plan in detail. Certain changes, corrections, and additions were passed upon. These changes have now been embodied in the set-up and are a part of it. Your Pension Committee now has all the details worked out, has all the printed forms completed, and is ready to handle applications for entry into the plan. In spite of the fact that very little pubilicity has been given to the plan since its adoption, a reasonable number of ministers have enrolled. Many more ministers would start their pension plan if the churches would take the lead in this matter. Repeatedly we have stated that it is not to be expected that the minister will get the pension plan started in his church, but that it is definitely a responsibility of the church to take the initiative in seeing that the amount of money required is raised and that the minister is placed under the plan.

Provision for Ineligible Ministers

As has been stated before, a minister who is past age sixty is not eligible to enter the plan. In such cases, local congregations may need to seriously face the responsibility of doing their part in providing for the retirement of one who has faithfully served them: If the church cannot fulfill this responsibility, application may be made to the Committee for consideration.

No Hesitation!

There should be no need of trying to convince the churches that the plan is good, most economical, and dependable. This has been done many times in the past few years in The Mennonite, and the fact that the plan is good and satisfactory was evidenced by the wholehearted acceptance of the plan by the Conference at Berne, Indiana, in 1947. The committee perfection of soul. It means that peace is not just a negative cessation of evil and fear, but rather a positive infilling of the perfect personality, poise, and abundant life that God originally planned for his creatures in Eden. Now the text promises us even more than this! God wants to give us perfect peace! In the Hebrew there is no auxiliary word used, as in English, to express the idea of the superlative or perfection. Rather for emphasis, the word is always given twice. Thus the Hebrew reads: "Thou wilt keep him in peace, peace." That is the difference between God's perfect peace of mind and man's best but poor imitation! I believe God's word says what it means! Right now in 1948, this side of glory, you can have a perfect peace of mind, a perfect poise, a perfect conquering of life's most baffling problems, in short a peace—peace— by firmly trusting the Lord!

How does God give us this perfect peace of mind? Colossians 1:20 gives us the New Testament answer. Jesus Christ has made peace through the blood of his cross! The world today is so paradoxical! Men everywhere are humbled and they are sincerely seeking peace of mind, yet they will not think of coming to the God of the Scriptures for real peace of mind. We all admire Charles Lindbergh. In his most recent book Of Flight and Life he reccounts hair-raising experiences taken from the awful war, and by them reveals not only the superficiality of modern man, but his own turning back to God for peace of mind. We eagerly read on— "Is he really coming back to God?" we ask. But also in the end we are still left stranded with man's best imitation— "the sermons of Christ, the wisdom of Lao-tse, and the teachings of Buddha."' He closes. "We still have the possibility, here in America, of building a civilzation based on Man . . . ." Christian Friends, what a contrast between this frustrating and wavering peace of man and the perfect peace of Him, who in very the night he was betrayed, said "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid!" O you disciples of 1948, distraught and alarmed by the approaching night, ponder anew these words from the Son of Man! And you without Christ and without a perfect peace of mind, come unto Him; rip off the blindfold of sin and find forgiveness and life and perfect peace of mind in the perfect atonement of Jesus Christ, who has made peace through the blood of the cross!

"Peace, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin?
The blood of Jesus whispers peace within!

Peace, perfect peace, by thronging duties pressed?
To do the will of Jesus, this is rest!

Peace, perfect peace, our future all unknown?
Jesus we know! and He is on the Throne!

Freedom and Security

by Carl Kreider

"Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free . . . . If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:31, 32, 36).

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage" (Gal. 5:1).

These Demanded Freedom

On August 15, 1947, the great subcontinent of India became free of British rule. Indian leaders had worked fervently for this end for many years, and the actual freedom was granted after long negotiations. Very soon after freedom was secured, however, there was great bloodshed in various parts of India, and there was the universal fear of more bloodshed to come. Less than a year after freedom was secured Gandhi, the great spiritual leader of India who always counseled moderation and nonviolence, was murdered. The natives of India now have one of man's cherished ideals, freedom, but for the time being, at least, they have given up the other prize, security.

The natives of Indonesia fought against their Dutch rulers to obtain freedom. By so doing, they also gave up security.

All through history man, in trying to work out his own salvation, has chosen either freedom or security. When he received freedom, he gave up security; when he achieved security, he lost his freedom. During the Middle Ages the great majority of people of Europe were serfs. A basic principle of serfdom was that serfs were bound to the soil. Since they were bound to the soil, they enjoyed a considerable amount of security, for it was impossible for their landlord to evict them from their homes. Furthermore, they never needed to worry about the insecurity of unemployment. On the other hand, their security was purchased at the price of a lack of freedom. The landlord was not free to evict the serf from his home; neither was the serf free to move to other more favorable locations. The lord had control over every aspect of the life of the serf from the cradle to the grave.

By approximately 1500 A.D. the feudal system of the Middle Ages had broken down in most parts of Europe. At the same time mercantilism had spread over much of Europe. The governments of the newly formed national states severely regulated the lives of the individuals. Wages, prices, domestic and foreign trade, periods of apprenticeship—all were severely regulated by the government. The goal of all of this regulation was to make the state powerful and thus give the inhabitants security from foreign aggression. To achieve this security, however, the individual was forced to give up personal freedom.

By the close of the eighteenth century, the economist Adam Smith and others began to preach a doctrine known as laissez faire. Businessmen were rising in importance and they were becoming increasingly restive because of the many governmental regulations of mercantilism. The economic ideas of Adam Smith provided the theoretical framework for free private enterprise. Smith argued that if man was free to pursue his own best interests he would automatically promote the best interests of society as a whole. Governmental regulation was, therefore, contrary to natural law.

These Demanded Security

It was not many years after the mercantilistic regulations were discarded, however, that many of the same men who had clamored so loudly for freedom began to ask for protection. The businessmen who wanted to be free to operate their businesses as they saw fit felt insecure as the Industrial Revolution spread to other countries. They began to ask the government for extensive tariff systems as protection against foreign competition. The working man, who a century before had become restive under the Elizabethan Statute of Labourers, began to ask for governmental protection against the long hours and the low pay provided by the employers under the system of free private enterprise. Social security schemes became prominent all over the Western world as the governments took away the money of laborers through taxation (thus destroying their freedom to spend this money as they saw fit) in order to give the laborer security during old age or in periods of unemployment.

The most profound political problem of our own generation is the question of whether freedom and security are compatible objectives. Totalitarian countries, such as Russia and fascist Germany and Italy, answered this question with resounding "No." Furthermore, they believed that since the two objectives were incompatible, man would prefer security to freedom. They built a political order in which popular representation was completely discarded and in which elections weer an empty shell.

No single answer to the question of freedom and security has been given in the United States. Some groups argue that a return to free private enterprise is essential. These groups were successful in defeating war measures designed to promote economic security such as the O.P.A. It was soon discovered, however, that when prices were free, they were free to rise, so that food became nearly two and one-half times as expensive as it was before the war. No doubt it will also be discovered sometime in the next five years that when prices are free, they are free to fall. When that happens many of the same people who were the erstwhile believers in price freedom will be asking for "price supports." All who argue for free enterprise, however, would maintain stanchly that such freedom would also provide the best security.

Other groups within the United States emphasize security and believe that some form of planned economy such as England is currently cultivating is necessary. They believe that it is possible to achieve this security and still maintain our free democratic institutions. Others believe that such a step would lead to a complete lack of freedom such as is found in totalitarian states (To be continued.)—Reprinted from the Gospel Herald.

Giver, Tither, Steward -- Which Are You?

by an Anonymous Minister's Wife

Mr. A, The "Regular" Giver

Mr. Adams was a Christian. Every Sunday morning he stretched out his feet under the church pew in front of his and listened to the sermon. After six days of labor, and he really obeyed the command "Six days shalt thou labor," it was good to relax for an hour or two and think back over the past week.

Then when the offering plate reached him, he always placed one dollar bill into it. Whether the offering was for missions, or maintenance, or pastor's salary, or education, his offering was always the same one dollar.

Mr. Adams had a little difficulty concentrating on the sermon at times. His mind had a tendency to wander especially when he had a little financial plan up his sleeve. That eighty acres for sale down at Four Corners seemed like a bug in his mind. It kept creeping in.

By the end of that service, Mr. Adams had made up his mind about that eighty acres. He didn't know that eighth verse of chapter five of Isaiah. "Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed in the midst of the earth!"

Mr. B, The Strict Tither

Mr. Baldwin, too, was a Christian. Every Sunday morning he sat erect in his church pew and listened carefully to the sermon. Being a conscientious man, he looked to see if there was anything in the message that could apply to himself. He wanted to do his duty to the work of God, but he must also consider his family. For did not Scripture say, "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel" (I Tim. 5:8).

But Mr. Baldwin was not stingy when the offering plate came around. The Scriptures certainly taught tithing and he would do his duty. From a net income of five thousand dollars a year, five hundred belonged to the Lord. Half of that he figured, ought to go for foreign and home missions. The other half should go for the work of the local church.

Since this was Mission Sunday, Mr. Baldwin dropped a five dollar bill onto the plate. He wanted to see the work of God go ahead.

God had blessed Mr. Baldwin above many of his neighbors. One by one, as his children married, he was able to give them a small farm, free of debt.

To be sure, his children could have been more grateful. They figured it was coming to them. In fact Mr. Baldwin had to be careful to keep them all even. Some wanted a little more than their share. Tim had the idea that Ben had a better farm. Even though Mr. Baldwin gave him two extra cows, he still compained. O, yes, all the children were Christians—went to church at any rate. But they seemed to have difficulty with "the cares of this world."

Mr. C, the Faithful Steward

Mr. Calter, too, was a Christian. Every Sunday morning he bowed his head and thanked God that he could again meet with Him and His children. He didn't always feel thankful; in fact, sometimes the last minute hurry on Sundays had a tendency to irritate him. "'But what do my feelings count anyway?" he would say to himself. And looking to God he began thanking Him, if for nothing else, than that He was there, ready to listen.

When the offering plate came by, there was no doubt in his mind as to how much he would give. That had been settled in his early morning prayer.

Since it was Mission Sunday, he took out a carefully folded bill, the denomination of which could not be seen, and placed it on the plate. He did not like for people to know just how much he gave — they might think him foolish.

But this is the way Mr. Calter figured. He loved God more than anyone else, or anything else. Had He not saved him; had He not made life worth living to him? Hence, he figured all he had including himself and his farming ability belonged to God.

> "The investment of God's $2,000 was as important to Mr. Calter as his own."

He could not speak, he could not sing; he could not teach a Sunday School class. But he could farm fairly well; so he would farm for God. He had a family, so he would bring them up for God. When people were in trouble, or going the wrong direction, he could point them to God and to His only begotten Son. So what he could do, he would do.

With prices as they were, Mr. Calter decided that $1500 would be about right for his family to live on for the year. His crop brought about $3,500. That would leave $2,000 for God.

Oh, yes, his home needed modernizing; but that could wait. Were not the things of God more pressing? The $1500 would permit a few necessary repairs, and a little extra, provided they lived simply.

Some folks wondered why the Calters did not dress more up-to-date. They just don't appreciate nice things," some said. The Calter children wore hand-me-downs. Mrs. Calter invited guests to "have a seat" on frayed upholstery. She placed food on the table that paid its way in vitamins and minerals, as well as the essential proteins and carbohydrates, and fat. The extras just cost money with nothing in return.

The investment of God's $2,000 was as important to Mr. Calter as if it had been his own. He sought the mind of God in prayer. Where would it bring in the greatest returns for Him? The work of the foreign mission board was bringing in returns in many lands. Souls were being saved, and the young in Christ were taught the way more perfectly. That, he decided, would hold a prominent place in the investment of God's money.

Beach of Glad Tidings

Report of 1948 Season at Elim Gospel Beach

Another season at Elim Gospel Beach has come to a close, and as we look back, we are very thankful to God for having helped us in a wonderful way.

On Land, On Water, They Hear

Elim Gospel Beach this year was in operation from June 13 to August 8. Because of this long season, our aim and program are different from other camps and retreats. One of the chief objectives of this project is to reach those with the gospel who otherwise would never come to any church. Since it is a regular summer resort, there are often over 1000 people there. Many of these would never come to a church or Christian service. We give the gospel to these people over a public address system in the form of songs and messages in person or from records. They hear it whether they are on the grounds, on the water, or in the water, We also give them the gospel by means of gospel sound films. In this phase of the work, we believe, lies one of the major values.

The Whole Family Served

The rest of the program is much like that of other camps and retreats. This year we had one week Retreats: one week Children's Camp, and three days Adult Retreat in German for the parents. The courses taught in camp and retreat were: (1) Plan of Salvation, (2) The Christian Life, including Bible Study, Prayer, Church Membership, Stewardship, etc. (3) Mission. For the adult retreat we had three services each day for Bible exposition. The parents received a real blessing and are anxious to have a longer period next year.

Our speakers and workers were all our local workers including Rev. and Mrs. J. Unruh who are teaching in the Swift Current Bible School; Mrs. F. J. Isaac Newton, Kans.; Rev. Clyde Dirks, Portland, Oregon and several graduates from the Swift Current Bible School. The speaker for the adult retreat was Rev, J. J. Nickel, Langham, Sask.

The attendance at camp and retreat is not as large as we would like it to be, chiefly because there are not so many Christian young people in our churches and the non-Christian young people do not register as retreaters, although many come and go or camp there during the retreat and camp season. In this way, as stated above, they hear the gospel even if they are not regular retreaters, and some have been won to Christ in this way. That is our aim. There were 53 regular registered retreaters this year and 77 at the children's camp.

Result — Definite Decisions

There were seven definite decisions for Christ and nineteen consecrations to do what Christ wanted them to do as He would make it clear, as well as two definite dedications for full-time service in nursing and foreign missions.

We feel very definitely that continued work along this line should have a vitalizing effect on the churches of Southern Saskatechewan. We cannot look for miracles, but a steadily growing fruit in the form of a deeper spiritual life, souls going out for full-time Christian service, etc. Young people are preparing now for such service who have definitely stated that Elim Gospel Beach directed their lives into the channel. Three are preparing for missionary nursing, several are in Bethel College, two in Winnipeg Bible College, and several in Swift Current Bible School. I just received a letter from a young man and his sister in B. C. who are both definitely preparing for full-time service. They say they dedicated their lives to Christ at Elim Gospel Beach.

Please pray for this work that it may ever become a greater blessing to this part of Saskatchewan, especially in Southern Saskatchewan, and, if you feel led of the Lord, send us a donation to help to make our final payment which is due November 1, 1948.

Canadian Echo: World Conference of Mennonites

by Benjamin Ewert

Unique and important in Mennonite history was the well-planned and well-organized Fourth World Conference of Mennonites which brought together from eighteen to twenty different groups of Mennonites within the Mennonite denomination. To the Mennonite Central Committee, an organization which administers the relief and the peace program of our various groups, goes the credit for this unusual Conference.

The World Heard

How impressive was the wealth of papers, lectures, reports, discussions, and testimonies which were offered in the course of the Conference. At least, forty different subjects were discussed by some of the most capable of the Mennonite constituency of the world at this Conference. This World Conference gave evidence that our background, our convictions, our activities are in harmony with the statement of Jesus in Matthew 5:14-16: "The light which is to shine from our midst was set up for all to see." The world took notice of this through the daily press reports.

Will We Produce?

If only we could become still more conscious and convinced of the eternal merit of our convictions and our faith and our activity! We have no cause whatever to blush about them, to feel contempt for, or to abrogate them—no, not even when speaking about our convictions in matters of non-resistance, non-conformity, and consistent, definite Christian living.

I trust that this Fourth World Conference of Mennonites will not fail to bring richest fruits of many kinds. I am thinking particularly now about common convictions. Common Christian convictions, a Biblical attitude toward the world, active participation and support of Godly undertakings, peace-loving sponsorship of fellowship and life in our entire Christian Mennonite community, God-fearing personal life, and more of such qualities. All this for the blessing of ourselves and the entire world, as well as for the praise and glory of the Lord and our Saviour Jesus Christ. How overwhelming it was that so many Mennonites, perhaps as many as ten thousands, members of so many various groups of our church and from various different countries, could get together and enjoy fellowship with each other. This was surely an event which corresponded with the command and prayer of Jesus.

The meeting of old friends and hitherto unknown brethren in the faith cannot be valued highly enough For me, as well a for many other, the participation in this Fourth World Conference of Mennonites has been a great joy and a priceless experience. Being from Canada, I was especially pleased to find that perhaps over a hundred had come from various churches and provinces in Canada to this Conference. We all had the opportunity to enjoy blessed fellowship with many others from various lands of the earth. Praise the Lord!

HAZEL DESTER KAUFMAN

The lives of very few women in the General Conference have touched the life of the Conference at as many points as has that of Hazel Dester Kaufman, wife of Pres. Ed. Kaufman of Bethel College, who passed away at the age of 52, on October 21, 1948, at Newton, Kansas.

Her first service to the Kingdom of God and to the Mennonite Church began in 1917, when, in the same year of her marriage to Dr. Ed. Kaufman, she began with him a period of eight years of educational service on the mission field in China. Between the time of their return in 1925 and their coming to Bethel College in 1931, Mrs. Kaufman joined her husband in further study at the University of Chicago and in the service of the Conference in educational work at Bluffton College. Since 1932, when her husband accepted the presidency of Bethel College, Mrs. Kaufman graciously assumed the many responsibilities that came to her as wife of the head of the school. The Women's Association of Bethel College was her special interest and concern. Since 1944, Mrs. Kaufman has spent much time in the Bethel Deaconess Hospital as a patient sufferer and courageous sufferer. It was this experience that led Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, of Wichita, who gave the funeral message, to make the following observation concerning her life:

"Hers was the heroism which can face a trying siege and not weaken."

ALL SET . . . . From p. 5

knew from the start that enrollment into the plan would be slow for two reasons: first, because the plan benefits the minister, and he will therefore not wish to push the matter, and, second, churches are slow to act in matters of this kind because most people do not realize the terrific problem our ministers face when, by reason of old age or poor health, they are forced to discontinue their service to the church. Let us not be blinded by thinking that our responsibility ceases when such a minister lays down his work. It would be unethical to publish some of the letters our committee receives from ministers who have given a lifetime of faithful service, who now have nothing to live on, and who now feel that they are being treated unfairly by those whom they have served so many years.

This writing is intended to urge the churches to enroll their minister in the plan as soon as possible. Within a few days, each church will receive a booklet, which explains the plan in detail, and the necessary forms which the church and the minister completes, and then sends to the General Conference Headquarters where the rest of the enrollment will be completed.

RELIEF NOTES

Does Europe Still Need Relief?

Hasn't there been a good harvest this summer? Isn't the Marshall Plan going to help conditions? Isn't it about time that the Europeans are getting back on their own feet? What is the picture in Central Europe? These are questions that many may be asking. The MCC workers in Europe have given some answers to these questions.

Conditions in Europe have improved in some ways. The crops of this year have made more food available than was the case last year. The currency reform in Germany has helped to stablize the resources of the wage earners. This, however, has worked a great hardship on certain classes of people such as the aged, convalescents, and students. Thus our relief work will need to reach out more specifically to these special groups—the aged, students, convalescents, tuberculosis patients, returned prisoners of war, widows with children. The European Recovery Program has helped conditions somewhat, but not to relieve all the need. Even in normal times, Germany imported forty per cent of its food. Now with disrupted economy and industry, together with increased refugee population, there is reason for the continued relief needs. Even though the ration of certain materials is adequate for individual needs, the money with which to purchase these items at high prices is many times not available. Similar situations exist in other countries of Central Europe. In Poland the demand for food exceeds the supply, and clothing prices remain too high for the worker to buy. Foreign relief agencies in Poland are continuing their work with unabated energies.

Assisting Mennonite Refugees

The Mennonite refugee migration staff in Europe continues its efforts to help our homeless brethren. In the past months many have gone to Paraguay, Canada, and Uruguay, and a few to the United States. It is hoped that many more may be able to enter the United States and Canada. Engaged in this work in Europe are C. F. Klassen, Siegfried and Margaret Janzen, Peter and Elfrieda Dyck, Marie Brunk, Magdalene Friesen, Cornelius Dyck and Arthur Voth, as well as relief personnel who give assistance in a number of ways. All of these have continued in service beyond their initial two year term because of the urgency of the work and their desire to be of further help to the homeless Mennonite people.

Brook Lane Farm

Ada Frey of Archbold, Ohio, and Martha Stoltzfus Morgantown, Penna., who have been serving at Brook Lane Farm in Maryland, will begin a period of interneship at the Cleveland State Hospital on November 1. Ada Frey will concentrate on accupational therapy.

The MCC Homes for Mentally Ill Planning and Advisory Committee met at Brook Lane Farm on October 20. The committee consists of H. R. Martens, H. A. Fast, E. C. Bender, Harold Sherk, Titus Books, Orie O. Miller, and Paul Nase, M.D.

October 23. Armed forces strategists say they will renew their efforts to get Universal Military Training in the new Congress. The armed forces pushed the draft only after they saw Congress would not give them UMT.

Governor Warren Republican vice-presidential candidate, gave a strong endorsement of UMT at the American Legion Convention in Miami this week. Governor Dewey came out for UMT at the convention in New York last year.

The new national commander of the American Legion, S. Perry Brown, devoted two years trying to sell Congress the "Legion UMT Plan" which he fathered. The Legion campaign, launched last November to flood Congress with petitions, flopped because so many Legionnaires ignored the petitions, wrote letters against UMT, and because congressmen discount petitions.

Opponents of UMT consider church people among those whose sustained opposition to UMT helped to defeat it.

No Comment Needed

Walter C. Longstretch, Philadelphia lawyer, said, in notifying the Internal Revenue Department that he and his wife would refuse to pay 34.6% of their 1947 income tax which "was used for preparation for war." "In the Nuremburg trials, the U.S. maintained the principle that a citizen of Germany should refuse to obey his government when his government orders him to do an evil act. The principle is equally valid for the citizens of the United States including myself."

We haven't read what happened to the lawyer and his wife!—From the Salem Mennonite Church Bulletin Freeman, South Dakota.

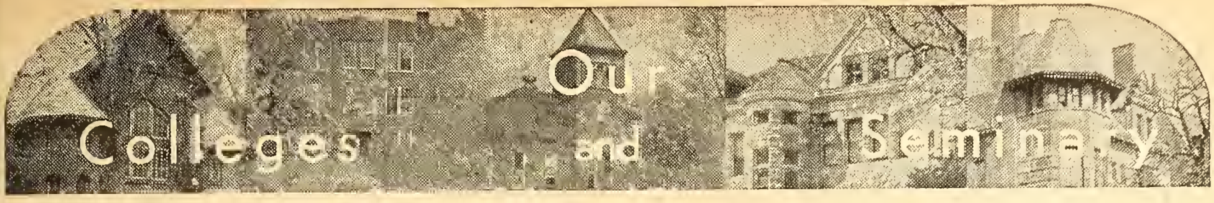
But their pastor sometimes permitted speakers representing other boards and fields. What should he do about them? Some spoke so effectively that they had a way of swaying a person. Was that the leading of God to give?

Mr. Calter decided to make each speaker and field a matter of definite prayer. All during the service he could ask, "Lord, what do you think? How much shall I give?" He weighed the results of the work. He tried to let the speaker's personality affect him. Then he gave as he felt the work warranted. Once he discovered that a work he had given to was not financially sound. After that he carefully investigated any letter of appeal that came in the mail, before replying.

Financially, Mr. Calter did not progress; he just held his own. But the work of God progressed.

Mr. A, and Mr. B, and Mr. C, were all reasonable men. Mr. A. figured from his own point of view. Mr. B. figured from his family's and community's point of view. Mr. C. figured from God's point of view.



BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The funeral services for Dr. C. Henry Smith were held Thursday, October 21. President Pannabecker, of the Seminary, conducted the devotions; President Ramseyer paid tribute to Dr. Smith as an educator, and Dean Bender paid tribute as a historian; and Reverend Smucker preached the funeral sermon. Students conducted a "work day" October 27. Each student attempted to secure a job and then turned in the money earned for the Auditorium-Physical Education Building Fund. The Girls' Gospel Team conducted a service in the Baptist Church of Moral, Ohio, October 24. The Messiah Concert will be given Sunday afternoon, December 12. Soloists who have been selected are Christine Habegger Purvis, soprano; Ola Lugibihl Moser, contralto; Allan Schirmer, Indiana Central College, Indianapolis, tenor; and Wilson Jones, New York, bass. President Ramseyer attended the inauguration of the new president of Ashland College, October 23. Scott Nearing, lecturer and author, visited the college October 23, and spoke on the topic, "Why do civilized nations fight wars?" He came under the auspices of the American Friends Service Committee.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

For the second week, missions were the major emphasis in the life of our school. Orlando Waltner, director of the Champa Leper Home, delivered a message in which he pointed out that there are two million lepers in India, of whom only fourteen thousand are in the different institutions set up for lepers. The Mennonite institution at Champa is the third largest in India, housing between 576 and 600 patients. He declared, "We need God's grace to work with these people." Love is very essential in treating leprosy.

During the week, there was a great foreign missions advance program throughout the city of Chicago, attended by missionaries from all over the world, climaxing with a great rally at the Medina Temple, one of the largest auditoriums in Chicago. In our chapel service on Friday, we were privileged to hear Dr. George Carpenter secretary of the Congo Protestant Council, missionary to the Belgian Congo under the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. He is well acquainted with a number of the Mennonite missionaries in the Belgian Congo and greatly challenged us to the need of Jesus Christ in the dark continent of Africa.

At our Wednesday night prayer meeting, we were pleasantly surprised by a visit from Marie Regier, recently returned from many harrowing experiences in the General Conference mission field in China. She shared many experiences with Elisabeth Goertz during the full years of the war under Japanese occupation. We look forward to a longer visit from her later this year. How wonderfully God is working through our missionaries in these perilous times .

President and Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, accompanied by Jacob D. Goering, went to Bluffton on Thursday to attend the funeral of Dr. C. Henry Smith. It may be remembered that Dr. Smith was on the original faculty of Mennonite Biblical Seminary during the school year of 1945-46. As a reminder of our mortality, one may note that of that original faculty Dr. Abraham Warkentin, our first president, Dr. C. E. Krehbiel have also passed to their eternal reward.

Next week the E. B. Hoff Memorial Lectures will be delivered by President Emeritus Charles Ellis of Juniata College. The theme of his lectures is "The Work of the Christian Minister."

President Pannabecker reports that a number of young men in the Conference who are planning for ministerial training have asked for pre-enrollment information in connection with their status under the draft.

Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, will be the next speaker at our Vesper service on November 7. These services are held on the first and third Sunday of each month.

Over Our Shoulders

Then Already?!! 60 years Ago

"Just at this time our country is flooded with reading matter, and it is not to be supposed that in such a deluge of reading matter there is not much that is dangerous and bad . . . . No restrictions are put on the press. Anything that will pay for itself in money issues from it."—From an article entitled, "The Influence Good Literature Has upon the Minds of Young Persons," by J. W. Shelly, found in THE MENNONITE, November, 1888. This essay was first prepared for the Eastern District Sunday School Convention which was considering the problem of the Sunday school library.

Harvest Means the Season's Close

Many youth groups will be closing their season's projects with the fall harvest. Some will find the results of their years's project not too encouraging. Others will find the season a most successful one. In one church, a youth group had a wheat growing project which yielded $800.00. Corn growing projects, potatoes, hogs and many other things will be brought together and the yield will when totaled be abundant. Carefully planned projects are a great aid to youth groups. Now is the time to begin planning for next year.

Jottings

—First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana: Miss Marie Regier, just returned from a term of service in our China mission field, gave us a first-hand report on the work in China at our Sunday morning service October 17. Recent solicitation among our people for Bluffton College resulted in a total of $1,660, of which $1,170 was cash. The Women's Missionary Society has presented 326 quarts of canned goods to Bluffton College and the Seminary. A Harvest Home program was presented by the Society on October 10.

—Bethel College Church, North Newton, Kansas: Sixteen members were received into the church by letter on Sunday morning, October 3, and seventeen were received as associate members. The Peace Committee of the church has announced a Peace Institute for three successive Sunday evenings, beginning October 31. Each program will open with a fellowship meal at 5:30 p. m., followed by a brief worship and song service, a message and discussion on some aspects of pacifism, and a film or play. There will be classes for children below high school age. Mrs. Annalee Stewart, of the American Friends Service Committee will be the speaker for the first meeting on October 31. Albert D. Klassen is the new Sunday school superintendent, succeeding Eldon Graber.—Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Newton Kansas: Rev. Erland Waltner, pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, at Mountain Lake, Minnesota, was the guest speaker at our fall week of services, October 19 to 22, conducting Bible study hours in the afternoon and preaching services at night.

—Freeman, South Dakota: Rev. J. N. Smucker, of Bluffton, Ohio, was the Mission-Harvest Festival speaker at the Bethany Church on October 17. He also conducted a series of evangelistic services from October 18 to 22.

—Bethel Church, Hydro, Oklahoma: The ministers in this locality exchanged pulpits on October 17. As well as being a real blessing to both ministers and congregations, this gave us a chance to become better acquainted with our fellow churches. Rev. Henry Hege, of the Bergthal Church, spoke Sunday morning, and Rev. Paul Dahlenberg, of the Herold Church, was the evening speaker.—Wilfred Ewy, Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: Miss Helga Kemnitzer, student at Bethel College, and Dr. J. Winfield Fretz, spoke to us on the evening of October 31. They spoke about relief and displaced persons.—Ralph Krehbiel, Corr.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: Sunday, October 17, marked the end of Rev. G. T. Soldner's supply pastorate here. In his morning sermon entitled, "Lessons from Leaves," he pointed out that our lives are like the leaves of a tree, beautiful, but useless unless their strength has gone into the producing of good fruit. A children's story was included in the morning service. After Christian Endeavor, a farewell reception was held in honor of Reverend Soldner. Mr. Irvin Richert will now be our minister on alternate Sundays with the other Sundays filled in by various speakers.—Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Madrid, Nebraska: Our annual, all-day, harvest and mission festival was held September 26, with Rev. Ed. Miller, president of Freeman Junior College, as speaker. The offerings, for home missions, foreign missions, and relief, amounted to $621. The evangelistic services were continued every evening through the week. The work of remodeling and modernizing the parsonage is now fully completed. Due to rationing and shortage of material and lumber, during recent years, the work had to be carried over two years. The greater part of the labor was donated.—Corr.

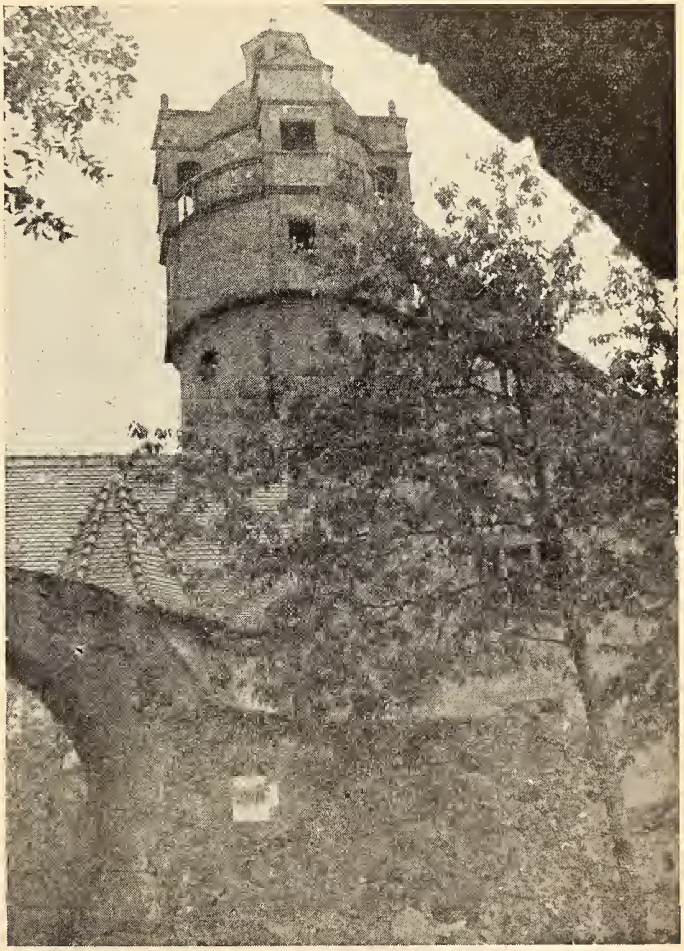
The following article is part of a letter written to members of Mennonite Central Committee Voluntary Service units in Canada, the United States, and Mexico by the director of these projects, Elmer Ediger, who has spent the summer in Europe directing the work camp at Ronneburg.



Service in an Old German Castle

VOLUNTARY SERVICE

by Elmer Ediger
Akron, Penna.

JUST NOW I am thinking of you at Gulfport, London, Ontario, North Battleford, and Brandon; the Peace Team; and the units at Cleveland, Skillman, Richmond, Colorado, Washington, Akron, Mexico, and Brook Lane. Recently we have been having discussions here regarding Voluntary Service. What you are doing in the states, Canada, and Mexico is a stimulus to visualizing a program for Europe. The youth are already serving in the name of Christ is an inspiration to us as we investigate the possibilities of a program here.

The time is now 6 P.M. or, as Europeans say, 18:00. Our regular project folks have been free from work since 3:15, but others are extremely busy in the hot kitchen, working over wood-heated stoves. At 3:45 to 4:00 we had "Koffee Pause"—several slices of bread, apple butter, and coffee—plus a relaxing discussion or just "relaxing." Small groups of those interested are gathered somewhere outside the castle walls for discussions on German agriculture, and an analysis of American history. These discussions at Ronneburg were born out of the intense interest the Germans have in the outside world. Having been "kids" in '33 when the world was shut out from them, they are eager to discuss the very commonplace things outside of Germany. Frankly, we Americans find it a little difficult to get as interested as is somewhat indicated by our attendance. We must ask ourselves, is our Christian love really understanding of their situation; are we willing to submerge our desire for some things in which we might be more interested to give them our available free time?

Supper is at 6:30 (18:30). We eat in "Ritters Halle" (Hall of the Knights). But please don't visualize a palace—this was a burg, a fortress. It dates back to 1500—and it hadn't been used by anyone for many years! The routine of table prayers and grace is European—form prayer of several sentences, a joint "Gesegnete Malzeit" from us all, and after the meal a verse of Scripture, form prayer and another "Gesegnete Malzeit!" The meals are simple—Europeans call them American. Americans don't recognize all the dishes—and certainly miss others. All in all, they are very adequate, a real treat to the Europeans—some white bread, some sweet jam, fatty soups, etc., and good for us. We like to eat the black bread for a change.

After supper most of the group is free until 8:00 or 8:30. This, as well as the free time before supper, is time for croquet, hiking, etc. But still the complaint is, "We don't have enough time." Really the view from the castle hill or the "berg" is beautiful beyond description. From the window in this room, beyond a castle turret, one sees beautiful rolling farm lands, divided by centuries of inheritance divisions into many, many small patches. Readily I can count five shades of green, three of brown, three of yellow and gold. Shocks of hand-tied wheat bundles dot about a third of the plots.

Medical Conditions in Puerto Rico

The second article on this island, blessed with beauty, cursed with great poverty and need.

In addition to the varied medical problems common everywhere, the full range of tropical diseases presents itself in Puerto Rico. Some of these latter, such as leprosy and filariasis, are uncommon, still they have to be contended with. Disease is not as isolated, unpredictable happen-stance. Rather it is a composite of one or several unfavorable factors. Always a cause is present. Most factors causing disease are known and many of these are preventable. The association of poverty, ignorance, superstition, and disease are too well known to require comment. Practical, pragmatic disease prevention, therefore, resolves itself primarily into a social problem with medical care occupying a minor role.

There can be no doubt that the basic, preventable health problem of Puerto Rico is economic. There are too many mouths to be fed by the limited food produced on the island, so that adequate nutritional levels cannot even be approached. Without industrialization or other source of income the heavily populated island is unable to supply its nutritional needs from the outside. More and better food or else fewer people to consume the available food is a basic health problem of the island. Associated with this and of a common economic origin is the hopelessly inadequate housing. No wage earner or other producer can improve his housing situation as long as the more basic need of adequate food remains unmet.

With ignorance, supersition, selfish minority interests, and the like impeding attempts at solution, the problem has continued to grow rather than shrink in recent decades. Overall economic gains have more than been over-balanced by population gains.

Tuberculosis has for a long time been a leading cause of death on the island. In the past year it became the leading cause of death. Tuberculosis is an infectious disease which spreads under conditions of poor housing, overcrowding, and malnutrition. Part of the answer to its control lies in more sanitarium beds and improvement of detection and treatment facilities. However the basic answer can only be economic.

Clinic day at the hospital.

Hookworm spreads through contact of bare feet with contaminated soil. People who can't afford shoes either spend their lives in one place or else contact the disease.

Dysentery is spread by contaminated water and food supplies. Where municipalities or individuals cannot afford adequate sanitary measures and reliable water and food supplies,

The same basic ingredients are present in all the island's health problems—maternal and infant mortality, parasitic diseases, malaria, rheumatic, fever, etc., etc.

A Child suffering from undernourishment.

In the face of such discouraging prospects for success, medical activity has to do its best not only to alleviate and heal, but to attempt to prevent. Where incentive for a high level of practices are present —e.g. private practice for gain; or from Christian or humanitarian motives—medical measures are effective. Where such incentives are lacking or deficient e.g. state medicine, practice appears definitely to be conducted on a lower level. Poor people need medical service even more than those who are able to pay. For this reason a non-self-sustaining society, such as that of La Plata, and of Puerto Rico as a whole, will in the foreseeable future need increasingly more and better medical service.

DO MENNONITES BREAK THEIR PROMISE? IN THE WAR YEARS — — —

- We promised 2000 of our young men that we would help them secure an education after their release from CPS, paying their tuition.
- We vowed to ourselves that we would not forget that these men represented the whole Mennonite Church in their witness against war and that they did it without pay.

BUT NOW THAT THE WAR IS OVER — — —

- We have failed by $16,000 to contribute the amount we pledged ourselves to raise. In fact, we did only one-fifth of the job we promised to do for the 1947-1948 school year. We raised less than $4,000.
- Have we forgotten the promises we made in earlier days?

If you want to help erase this debt from the record of the General Conference and keep faith with our ex-CPS men, send your contribution to

A Ship! A Ship!

The true story of a missionary's experiences when shipwrecked on a voyage between Cape Town and London. A continued story.

by A. Donald Miller

BOOM! . . . . Or was it the word Doom which resounded through the ship as the torpedo struck its hull? Immediately the electric current failed; the many bulbs in the Dining Room faded to a dull red glow which swiftly passed into nothingness; we were plunged into total darkness the ship heaved over; there was a clattering of falling cutlery, breakin china and glass; and I, almost instinctively, found myself groping for my lifebelt beside my chair.

It had been so calm and pleasant a day, warmer than the six others which had preceded it since we had left Cape Town. It had seen the beginning of the Games Tournament; my wife had won her heat at deck tennis; I had lost mine at deck quoits. The evening had brought a rose and golden sunset. We went downstairs to our baths happy and hungry. Another day nearer home! And now we were far from land, away from ordinary courses, and would not be seeing port, so we reckoned for another eight days. About as far away as we could be from any mainland,—miles done,—miles to go, before our next calling-place in our roundabout journey.

When we came up from our cabins for dinner the black-out had begun. Not a chink of light was allowed to peep through from doors or portholes. But within the ship all was brightly lit.

Passengers from First Dinner were already up in the lounge. Mothers had taken their children to bed. We entered the dining room with its gleaming silver, its white-clad Indian stewards moving quickly to and fro its lively chatter. My wife and I faced one another from opposite sides of the table. Well had I reason to remember this last meal for many days! And after we had dined and cracked our nuts we lingered on, talking with the First Officer over coffee. And then............BOOM! . . . . . DOOM! !

The ship quickly righted itself. "Are you there dear?" "Yes." "Let's keep together." So we felt our way down our respective sides of the table, joined hands and began to grope towards the doorway and up the stairs. There was no time to go down to our cabins below for overcoats, or the little bags holding our treasures. Our instructions had been that if we were struck without warning we were to go straight to our boat—No. 8 port. Others were crowding up the staircase too. No panic; no shouting; voices steady and quiet. Just one mother pleading to get through the stream of people going up. After her child, poor woman.

So we passed out on to the deck. By now small emergency flares were alight. We came to our deck stations. Already some of our number were there, and almost immediately, against the deep blue, star-studded sky, we saw the black outline of our lifeboat being lowered from the boat-deck above. "Now Mrs. Mayne," said the warden, "Are your four children here?" "Yes" "Then over you go." And so they went, in their night clothes and overcoats, Robert, Lucy, Jane, and little Margaret and their mother. The names of the other ladies were called. "I don't want to go before you," said my wife. "You must dear; I'll follow directly." And, in perfect order, we got into the boat, and began to descend with a jerk, jerk down into the calm waters below.

After we had drawn away from the ship for five or six minutes, we rested oars and waited. We could hear the call of people still on the ship. Or were they in the water? We must wait a while for developments. I looked around. It was a most exquisite night. There was no moon, but the stars shone down in almost unbelievable brillance and profusion, casting gleams of light upon the water, wherever it was ruffled. I found myself following a double train of thought. One was upon the immediate events — those poor people still on the ship, I thought, God grant they may get off in time. And the other—queer that it should be so — was upon the beauty of the scene; was there ever so marvelous a night? I found myself repeating:

> When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers,
> The moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained,
> What is man, that Thou art mindful of him?

And then someone said, "Look, there's the sub!" And nearby it had 'surfaced' again, a long black ruler laid upon the blue-black waters. Our chatter stilled to silence. It was better not to act provocatively. And then, suddenly, another loud explosion, a great column of black smoke against the deep, blue sky, a crumpling up sound, and we knew that the ship had sunk, only twenty-three minutes after the first explosion. The submarine, its work done, disappeared beneath the surface.

That night was spent in looking around to find any in need of our help. We came across a waterlogged boat with people standing in it, half submerged, and with others clinging to its side. As soon as we neared it two or three of the Indian crew threw themselves across. Although we were crowded to capacity we managed to take on Lady Pearce and two of her four children, John and Agnes; and another lady, separated from her only baby. They were shivering with cold and shock, after their exposure in the water, but preserved an heroic self-control. In the darkness they took off their things and wrapped themselves in the few blankets with which our boat was provided. I can still see Lady Pearce's beautiful row of pearls, luminous against the coarse gray blanket that enveloped her. Later we heard that other two children had been taken in by another boat; and we found that the child of the other mother was also on another boat, to which we were able to transfer her.

GERMAN CASTLE . . . . From p. 13

(Americans think the farming methods are ancient—and so they are.) A woods near by is also intriguing, but after supper the mosquitoes "from Kansas" have their daily rallies. In the distance are mountains of the Pennsylvania variety. The old castle itself with its medieval architecture and many small details is romantic. We love our Ronneburg!

Our evening program started heavily on outside speakers lined up by the German representative—some high men in church and government. As it turned out, these have been limited to two instead of three a week. Language translations take time, break continuity, and are difficult in other ways. Last night Peter Dyck spoke on his convictions as a Christian C. O. We had a hot, but controlled discussion. More important than the speeches are the small group discussions, the whole democratic process of arranging our work, eating, sleeping, and playing. Much could be said about differences basis of unity, and inner needs. Suffice it to say that where language can be bridged we are individually challenged to share our deepest convictions.

To bed—seldom before 11:00, waking bugle at 6:45, morning meditations at 7:30. I forgot to mention we also have evening devotionals. It is the first time for most Germans (other than ministers) to lead in devotionals. Never have they had a religious life committee; yes, we do. Incidentally many of the German youths have referred to one or another meditation as the high light of their spiritual life.

Our work program is centered on the rebuilding of this old castle so it can be used as a youth center of the Evangelische Kirche. We hope and pray that it may serve a real purpose in the spiritual rebuilding of Germany. The work divides itself into four types. (1) Most of the men and some of the women are working on one wing of a castle where beams and pillars have been inserted to make two floors instead of one; flooring is being laid over layers of mud plaster; the ceiling will be plastered; and brick walls will be built from the rubble. The oak beams were extremely heavy, the sawing was slow—all by hand with dull handsaws—but considerable progress has been made. (2) The second project in terms of hours spent has been the housekeeping. The cooking has been not only for our group of 48 but also for 10 young refugee boys who live here, and about 10 workers of the castle. Besides these, the cooking force does most of the cooking for a group of 60 "frezeit kids" who are on one part of the castle grounds. This large number (not anticipated by us!) together with primitive conditions requires a lot of work. For example, all water used for drinking, washing, and laundry is hand drawn with one bucket out of a 270-foot open well! At first all laundry was done by knuckles alone; then one washboard was added, and now, two luxurious washboards! The girls do most of this work—the fellows are appreciative—even to the extent of voting to do away with tablecloths to cut down the washings! (3) One crew of the girls has been doing weaving by hand and with looms to make mats to cover the lower part of the castle walls. (4) This last week we began another men's project, boring holes by hand in the rock, dynamiting, and then hauling it for making a road up to the berg.

THE BIBLE GUIDEBOOK. By Mary Entwistle. (Cokesbury Press, Nashville; $2.50.)

This volume is a handbook of information about the land of the Bible. People, topography, plant and animal life, food, clothing, home life, customs, education, festivals, religion and religious leaders, rulers from the Old Testament to the Christian Era—in short, it contains almost every kind of Bible information one might wish to find. The simple style, the careful classification and indexing make it possible to find quickly the answers to one's questions. Children and adults, pupils and teachers alike enjoy using this book. This is the result of the extensive research and first-hand study of the Bible land by the author. It is a valuable reference work for teachers in Sunday Schools and Vacation Bible Schools.—Helen H. Mueller.

Beyond Our Own

OKLAHOMA CITY.—An order to admit a negro graduate student to the University of Oklahoma paved the way for the opening of a white educational institution in Oklahoma to Negroes for the first time in the state's history.

NEWTON, KANSAS.—Twenty-five years of service to Mennonitism in North America have passed into history for the Mennonite Weekly Review, a Mennonite family newspaper that has performed a signal service to English-speaking Mennonites on this continent.

GOSHEN, INDIANA.—The Seventh Annual Conference of the Rural Life Association and the Historic Peace Churches will be held at Goshen College, December 2 to 4, 1948. This annual meeting in held at one of the Quaker, Brethren, or Mennonite colleges each year.

GERMANY.—Providing help to the former German prisoners of war who are now returning from Russia by the thousands each month presents one of the most pressing tasks facing the churches in Germany today. Their rate of return may soon be speeded to one hundred thousand a month, according to a Russian announcement.

CHRIST'S UNIVERSAL CHURCH.—The anniversary of the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldier," which, for a full three-quarters of a century has been marching into the hearts and hymnals of Christians around the world, has recently been celebrated. Not so much remarkable for its age is this hymn, but for the reason that it achieved such widespread popularity in so short a time and that this popularity has sustained.

SAY "Yes" TO YOUR FAITH is the new general theme for this year's United Church Canvass program to be conducted in approximately 500 American communities during the fall emphasis period from November 14 to December 5, according to a recent announcement by Rev. Earle B. Pleasant of New York, National Director.

The main purpose of the program will be to (1) bring dramatically and forcefully to the attention to every community the importance of our religious institutions (2) to call each individual to participate more actively in the work of these institutions and (3) insure for the churches adequate financial support for 1948 through regular giving.

SANTA FE, NEW MEXICO.— Roman Catholic nuns, priests, anc brothers, were barred from teaching in tax-supported schools of the state in the first round in a suit brought by a group of New Mexico residents.

Salvation for the Christian is not merely getting to heaven; it is getting rid of sin so that we may become in the truest and highest sense God's sons in our hearts, in our homes, in the church, in the community, in the world.—Selected

TACT AND POINT are the twin indispensables in effective witnessing for Christ. When one reads for example of the methods of personal work of a evangelist like Finney and others like him one feels that all the emphasis is on point. When one hears of some modern methods of visitation evangelism one feels that all the emphasis is upon tact. Is it possible to be so concerned about the Gospel that we give no thought to the individual for whom the Gospel was especially intended? On the other hand, is it possible to be so much concerned about not hurting the individual that the point of the Gospel is never presented? In Jesus, method of dealing with people there was both fact and point. His incomparable love and understanding drew people to him; his deep, abiding convictions concerning the will of God for himself, for men, and for the world won them for God and discipleship. Tact is thus concerned with winning the person to ourselves; point, with winning them for Christ. True witnessing never omits the latter. True witnessing ever utilizes all the resources of the redeemed personality to point to Jesus Christ and him crucified.

If there is a real element of sympathy and understanding in witnessing on the one hand, there is also an element of conviction, absoluteness, or intolerance on the other. It is the intolerance of any other way short of Christ who is the way, the truth, and the life. It is the conviction that all truth, and life in its highest sense will lead us to and will be found in the redeeming Christ. It is the absoluteness of the Way of love that says that there is no more powerful force in the world than crucified love which once for all provided redemption for mankind as well as God's eternal lesson to mankind with regard to man's treatment of his fellowmen who have wronged him. From this it is clear that tact is wasted if unaccompanied by conviction. And conviction is meaningless if it is not shared in love. Tact and point belong together in witnessing for Christ.—J.J.E.

Staying true is as important as starting right.

A WELL KNOWN CHRISTIAN LEADER of our time in calling attention to the basic fallacy in the thinking of those Kansans who are saying that repeal of prohibition is the key to decency, at the same time pointed the way to the solution of one of the main problems that is embarassing the Church in the eyes of the world. He likened the repealist, who says that education not law is the solution, to the patient in the mental hospital who is not released, because, in his test for sanity, he feverishly sought to empty a tube of water with a bucket without paying any attention to a faucet that was turned wide open gushing water in faster than he could bail it out. If he had turned the water off first and then bailed, he would have been released. This applies as well to the problem of sin as a whole. Many in the church concentrate their energies on rescuing the sinner without implanting in his life the Spirit of God that will render him progressively less active in contributing to the chaos of the world; are they active in doing anything about the environment that drags him into sin. This is bailing without turning off the faucet. There is another group that concerns itself so much with the environment, with turning off the faucet, that they forget that the environment is made up of individuals whose lives must be changed—they forget about bailing. Jesus and Paul did both. They dealt tenderly with sinners' pointing them to deliverance; and, they fearlessly attacked the situations and institutions that that had led their converts astray. The Church is embarrassed today for two reasons; either it is saving the soul and ignoring the sinful environment, or it is trying to save the environment without doing anything for the individual who will live in it. Both are heretical by themselves. The blood of Christ was shed for us to give us the new heaven and the new earth as well as to make us new creatures in Christ Jesus.—J.J.E.

PASTORS NOTE!

OBSERVING NOVEMBER AS MONTH OF EVANGELISM

True evangelism is perpetual, not spasmodic. To help make evangelism a perpetual part of the church program, churches are encouraged to set aside one of the last two Sundays of November to emphasize the unfinished task of evangelism for which every Christian is responsible. The Evangelism Committee which sponsors the Month of Evangelism is sending to every pastor attractive leaflets based on the great commission of Christ as recorded in Acts 1:8. There will be enough so that each member may have a leaflet in hand while the pastor speaks on this text. Pastors are urged to slip these leaflets into the bulletins, staple them to bulletins, or hand them to the members as they come in and prepare a message that is geared to the above task to the end that our people will really begin to witness rather than stop any witnessing they have started during the Month of Evangelism. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few."

IN THE U. S. A.--COLD SHOULDER OR WARM WELCOME?

by William T. Synder

Today, 265 years after the founding of the first permanent Mennonite settlement in North America at Germantown, Pennsylvania, there are still Mennonite people in Europe who seek a homeland in America. The first Mennonite settlers in the new World were people of humble means but we now venerate them because they had the courage and conviction to establish homes in what was then a wilderness country. It can be accurately said that practically all of us come from refugee ancestry and that our people were helped greatly by other Mennonites who came earlier.

The Mennonite refugees of today do not have many opportunties for unrestricted migration that our forefathers knew several generations ago. However, their reasons for wishing to leave Europe are essentially the same—fear of persecution and a desire to find a place in which they can live peacefully.

Extended Hand or Hand-outs?

Congress passed the "Displaced Persons Act of 1948" last June but none of the D.P.'s have entered the United States since that time because of the delay in appointing a Commission to administer the law. This has been cleared now and a mission departed for Europe on Labor Day to begin the selection and processing of refugees eligible for admission to the United States. Assurance has been given that our Russian Mennonite refugees will be eligible provided they otherwise qualify under the immigration laws. The Mennonite people in the United States will then have an opportunity to help these people become established. The possibility of extending hands out instead of so-called "handouts" will, no doubt, be welcomed by most of the churches. The first steps now being taken are to locate housing and employment for them since the law provides that none may enter the country until both housing and employment are assured.

Your Letter a Passport to Freedom for Someone

It was recently announced in the church papers that persons knowing of housing or employment opportunities should write the MCC Akron office; there has been some response to this request but not sufficient for the number of immigrants we believe will qualify for United States immigration. Therefore, all who know of possible housing or employment opportunities should write the Akron office giving the following information.

Employment: Name and address of person offering employment
Brief description of the work
Housing: Name and address of person offering housing
Description of housing
Location

The number of Mennonites who will enter the United States is not definite yet but there is reason to believe it will be considerable. Shall we not let our refugee brethren and sisters know that in the United States the Mennonite people extend them a warm welcome and that even as our own forefathers found peace and plenty here, we are ready to help them find the same opportunities?

October 29. Army rules for handling conscientious objectors which have appeared in recent press reports apply only to objectors classified in I-A-O who are inducted as noncombatants. The Army has no jurisdiction over objectors classified in IV-E.

The Army is the only armed forces branch to which I-A-O's are now being assigned.

Noncombatant service and training have been officially defined as:

(1) Service in any unit which is unarmed at all times.

(2) Service in the Medical Department wherever performed.

(3) Subject to the individual's acceptance, any assignment, the primary function of which does not require the use of arms in combat, provided such assignment does not require him to bear arms or to be trained in their use.

(4) Noncombatant training consists of any training which does not have to do with the study of, or the use or handling of, arms or weapons.

With the above mentioned exceptions conscientious objectors in the Army are subject to full military discipline.

Mennonite World Conference Proceedings

Soo to be available is a compilation of messages delivered at the Mennonite World Conference held August 3 to 10 at Goshen, Indiana and Newton, Kansas. Those who attend the conference were impressed with these outstanding messages given on many topics related to Mennonite church life. More than forty Mennonite leaders from various countries of the world contributed to these discussions of Mennonite foreign missions, colonization, relief, institutions, peace testimony, Christian education young people's work, non-conformity, and Christian faith and life. The book will be valuable as a rich source of information and inspiration. The manuscript for the book is now ready for the press. The book will contain approximately 300 pages and should be priced at about $1.50 per copy. Advance orders may be sent to the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Council of Boards in Miniature

First Meeting, Middle District Officers and Committees Jointly

by Carl Lehman

At a meeting held during the session of the Middle District Conference at Wayland, Iowa last April it was decided by the officers and committee members that a meeting should be held the following September at Bluffton College of all officers and committee members. This meeting was to be patterned after the general meeting of the various boards of the General Conference and would serve as a clearing ground for common problems.

Clearing Ground for Common Problems

This first such meeting was called for September 18 and was well attended. The session was opened with a meeting of the entire group in the morning. After brief devotions the group separated into individual meetings of the various committees and were to be prepared to convene again later in the morning for another group session, at which time each committee was to have the opportunity to share with the group problems which might be of interest to others.

Joint Planning for Common Needs

Those who attended agreed that this type of coordinated meeting was worth while. Most of the committees would have had to meet in any case and this made possible a much more efficient handling of issues which concerns other committees. For instance, the Education Committee announced a plan for weekend leadership training meetings which would involve direct cooperation with such committees at the Peace Committee, the young peoples's work and others.

Young People Assisted

The Young People's officers requested help in the form of an adviser. They felt that their work was so new to them that they would be able to work much more effectively if they had such aid. Consequently the Executive Committee appointed such a person during their session in the afternoon.

The Council decided that for the sake of uniformity and since not all committees have a treasury of their own, all travelling expenses for the meeting was to come out of the conference treasury.

Central District President Present

The president of the Central District was invited to attend the meeting and his presence was appreciated. This too made possible an opportunity for closer cooperation which otherwise would not have been possible.

After the general meeting finally adjourned the individual committees again met to complete their own unfinished business. It would be difficult to completely evaluate the usefulness of this type of meeting. It has served a useful purpose in the General Conference and the feeling was quite prevalent that this first attempt in the Middle District was also very much worth while.

Dr. C. H. Smith

Dr. C. Henry Smith, who passed to his reward October 18, possessed an unusual combination of qualities. First of all he was a Christian who devoted his many talents to the work of the church, He firmly believed that the chief doctrines of his church correctly represented the will of God by Jesus Christ. Much of his time and effort was given to the promotion of love and peace among men. He believed and practiced the essential equality of all, without respect to race, color, or nationality.

His ability as a scholar was unquestioned. His election to membership in the nation's leading honorary society, Phi Beta Kappa, is evidence of that ability.

Many student generations acclaimed him a great teacher. He not only had an astounding mass of historical facts at his command, but he also possessed the ability to impart this knowledge to others. His classes were interesting, and he was able to impart his own enthusiasm for his subject to his students. History as he taught it was not a dead record of the past, but a story of the progress of mankind which pulsated with life.

Relatively few great teachers also possess interest and ability in research. One of Dr. Smith's great contributions was in this field. This talent was turned largely to investigations in the field of Mennonite history. This search carried him to many Mennonite communities in America and on several trips to Europe. Not only did he have the ability to discover facts, but also to record them in an interesting manner. He wrote and published six books in Mennonite history, the last being the monumental work, The Story of the Mennonites. His achievements placed him in a position of recognized leadership among the Mennonite historians of his day.

He also possessed good business judgment and an interest in economic affairs. For over twenty years he was president of the Citizen's National Bank of Bluffton, a position he held at the time of his death. His judgment was also used in the interest of the church, as in the work of the Board of Publications of which he was a member at the time of his death.

In spite of his many accomplishments, Dr. Smith was a modest man, one who enjoyed friendships with many people of all occupations and stations in life. He had a great interest in people, and due to that interest and his wide reading and store of information he was always a most interesting friend and companion.

Dr. Smith will be greatly missed by the wider Mennonite fellowship, the college, the community, and his wide circle of friends. Others will carry on the work which he has laid down, but no one can take his place.—Lloyd L. Ramseyer.

Must for the Prospective Missionary

by Marie J. Regier

WHEN I got up to speak in one of our churches a little girl in the front seat whispered almost with awe to her neighbor, "She is a missionary." When I first decided to become a missionary I did it because I thought it was the highest calling there was. Looking at the above statements superficially one might be impressed with the great work of being a missionary, but let's look a little deeper. Our motives are rarely pure. What does it mean to do the greatest piece of work? Why, it means that I am a little above the rest of the Christian folk. But why are people so willing to put us on a pedestal? The little girl merely reflected what she had been taught by the adults. Deep down beneath genuine admiration, I think there is a sigh of satisfaction, "Well, that frees me of that responsibility so I can afford to give them a little more honor."

Called with the Same Calling

I do think that the saving of souls, together with their bodies and society, is the greatest work there is; but, it does not make any difference just what particular phase of that work we are doing as long as we are doing the part which God meant for us. In the Christian Century a few weeks ago the editor made a statement something to the effect that we had learned, even overstressed the sacredness of every calling. From what I have noticed so far, at least among the Mennonites, I think, that statement is too optismistic. We still consider some callings sacred and others secular. But if it's a calling, it means that God calls us to it.

Hence, while the first qualification of a missionary is his conviction that there is nothng more wonderful than Christ, and nothing that will answer the needs of the world as will Christ's gospel, yet his second qualification, I think, should be that he realize that every true Christian is exactly on the same level as he is.

Subject to the Same Weaknesses

In the third place he should realize that because he is not a superior person, going overseas is not going to change his personality. If you are lazy in the homeland you will not be industrious over there, unless, of course, you have a new experience of Christ. If he is quick tempered he will be more so over there and he will find many things to irritate him. He will have no greater spiritual resources to draw upon there than here. It isn't so very much easier to speak to an unconverted stranger about Christ over there than to your neighbor over here.

Above the Race Problems

In the fourth place I would not urge you to be a missionary if you have any feeling of race superiority, even subconsciously. Of course, since by the grace of God we have had the Christian gospel for many years, it has made some difference in our culture and our moral standards. It should have much more than it has, but don't think that fundamentally your race or your nation is superior. It isn't.

Nor would I urge you to be a missionary if you are afraid of a few sacrifices, but don't have a martyr complex either. It is very easy to overestimate the sacrifices. You have to be separated from loved ones over long periods of time, but missionaries are not the only ones who have to do that. We may have to face death, but I don't think that the chances of an early death are much higher than anywhere else. We may have to pass through periods of privation, but think of the millions all over the world who have to do that. You should consider the fact that you may not be able to associate home with any one place. One missionary family in Peiping decided that home was a matter of family atmosphere anyway. But if you can't get a thrill out of trying to pack a suitcase so that it may have all the essentials and yet nothing over, maybe you ought to think twice before you go out as a missionary. But remember there are always compensations. You may not be able to spread out your things to your heart's content in any one place, but think of the joy of meeting people all over the country when you are on furlough and being received into their homes.

Perhaps you think by now that I am not interested in your becoming a foreign missionary. Oh, but I am. I think every young person should consider the mission field when he makes an inventory of his talents and the needs of the world, but he shouldn't think that if he decides against it, his responsibilities are therefore less. Then he has to support others and look after the salvation of his own country besides.

If . . . . Then Come!

But once you realize that your qualifications and the needs of the world would point to the mission field; and if you can face homelessness, if you love adventure, if you have sense of humor which includes a sense of proportion; if you are willing to face danger and depend upon God for grace in a period of privation, and if you have the love of God in your heart which you just long to share with others who have the same possibilities as you have though they have not had the same privileges of developing them; and if you are willing to meet the most bitter disappointments with a faith that God is still at the helm in spite of everything and if you consider it a privilege to be out on the frontiers and to delve into the sacred mysteries of another race which nevertheless needs the same Savior that you do, why then come over to Macedonia and help us.

—Rev. Howard G. Nyce, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, reports the receipt of the following telegram: "Arrived safely," signed by Puran Banwar and Helen Kornelson.

And What Happened?

. . .: he grew two inches spiritually that evening

We read about a young man who, angered by the urgings of concerned friends to give his life to the Lord, said, "Let me alone! I'll go my own way, and," he added sarcastically, "you may watch and see what terrible thing happens to me!"

And what did happen to him? Nothing of course, just nothing! God let him alone, as he wished, and while his former friends grew in grace and knowledge, in love, peace, and joy, that young man went on his rebellious and lonely way. Nothing happened to him!

We know a girl who seems to be always on hand when something happens. Is there a wedding in the neighborhood? She's on the fence with the other "kids." Does a house burn down? She's there. Does the ambulance scream past her house? She's on her bike and away. Sometimes we think she's seen too much, of the tragic especially, for her age, but she has the most expressive face, the most interesting and sympathetic manner, and she's good company, welcome everywhere.

We like understanding people, people who have been softened and mellowed by contact with both the seamy and the smooth sides of life.

One of the reasons why Jesus becomes so precious to us, so real and so sweet to know, is this: He can be "touched with the feeling of our infirmities." He suffered and sorrowed; hungered and was tempted; He was misundestood and hated. Everything that could possibly come to tempt His followers happened first to Him.

Has anything happened to you to make you a stronger, more helpful Christian? Do you hold yourself aloof in times of doubt or discouragement, refusing to help or be helped? Like Thomas, do you stand apart, missing the surprise visitations of the Lord?

Were you in the midweek service the night they had that simple but wonderful Bible study on prayer? Sammy said he grew two inches spiritually that evening. Were you in choir practice the night Daphne broke down when she tried to sing the solo part in "Take the world, but give me Jesus?" The whole choir had a prayer meeting on its knees that time and what a difference it's made in the singing! Were you there that Sunday morning when Deacon Stantan prayed for the starving millions in Europe? You might not have cared for that second piece of cake at dinner time, but your soul would have grown. Were you with the little group who went to sing for old Mrs. Hammond? They came away so touched, so blessed!

You can wrap your talents "in a napkin," if you like, and hide away with them, too, but you won't find happiness or blessing that way.

Get in the swim! Be active! Be one of those on whom your pastor, your young people's president, and the Lord, can really depend!

To Tell It Again

by Wesley C. Ewert

On Sunday afternoon, October 10th, at 3:00 P. M. members of First Mennonite Church and friends from the congregations of the Eastern District Conference, met at First Church to say farewell to Wilhelmina Kuyf as she was preparing to leave for her third term of service in China. This was a happy occasion. Rev. Ellis Graber read Scripture and led us in prayer. Greetings were extended to Wilhelmina by letter from the president of the Conference, Rev. Herbert Fretz. Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander sent greetings to the entire Kuyf family. Rev. J. J. Plenert spoke very fittingly on, "The Courage of a Christian" with a special word concerning the courage necessary for the return to war-torn China. Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson, in his own way, told of the factors which, some years ago, led Wilhelmina into the work of missions in China in the work of our Lord's Church. "Our meeting is not one of sadness'" said Dr. Johnson, "But it is with exceeding great joy that we see one so well fitted for her task, return to work in the calling in which she is called." Wilhelmina responded by saying that she was happy to return to China to tell again of "Christ and Him Crucified." Deacon A. B. Martin, on behalf of the Church, presented a gift to Wilhelmina, as a token of our esteem for her. After singing the hymn, "The Work is Thine, O Christ," we were dismissed with prayer and the benediction by Dr. Johnson. We then spent an informal hour of fellowship at which refreshments were served. To Wilhelmina we say, "God be with you till we meet again."

"The Mennonites are not in any immediate danger of losing their orthodoxy of belief! They are in grave danger, though, of losing their orthodoxy of practice" —Paul Shelly.

Freedom and Security

by Carl Kreider

"Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free . . . . If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:31, 32, 36).

"Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage" (Gal. 5:1).

"As free, and not using your liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, but as the servants of God" (Peter 2:16).

On the Personal Level

The problem of freedom also enters into the life of the individual at many points. College students are sometimes reminded that their success in college is dependent in part upon the use they make of the new freedom that college affords. Unless the college student is able to develop an inner discipline to balance his newly acquired freedom, his position in college may be very insecure. In several cases the Apostle Paul felt compelled to write to the early churches to warn them against abusing their freedom.

Mankind gropes. Sometimes men choose freedom, but they soon became frightened because of their lack of security. Sometimes men choose security, but they soon become restive because of their lack of freedom. Foolish individuals—why not look to Christ for the true solution of this agelong problem? Make yourselves slaves to Christ and then you shall be free indeed.

"Make me a captive, Lord,
Then I shall be free;
Force me to render up my sword
And I shall conqueror be."

The Apostle Paul started his epistle to the Romans: "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ." Paul was a slave. He rested in the security of God's everlasting love. Yet, all who read his letters must continue to marvel at the supreme freedom which he enjoyed.

Synthesis in the Gospel

Security and freedom, then, find their synthesis in the Gospel of Jesus Christ. An analogy may help make the relationship clear. People who play chess are often bewildered by the tremendous variety of moves which may be made. To one who has been accustomd to play checkers the great variety of possible moves in chess seems to afford the player scope for an almost unlimited number of possibilities. The queen can move forward, backward, to the right or to the left, and diagonally in any direction. The queen is not limited to move one block at a time but can move any number of spaces that are open. Similiarly the bishop, the rook, and the knight seem to be free to move almost anywhere. The inexperienced player is bewildered at the freedom which he seems to enjoy in this vast array of possible moves. If, however, a master player were looking over the novice's shoulder as he contemplated his vairous possibilities, it is likely that he would see at once that out of the multifarious opportunities for moves there is only one move that the novice could make and still win the game. If the novice would ignore the advice of the master, he would appear to have vastly more freedom. Before long, however, the exercise of this freedom in an unwarrantd way would lead the player into a position of checkmate: defeat.

Many people think of Christianity as a set of rules. If, therefore, they can only get away from the regulations of the church, from the requirements laid down by their parents, they can have true freedom. Sometimes they exert every effort to gain this false type of freedom and like the novice chess player ignore the advice of the Master. They try a little sin. When no fire comes from the heaven to consume them on the spot they venture more boldly into sin. Ultimately, however, they have worked themselves to the place where their final move brings them to the defeat of checkmate. The Master would have given advice which, though it may have appeared to circumscribe the freedom of the individual, would have led ultimately not to the overwhelming bondage of sin but to the glorious freedom of life in Christ Jesus.

Mankind is inevitably in bondage to something. The Jews of Christ's time were in bondage to Rome. The American colonists were in bondage to the British. Labor feels its bondage to capital, and capital, in turn, feels its bondage to labor. The carnal man is in bondage to sin.

Bondage That Frees

Let us rather become in bondage to one whose yoke is easy and whose burden is light. If so, we have the precious promise that we "shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

The synthesis of man's aspirations through the centuries and of man's supreme quest in this, our own generation, lies in the one supreme fact that freedom and security, not either, but both, may be gained from discipleship with Christ.—Reprinted from the Gospel Herald.

All through history man, in trying to work out his own salvation has chosen either freedom or security. When he received freedom he gave up security; when he achieved security, he lost his freedom.

RELIEF NOTES

October 8, 1948
Released via Mennonite Central Committee
Akron, Pennsylavnia

Relief Project in Formosa Begins

MCC work in Formosa began on September 18, at Ku Ku Tsu, a village of 446 people on the east coast of the island, and was extended to cover three other little villages during the following two weeks, after which the team had to return to their base for supplies. From September 18 to October 5, over 3,000 treatments were given to patients suffering from dysentry, malaria, trachoma, scabies, and other diseases. The personnel engaged in this medical work include Robert Hess, M.D.; Martha Hess; June Strait, R. N.; William Ewert; and Erma Ewert. The initial period of operation has been very encouraging, the people of the island being very cooperative and appreciative. Though a Chinese possession now, Formosa had formerly been under Japanese rule and even now retains a Japanese culture.

Volendam reaches destination

The S. S. Volendam was expected to arrive at Montevideo at daybreak October 27, according to a recent cable. At that port the Danzig Mennonite group will disembark, while the remainder of the passengers will proceed to the port of Buenos Aires.

The immigrants entering Uruguay are to be housed temporarily in two barrack type buildings, one located in the southwest part of the country, and the other about 250 miles farther to the north. The people will be cared for here until plans for the long-range settlement program can be discussed with the immigrants. At present, Herman J. Andres and John W. Warkentin are in Uruguay preparing to receive the people. Much assistance has been received in this work from other Christian groups, including the American-Friends Service Committee, the YMCA, and several Christian ministers in Montevideo.

Paraguayan Insurrection

An insurrection lasting only eighteen hours took place recently in Asuncion, the capitol of Paraguay. Word has been received that none of our people have been affected by this incident, nor will it have any apparent effect on the plans for transshipping the Russian Mennonite group from Buenos Aires to Paraguay.

Volendam Colony

John W. Warkentin visited the Volendam Colony just before leaving for Uruguay, and he reports that these people have made very good progress in getting their communities and community life organized. They are prepared to receive the additional immigrants who are coming to their colony.

Canadian Immigration

J. J. Thiessen of Saskatoon, Sask., and William T. Snyder of the Akron staff, contacted the Canadian government at Ottawa on October 21 and 22, to inquire regarding the possibility of bringing Mennonite refugee non-relatives to Canada, if assurances of housing and employment facilities are given. This request was received kindly with the promise that an answer would be given within ten day or two weeks.

The Marine Tiger is due to arrive at Hailifax about October 29, carrying over 300 Mennonite refugee Passengers. This represents one of the largest movements of Mennonite refugees to Canada under IRO sponsorship, since the Canadian immigration began. These people have been processed through Gronau and Fallingbostel camps in the usual way and are all joining close relatives in Canada.

U. S. Immigration

The General Black, the first ship bringing U. S. immigrants under the D.P. Act of 1948, is expected to arrive in New York City late in October. The group of immigrants does not include any Mennonites, but it is hoped tha later sailings will carry Mennonite immigrants to enter the United States. The Displaced Persons Commission has been very favorable toward our Mennonite people. In the American Zone of Germany, from which all D.P. immigration to the United States is being drawn, our Mennonite refugee migration staff is working to prepare our people to qualify under the act.

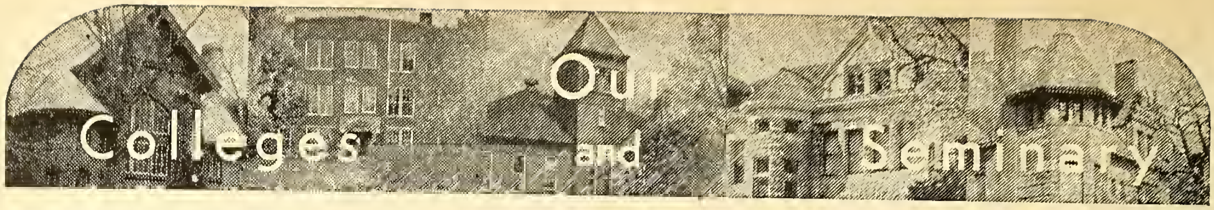
The response from the Mennonite constituency in providing housing and employment facilities has been very good. Announcement will be made within another month regarding the filling of the requests of those persons who have indicated that they want to take Mennonite immigrants.

Brook Lane Farm

Ruth Friesen, R. N., of Hillsboro, Kansas, is returning to Brook Lane from a short period of service at Bethesda, the Vineland, Ontario, home for mentally ill. Edna Nissly of Mogadore, Ohio, who has been working at the Christian Reformed Mental hospital in Michigan, will also be returning to Brook Lane early in November.

Sunday October 31 was the dedication date for Brook Lane Farm. This is the mental hospital in the eastern area to be operated by the Mennonite Central Committee. Constituent members and other friends are invited to visit Brook Lane particularly at this time before the facilities are used by patients. The facilities of the hospital include the small new building and the remodelled house and dormitory. The dedication service was held in the afternoon between three and four o'clock. Brook Lane Farm is located eight miles northeast of Hagerstown, Mr., just east of the small town of Leitersburg. This is the former site of the Leitersburg CPS farm unit.

—The HANDBOOK OF INFORMATION (YEARBOOK) of the General Conference for 1948, giving statictics for the year 1947, together with the latest list of the officers of the Conference and ministers of Conference churches, is now in the process of being distributed. Copies are available for 25 cents each from your three Conference book stores—Berne, Newton, and Rosthern—or from the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.



THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

October 30, 1948

Once again the rural life movement came to this vast metropolitan center as the Mennonite Seminary community donned overalls and working togs for the annual "Clean-Up Day." Leaves were raked, shrubs were trimmed, windows were cleaned, storm windows were put up, trash was disposed of, and in general the appearance of things was greatly improved at 4614 Woodlawn. Toward the latter part of the afternoon Mrs. Henry Grimm supervised the distribution of delicious doughnuts and coffee.

On Thursday evening, the Seminary was greatly stimulated by the visit of Professor David D. Eitzen of the University of Southern California. He came to Chicago to attend the International Congress on Emotional Development, a congress being attended by psychologists from all over the world.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Student Work Day was held Wednesday, October 27. Students secured jobs in the community and the money earned was turned in to the Auditorium-Phyisical Education Building Fund. By the end of the week $964.20 had been turned in to the fund as a result of this work. It seems certain that by the time all have reported the goal of $1,000.00 will be exceeded. The Guardmen's Quartet gave the first number of the College Concert Series November 1. Other numbers on the series are Nancy Carr, Soprano, January 12; Herbert Renison, Pianist, February 21; Blafka Instrumental Trio, March 22; and Dr. Francis S. Moore, Organist, April 19. Invitations have been mailed out to ministers and womens organizations of the churches for the Ministers' Conference and Women's Conference to be held on the campus during Bible Lecture week, November 17, 18. The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees will be held November 19. With these various meetings on the campus during Bible Lecture week there will likely be quite a number of campus visitors.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

October 25 found most of the students back in school after one week of corn picking vacation. "Kitty Foyle," the Academy play, is to be given in the college gym November 4 and 5. The Student Association has decided to put out an annual this year. The election for the staff was held Thursday, October 28. Lois Hieb was elected editor and Marge Preheim, business manager of this year's "Lark." As guest speaker in chapel this week we had the Rev. Wm. Stauffer from Sugarcreek, Ohio. He spoke to us on "What Is Inside Man." In this message he spoke of the inability of man to realize that he is of heaven and of earth. Man is prone to forget that he is of this earth and subject to the evils of it. He also brought out very clearly that the only way to be completely free is to fully surrender to Christ. President Miller spoke at the Silver Lake M. B. Church on Sunday, October 31, the occasion being the fiftieth jubilee of M. B. foreign missions.

CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

On October 24, the Canadian Mennonite Bible College had its formal opening. It was an occasion of thanksgiving and praise. Many friends of Christian education came to join us in these services. Rev. J. J. Thiessen, of Saskatoon; Rev. H. S. Friesen, of Winkler, Manitoba; Rev. G. G. Neufeld, of Whitewater, Manitoba; and Rev. Arnold J. Regier, President of the College, served as speakers for the day.

A young people's program which centered in Voluntary Service was planned for the evening. A number of students from the College and from our sister Mennonite Brethren College gave reports of summer experiences from various Voluntary Service projects in which they had participated. A quartet from the Mennonite Brethren College also rendered music at this service.

Rev. J. J. Thiessen was with us for four days during which he spoke to the students each chapel period and evening. His messages proved to be a great inspiration to all members of the College family. It was a period of dedication and spiritual inspiration.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Rev. C. R. Findley, pastor of the Evangelical United Brethren church of Newton, addressed the student ministers on "The Minister's Message to the World of Today" at their annual banquet on Wednesday, Nov. 3 at 6:30 p. m.

"Evaluating the Effectiveness of the Student Christian Association on Our Campus" was the theme for the Cluster Conference which brought six college Christian service groups together on the Bethel College Campus, Saturday, Oct. 30.

About fifty students from Tabor, McPherson, Sterling, Kansas Weslyan, and Hesston were the guests of Bethel students at this all day meeting

"My Heart's in the Highlands," the all-college play, closed the Homecoming activities at Bethel college on Saturday, November 6. The afternoon program began with a parade of floats headed by the Homecoming Queen, Betty Neufeld, and her attendants, Linda Klein and Edith Claassen. At 2 o'clock, Bethel played College of Emporia in a football game at the Newton Athletic park.

Voluntary Service Instead of Conscription

Opportunity Today

Mennonite Voluntary Service is an organized way to help young men and women:

- —to express with their lives that we take Christ seriously
- —to express that nonresistant love is positive
- —to express in service our appreciation as Christian citizens
- —to express our love for people of other nations and colors.

C.P.S. taught us many lessons on how young people can serve and witness. We believe the Lord used the experience of C.P.S. and relief to prepare us for a continuing task. We now have the background and the beginning to develop a church-wide volunteer program to which sincere young Christians can be challenged to give a year or more of their lives in a special service, in work where these talents can be invested in a variety of worthy causes.

Mennonite Central Committee Voluntary Service Units are now operating in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Europe, and the Caribbean areas. There are places for young people of differing blackgrounds—farming, construction, teaching, nursing, and others. The projects are available now because individuals have volunteered in the past. As more volunteer, more projects and a greater variety will be provided in the future.

Volunteers will be received every two months—such as Nov. 15, Jan. 15, Mar. 15, and continuing. Volunteers will come to the Akron Heaquarters for a month of general orientation and training. There will be basic training in areas such as the personal devotional life, our nonresistant belief, applying love, the story of the Mennonites. Also each day there will be work which will be considered as a part of the total service and training. After this period at Akron, they will go directly to their places of service. The period of training and service together is 12 months for the U.S., 15 month for Mexico, 18 months in Puerto Rico, and 24 months in Europe.

Paraguayan Mennonites Need a Doctor

by Jakob Friesen, Bluffton, Ohio

Jakob Friesen comes from the Chaco in Paraguay. He is in the United States studying to become a medical doctor. He plans to return to the Chaco and serve his people as a doctor. He is one of a group of one dental and two medical students in America planning to return to their people in South America. The following article gives the vision of need that has come to Jakob.

The Young People's Union, in co-operation with district youth organizations is helping to finance the education Jakob needs. Thus, each local youth fellowship can feel itself a part of this program by giving it their support.

A COMMUNITY WITHOUT A DOCTOR

Only a few Americans have been in Paraguay, and only those really can understand the situation and the problems the Paraguayan Mennonites have to face time and again. The Mennonite settlements are new, and there is need everywhere; but first and formost I think is the need of medical care. Health is basic for every progress, and this holds true also for the Mennonites in Paraguay. Proper medical treatment is not always given since there is not always a doctor. My home community, Colony Fernheim, has a hospital; but it did not always have a doctor. Doctors usually stayed only for one or two years and then left again, except for Dr. John R. Schmidt who served us nearly five years and who served us well. The other settlements were less fortunate; they did not even have a hospital. Our settlements are so isolated that it is hard to get doctors; and for us to go to a doctor when we don't have one in our community is also very difficult and in cases of severe illness might even be too far and take too long. If illness strikes an American home, they go to their doctor in town; or if they can't reach him they simply go to the next one who lives 20, 30, or 50 miles away— but what are 50 miles here in America. It is merely an, hour's drive, while in Paraguay 50 miles is a long day's driving in the hot summer sun and then there isn't even a doctor that close. There is no one living that close except for a few rancheros and Indians.

Thus, we can see that to the Mennonites in Paraguay it is of great importance to get doctors who are willing to stay there not only for two or three years but all the time since epidemics and other severe illnesses and accidents cannot be postponed until the next doctor comes—if one is willing to come at all. Such intervals without a doctor can mean death of many that otherwise probably would still be with us. Active leading members of our community have been taken away during such periods, and our colony has tried to prevent such intervals if possible or shorten it to its minimum length.

Colony Fernheim has a population of over 2,000 people; Colony Menno which is near by counts close to 3,000; and the Neue Ansiedlung that has recently been settled by the newly arrived Mennonites from Europe has between 2,000 and 3,000 people. All those live in the Chaco, far away from the rest of the civilized world, and surrounded only by bush and the Indians that live in the bush. The absence of medical supervision during an epidemic could be disastrous and would be disastrous.

Especially important is medical care for the Mennonite immigrants who came to Paraguay in 1947-48 and who are still coming. They do not only have to adjust themselves in the purely psychological sense, but the new environment will influence and affect their health as well.

There are various sicknesses and diseases of which some are spread through insufficient sanitary conditions. Hookworm is a disease prevalent among children; and if a thorough check-up would be given to everyone, probably some more enemies of our health would thus be brought to light. Therefore, it is important that a doctor has the complete confidence and co-operation of all the people and who is interested in the general welfare of all the people and who takes time and effort to go from village to village to check the health of every member. Thus, getting a clear picture of the general health of the colony he would be able to take more effective measures in preventing further spreading of sickness of diseases and could start effectively on a health program.

Finally, I would like to say that we cannot always depend on the help of others. We have to get on our feet and fill those places with our own men and women. To do that we have to send them out to be trained so they might render good service and effectively replace others.

A Ship! A Ship!

The story of shipwreck continued from last week.

by A. Donald Miller

So the night passed as we hunted the waters, coming upon empty rafts and spars but finding no other people in need. Torch-lights flashed messages from boat to boat. We sat higgledy-piggledy in the positions we had first taken, I forward and my wife aft. The stars shone on in their profusion. The air grew colder. We waited for the dawn.

It was a brilliant morning when we set off upon our long journey. The six boats which had been successfully lowered drew together. Red sails were hoisted. They cast bright purple reflections upon the blue seas as they flapped idly with the swell. An exchange of names was made to discover who was missing. A few names were called again and again . . . . Among them was the name of the chief wireless officer. Evidently he had gone on tapping his S.O.S. to the end; but it would seem that our instruments must have been put out of action by the first torpedo, for no ship appeared to pick up our message. The captain told us our position and that to attempt to reach either Africa or South America was impossible. Our one hope of land was the tiny speck of island territory, St. Helena, 450 miles away, in a direction which was stated to us. Perhaps if currents did not take us out of our course, we might reach there in a little over a fortnight.

And then, on our boat, we discovered a grievous loss. Our compass, so precious, was taken out of the locker and found to be splintered and thrown out of action by the shock of the first torpedo! What would happen if, as was so likely (and as indeed proved to be the case), we become separated from the other boats? To be in the wide ocean without a compass, with a tiny island far away as our only haven, was indeed a perilous situation.

My wife came to the rescue. "I have a compass in my pocket," she said to everyone's delighted surprise. And from it she produced her compass, looking like a hunter watch. "I'm a Guide, you see!" It was the compass she had used for trekking with the leper girls at the Purulia Leper Home and Hospital.

"Let's test it," called out the Captain from his boat, when he had heard of our loss and find. And so we kept parallel with his boat for a time; calling over our direction; until at last he called back, "Good; it's quite accurate." What a vindication of the guide's motto to "be prepared"! The compass was our friend and guide during lonely days and cloudy nights to come; and when—to anticipate—we were at last rescued we were told that we were dead on our course!

Everyone was in amazingly good spirits. Repartee of the obvious kind was exchanged between the boats. "It is to be bacon and eggs for breakfast this morning?" "Don't forget your round with me at Deck Tennis this morning at 10:30." "What about a cup of tea before we begin?"

While we were waiting for the Captain's word to start off in our little convoy I looked over the side of the boat into the clear pale blue water. A couple of feet, below, a great milk-coloured shark was patiently waiting, its little dark pilot fishes in close attendance. They wanted their breakfast, too!

We now began to sort ourselves out. We were a typically mixed crowd, fifty-five of us all told, in a twenty-eight foot boat. Forward of the mast were single British passengers and members of the crew. There was Max Johnson, transferred to us from another boat when it was found we had no navigating officer on board, and himself a ship's officer of another line who was a passenger going on leave; he became our skipper, and at his turn as helmsman he had to contend with a badly injured and painful hand which my wife dressed for him. The other two watches at the helm were taken by a couple of grand quartermaster Scotsman,—Macmillian and Howard. There was a statuesque, Viking kind of grandeur in Mac's hatchet-jawed face as he sat at the rudder, lean and bronzed, his pale blue eyes scanning the horizon. We owed a very great deal to those three men, for helmsman's work can be very exhausting. There was Billy the electrician whose clothes had been ripped to shreds in the most fantastic fashion, and who had a nasty groin wound which it fell to me to dress; he had been in his cabin when the torpedo struck, and the door had crumpled in on him, and he had been hauled out by a friend. He looked a ghost of a man from the shock which he had suffered; but he proved a fine fellow in the days ahead, and was expert at massaging swollen legs with oil. Then there were others, ranging from youth in "Young Sparks," the junior wireless officer, and four gunners—three military and one naval—to two men of advancing years, both of whom we lost before we touched land again. It was upon the older folk particularly that the strain was greatest. (To be continued)

THE KITCHENER — WATERLOO FIRESIDE

by Andrew Shelly, Kitchener, Ontario

It is 9:15 Sunday evening, October 17! Over four hundred people are packed into our church which seats 350. At least 80 per cent are young people. Outside, people started coming about 8:30, when our evening service closed. By nine o'clock the pews were filled, and practically all the benches, placed along the side walls, were occupied. Then, a few minutes later they were standing in the mothers' room and entrance!

Something special? No, this is the usual experience on a Sunday evening. It is the time of "the Fireside"—an interdenominational weekly young people's function. For three Sundays it has been held in our church, but now moves on. In all, about 15 churches, representing 9 denominational groups (counting the four Mennonite groups as but one, which we really are), co-operate actively. Every Mennonite church co-operates!

What is the program which attracts these people? At nine o'clock the pianist played the song, "Every Day with Jesus," which was the signal for all to stand and sing heartily. This was followed by a short prayer. Three hymns, led by an enthusiastic young man, were then sung: "We're Marching to Zion," "I am Thine, O Lord," and Leaning on the Everlasting Arms."

Howard Correll noted Canadian Gospel solist, sang two selections. (Usually local talent is used). After this, "Standing on the Promises" was sung. Another selection was sung by the guest artist which was followed by the receiving of the offering.

Two more hymns were sung: "Blessed Assurance" and "Whiter Than Snow."

The inspirational address was given by a minister of the Evangelical church. He spoke on "What Is a Christian?" "Whatever else a Christian may be, he is one who believes in Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour," said the speaker. "Until that is done there is no use talking about anything else," he continued. Further: "A Christian is a partaker of the Spirit of Christ . . . . regulates his personal conduct according to the principles of Jesus Christ . . . . one who co-operates with Christ . . . . and grows steadily in the likeness of Christ."

The meeting closed with the singing of "Only Trust Him," and the great crowd went home.

How did all this start? Well, it is approximately ten years ago that a small group of Christian young people thought it would be profitable to gather together after the regular Sunday evening service. Others came. The idea caught fire. It mushroomed! But, unlike some mushroom movements the organizational structure and policy of operation was basicly sound, which has kept the interest keenly alive.

Now—from October to May—the Kitchener-Waterloo Fireside moves from church to church, carrying with it a powerful influence for good.

The organizational structure of the Fireside is simple. Actively co-operating churches send representatives which comprises the executive committee. President, vice president, secretary-treasurer are the officers. Other duties and delegated—securing speakers, arranging for musical events, carting books, etc. Executive meetings are held once a month.

What have been the benefits of the Fireside? It has provided a splendid place for young people. The informality and enthusiastic warmth makes a later service attractive. The inspiration of hearty singing is wholesome. Without speaking about unity, it unifies the young people of many denominations. (Represented on the program here described were five, and of course many more in the audience.)

Show Slides on Mexico Service Unit

Melvin and Frances Funk have returned from Mexico where they have been serving for a year as leader and matron of the Voluntary Service Unit. This unit was begun a year ago. For the month of November they will be available to some churches in the central area to give illustrated reports on the work in Mexico and also Gulfport, Mississippi. Address requests to Melvin Funk, c/o C. H. Funk, Route 3, Hillsboro, Kansas.

The first special training school one-year Voluntary Service workers will begin November 15 and continue to December 15. This will be held at the Akron headquarters.

Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, in an American Magazine article has said, "But even if we were to find, tap, and pump out all the oil in the world and pour it into the sea, we could still produce, with the aid of atomic energy, more oil than we could possibly utilize."

Two hundred and fifty million illiterates throughout the world have learned to read by the phonetic method according to reports by Dr. Frank Laubach.

MISSIONS AND RELIEF are twins, being born only four chapters apart in the book of the Acts. We cannot divide missions and relief any more than we can dare to take Acts 6 and 7 out of the Bible! These chapters lay down the fundamental principles for the relation between these two great necessary tasks of the church of Jesus Christ. When these first men were appointed to take care of the neglected widows, they were instructed to seek out men of honest report full of the same Holy Ghost that filled the men who brought the glad tidings of redemption and the salvation of the soul. The same Holy Spirit was in Stephen, the relief worker, as was in Paul and Peter, the evangelists. This passage further indicates the tremendous responsiblility that lies upon the spirit-filled relief worker. His is neither the single task of bringing the people the Gospel of Jesus Christ as an evangelist, nor is it the task of helping people as a social worker. He has the combined job of helping people with their physical needs and doing it in the name of Jesus Christ. Such a witness will have the inevitable result that Stephen's witness had. It played a major role in giving to the world one of the greatest missionaries of all time, for we are told that Saul, later called Paul, stood by at the stoning of Stephen, the relief worker. If the above is true, how can we explain our constant instant insistence upon keeping the soul-saving Gospel of Jesus Christ before people and the present rather drastic reduction in contributions toward the physical needs of the world. Is it possible that the reduction of our relief witness is making it impossible for God to call people into the great missionary task as he was able to do at least in a major part through the witness of Stephen to Paul?—J.J.E.

IT IS GENERALLY CONCEDED that Christianity has enemies, but few people ever stop to consider who these enemies are. Is our reluctance to name these enemies our own fear that Christianity is not equal to the power they possess, or is it because we feel so comfortable in our Christianity that we do not want to face them?

Let me suggest four enemies which Christianity needs to face in our day with indomitable courage. There is, first of all, our materialism. We are a people strangely possessed by things. We are willing to compromise our Christian principles for material things. Honesty and truth become secondary in the scale of values where material gains are concerned. Materialism has so bewitched our civilization that there is a constant striving to be able to say, "Lo, take thine ease, thou hast many goods, eat, drink, and be merry."

There is a second enemy, that of secularism. We may also call it indifference. There are no high and holy causes that stir the average man. The atomic bomb may threaten his extinction unless there is built a world of brotherhood, but he feels that this really is not his business. He farms, he is in business, somebody else has to take care of that problem. There is the call to feed the hungry, the call to send out missionaries, there is the call to heal the sick, to visit the despairing, to restore hope. All of these leave him cold. He is comfortable and busy with himself. This secularism and indifference constitute a real enemy.

There is Communism. The popular conception of Communism has frightened many people. It is regarded the enemy of everything: freedom, business, religion. Strangely enough, people think it can be stopped with bullets. What we need to stop Communism is something much more radical than Communism, namely the Christian gospel. Let Christians take Christianity out of its "Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes" and put on overalls as we find it in the Sermon on the Mount, and it will bring greater changes and more good than Communism ever could.

There is Fascism, not the European brand, but the American brand. It is expressed in maintaining the status quo. Any practical application of the gospel is decried. The C. O. is regarded as a communist. Any attempts to apply Christianity to the economic order are likewise Communistic activities. Our American Fascism is expressed in selling our rights. The state is coming to be supreme. Let the state educate our children. Let the state take over business. Let the state determine our social issues and let it require of us what we should do and we have Fascism full grown. There are today too many people who will sign over to the state their life and their property. Then the individual has been lost. He is nothing but a pawn in the hands of the state to be used and manipulated as the whims of the moment dictate.

These enemies threaten everyone. Christianity needs to rise up against them.—D.C.W.

ELECTION RESULTS ARE IN and the nation is once more ready to settle down to its task of meeting the problems of this critical world hour. As citizens, we have had the privilege of exercising our right to support the candidates of our choice. Now that the elections are over and the candidates have been given their verdict, it is ours to support them with our prayers and interest. Paul, writing to Timothy, urges him to pray with these words: "I exhort therefore that first of all, supplications, prayer intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty for this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour." The words of Paul, written centuries ago, are still applicable to our day and as Christian citizens we have the solemn responsibility of prayer in behalf of our leadership.'—from Eden Chronicles, Moundridge, Kansas

Our Relief Witness Threatened

Relief Contributions Dangerously Low
751 Refugees to Uruguay

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA,—The limited amount of relief materials now coming in to the various food warehouses is bringing about increasingly deep concern to those responsible for allocating materials for foreign relief purposes.

The MCC workers continue to report definite needs and have given suggestions for the kinds and amounts of materials that will be essential to carry on a minimum program commensurate with the needs which prevail. It is strongly urged that all of our people do everything possible to provide the supplies essential to the continuation of our relief services and contacts "In the Name of Christ." All types of materials are still needed this year; especially needed are meats and fats.

Relief Shipments

The following relief materials from the United States and Canada, valude at a total of $92,005.48 left port during the month of October:

To the British Zone of Germany: 256½ tons flour, 34 tons wheat, 7 tons mixed foods; to American Zone of Germany: 30 tons flour, 49 tons wheat; to French Zone of Germany: 34 tons wheat; to Austria: 35 tons flour, 23 tons mixed foods; to India: 34 tons wheat; to China: 90 tons wheat; to Paraguay: 1000 rolls of barbed wire.

Uruguay: New Homeland for Mennonites

On October 27, when the Volendam arrived at Montevideo and the 751 Mennonite refugees disembarked, a new chapter in Mennonite history began. Never before had a group of Mennonites called Uruguay their homeland.

Uruguay is the smallest of the South American republics, being about the same size as the state of Nebraska. Situated among a number of larger and stronger nations, she has during the past twenty-five years been solving through peaceful means many problems which today beset other nations of the world. The government is something like that of the United States, having a president and congress elected by the people. The country has the highest standard of living and highest percentage of literacy of any Latin American country. Agriculture and livestock raising are the chief industries since the land is fertile and vegetation abundant.

Although the prevalent religion in the country is Roman Catholic, there is separation of church and state. The constitution provides for religious freedom to the extent that those who hold conscientious scruples against war are given exemption accordingly.

In spite of these encouraging factors these people will doubtless find their settlement in a new land to be a hard struggle. Many problems face pioneer settlers. These people will need the assistance of the North American brotherhood in establishing their life in Uruguay.

Relief and Service Personnel

Norma Jost of Hillsboro, Kansas, sailed for Germany on October 8. Mary Byler of West Liberty, Ohio and Howard Blosser of Columbiana, Ohio left on October 8 for second terms of relief service in Europe. Vesta Yoder of McPherson, Kansas left October 8 for Puerto Rico. William Enns of Winkler, Manitoba left October 11 for Paraguay. Paul and Nancy Conrad returned from Ethiopia on October 11. On October 13, C. Warren Long returned from Belgium, Katherine Duerksen from Germany, and Marvin Wasser from France.

Franklin Steiner of Dalton, Ohio recently joined the MCC staff at Akron.

"We'd All be Drafted for World War III" —UNLESS

by John T. Neufeld

The upper line in this heading is taken from the headlines of an article in last Saturday's Chicago Daily News. The writer goes on to say that Uncle Sam will need 75,000,000 men and women and that the draft will have to include men, women and children. Plans are being prepared for such a mobilization of the nation's man and woman power. The saddest part of the write-up is the statement: "A recent Gallup poll indicates that 60 per cent of Americans feel a law should be passed now requiring all citizens under 65 to register with draft boards for defense or war work." If this last statement is true then, according to our humble judgment, this nation is indeed in a dangerous state, and we might say worse off than a heathen nation.

Now comes the "UNLESS." This is our appendix to the above article:

UNLESS

We who hold the Christian Gospel in our hands begin to be in earnest about winning people to Christ and His way of life. It is the eleventh hour but there is still an hour to work in, an hour to plead with people to come to Christ; an hour to pray for the salvation of America; an hour for our churches and Sunday Schools to make disciples of all nations and to teach them all things whatsoever I have commanded you. The Sunday School as the teaching arm of the Church is indeed very much adapted to this program of winning people to Christ and teaching them the things that Christ has commanded. Let's act.

Gratification or Gratitude?

by R. L. Hartzler

GREAT days of the year should challenge our minds as well as lift our hearts; they should make us thoughtful as well as make us glad. The surge of emotion which such days beget is good; but of itself it soon evaporates in the continuing stress of life, and life goes on much as before, unless that movement of feeling be accompanied by processes of thinking which linger and so make life different because such a day has come.

Again the time comes on when our chief executive, according to honored tradition, calls upon us as individuals and as a nation to consider the manifold good which has come to us, and to pause to render fitting thanks therefor. Such contemplation should give rise to praise and gladness; but we would it should also induce to some thoughtful introspection. To that end we raise the question of whether our response to the fact of so much good having been ours, is one of real gratitude, or whether it savors of mere gratification.

Appreciation or Satisfaction

Gratitude is a sense of appreciation for favors received, accompanied by a feeling of goodwill and obligation toward the benefactor. Gratification is a sense of satisfaction or pleasure arising from the satisfying of a mental or physical desire or need. Gratitude takes account primarily of the other's having given; gratification thinks mainly of oneself having received. Gratitude induces to some attempt by word or deed to bring honor to the name and joy to the heart of the giver; gratification contemplates the prospect of further benefits to be derived. Gratitude seeks to give back to the giver for the sake of the giving; gratification returns the favor in hopes of receiving another. Gratitude is an unselfish joyous response to kindness; gratification springs from a concern that centers chiefly around oneself.

Consider, moreover, that gratification is measured by the relation of the gift or favor or need, by its size or bounty, its possible service to oneself or group; while gratitude is commensurate with one's realization of the affection expressed by the benefactor in or through what is given. The grateful spirit thinks not so much of what it has received, as of the spirit which prompted the giving. The gift may be large, it may be small; it may have cost the giver much or little; that makes little difference if the receiver feels that at best the gift was scarcely able to express the wealth of goodwill and affection in the heart of the one who gave it. The ungrateful person takes no account of that affection, but coldly thrusts it back upon the giver.

Observe further that a benefit received is a source of gratitude only so long as the one receiving it is assured of the goodwill of the other—so long as he believes the other really seeks his good. When that assurance fails, when one questions the motives of the other or feels that he has a sinister purpose back of what is done or given, gratitude never follows. Then one feels that he is being manipulated, used for the other's ultimate good, making his gratification the end and oneself the means to it. Resentment rather than gratitude is the result.

Gratitude Must Issue in Service

Note finally that gratitude is not complete, does not come into its own unless or until its joy be leavened by a sense of obligation and a willing desire to fulfill that obligation to, or for the sake of the one from whom the good has been received. In terms of our Christian faith, gratitude means not only the welling up of affection toward our Heavenly Father and Redeemer, but also the dedication of our service to Him. Gratitude should—real gratitude will—issue forth into service. "Therefore, having received a kingdom which cannot be shaken, let us cherish thankfulness, so that we may offer to God an acceptable service with reverence and godly fear" (Heb. 12:82, Weymouth).

So then we face again the question of just what has been our real inner response as year by year Thanksgiving time has come around. What has it been as individuals? Every year of our lives God has crowned with His goodness; every day has been rich with His mercies. We have taken thought of His lovingkindness; but what has been the end thereof? Has it been gratification or gratitude? Has the multitude of His gifts and favors toward us ended mainly with ourselves, as cisterns that take in and hold; or have we in response thereto sought diligently to bring honor to the name and joy to the heart of the great Giver by giving freely of ourselves and of His gifts to us to further His interests in the world? Well, therein lies the real answer to our question.

What about us as a nation? Has any nation ever been so greatly and continuously favored? Whose plains have ever yielded their fruitage in greater abundance year after year, or from whose depths have been brought forth such stores as the Creator deposited beneath the surface of our fair land? Have we in truth been grateful, or merely gratified?

Our presidents have been wont from year to year in Thanksgiving proclamations to review our great progress and prosperity, our prestige among the nations of the earth, our unequaled capacity to produce, and how the ships from the seven seas bring to our ports products from the ends of the earth and take ours to them in return; and then they have gone on to call upon our people to pause on a stated day to render fitting thanks to God; all of which is very good.

But one wonders whether the minds of most people ever got farther than the first part of the proclamation in which our prowess was set forth, and whether the consequent emotional response was not more one of gratification than of gratitude. Under the exigencies of the time, it is true, we are turning a portion of our abundance for the aid of others; but may not economic and political expediency have more to do with that on the national level than a high sense of gratitude to God and its accompanying desire to help mankind for His sake? Had we had more of such real gratitude during the years before we helped to reduce millions to the state of dire need which they now know, we might have gone far in preventing that which caused their present distress, and ours as well.

Let this, then, be a season of gratitude. We have had much of Thanksgiving of a sort through the years, but too little giving of thanks and the service which should properly follow. Let us as persons and as a people now enthrone God in our minds and hearts in His rightful place as the Giver of all good, and His will in our lives that they may be channels for His praise and for His good to all mankind.

Book Review

"GREAT ART AND CHILDREN'S WORSHIP" by Jean Louise Smith, Abingdon-Cokesbury Press, 1948

Do you remember getting a picture in Sunday School class? You probably did not know what to do with it and no one gave you any help. Perhaps the teacher read what was written on the back but little more was done with the picture.

Jean Lois Smith has written a book which deals with this whole matter of pictures and teaching children. She has discovered that great art has a prominent place in building character. I help children gain a sense of values. Beauty is one of the highest values in life and is closely related to other values such as truth, reason, awareness, sympathy, kindliness, brotherhood, faith, courage, and others. Miss Smith sets forth some general principles which should be observed in choosing religious art. Having chosen the picture children need some help in finding its meaning. Miss Smith next discusses methods of using art. She shows how art is woven into the worship experience by presenting twenty-four examples of programs.

This book has some excellent material. Unfortunately some of us are complete strangers in the field of art. On first examination we find it somewhat difficult to see religious values in some of the pictures such as Mary Cassatt's "Young Mother Sewing." This pictures a mother sewing for her little girl. The picture shows us how many things we take for granted in our everyday experience. It shows further the peace and contentment which may be enjoyed in the home to which both the mother and the child contribute.

This book endorses the present trend in religious education to find material for religious instruction in non-Biblical areas. Those who believe that no material which is not drawn from the Bible should be used in a class with children will not find this book acceptable. Let us not forget. however, that Jesus used the common experiences of people for his great religious truths.

The book has an excellent appendix which lists sources for suitable pictures, books on art, Christian symbols, and an excellent two page discussion on how to select pictures for the children's rooms.—by David C. Wedel.

BEHIND THE 100% PLAN

I am 100 per cent in favor of the 100 per cent Church-Paper plan. If it is true that we are "labourers together with God" (I Cor. 3:9), we ought to know as much as possible about our common tasks. In Acts 1:8 we read that we are to be witnesses. That is an individual and collective task. If we are to fulfill intelligently our responsibilities, we must be empowered by the Holy Spirit and give ourselves unswervingly to co-operate effort.

The "normal" pattern is for those who belong to a group to be familiar with its activities. This is true in business life. How much more true in the work of the Kingdom! The "normal" pattern is for every member to be used of God for His Kingdom. Knowledge is one of the tools the Holy Spirit uses.

The 100 per cent plan has been a blessing to our church. It has provided inspiration and information. The financial investment is very small compared to the benefits. (In fact, it is cheaper than individual subscriptions). But, even the small cost can be considered as advertising for the greatest business on earth—the Eternal Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ!

What could God accomplish, with His unlimited power, through our General Conference if all our members everywhere were completely dedicated and informed? The 100 per cent Church-Paper is one means toward this end!

For Young Farmers and Ministers in Training

DRAFT INFORMATION

The new procedure for classifying registrants under the draft is causing confusion among conscientious objectors who are farmers, married men or ministerial students and who are thereby eligible for classification in these categories.

Under the World War II draft conscientious objectors classified in II-C (farm deferment) could appeal for IV-E at any time. Now, however a conscientious objector loses his legal right to IV-E if he accepts a II-C. Furthermore by insisting on IV-E now he remains legally eligible for II-C.

The new regulation requires that the local board classify the registrant in the lowest class for which he is eligible. Class I-A is considered the highest class and V-A the lowest. The order of classifications for which each registrant is considered is V-A, IV-F, IV-E, IV-D, IV-C, IV-B, IV-A, III-A, II-C, II-A, I-D, I-C, I-A-O, and I-A.

If a local board classifies a conscientious objector who is opposed to noncombatant service in any classification above IV-E such as II-C or III-A it means that his conscientious objections have been denied. If he fails to appeal within ten days from the date of mailing of his Notice of Classification he waives his legal right to IV-E.

Conscientious objectors preparing for the ministry must decide whether they want IV-E or IV-D. Accepting a IV-D waives his legal right to IV-E. Should deferment for C. O.'s end, ministerial students in IV-E would be legally eligible for IV-D.—Released by the National Service Board for Religious Objectors.

November 6. Washington is recovering from the upset which re-elected Truman and swept the Democrats into Congress.

Officials planned a heart-warming "welcome home" for Mr. Truman and Mr. Barkley but the thousands of government workers dismissed from their offices for the event, who lined the sidewalks of Pennsylvania Avenue, showed little enthusiasm.

Speculation is running high on Cabinet changes. Marshall wants to quit. Forrestal, Secretary of Defense, didn't enter into the campaign for Truman and was reported negotiating with Dewey for a job on the Cabinet.

CAUTION: Read on

I shall never forget that November afternoon in 1943. Rev. Engel, Rev. Benedict and I were sitting on the verandah of the Police Station House in Sonarpur, a small village in the 24 Parganas, just east of Calcutta. We had almost concluded arrangements for the launching of the relief program for the people of that area. And then I heard it for the first time—a long eeyric like call of men bearing a corpse, another victim of the famine, to the burning ghat. When the company came into sight around the bend of the bamboo lined road, just a few yards from the police station, I wondered that the draped corpse seemed so small—was it a child or was it actually an adult wasted away? Another bend in the road and the group was lost to our view. I determined at the first opportunity to visit the burning ghat where the bodies were disposed of.

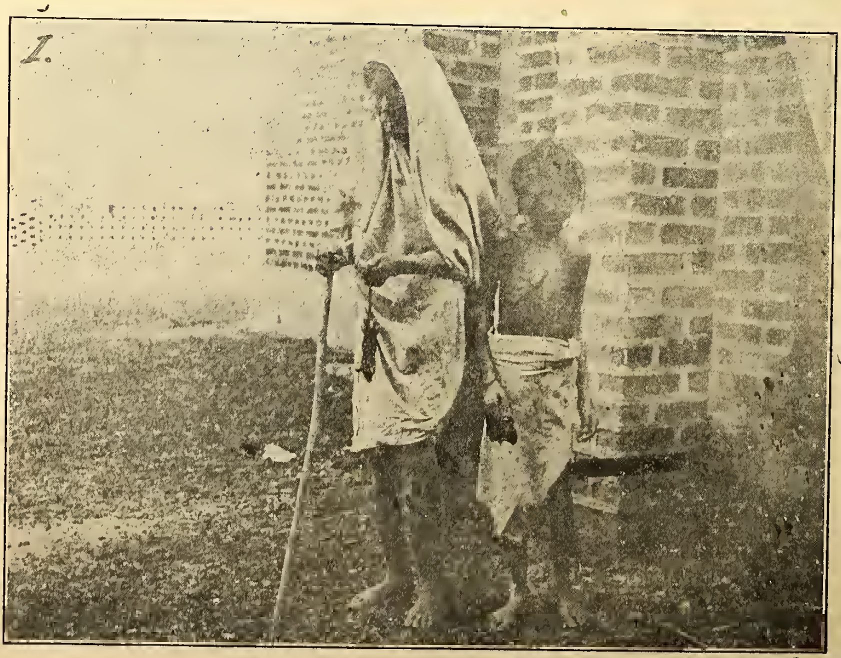
The End of Death's Production Line

Two days later, I followed the road along which corpses were being carried to the burning ghat. I felt strangely alone as the long shadows of the bamboos fell across the jungle pathway. Unexpectedly I came to a gate to my right. This was it! At the far end of the clearing in the jungle was a lake surrounded by many burning pyres. The flames were eating hungrily at the wood and the body on the pyre just 30 feet from me. Other pyres were nearly burned out—from them the smoke spiralled lazily up and up until the light breeze coming over the trees drove it into crazy patterns which finally blended into the solid gray blanket hanging heavily over the whole area. Men moved about, arranging pyres for more bodies which would arrive, adding fuel to fires which had burned low. These moving men fascinated me—they were so nonchalant, so casual, yet so businesslike in their grim task. These moving men were as silent as the bodies which were burning. Even without "Silence, please," signs the living refrained from speaking. Logs crackled as the flames leaped and danced skyward. Occasionally there was a sharp report as the pressure generated by the heat would burst the skull of the corpse in the fire. The sweetish odor of burning human flesh was nauseating, almost sickening. With amazing regularity more corpses kept arriving. Like a conveyor-belt system used in factories this whole thing was well organized and King Death had a contract for so many bodies an hour. The machines were running on schedule—the quota for the day would be met..

The enemy reigned supreme. He would permit none to interfere with his work. Imperceptibly to me he was pushing me to the gate, for I was unwanted. It was at the gate that I finally awakened to this force that would put me out. Rather than challenge my right to be there, I accepted defeat and walked through the gate slowly. The sun was almost setting—the path through the bamboo jungle seemed narrower than before, the shadows were as heavy-blankets bent on crushing out life, the jungle was more quiet and uncomfortable, for the death is a silent horseman. Finally the open road and the last mile to the railway station! Tomorrow I would go to the other departments of the factory to see for myself the processes through which the human body was being put before it reached this final and gruesome end.

The Start of Death's Production Line

While my missionary co-workers in this relief program arranged for shipments of rice and cloth to be brought into the famine area alloted to us, I went on a survey trip through the famine district.



A rat — hope for a meal.

Who Shall Die?

Armed with a supply of quinine in three different forms, I was taken into a village of "the living death." The first little hut I entered was a room where the dying family was lying in a row on the floor. The mother was nearest the door. Five children, huddled under tattered blankets, showed no change of facial expression when they saw me. One girl of eighteen years, dressed in a blue saree, was standing in the corner of the room. I got down on the floor besides the mother who being weakened by malaria could barely raise her arms. Turning slowly she looked at her children and then at me. She tried to tell me that her children were dying. It was then that I was faced with a most difficult decision—should I give all of them quinine or should I select those most likely to live and give them the medicine? Our medical supplies were very limited. Why give medicines to the dying and thus perhaps keep someone from living who could profit by the medicine if it were made available to him?

She Feared She Knew Why

I selected two children to receive the quinine mixture. The eighteen year old daughter got down beside me as though to ask me something. But she dared not ask, "Why only two?" She feared that she knew why. Together we watched the twelve year old boy next to the mother. After several minutes, I turned to the girl and whispered, "Your brother has just died." The girl fell at my feet; I put my arms around her, she put her head on my shoulder, and we wept together.

Some minutes later, I came to a house set somewhat apart from the others. On the covered porch I found a young mother, unconscious. Some twenty-five feet from the mother was a nine-month-old baby crying because of hunger. A water pot luckily had some water which I doused on the mother's face. Slowly she came to—she was able to swallow the quinine tablets I placed in her mouth. Then I got the baby, and put it to the mother's breast. Sick and starved mothers can't have milk for their babies. Soon the baby cried again. I felt utterly helpless—how can one ask starving people to care for starving people? But I needed to find someone in whose care I could place the mother and baby until a program of distributing rice and milk would be begun in the community.

These Willed to Die

Near another hut four boys were squatting on their haunches. They ranged in ages from four to fourteen years. To all my offers of medicine and cards entitling then to receive rice, they merely shook their heads, "No." My pleas to accept help went unheeded. And then I understood. They had pledged to die together. Young boys who should have been playing and enjoying life to the fullest, had tasted so much of agony and sorrow that they decided on death as the best solution of life's problems.

Too Weak for a Hand-shake

The guide took me to another hut. Upon opening the door, I nearly stepped on a young wife who was lying on the floor. She was too weak to speak. She attempted to extend her thin scrawny hand to me but even it was to heavy for the strength she had left. The hand fell back on her breast. Medicine wouldn't help her, but the glass of cold water I gave her wouldn't keep someone else from living.

In one corner of the hut was her husband lying on a bed—he was cold to my touch. He must have been dead for sometime. In another corner was her child of about two years. It was in convulsions and would likely be dead in a few minutes.

"Those Houses Are All Empty."

I left the hut and turned to visit the remaining houses in the line when my guide said, "It's no use to go—those houses are all empty." I leaned against the hut I had just left and tried to visualize the many families who faced each new day which must have been so many eternities of suffering, agony, and pain. And came the day when King Death came not as an enemy but as a friend releasing the first member of the family from the cruelties of this world. And death came again and again until the family was gone, and another house was empty.

As I turned to go, I realized that on the morrow some who could still walk would come and drag the three dead bodies out of the hut against which I had been leaning. These bodies would be left in a

A Shift in the Home Mission Field

by J. M. Regier

Years ago nearly all our home mission work was carried on in the United States. For the last 20 years most of it was in Canada. Now it is very rapidly shifting to South America. We are very grateful, that as this Sopth American emergency comes to us the Canadian brethren are rapidly becoming self-supporting. As they assume larger responsibilities in taking over their own financial burdens, the Home Mission Board is to that extent enabled to increase their help in South America.

13,000 in Paraguay and Brazil

There are now about 13,000 Mennonites in Paraguay and Brazil looking to their northern brethren for help in many areas. In these days a settlement in a third country, Uruguay, is being started. About seven to eight hundred from the Danzig area are settling there.

Without Basic Needs of Life

We all know how our brethren have been stripped of everything in Europe. In South America they start life anew, with very few of the essentials of life. They have a number of well-trained ministers, but these must be liberated from their farm duties so they can carry on their much-needed service.

Dependent on Us for Churches

Another great concern of the people is that they need schools. They also need churches. We are trying to help them build these. For some years the same buildings will have to serve both purposes. In Paraguay a church seating about 700 people is to be built soon. The local people will saw up the lumber and do all the work. The tin for the roof is shipped in from the United States. The Home Mission Board is financing this church and also one in Brazil.

For Books

The church workers are in great need of books. There is practically no such help available to them.

For Transportation

Transportation for the ministers is very slow. One of our American workers suggests that an American jeep is what is needed by those men. With that you could go over most any kind of roads. This would cost about $1500. Who will donate such a machine to the great cause in South America?

For Life!

Our people must be gotten out of their distress in Europe as quickly as possible, but for some years after they are out we must also supply provisions for body, mind, and soul.

field just outside the village for the vultures and dogs to devour.

Too Late!

It was late in the afternoon as I retraced my steps through the village. On all sides were corpses placed on beds outside of the huts. There was some wailing and crying—but not much. Eyes and hearts had wept so often and so deeply that emotions seemed to have dried up. In the midst of the tragedy I realized that we were too late with our help. Many thousands would die even though we appeared on the scene. But a voice seemed to say, "You are here not only to save lives, but to show to the dying that there are those who care."

Reassurance in the Moment of Death

And so to those who had lived without food and medicine we offered rice, clothing, and medicines. Hundreds were helped to health and life. But many were satisfied by the cup of cold water and the touch of our hands on their forehead for this reassured them in the moment of death that there is a bit of love in men‘s hearts.

Invitation to the Lord's Business

A Church's Call to Annual Meeting

"The coming business meeting is one which deserves our sincerest support. There are two things which all of us can do by way of preparing for the meeting. In the first place, we can take a few moments in our busy days to ask the Lord to guide the meeting in such a way as is pleasing in His sight. These days in which we live are making it ever more important that the church be fully equipped to carry on its tasks. The forces of evil are lining up on every hand and the church must not waste its time with trivial or half-hearted tasks. Let us pray that the Lord may guide us to plan those activities which will strengthen our stakes and keep our vision clear. Then in the second place, let us prepare our own hearts in such a manner that we may come to the meeting with humility and concern for the outworking of the Lord's will. In peace and harmony of purpose there is strength and we can do much by way of preparing our own hearts before the meeting. Then let us prayerfully, sincerely come to our business meeting."—taken from Eden Chronicles, Moundridge, Kansas.

Colleges and Seminary

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Miss Martha Becker, a graduate of Freeman Junior College, spoke to the student body during the chapel period, November 1. Miss Becker is waiting for plans to be completed so she can leave for Ecuador, South America, where she will do mission work for the Gospel Union Mission.

November 3, President Miller gave the second in a series of messages on a verse by Henry Van Dyke. This message was on "Loving our Neighbors Sincerely," President Miller stressed the importance of loving and thinking of others more than of ourselves and how wonderful and important it is to share our blessings.

Janis Krehbiel, a former student of Freeman Junior College, showed pictures of her trip to Europe. Janis was one of a group of students making the tour last summer.

Glen L. Morris, the first in the Student Entertainment Series, presented "On the Beam." This was a popularized demonstration of science used in aviation. In this demonstration Mr. Morris showed us how flyers depend on their instruments and what pilots hear when flying through the clouds.

The Christian Youth Volunteers sponsored the showing of the motion picture, "The Kindled Flame," dealing with the persecution of the early Christians and the effect of their steadfast faith.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Student Volunteers are following a heavy scheduled program. Every second and fourth Sunday a group sings at the Newton Hospital and Old People's Home. On the first Sunday of the month a worship service is held at the Old People's Home, Goessel. A boys' quartet visits the local city jail every week. Deputation programs stressing missions and Christian service have been given at Greensburg, Elbing, East Emmet, and Burns—all Kansas churches. A special project of Bible study, crafts, and recreation is carried on at the Lorraine Avenue Mennonite church Wichita every Saturday. Deputation work to Oklahoma churches is being planned for the Thanksgiving holidays.

Marvin Wasser from Bedminster, Pa., has enrolled as student No. 416 at Bethel College, Mr. Wasser recently returned from France where he served as a relief worker for two years.

Five seniors have been elected by the students and faculty to represent Bethel College in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." Scholarship, leadership, cooperation in education and extra-curricular activities, general citizenship, and promise of future usefulness were the basis upon which the following were chosen: Bertha Fast, Mountain Lake, Minn., Virgil Flickinger, Pretty Prairie, Kans.; Walter Jost, Hillsboro, Kans.; Widick Schroeder, Newton, Kans.; and Reford Wedel, Moundridge, Kans.

A program of sacred music will be given by the Bethel College A Cappella Choir Sunday, Nov. 21, at 3 p. m. in Memorial Hall, Dr. Walter Hohmann directing. A collection will be taken.

THE MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

The most stirring event in the life of the school this week was a moving address by Jitsuo Morikawa, pastor of the First Baptist Church of this city. The unique feature of this church is that it called Dr. Morikawa after a lifetime of an exclusively white membership. He was called from the Posten Arizona Relocation Center. At the time it was expected that his status as a Japanese American would not permit the church to go through with this assignment. However, subsequent events have shown that his ministry in the church has greatly prospered and that the Lord has blessed greatly this attempt to leap over the prejudices of men. Today the church is partly Caucasian and partly Japanese-American. The minister said "It is so easy to do things for people, but it takes the grace of God to do things with people."

Irvin Richert, one of our seniors from Los Angeles, California, will be ordained to the gospel ministry on November 14 at the Salem church of Dalton, Ohio.

Friday evening, November 5, a group of about fourteen of our group attended the services of the K. A. M. Jewish Temple, located a few blocks from the Seminary. Prior to the service the nature of the Jewish worship service was explained, and following the worship service a forum was held on "The Status of the Nation Israel," for which a number of the group remained.

Next week registration for the winter quarter will take place. The winter quarter opens November 30 and closes March 4. Among the new students we are expecting this quarter are Missionary Harold Ratzlaffs of India, and Melvin and Frances Funk who are coming from the Mennonite Central Committee Voluntary Service Project in Mexico.

Among our visitors this week were Mr. and Mrs. Victor Voth of Canton, Kansas and Mr. J, A. Duerksen of Washington, D. C.

The Seminary Women's Fellowship met Monday evening. Marie Kroeker, of Henderson, Nebraska, and Ellen Harder, of Whitewater, Kansas, described their experiences as M.C.C. relief workers. Marie Kroeker wore a typical Waldensian costume during her presentation.

Jottings

—In the hands of all General Conference pastors are general informational handbooks concerning Brook Lane Farm, which has been established by the Mennonite Central Committee to serve the broader Mennonite constituency.

—Every pastor of the General Conference churches has received a series of twelve suggested Christian Endeavor, or Young People's Programs, prepared under the direction of the Curriculum Committee, a subcommittee of the Board of Education of the Conference, for the purpose of assisting local groups in studying our Biblical position on war and peace. This series of programs is based upon the booklet POWER OF LOVE, a recent publication of the Peace Committee of the General Conference.

—Magdalen Friesen's address has recently been changed to: PCIRO Area 2, APO 154, In Care of Postmaster, New Yok City. She writes: "We still haven't run out of refugees and consequently out of work in the U. S. Zone. In spite of large numbers of our people leaving for Canada and a recent departure of almost three hundred from our camp for Paraguay, some 1400 refugees remain in our zone. We hope that the way will open for some of this group to immigrate to the States in the near future, but that is still uncertain."

—Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa: Recently our congregation donated 143 quarts of fruit to our Seminary, and 103 quarts to the Ottumwa Orphans Home. We also sent 158 pounds of used clothing to the Newton Clothing Center for relief. We are having a portable canner come to this community to process meat for relief. We have sent in our applications for two Mennonite refugee families, and already have houses and jobs for them.—Mrs. E. E. Mullett, Corr.

—Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas: More than thirteen per cent of the membership of our church consists of young people and older ones who are attending college or university.

—Deep Run Mennonite Church, Bedminster, Pa.: Rev. Wilson Overhold, of the old congregation, preached for us one Sunday while our pastor supplied the pulpit at Richfield, and Bro. Abraham Rosenberger of Souderton, another Sunday when Reverend Fretz gave communion at Allentown. The annual Hymn Sing and Bible Classes have begun for October and November. The food contributions at the Harvest Home Service were again given to the Home at Frederick. Rev. S. T. Moyer and his wife made their home with Charles Wassers while attending Princeton Seminary and awaiting passage to India. The ladies of the Missionary Society spent a day packing clothing for relief.—Mae Gross, Corr.

—West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The Sixtieth Anniversary of our church was held October 17, with many guests and former church members present for the day. Rev. P. K. Regier, a former pastor, now of Reedley, California, gave the anniversary sermon, speaking on, "The Great Imperative," and challenging the church to go forward. Immediately after the morning service a fellowship meal was served to a large group of people in the church basement, and during the meal an informal program was held. Wesley D. Vogt, chairman, introduced the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Christ Eyeman, of Upland, California, had come the longest distance. Two of the original charter members, Mr. Henry Haury and Mrs. Henry Latschar, were present.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Perkasie, Pennsylvania: The Ladies Aid and Missionary Society sponsored procuring a new bulletin board for the church. The board was made locally and the Young People's Class did the outdoor work of installing it at one of their class meetings held in the church basement. The Sunday School and C. E. Society also assisted with the financial part, as did the Young People's Class.—Corr.

—Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The Ladies Mission Society held its annual sale on October 29 in the Moundridge City Hall. An evening meal brought $93.05. The mission sale which followed amounted to $319.70, making a grand total of $412.75. Proceeds wil go for missions. Rev. J. F. Sawatzky brought the message on October 31, during the absense of our pastor, Reverend Wedel, who was ill. Rev. Floyd Nunley, of Newton, was the speaker at the young people's meeting on the evening of October 24. The Ladies Mission Society canned 85 cans of chicken for relief with the portable canner.

—First Mennonite Church, Butterfield, Minnesota: Rev. and Mrs. Frank Manning spoke to us at our Sunday school and church services on October 31. The Mannings are missionaries to Africa, and are at present on furlough in the States. They gave some soul-stirring messages.

—Bethel Church, Inman, Kansas: Our Mission Festival was held October 31 with a full day of inspirational services. Rev. Albert Gaeddert, Inman, and Rev. J. H. Epp, Hutchinson, discussed home missions in the forenoon. The Men's Chorus sang several selections. In the afternoon, Rev. and Mrs. Harold Ratzlaff, recently returned from India, and Mrs. Frank J. Enns, brought foreign missions to our attention. Our choir furnished the music. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buller, former relief workers, related their experiences in relief at the evening service, and several groups brought special music.—Mrs. Elmer Neufeld, Corr.

—Johannesthal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: On November 14, we are planning to observe our Harvest Thanksgiving Festival in our church with Missionary Harold Ratzlaffs speaking to us in the forenoon and having a Liebes Mahl at noon. In the evening, Mrs. P. S. Goertz will speak to us as she shows pictures of their work in Denmark and Holland.—Mrs. Arnold A. Plenert, Corr.

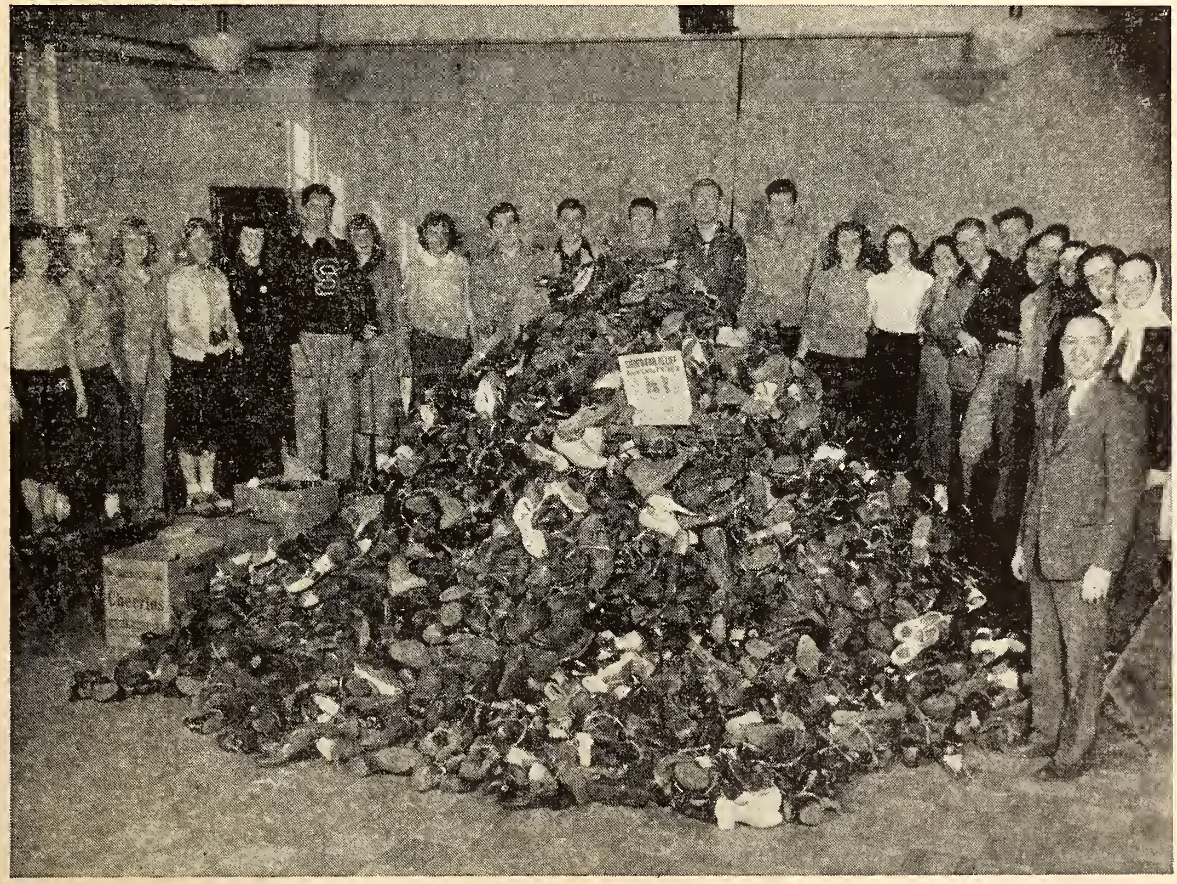
Shoes for Relief

by Ellis Graber, Souderton, Penna.



Members of the Young People's Fellowship of the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pennsylvania and 4,535 of the 5,000 pairs of shoes they collected for M.C.C. relief.

The Young People's Fellowship of the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pennsylvania, is composed of young people of high school age. Having a membership of approximately forty (not all members are on the above picture) they meet every Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock for their regular worship service and program. Occasionally social events are planned. Two extensive projects have been carried out during the past year: the "Shoes for Relief" drive, and the periodic collection of papers, magazines, and books in Souderton. Donald Kirkpatrick served as president of the Fellowship, with the pastor, Reverend Ellis Graber, acting as sponsor.

Out of a deep realization of the dire need for help in war-stricken areas the young people decided to do something concrete to give to relief. Plans were carefully laid for a "Shoes-for-Relief" drive for Saturday 10, covering the boroughs of Souderton and Telford, Pennsylvania. Basic to the successful drive was an effective advertising program through the following means: 1. From the local newspaper we secured splendid co-operation for informing the people of the needs. Striking pictures depicting the great need and articles explaining the drive were published well in advance, Ford Berg, Mennonite Publishing House, Scottdale, Pennsylvania, graciously furnished cuts. 2. Bills were posted about town announcing the drive. 3. Fliers presenting the urgency of the situation and explaining the nature of the drive with instructions as to what should or should not be given were distributed to each house in the two boroughs the day before the collection. 4. Announcements were made in the church bulletins.

The project had the full support of the local business men. The shoe stores served as deposit stations for shoes brought in by out-of-town residents; the shoe repair shops promised generous discounts in repairing worn shoes; and one local business man devoted his advertising space in the local newspaper to encourage the townspeople to co-operate in the project.

When the day for the drive arrived, everything was in readiness. Six cars and trucks were at hand, the group was organized into teams, areas were assigned, and in three hours 4,535 pairs of shoes were collected. Over 500 pairs were brought in later bringing the total to more than 5,000 pair of which about 500 pairs were new. Once assembled, the shoes had to be sorted—some needed no repair, others were beyond repair, while many could be put into usable condition. Industrious work two afternoons after dismissal from high school completed this phase of activity. The shoes that could be repaired were taken to the three local repair shops, and what would ordinarily have been a repair bill of about $1,000 actually was $225. The Fellowship paid this with money earned through paper collections.

There was a humble sense of satisfaction as the trucks took the three tons of shoes to the M.C.C. depot at Ephrata. In a small way something had been done to show love and kindness and brotherly goodwill upon this earth.

"Christ has no hands but our hands, no feet but our feet, no one but us through whom he can speak his love."

Relief for German Students

Among the very needy classes of people in Germany are students. According to our MCC workers there are many who have only one meal a day or who live in very primitive quarters. Those students who have wives and families, or who were invalided through the war, or who are refugees with no one to help them, are in particularly great distress. Plans are being made for feeding or food-package programs, as well as clothing distribution among these young students in cities such as Kiel, Hamburg, and Goettingen. The program of contact with the students includes the supplying of aid and counsel as needed, as well as an effort to develop interest and participation in Christian study and service. One of the significant potentialities in working with these young students who have experienced so much hardship and frustration in recent years is that of giving to them a Christian witness which can give them a new purpose in life.

The great stairway that leads up to infinite success starts right from where our feet are now planted. You can rise with the next step.—Ralph Parlette

The Year's Program in the Eastern District

by Norman Geissinger, Zionsville, Penna.

During each Conference year the Eastern District Young People's Union has five major activities. They are: (1) The retreats for all age groups held in July (sponsored jointly by the Sunday School and Young People's Union); (2) The fall rally, with special projects for each society; (3) The fellowship banquet in mid-winter; (4) The last program of each annual Conference (sponsored jointly by the Sunday School and Young People's Unions); and (5) The Young People's Union Convention on Memorial Day.

Last year the retreats totaled about 500 attendants. The fall rally was held on November 2, at the East Swamp Mennonite Church. The banquet was held at Trainers Resturant on March 6, with 300 guests. An offering of $187.76 was received at the banquet for payment of foreign-language Bibles to be distributed by the M.C.C. The meeting at the close of the Conference was well attended and presented a strong challenge for Christian living.

On May 31, 1948, the annual convention was held at Men-O-Lan for the first time. The reports showed that the mission project was completed, plus $20 beyond the goal of $650. The project was divided as follows: $200 for foreign mission work in China; $200 for home mission work at Paint Rock, North Carolina, toward the new chapel; $200 to M.C.C. for relief and refugee resettlement; and $50 for work at Men-O-Lan. The convention was well attended and enjoyed by all present.

The mission project adopted for this year is as follows: $20 for foreign missions where needed; $200 for home missions ministerial work among Mennonite refugees; $200 toward the General Conference Y.P.U. Foreign Student Education fund; and $75 for Men-O-Lan.

The retreats this summer were attended by about 400 persons, young and old. The fall rally was held at Richfield, October 24. Almost 100 young people from the Eastern Churches traveled westward about 150 miles to attend this meeting. The host church supplied supper for the entire group after the meeting. Rev. George Greger, of the Napier Church, gave a stirring address. A number of the societies reported plans to give a Thanksgiving offering to M.C.C. to supply the material needs of the young people among the Mennonite refugees. Our next meeting will be the fellowship banquet in February or March.

There will be an opening for a secretary in the Mennonite Publication Office approximately December 1st. If interested, write for Qualification Sheet indicating the nature of the job before making your application. Girl with Mennonite background and affiliation, naturally, preferred. Write to Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

Mt. Lake Churches Hold Peace Institute

by Myrtle M. Buller, Mt. Lake, Minn.

The Mountain Lake, Minnesota, community held a peace institute on September 4 and 5, 1948, sponsored by a committee of laymen and ministers of the ten Mennonite churches of the area, including Mennonite Brethren, Evangelical Mennonite Brethren and General Conference Mennonite branches. Dr. John R. Schmidt was chairman of the committee.

Dr. Harold S. Bender, of Goshen, Indiana, and Mr. Paul Goering of Washington, D.C., were the principal speakers of the institute.

Paul Goering, of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, outlined the provisions of the 1948 draft law for conscientious objectors at the Saturday evening meeting. He emphasized that under the 1948 law draft boards are instructed to consider a man for the lowest classification first, working up towards I-A classification. This is the opposite from the procedure followed under the 1940 law. Thus, the draft board must consider whether a man is a conscientious objector before they can consider his deferment on an industrial or agricultural basis. Failure to request Form SSS 150 when the man first registers may jeopardize his securing 4-E classification later on.

He also described appeals procedures and stated that the deferment of 4-E's will last only as long as the general public allows it to last. It is a temporary status, not an exemption.

Bill Goering, of Freeman, South Dakota, spoke on the topic, "Shining Light in the Army." Mr. Goering was a noncombatant in the army, I-O-A, during the recent war. In his testimony for peace, he urged young men to take the 4-E position rather than I-O-A, the way of sacrifical giving rather than the way of compromise with the "popular mind."

Mrs. Ted Franz and Mrs. Victor Buller gave brief testimonies from the women's angle, urging young women of the Mennonite churches to study and discuss peace problems and to volunteer for service in mental hospitals, summer service units, relief work, etc.

At the Sunday afternoon session, Dr. Harold Bender discussed "The Consequences of Biblical Nonresistance As Experienced by People in Europe." Dr. Bender has recently returned from fourteen months' service as relief commissioner in Europe and had firsthand information on conditions within the Mennonite Churches of that continent.

He stated that before World War II the nonresistant principle had almost died out among European Mennonites. But since the war many Mennonite leaders, especially among the young people, have come to American Mennonite workers in Europe for information and instruction about the nonresistant doctrine which relief workers represent there. Non-Mennonite Christians throughout Germany have been asking to join German Mennonite churches because they believe them to be peace churches. He also discussed the loss of nonresistance as a way of life among the Dutch, French, Swiss, Prussian and Russian Mennonites.

An important part of the afternoon session was a period of group discussion, with three different sections. Rev. M. M. Lehman and Mr. H. F. Epp led the laymen's section in discussing "Nonresistance in Everyday Life." Paul Goering and Victor Buller, of Worthington, Minnesota, met with the young men and women to consider "The I-A, I-A-O and 4-E Stand." Dr. Bender led the church workers, Sunday school teachers, and ministers in a discussion of "Church Education on Nonresistance."

Brief reports of each section were brought to the entire assembly and summarized by Dr. John Schmidt.

Dr. Bender gave the principal address to a large crowd at the Sunday evening session on the topic "The Biblical Basis for Nonresistance." He began by declaring that "The doctrine of nonresistance is anchored in the teachings of Jesus and is based upon both the Old and New Testaments. Nonresistance stands for more than nonretaliation and non-avenging; it stands also for the fullness of meaning of Sermon on the Mount."

Dr. Bender continued, "The test of being a child of God lies in loving, blessing, doing good, and praying for your enemies. The common concept of pacifism is that merely by informing people you can make peace. This is an error. We must bring the world first to Christ that He may save it and then through Christ make the world peaceable. The child of God is to live always on the level of love, not to stoop to the way of force, evil, and bloodshed."

Dr. Bender declared that it is possible to prove one's belief in nonresistance by certain "proof texts" from the Bible but that he preferred to go one step further and give an over-all view of the Biblical basis for nonresistance.

Dr. Bender challenged his hearers to accept the way of Biblical nonresistance. This requires an action program of missions and social service combined. It requires sacrifical ministry to the needs of mankind. It is one thing to talk Christianity, another thing to believe it and to live it.

In closing, he advised young men who will be deferred because of their 4-E status to volunteer their services to the Gulfport, Mexican, or Puerto Rican units, to relief projects, or to summer service units. He challenged them to walk the second mile, to give themselves in sacrifical service for others.

A SHIP! A SHIP!

The Story of Shipwreck Continued from last week

by A. Donald Miller

Amidships were twenty-eight Indian members of the ship's crew. Only two were seaman; the others were stewards, bath boys, cooks, stokers. Some had very little clothing, but the wadded life-jackets issued to the crew were a great boon to them. They were from many parts of India—Bengal, Orissa, Madras, Bombay, the Punjab, Goa; and in consequence spoke many langauges, Hindustani being our lingua franca. The fact that I was able to talk Bengali reasonably fluently, and that the natural leader among these men was a Mussulman Benagli, threw upon me the responsibility of acting as a kind of liaison officer, especially when, as the days passed, the strain of events created tension and misunderstanding at times. The group contained its variety of character— a few more definitely not good, others were passively resigned, others plucky and thoughtful for their neighbors. If, on the one hand, it was from this group that we discovered the theft of some of our precious water, it was also from one of the Indians that I saw the most lovely of unselfish acts. One day the slender ration of two ounces of water was being distributed. Our littlest passenger, only three years old, had had hers but was crying bitterly for more as the measure was being passed to and fro for others. She was hunched up in the bottom of the boat, next to where the block of Indians began. In time the measure came to a thin, anaemic-looking member of the crew, who sat next to this tired and overwrought little girl. I was sitting nearly opposite, I saw him put the measure to his lips, drink not more than a third of his tiny ration, and then swiftly —before he could be stopped—pass the measure to Margaret for her to drink the rest. That was an act of high courtesy, and costing unselfishness.

In the stern of the boat, behind the last seat for cars, were the rest of us. The two mothers and the eight children. Two lady missionaries from Delhi who had, with great agility, managed to reach their cabins after the torpedoing and to seize their "escape" bags and overcoats. The contents of these bags—torches especially—proved of great common value. Then a distinguished "civil servant," returning to England for the last time after over thirty years of service to India. And my wife and myself, and whoever was on duty as helmsman. At night the children, with one of the mothers, squeezed down into the hollow of the boat below, our feet dangling above them (and I am afraid sometimes kicking them too)!

Finally, there was the cat. After the first day or two we began to hear a strange miaowing from behind the lockers, which grew more persistent and eerie as the days and nights passed—but we could never find the cat itself. Occasionally, at night, it would venture out and claw somebody's feet in the dark, only to retreat to its hidey-hole. It was a strange cat which had embarked, with others, as a stowaway at Cape Town. And when a pursuit was engaged in by the crew of these unauthorized passengers, it had sought refuge in a lifeboat and there remained till the torpedoing, doubtless terrified by our sudden invasion. So every day a little of our precious water, and some scraps of biscuit, were put in a tin which was placed near its hiding place. And so it survived till we were rescued. Alas, it even then would not emerge and so went down with the lifeboat when our rescuers scuttled it.

NOTE: When writing specify both old and new address. PLEASE!

It looked rather like Brixham regatta as the six boats set out, turns being taken at the oars. The sun shone burningly upon us. Resourcefully, Mr. Holward cut into strips some red canvas which had covered this sail, sewed the folded ends with string, and provided us with hats which we donned with great glee and much comfort, and which made us look rather like a set of sea-faring brigands. The ladies gallantly tore up some of their underclothing into strips which we could dip in the water, and then bathe our hot heads and faces.

All day remained entirely windless, and at sunset we took our first drop of water, and our first biscuits and pemmican. Rationing had begun for us, even without coupons!

In order that we might not drift apart at night, during which rowing was discontinued, the Captain ordered that the six boats link up by ropes connecting them to one another. And then the flaming rose of the western sky faded to gold and green and violet, and one by one "night's glittering tapers" were lit, and we looked up again through another night at the tremendous spread of star-studded sky, our idle boat gently rolling with the swell.

When it was getting near to 11 o'clock on the next morning, Sunday, Mr. Robertson called across from the prow to me, "It'll soon be time for a spell of praise." "Indeed, it will," I called back. I had been hoping that the initiative would come from others to offer to God our corporate act of worship. That our individual offerings of prayer were being made I had no doubt.

"You choose our first hymn," I said.

"I think it might be," said Mr. Robertson,

"Let us with a gladsome mind
Praise the Lord, for He is kind:
For His mercies aye endure,
Ever faithful, ever sure,"

And so there in a spot far from the earshot of man, we sang to the skies our faith that God was present to hear; and that, despite our condition and need, His mercies endured "everfaithful, ever sure."

Was that faith justified? When men, with loved ones far away, had been suddenly lost at the sinking of the ship? When one lady passenger had lost her husband just as he was coming down the rope ladder to the boat to join her, and the second torpedo hit the ship? When over 200 of us were now at sea, facing the likelihood of a slow death, which indeed came and claimed many as the days and weeks passed?

Lofty Service

Wouldst thou the holy hill ascend
And see the Father's face?
To all His children lowly bend
And seek the humblest place.
Thus humbly doing on the earth
What things the lofty scorn,
Thou shalt assert the lofty birth
Of all the lowly-born.

Beyond Our Own

CHICAGO.—John D. Metzler, national chairman of the Christian Rural Overseas Program, said from 2,500 to 3,000 cars of farm commodities are expected to be contributed by American farmers between November 1 and Thanksgiving. About 75,000 volunteer convassers are at work going from farm to farm asking for whole grains, livestock, dairy products, and other farm commodities of high food value. Iowa and Illinois each have pledged three hundred carloads of foodstuffs. CROP is sponsored nationally by Catholic Rural Life, Church World Service, and Lutheran World Relief. Metzler said that thousands of people, including many children, will starve to death this winter unless volunteer aid is forthcoming in large volume. "We must help those who will not be reached by government aid."

NEW YORK CITY.—Dr. Frank C. Laubach, noted pioneer missionary educator, has been invited by the Siamese government to spend ten weeks initiating a nation-wide literacy campaign beginning the first of the year. This is the first time a westerner has been asked to lead a campaign of this kind in Siam. Dr. Laubach's phonetic method, which has been used successfully to teach 162 languages, relies on the depiction of ideas and word sounds through pictures of familiar objects.

CHICAGO.—Well over one thousand new missionary volunteers responded to God's call during the past year through the ministry of the Foreign Missions Fellowship, missionary arm of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, an organization with an evangelistic emphasis operating on the campus of colleges and universities throughout the country.

—Sixty-two subscriptions to Mennonite Life, popular pictorial quarterly published by Bethel College, have been orderd by the United States War Department for use in various information centers overseas. It is one of a list of 86 periodicals distributed among army-controlled centers of Germany, Austria, the Middle and Far East, with the purpose or re-orientation and education of the inhabitants of these countries through American reading material in army-sponsored reading rooms of occupied countries.

THE TITHE IS THE BASIC MINIMUM for the Christian. The Christian dare not give less and will seldom be satisfied with giving only the tithe. That is not opinion; that is New Testament teaching. Jesus said he came to fulfill, not to destroy the law. This means in the case of the lives of others that refraining from killing and adultery, for example, is not enough; we must go beyond that and refrain from hatred and evil thoughts. The dispensation of grace calls not for mere living by the letter but going further with Christ and living by the spirit. This is fundamental in the New Testament. The freedom of the New Testament is not from the law; it is a freedom above the law. It is a freedom that comes, as Jeremiah indicated, when the law is written in the heart. In stewardship of possessions this means freedom not to give as much as we please but freedom through a radical conversion experience that makes us free to go beyond the law of the tithe—the application of the principle of the second mile to giving.—JJE

MEN WITH HEARTS SET AFIRE FOR GOD by the Holy Spirit is the secret of Pentecost. The weakness of the Church today is directly traceable to the fact that men are wedded to their lodges, service clubs, veterans organization and what-have-you, leaving the work of the church largely to women. Such a state of affairs in the church is as much a makeshift situation as when Deborah led the attack during the age of the judges. It is abnormal! In a recent news item from a church, the editor noted a project was undertaken by the women's organization which, by its very nature, was a men's project. The women were able to enlist the aid of almost all age groups in the church. But no mention was made of men. You are right, they probably footed the bill. But this is too remote to inspire! Real stewardship includes talent, time, yes all of life—not only money. Stewardship, Laymen's, Missionary Movement, and Month of Evangelism are all of a piece. When laymen besides preachers give their energies to Jesus Christ, the fire of Pentecost will fall again.—JJE

WHY HAVE WE LOST THE MEN? The answer to that question is quite simple. We have, through preaching, worship, hymns, and type of service offered shown them only half of the Gospel. We have shown them that the Gospel is the key to life beyond. But we have been afraid to show them that the Gospel is also the key to life here. Therefore they seek the key to life here elsewhere. Jesus was God and man. The true Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ will always offer men who are converted a man-sized job in this world of using every phase of their situation to win others to Christ in salvation and to the Church in His service. Men are attracted to organizations that offer much and demand more. The Church does not have men because it does not offer enough and demands far less. Church of God, rise up and win your men!—JJE

KANSAS AS VOTED REPEAL. NOW WHAT? For many of us this was a shocking surprise. We wonder how this could happen. No doubt a number of factors contributed to this outcome of the election. Now that the election is over many good Christian people must confess that they took too much for granted, and that they did not work for the cause of prohibition with the zeal and sacrifice they should have. Few Christian people took the trouble to provide transportation for voters and to urge neighbors to go to the polls. Rev. C. D. Walker of the Kansas United Dry Forces says that we have lost a battle but not the war. We will need to use careful strategy, and sacrifice time and money to regain what has been lost. This defeat should arouse the church from its lethargy.

There is another reason for the defeat. About a year ago Dr. R. E. Farley, State Superintendent of the Kansas United Dry Forces, made the statement that the wets were saying, "The drys are bound and must adhere to principles. We are not handicapped in that way." By this they evidently meant that since they are not committed to moral and Christian principles they could use subterfuge and other deceptive methods in working for repeal. We can now see what methods they did use and why they succeeded. For one thing, the wording of the amendment was a trick, especially the last sentence. Undoubtedly many people voted for the amendment because they felt they were getting rid of the old saloon. They did not realize what they were voting for.

Even so we must acknowledge that the result of the election is a sad commentary on the moral judgment of the people of Kansas. This is the most lamentable thing about the whole matter. The majority of our people have deliberately chosen to take a way that will lead many more people into misery and to destruction. To make a sinful thing appear decent by making it legal does not change the fact that it is sin. The laws of God are eternal and immutable. Jesus has plainly said that those who drink with the drunken will go where there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth (Matt. 24:48-51). The New Testament speaks in unmistakable language that drunkards shall not inherit the kingdom of God (I Cor. 6:10). To disregard such plain warnings of God's Word must be considered equivalent to Israel's disregard of the prophets' warnings of impending destruction. As the prophets of old called on the people to repent and to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance, so we must call for repentance and a return to God. As people asked of John the Baptist so we may ask, What must we do?

To bring forth fruits worthy of repentance in

New Testament Tithing

by William H. Mohr

IS THIS title a misnomer? Many people say it is. They take the position that the practice of tithing was a part of the Old Testament dispensation but was not carried forward into the New Testament dispensation. Therefore, they agree that to the Christian the practice of tithing is as meaningless as the practice of offerin sacrifices. I write this article to explain my reasons for disagreeing with this conclusion.

One-Tenth — God's Terms

The Old Testament teaches that everything belongs to God. The Christian accepts this teaching for himself—"All good and perfect gifts come from the Lord." If their ownership is vested in God, then man holds what God gives him on terms made by the owner, namely, God. What are God's terms? In the Old Testament it was clearly set forth that one-tenth of all income or increase belonged to the Lord. This was an obligation of the Old Testament Jew, just as much as it was his obligation to give one day out of seven to the Lord. He owed the Lord one-seventh of his time and one-tenth of his income.

One-Tenth — Debt, not Gift

And we cannot overlook the fact that God considered the tithe a debt. It is a mistake to think of the giving of the tithe as a gift. In Malachi 3:8, God accuses the Jews of their having robbed Him by witholding their tithes. This would be an unfair charge if the tithe were a gift. A man cannot be accused of robbery if he merely fails to give a gift. We must conclude that the tithe was a debt and not a gift.

One-Tenth — A Universal Practice

But to get back to the question as to whether a Christian should tithe, it is interesting to note that the practice of tithing was not confined to the Jewish race. Clay tablets found in ruins of ancient cities show that nations as far east as Babylon and as far south as Egypt were tithing in Abraham's day. Dr. Adam Clark says, "Almost all nations of the earth have agreed to give one-tenth to religious use." Does not this imply a divine law for mankind that one-tenth is the debt owed the Creator? Jesus certainly did not repeal this law or custom of tithing. The Pharisees, those punctilious keepers of the law, would surely have tried to discredit Him for taking such a position. Furthermore, He commended the Pharisees for tithing.

Therefore, I have come to the conclusion that the tithe is a fundamental law for the Christian even as is the law of the Sabbath. And I believe it is a debt and not a gift. I understand that all I have—intellect, skill, strength, wealth acquired or inherited—comes from God. I owe Him something for the use of these things, even as I owe my banker something for the money I borrow. It can be conceived as a partnership where God furnishes the capital for me to use on the basis that God receives 10 per cent and I receive 90 per cent. All the gains from the partnership flow through my hands, and then 10 per cent is to be set aside by me for the purpose of advancing the work for which the partnership was established, namely, making this a happier, better, and more Christlike world in which to live and advancing the Kingdom of Christ here on earth.

One-Tenth — The Testimony of Church Fathers

Now, I ask whether this position conforms with, or is contrary to, the position of the early church leaders. We have space for but one testimony from many on record. Listen to the words of St. Augustine, A.D. 354-430, "Our ancestors used to abound in wealth of every kind for this very reason that they used to give tithes and pay the tax to Caesar. Now on the contrary because devotion to God has ceased the drain of the treasury has increased. We have been unwilling to share the tithes with God, now the whole is taken away. The scribes and pharisees gave tithes for whom Christ had not yet shed His blood. . . .I can not keep back what He who died for us said while He was alive, 'Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and pharisees ye shall in no case enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.' They gave a tenth. How is it with you? Ask yourselves. Consider what you spend on mercy, what you reserve for luxury." How timely and up to date is this observation!

One Tenth - Blessing

Yea, verily, if all Christians everywhere would pay their just debt to the Lord and then give something in addition as their conscience dictates, then, indeed, there would be enough and to spare for the work of the Church and we could expect to received the blessings implied in God's challenge found in Malachi 3:10, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

this present situation calls for wise action and practical procedure. The cause is not lost. Over half of the counties in Kansas voted dry. Representatives in the State Legislature from these counties will stand ready to express the wishes of the people they represent when bills on liquor control come up. If Christian people, churches, and ministerial associations will go to their county representatives in the State Legislature and present their concern, it will go a long way in bringing about laws which will curb the liquor evil. Church leaders and officers of ministerial associations should act soon, and use all their influence to make our legislators aware of our concern before they go to the next session of the legislature. Stewardship Quotes

Bethany Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., was the scene of a large and thankful audience, Sunday, October 31, when young and old brought back to the Lord the enlarged talents that had earlier been given to them.

In April, talents of various sizes, according to age, were given out to Sunday school children and larger ones were given to adult church members. During the summer months, many projects were carried out in order to double or otherwise enlarge the talents From time to time the matter of the talents and the ingathering was kept before the members.

The worship hour was a joint Sunday school and church service. The theme of the program was on rendering service to the Lord for the many blessings enjoyed daily.

Warren S. Oberholtzer discussed the lesson briefly, and Robert M. Landis presented an object talk that emphasized many points essential to a strong spiritual life. Mr. John E. Fretz, from the Grace Church, Lansdale, gave an address on, "Tithes and Talents." The chior rendered the appropriate song: "When Christians All Learn How To Tithe."

In solemn but happy procession everyone, young and old, brought their talents to the altar. The dedication prayer by the pastor Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, and the closing hymn, "Thank the Lord," brought the impressive service to a close. The committee counted $2,025.40 including the talents with more to come in. Truly the Lord blesses when we serve Him in sincerity.—by A. J. Neuenschwander

Do Catholics give more to their church than Protestants? This question was recently asked by an observing foreign visitor because he noticed that the largest and most imposing church in every town we passed through was usually the Catholic church. I am inclined to believe the Catholics do give more on the average than Protestants. It does not help to explain that they do it because of fear, pressure or that they do it because they pay to have their sins forgiven. The fact remains that the church is a potent factor in their lives and they pay for its support.

Giving is a direct measure of spiritual interest. The usual argument against tithing is that it is law and not grace; that all our goods belong to the Lord—and not merely a tenth. Having argued thus, we are then free to give as little as we please. At least so it seems to work out in most cases.

No one giving less than a tenth has a moral right to use that argument. It is usually used as a smoke screen behind which to hide a paltry, miserly giving, and thus used it is wrong. Only the man who gives more than a tenth has a right to say, "All of my money belongs to the Lord." Otherwise his pretense is pure hypocrisy. And, if tithing is law and not grace, certainly no Christian would dare to argue that grace is less than law.

Adventists view tithing as a binding legal requirement. We do not follow them in this, for grace has superseded the law. We are not bound to give a tithe—we are free to give a tithe. But do we do it? This is the crucial question. At the final reckoning it will not be asked. "On which side of the question did you argue?" but rather, "What kind of a giving standard did you really live by?"—by J. D. Graber in the Gospel Herald

One of the Sunday school classes of the Pretty Prairie, Kansas, church has made itself responsible to raise four hundred dollars to reshingle one of Arizona mission houses and another to help build a chicken house on one of the stations, while still another class is considering raising the money to build a bathroom in the Anna Baerg mission home.

We want to express our gratitude to the churches that have so nobly responded with mission offerings since September. We are confident that many more will be sending in large offerings from now until after Thanksgiving.

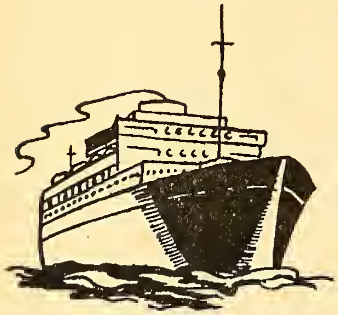
As American Shores Recede

by Wilhelmina Kuyf



This short furlough brought the pleasure of telling of the conditions in China and how the Lord continues to work through His own even under difficult conditions. For each contact I'm grateful because it means more help in prayer. To the various women's groups who expressed a desire to know more about the work, I can recommend that you keep reading Missionary News and Notes, and we in China will try to keep information coming. However, share the news with your whole family. Missions are not only the concern of women.

Perhaps the greatest opportunities were presented at the retreats and Bible conferences at Rosthern and Meadow Lake in Canada, and Fortuna, Mo., Mennolan and Green Lane in Pennsylvania. The fine young people who shared their Christian hopes and aspirations made me feel that there would continue to be those who would be ready when the Lord called, and that on my next trip to China there would be some new, young workers to come too, in addition to those who will go within the next year or two.

In retrospect, there are so many things to thank you for that it is difficult to know where to begin. The Christian fellowship you've shown me in your homes everywhere along the way will long be remembered. Then the succession of things like the typewriter repair, the bicycle, the soft, new, wool cover, the warm clothing, the funds, the soap, and the endless work in getting the visual aid material ready for use, and most important, the constant assurance of your upholding in prayer, are all causes for gratitude. Folks in my own family and church were exceedingly generous and helpful.

The six Chinese passengers (out of the twelve of us) on board are pessimistic about China's future. However, it is repeatedly borne in on me that in permitting ourselves to be discouraged about the situation there along Christian lines, we are in error. "Greater is he that is in you, than he that is in world" I John 4:4. We have a powerful God.

Among the six non-Chinese who are going to China, three are business people. I'm happy to be one of the other three who go out as representatives of the Most High to proclaim the good news of Jesus' coming. Friends, pray for God's work and workers the world over. May we all be in such relationship to Him that He can work His purposes out through us.

LAYMEN TO HELP TRAIN LEADERSHIP FOR SOUTH AMERICA

by Robert M. Landis

Gathering for the 31st annual meeting, at the East Swamp Meeting House, members and friends of the Brotherhood laid plans for the next year to continue the Laymen's Conference and begin a project of $600 to assist two young Mennonites of South America in getting an education for full-time Christian service. Observance of "Men and Missions Sunday" on November 14, and Universal Bible Sunday, on December 12, was suggested to the Brotherhood members as avenues of service in which laymen could assist. Brotherhood publicity material was also solicited for the forthcoming exhibit by the General Conference Laymen's Organization, in the Conference Headquarters at Newton, Kansas.

South American Guests

Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander introduced two visiting brethren from South America, Reverend Koop and Rev. Jacob Isaak, who had attended the World Conference of Mennonites in the U.S.A. The Brotherhood Chorus, under the direction of Norman Schantz, sang, "Take Time to be Holy."

Harold S. Bender, Speaker

Dr. Harold S. Bender, dean of Goshen College, reviewed the work of our churches in the field of relief, taking his audience with him figuratively to the many areas of distress and suffering touched by our MCC. His powerful message deeply moved those in attendance; it is regrettable that the full text could not be printed here. The evening message, "The World's Extremity and God's Answer," was equally much appreciated by the large audience.

Reports

President Norman K. Berky gave a full report of his many and varied activities, calling attention to the projects undertaken: sponsoring of the father and son fellowship meeting, the brotherhood service at our Old Folks' Home at Fredrick, Bible conference sessions at Men-O-Lan during the Labor Day weekend, and the preparation of programs for the various meetings.

Officers

The following were elected to the Executive Board for a term of three years: Lester Shaffer, East Swamp; Melvin Clemens, Souderton; Robert M. Landis, Bethany, Quakertown; Robert Hunter, Second Church, Philadephia; and George Scheifele, First Church, Philadelphia.

15,000 Christmas Bundles on Way

751 Mennonites Land in Uruguay
1949 European Summer Service

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA.—This year the final total of Christmas bundles from the United States and Canada is 15,611. These are all packed, and on the way to the following countries: China, 1028; Austria, 1056; Italy, 231; Philippine Islands, 744; Mexico, 106; Poland, 1002; Pakistan, 558; Paraguay, 1814; England, 58; France, 515; Belgium, 432; Holland, 546; Uruguay, 152; American Zone Germany, 1351; French Zone Germany, 2359; British Zone Germany, 3247; Japan, 323; and Brazil, 89. In most of these countries distribution should be possible by Christmas time.

Volendam Passengers Reach Destinations

Of the 751 Mennonites who entered Uruguay, 228 under the leadership of Herman J. Andres have been located in an Army camp at Colonia; 458 accompanied by J. W. Warkentin are located in another camp at Arapey; and 65 accompanied by a Reverend Smith of Montevideo, went to a small camp in the Waldensian colony. The heavy baggage was taken to the various camps by train and truck. A number of persons from the Evangelical churches in Montevideo were very helpful in serving as interpreters and in other ways. The Uruguayan government and people have apparently been favorably impressed by the Mennonite immigrants. These various camps in which th people are located are temporary arrangemnts to provide the necessary facilities until plans for the permanent settlement can be completed.

According to a cable received from th MCC office in Asuncion, Paraguay, the Russian Mennonites who will settle in the Volendam colony have now completed their journey from the ocean port of Buenos Aires. Another group of 154 went to the Chaco where they wish to settle because of relatives who are there or because of other strong preferences.

1949 European Summer Service

Investigations are underway in Europe to choose locations for 1949 Summer Service Units. Present plans again provide for cooperative arrangements with the Council of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges, similar to 1948. Students in these colleges will apply through their school for the college sponsored tour and these Voluntary Service Units. Provisions are again being made for Mennonite students from other schools, and non-students, teachers, farmers, etc., to apply directly to MCC, Akron Pennsylvania. All the expenses for this short service and visit in Europe need to be paid by the individuals. The applicants will be chosen early in the new year.

Material Aid Field Work

J. B. Shenk of La Junta, Colorado, at present working with the Akron staff, will serve for the next few months as field representative in connection with the MCC relief and material aid program. The work will consist of coordinating the various aspects of the program, and giving information and counsel to local communities relating to collecting and shipping of relief materials. He will be in the Kansas area for several weeks beginning November 20, particularly in the interest of the meat canning program.

The Reporter

During the CPS program, one of the most well-known publications giving information on matters pertaining to the draft was The Reporter, issued by the National Service Board for Religious Objectors. In October of this year, publication of The Reporter was again resumed, after an interval of about a year. It will carry news and interpretation of various developments relating to the present draft law. Subscription price is $1.00 per year; order direct from the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, 941 Massachusetts Avenue N. W., Washngton 1, D. C.

—CHARLES RICKERT, student at Bluffton College, was recently arrested for refusal to register for the draft. Charles was released on $1,000 bail, and is now awaiting trial.

November 13. The admission of displaced persons to the U. S. is getting off to a slow start. The first boatload of 813 D. P.'s docked in New York on October 30, four months after the D.P. Act was passed.

The President delayed appointing the three commissioners who direct the program. Overseas personnel is scarce and untrained; procedures are developing slowly. The Commission is flooded with inquiries and requests from all over the country.

Over 10,000 D. P.'s each month must be admitted if the quota of 205,000 is to be used before the Act expires on June 30, 1950.

The first shipload included 491 Roman and Greek Catholics, 161 Jews, 75 Russian and Greek Orthodox, and 8 Protestants; by nationality, 368 Poles, 168 Lithuanians, and 83 listed as "stateless." Most of them will be scattered over the U. S.; 318 were listed for New York City addresses.

Eligible Mennonite D. P.'s to the U. S. are held up pending removal of some 2,500 non-Mennonite left-over cases who were processed but not moved before the President's special directive admitting certain catagories of refugees expired.

It was my good fortune to attend a good many of the sessions of the World Council of Churches held in Amsterdam this past August and September. I have sent an extended report to the MCC, the Executive Secretary. Since everyone by now has seen various reports, and perhaps heard some as well, I do not want to go into a detailed report on what actually happened. Here are some things, however, that impressed me, as a layman, as I sat through many of the sessions of the Assembly. I give them for what they are worth—nor is there any significance in the order in which they come.

Publicity

Amsterdam papers give much attention to the Assembly—so did the New York Herald Tribune, European Edition. The impression I have is that Charles P. Taft who was chairman of the publicity committee and his group did everything possible to let the world know that this was something out of the ordinary. More than two hundred press representatives covered the Assembly. (Story is told that at one of the sectional meetings a New Testament was needed in a hurry and not a copy could be found among the delegates! A newspaper reporter "saved the day." Speaking up from the back of the room he said, "You can have my copy if you will promise to return it.")

Women

There were a number of women delegates and, of course, alternates, consultants, and many visitors. Some of the really challenging messages were given by women. One of the committee reports received by the Assembly urged more women to be placed on church boards and committees where policies and decisions are framed which affect church life as a whole. The women also looked to the World Council to lead the way by utilizing capable women as staff members in responsible posts. With regard to the ordination of women the concensus seemed to be that this should be made the subject of "further careful and objective study."

The Laity

Plenty of evidence is at hand to make the present situation in this respect unsatisfactory. One very obvious one is that the laity constitutes more than 99 per cent of the church. Only by the witness of a spiritually intelligent and active laity can the church meet the modern world. The church must enable doctors, lawyers, industrialists, farmers, factory workers, etc., who live in a secularized world to live and work as Christians. This calls for guidance on a high spiritual level. The constitution of the World Council in the article on organization calls for one-third of the Assembly to consist of lay persons. The committee on Concerns of the Churches suggested to the Central Committee the advisibility of calling not less than three area meetings, largely of laymen, for the purpose of further study of efforts for enlisting the full lay power of the church. This emphasis on the laity seems to me to be a most significant one.

Youth

There were about one hundred youth representatives. These had a full schedule of meetings of their own including sectional meetings where the same four topics were discussed as by the delegates to the Assembly. They did, however, attend the Assembly worship services, plenary meetings, public meetings, and receptions. During the last day of the Assembly, the Youth delegation presented a statement to the World Council telling briefly of its activities during the days of meeting. I was struck with the keen appreciation of the church's task evidenced by their report, as well as their willingness to help the task. They were concerned with the general task of Biblical preaching and teaching in the churches. The young people felt that the way to find new means of coming together as churches is "most emphatically through corporate evangelistic endeavors . . . as we, too, give ourselves utterly to the impelling task of proclaiming the Saviour to men, we shall be drawn together by a new unity which will not be of our making, but the gift of our pardoning God."

The youth delegates expressed the hope that the next Assembly would have a larger representation of laymen and laywomen and "that young people will be included as delegates as well as guests." This seems to me to be a step in the right direction.

Younger Churches

It seemed to me that the delegates from the so-called "younger" (mission) churches were somewhat more evangelical in their emphasis and more impatient with existing prejudices—also eager for recognition. C. K. Dovlo, West Africa, expressed this most emphatically when he said: "As a true African I want to assure you we are no longer content to remain as hewers of wood and drawers of water for the other races. We want to cast away everything that has hindered us in the past. We are now a determined virile race desiring to contribute our full and unique share to the good of humanity. So we want you to treat us as such . . . ."

It does seem to me that here at the World Council and in our own cricles as well, we must take more cognizance of the mission churches. They are eager to go forward and have a spiritual freshness that ought to be utilized.

I think it was a well deserved recognition that the Assembly added another president to its existing five and gave the position to Dr. T. C. Chao, of China, as representing the younger churches.

With delegates from so many different countries, one could not help but be aware of racial differences and yet it seemed to me that little, if any, distinction was made as between races. In the Plenary discussions I was impressed with the apparent equality with which delegates were recognized.

Recognition of Differences

I liked the frank recognition on the part of the delegates that there were differences between the various communions of faith. This came out in the discussions, it was also evident in most of the reports. When you have communions ranging all the way from the Friends to the Greek Orthodox, with shades in between, you may as well admit that there are differences. This the delegates did. They were not anxious to overstate their case. On the other, it was interesting to see the look beyond the differences. They were hopeful that differences might not stand in the way of accomplishments which might be made on the basis of things they had in common. Dr. Visser 'T Hooft, General Secretary, at one of the closing sessions, in discussing the future of the World Council, pointed out that the first impression had been that there was real unity—then followed committee and sectional meetings and the going was not so easy, even disillusionment; then as the days passed there was more hope again, and the key word at the close of the session appeared to be, "We want to stay together."

Peace

In the sectional report on "The Church and the International Disorder" (Sec. IV.) was included a very strong indictment of war. "War as a method of settling disputes is incompatible with the teaching and example of our Lord Jesus Christ. The part which war plays in our present international life is a sin against God and a degradation of man." Beyond the statement, only partly quoted above, however, the Assembly outlined three positions now maintained which, it seemed to me, somewhat weakened the initial position. The three recognized were.

1. While entering a war may be a Christian's duty in particular circumstances it (war) cannot even be an act of justice.

2. Military action is the ultimate sanction of the rule of law and citizens must be taught that it is their duty to defend law by force if necessary.

3. "Others, again, refuse military service of all kinds, convinced that an absolute witness against war and for peace is for them the will of God and they desire that the Church should speak to the same effect."

Perhaps from our point of view the fact that the third position was included by the Assembly is recognition of real importance. However, the inclusion of the other positions leaves the door wide open for almost any shade of opinion on the question of war. It left one with the feeling that while war is wrong and you ought to condemn it with all you have, it is still wise to leave the door open to participate in it when it actually comes.

Theological

Here is where I go out on a limb! It was of course to be expected that at a gathering of this kind the theological "greats" would have their inning. I must confess too that it was "nice" to hear Barth ridicule the idea that "man is the Atlas who is destined to bear the dome of heaven on his shoulders." It was also stimulating to hear Niemoeller say "we are weary of our own ways; we all have reason to doubt our own powers and despair. But for that very reason we are called afresh to proclaim the great deeds of God and to make the Christian message heard and seen in the World." It was thrilling to hear Dulles (hardly a theologian) say that, "It would be wrong and stupid to use violence in order to convince people that violence ought not to be used." Or, to hear Hromadka say critically that "The Western nations have ceased to be the exclusive masters and architects of the world." Or again, to hear Niebuhr carry on in somewhat pessimistic vein about Abraham's bargaining with God about the number of righteous people necessary to redeem the city. The number settled on was not forthcoming. He then went on to say that "one has the uneasy feeling that we are in that position. There is so little health in the whole of our modern civilization that one cannot find the island of order from which to proceed against disorder." One could hardly quibble with his conclusion that " the final victory over man's disorder is God's and not ours; but we do have responsibility for proximate victories."

And so one could go on and on—certainly the theologians went all out to shed their light on what is wrong with the world. Somehow, amidst all of the fine oratory and with all of the carefully prepared reports, one had the somewhat uneasy feeling that the average person all over the world is sick of talk, of slogans, of fine words, and high sounding theories. He wants something that works beyond the conference hall, something beyond mere machinery. All of these things he has had too much of before. What he wants is some kind of security that will give him the assurance that his efforts will not be nullified periodically by selfish interests that lead to war and destruction. If he looks to the church at all, it will have to show him a faith that is simple enough for him to understand and that expresses itself in fair play, in mercy, and in love. Something that you actually live by and do not necessarily shout from the tree tops and put in glib sounding slogans and generalities. This kind of thing stems from a life that has learned to know Jesus Christ as Saviour. It recognizes sin and the only remedy for it. It expresses itself in a simple way. motivated by love. It knows no compromise even though it may lead to death. Once the church comes again to this position, then its power will know no bounds. I felt somewhat of an emptiness precisely at this point. I am still not convinced that with all of the fanfare here at Amsterdam the churches here represented by and large are willing to go much beyond the well-trodden path of traditional formalism which is strong on organization and talk but not too strong of producing lives that are willing to live, and if necessary, die for the cause of Jesus Christ. If through the World Council of Churches there will come a quickening in the churches—if there will be born again members—lives that have renounced sin and have accepted Jesus Christ as Saviour, wholly consecrated to the Kingdom of God, and committed to a new way of life, then I think this was undoubtedly a most significant gathering in the history of mankind. While this may come, and I pray that it might, I rather doubt it. Strikes me that most fires in history have been kindled by those who dared to stand somewhat aloof from the crowd. The fires of the reformation were not kindled so much by a mighty organization (that incidentally already existed) as by the lives of few people who dared to exemplify a living faith.

Far be it from me to say what the various Mennonite groups ought to do about the World Council of Churches. There are some things that seem to me to be commendable about this movement. I have also expressed some doubts which still exist in my own mind. I have for a long time had a conviction that God wants the Mennonite Church to carry a light to which many other groups have not given much heed. That light we can carry best if our whole family of Mennonites the world over can be welded into a closer and stronger fellowship. Perhaps, then before we become too much taken up with the World Council of Churches or any other attempt to formulate an organization on an international basis (International Council of Christian Churches, etc.) we had better devote our energies to our own immediate family. I rather think that if we have any contribution to make to the ecumenical movement it will be via this route.

HEBRON CHURCH
Five miles East of Buhler, Kansas

(Serving 80 Homes)

The Hebron Church was organized in 1879. The first Elder was Rev. Bernhard Buhler (whose son was the founder of Buhler, Kansas). The first church building was put up in 1882, and the present structure was built in 1900.

Most of the members are from the rural district, and hence the main support for the Church and the Conference comes from agricultural products. There are close to one hundred families, although not all are living in the neighborhood of the church; about eighty families participate in the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN.

Some of the ministers that have served are: Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, Dr. P. S. Goertz, Rev. P. E. Franz, Rev. T. A. van der Smissen. Our last pastor was Rev. Jacob W. Nickel, now in South America for a term of two years to serve the Mennonites in Brazil and Paraguay. Our present pastor is Elbert Koontz.

BOOK NOTES

ELIJAH AND THE SECRET OF HIS POWER by F. B. Meyer

Most of the books that have been received in this column have been recent publications. We should keep ourselves informed on new publications, but we should not think that the latest books are always the best and are always to be preferred to older writings. This is one of Rev. F. B. Meyer's many Biblical expositions. Rev. Meyer is a peer among the world's best expository preachers. He specializes on the biographies of the Scriptures. His books on Biblical characters throb with human interest. His scholarly treatment of the subject reflects a wide knowledge of Biblical literature. He has a profound insight into the innermost part of the soul. In studying his books one senses spiritual depths which are beyond most people. He has the unique gift of so presenting the biographies of men of the Bible that their faith and heroism become an inspiration to the reader. He has the ability to point us to the real secret of the power and the greatness of these men. These studies give a person a new insight into the meaning of faith. Unfortunately his books are out of print; but they can be found in public libraries and in many private libraries. It would seem to me no young preacher should long go on preaching without reading at least several of Rev. Meyer's books Besides the above-named book I would suggest, "Abraham: or the Obedience of Faith," "Moses, the Servant of God," "Israel, a Prince of God," and "John the Baptist." In a collection of his sermons called "A Castaway," Rev. Meyer relates his own experience of the Holy Spirit's endowment in his early minstry. With that experience as a background, one could perhaps say that his books are an illustration of what Spirit-filled preaching means.—W. F. Unruh

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The Girls' Gospel Team gave the program at the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Sunday evening, November 7. Dr. Bauman led the discussion at the monthly faculty discussion meeting Friday evening, November 12, on the topic, "The responsibility of the teacher in directing the religious life of the student." He pointed out that this should be considered a privilege rather than a duty. Faculty members should be interested in helping students to reach a definite decision for Christ. The faculty member must show a deep faith in God in his own religious life. Opportunities should be sought for informal discussion with students on their religious problems. A deep concern must be shown for the spiritual life of students, an interest taken in his personal problems in a constructive way, and also an interest shown in group religious activities on the campus. The faculty member should be a friend to the student, especially to those who most need this friendship. Rev. Harry Yoder has been carrying on solicitation work for the building fund in the Central Conference territory in Illinois.

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

The Rev. Ernest Bohn, Professor of Philosophy at Bluffton College, was guest speaker in chapel November 8. He spoke of the importance of a "Good Name." As examples he gave us short biographies of famous men who had good names. Mr. Bohn is the father of Miss Esther Bohn, professor of art here at Freeman College.

In connection with a good name, President Miller spoke to the Christian Youth Volunteers about the meaning of being a good man.

Freeman College was host to the Mennonite Aid Conference. Delegates from various states were present.

Speech and dramatics students are being sent out to various districts to judge reading and declam contests.

One of the projects undertaken by the Christian Youth Volunteers organization is the handling of mail orders for the bookshop. Catalogs have been sent out to various pastors and church members, and orders are being received for Christian literature and supplies. The profits go into the C.Y.V. treasury for extended work on other projects.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

This week special attention was given to the Inter-Seminary Conference, held on the campus of the University of Chicago, and attended by students from thirty-three seminaries from six states. Several distinct trends can be noticed among the seminaries of the mid-western states. There is a very clear re-emphasis upon the Bible as the Word of God; another definite emphasis of the Church as the body of Christ; and third, the urgency of the gospel of Christ for the awful predicament of man in the twentieth century. The most basic conflict among the delegates was between those from the so-called "free" churches and those from the more formal churches, the first group declaring there can be no church without Scripture and the other insisting there can be no Scripture without the church. David Habegger, of Busby, Montana, represents our institution on the executive committee of this movement.

The speaker at our next Vesper Service will be Dr. Chalmer Faw, former missionary to Africa, and now professor of New Testament at Bethany Biblical Seminary.

The Old Testament class of Don Smucker, visited the Oriental Institute on Friday to inspect one of the finest collections of materials in the world from the nations and culture which existed during Biblical times.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Thanksgiving vacation and the end of the fall quarter came simultaneously at Bethel College from Wednesday, November 24 to Monday, November 28. Several changes began with the opening of the winter quarter, Monday, November 28. Harley J. Stucky, assistant professor of history and government, will assume his post at Bethel College. Dr. J. E. Hartzler, visiting professor of philosophy and religion, will continue his instruction for this quarter. A number of new students have enrolled.

Six Oklahoma churches will be visited by a Student Volunteer deputation group during the Thanksgiving vacation. Mission programs will be presented at Enid, Corn, Hydro, Bessie, Carnegie, Gotebo, and Geary.

Cornelia Otis Skinner will be presented by Bethel College at the Memorial Hall series on Monday, Nov. 29. Other programs have featured the Guardsmen Quartet and Seumas MacManus, Irish poet.

Ruth Hilty, relief worker from Europe, visited Bethel College on Wednesday, Nov. 17. She spoke at the morning chapel and at an evening meeting.

The Peace Group of Bethel College presented a program at the Hanston community Christian worker's conference on Tuesday, Nov. 16. Giving information and a challenge for the present-day situation in regard to non-resistance a series of talks were given and slides were shown. Dr. J. Winfield Fretz, Bertha Fast, Ramon Jantz, Calvin Schrag, Daniel Classen and Carl Andres presented the program.

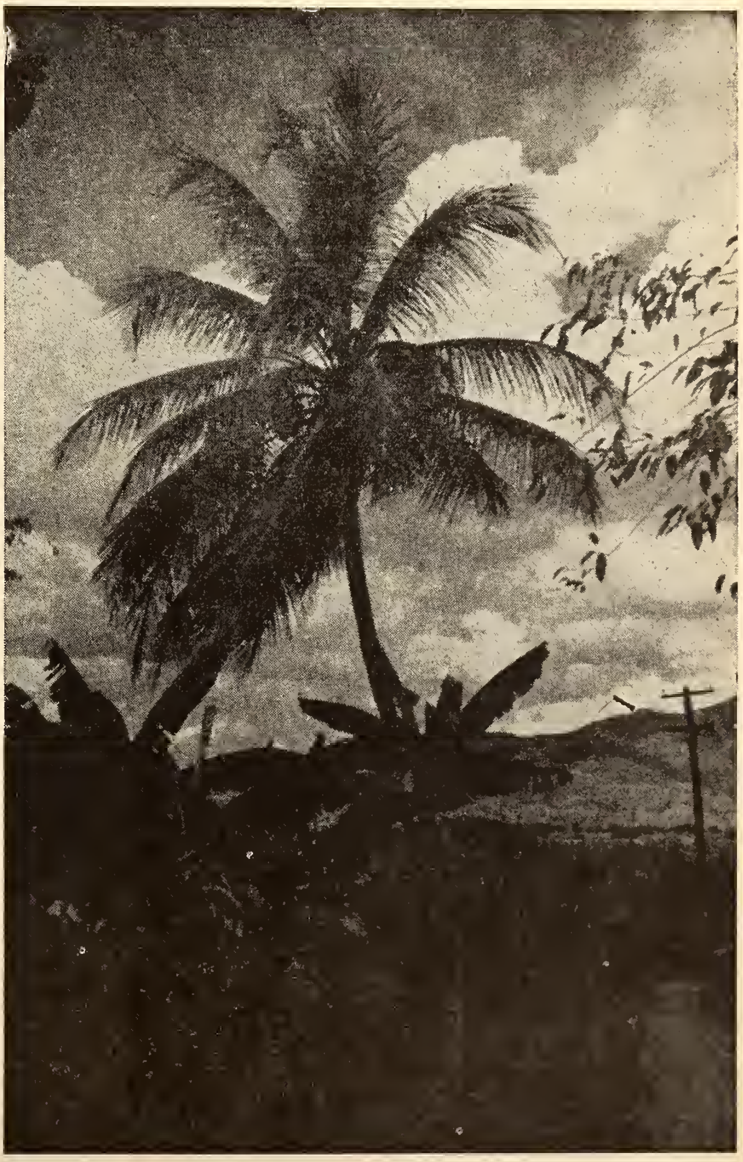
They Do Not Have Enough, They are Human

by Carl Lehman, Bluffton, Ohio



On one of our early business trips to San Juan we ran into some difficulty on the Cayey road. The night before, there had been a nearly continuous rain; and by morning landslides had left mud and dirt along the side of the road and in some places on the road itself. Paco Bateria ran out of gas or had trouble with his battery, as his custom was, and we had to get off from behind the truck and start walking. We soon had public transportation and got to the city in time to get our work done. By evening there was still mud on my shoes. Sitting on the steps of the famous Colon Plaza (Columbus Square) in the shadow of the massive statue which for years has towered over the city—capitol of the island first discovered by Columbus himself in 1493—one of the sons of those ancient conquistadores shined my shoes. I had taken a liking to shoe-shine boys in Puerto Rico. They were genuinely friendly and good practice for Spanish. This kid had his kit all fixed up and equipped with an old bicycle bell. When he was finished with one shoe he could bring a slumbering customer to his senses long enough to take the finished foot off the stand and put the next one on the stand—simply by ringing the bell. It worked like a charm, only he did not use it on me, except simply to show me how it worked.

This fellow's work was guaranteed. I did no bargaining, not even asking how much he would charge. I simply said I wanted a shine when he asked, pointing out to him that my shoes were "muy susio." But he said, "No good shine, no pay." During the time he worked on the shoes we began trying out each other's languages. He knew quite a smattering of English, and with the smattering of Spanish I had already picked up we understood each other fairly well. We got on friendly terms. He wondered how much I had. "No mucho," I said, "we only get five dollars a month," somewhat evading his question. "No esta trabajando?" he wanted to know. Yes I worked, but I was getting only five dollars a month! I must be very poor, he thought. Why he made more than that shining shoes. The American soldiers and marinos were always having their shoes shined, and they paid all right. Oh, you had to take a lot of talk from some of them, but soon you learned to talk back at them. You learned to say things that they did not teach in the English classes in school. You didn't just like to talk that way, but then it was all part of your business, and if you are going to shine shoes you've got to talk like your customers talk, so you learned to talk like the soldados talked.

When the boy had finally finished and given me a shine that was to hold its luster for a long time, he flately refused to take anything for his work. No, sir, anyone getting only five dollars a month was not going to have to pay him, he would shine my shoes for nothing. I began wondering whether I had come to Puerto Rico to do relief work or not, and it wasn't until I had taken out my billfold and shown him that I had several bills that he finally took the dime I offered. Of course, I did not show him the bigger bills I had in the other part of the billfold. I did not quite have the heart.

I learned something about Puerto Rico from the shoe-shine boy that I had not learned from the books I had read about the island. I knew that existence for most of them is a struggle. They live in one of the most beautiful places on earth, but the island has very few natural resources. What little they have must be shared with a great many people. They are more than twice as thickly populated as India. I knew these things, and I knew that a great many of them were not getting enough food and had to live under conditions no human being should ever have to endure. Later I saw La Perla, the slums of San Juan where this boy lived. After seeing La Perla the slums of New York and Chicago would impress no one. The shoe-shine boy taught me that Puerto Rico is a place where people are not statistics, but human. Their pain, their sorrow, and their heartaches are as real as our own. I know Puerto Ricans now as persons. I do not like to see these persons, that I have learned to know so well, live like they have to live. I want them to know the power of the Gospel. I want to share with them some of the things I have. All of us can give much more to our missionary work as well as to the whole program of the church. This will make it easy for our mission board to begin a much-needed work in Puerto Rico, a work which could be very fruitful. They do not have, they are human.

A Ship! A Ship!

Continued Story of Shipwreck and Thirteen Days at Sea

by A. Donald Miller

I am sure it was; but only as we distinguished clearly between what God did, and what evil did; and realized that whatever might betide our mortal bodies, we could never fall beyond the range of God's love, victorious over death itself. Without such a conception of God, faith in His faithfulness could not persist. But with it we could commit our ways to Him and know that for us the vital question rather was this—What is His will for us in this situation that may do it?

That so many had really touched the core of the matter was shown in the quiet courage, the cheerfulness and honour, the little acts of thoughtfulness, the uncomplaining response to the rigours and hardships of our situation, which were manifest again and again. And in none was that shining beauty of the God-lit spirit of man more evident than in Mr. Robertson. He was elderly, a man of most gentle and kindly nature, who had lost all his business and possessions in Burman, and who had tramped, a refugee, through many vicissitudes, to India. A son of his was prisoner in Singapore. On the ship we had talked together of the things of God, and his faith was undimmed. On the boat he gave without distinction of race or position, such little comforts as he had upon him, without thought of keeping back anything for himself.

And then, on the Sunday afternoon, the wind began to rise. No rowing was now needed to keep the boat moving. The sail filled; the boat heeled over and began to drive through the increasingly choppy sea. Spray began to drench us. At sundown we again, with some difficulty, tied up in a line with the other boats. The night came, cloudy and black, and the wind blew chill upon us, as we huddled together, unprotected against the cold, tossing on the waves, longing for the warmth of the sun. And then it was that, just after midnight, there was a sudden cry "Man overboard!" And Mr. Robertson had gone . . . . He had become numbered with cold, asked his neighbour to move a little, tried to stand to ease his cramped and chilled body, when a roll of the boat swept him overboard. And in the darkness of the night, with our boats all tied in a long line and the wind blowing strong, he could not be rescued. If any man among us was ready to meet his Maker, it was Mr. Robertson. His loss was grievous; and yet, since we had many days of trial ahead and his age would have made the ardours a most wearing burden, too heavy for his strength, there was mercy in this swift translation to a fuller life. That God willed the situations in which Mr. Robertson found himself I do not believe. If I did, my conception of God would be different from the One revealed in Jesus Christ. Christ makes it so abundantly clear that there are again and again situations which God does not will, and yet which happen. (To be continued)

Mennonite Youth Caravan

Norma Jost, Leader

After spending five weeks in the Central Conference churches at Carlock, Ill., Middlebury and Topeka, Ind., Congerville, Pekin, and Meadows, Ill., we look back on our experiences with a sense of gratitude. Before we started our work we wondered just what lay ahead of us. Now that the time is past we can say that we as members of the Caravan feel we have gained the most from this experience. Our visions and experiences have been broadened and everywhere we've seen the need for Christian service. We've gained a deeper appreciation of the small rural church and the work of the minister in such a church. There is much to be done; there are needs on every hand.

At four of the churches we worked intensely with the children in a project of making felt shoes for relief. Approximately 90 pair of shoes will be sent to the M.C.C. for children in Europe. While the children worked, they sang . . . . and then gathered outdoors or in the church sanctuary for a period of Bible stories and more singing. It was a pleasure to work with these children; they were friendly, enthusiastic and willing workers. Their spirit of helpfulness was encouraging to all of us. It was good to be with them.

In most of the churches we spent time with the young people, learning to know each other, working together, fellowshipping and worshiping together. Several places we helped in cleaning inside or outside the church, in painting that needed to be done. At Congerville we helped Reverend Yoder with the pastoral calls in homes where people do not attend Church. These were interesting. If all cases we were well received and we enjoyed this phase of the work. In all of the churches we were responsible for the entire morning worship service.

Pekin presented a change in our program. There we conducted a community survey of Elm Grove Township for the Bethel Church. Two families graciously loaned their cars for the week and we visited in approximately 155 homes. The results were encouraging. For the most part the people were very friendly and sympathetic toward the Bethel Church and survey. Only a few instances did they refuse to give information. We found that the majority of people do attend church regularly. However, some were irregular and others have no church home and do not attend.

Most of the people who do not go had been brought up otherwise and had many excuses for not attending. We think we could make a collection of excuses guaranteed to fit any situation. The main excuse seemed to be "We're too busy—you know how it is on the farm in the summertime," or "We work seven days a week," or "I'm too old to go to church," or "We've never made the start." In those, people and in the children who do not attend Sunday school we feel is the challenge for the church at Pekin.

Meadows offered us a twofold program—that of working in the Old People's Home and also the Church. In the mornings we helped in the many tasks around the Home, washing, ironing, hauling feed, picking beans, and canning corn. Afternoons were spent with the children at the church—again working on a relief project. The latter part of the afternoon we visited with the old people at the Home, visiting the sick and having devotions with some. Here we feel we've gained an insight into the task of keeping such an institution running smoothly and ministering to those who live there. We appreciated deeply the spirit of those entrusted with this task. Evenings at Meadows included craft classes for the young people, prayer meeting at the Home, singspirations and hayrack rides and outings with the young people. We feel the Meadows church is especially fortunate to have such a fine large group of young people. Surely there is great potential power in so many young Christian lives.

As we go to our homes we all feel a deeper sense of consecration to Christ and the Kingdom of God. a stronger urge to devote our lives to full-time Christian service. To all of you where we've been we express our sincere thanks for your kindness to us. Truly it —First Mennonite Church, Lima, Ohio: Rev. John R. Dick, of the Grace Bible Institute, concluded a week of evangelistic effort, November 7. The services were deeply spiritual. During the winter months the Children's Bible Hour is held weekly. The children are taught Bible verses, choruses, and lessons through the use of a flannel-graph.—Corr.

Conscription is upon us. Consider, in its stead, voluntary service, the giving of yourself and your time, to Christian service in the church.

There will be an opening for a secretary in the Mennonite Publication Office approximately December 1st. If interested, write for Qualification Sheet indicating the nature of the job before making your application. Girl with Mennonite background and affiliation, naturally, preferred. was an expression of Christian love. We're happy to have new friends, to have gained from you new ideas to take to our churches at home, to have been a part of your church life for a week, and to have a better understanding of the Mennonites of the Central Conference. We feel, too, the tremendous challenge in the work of a small rural parish and of the minister there.

God has richly blessed us and we feel humble and grateful for this privilege. It is our hope that some good may come through our having been together and that there may be other young people from your churches who will give of their time for summer service.

A PRINCE HAS BEEN BORN. The eyes of the world have been centered upon the king's palace. The greetings of hundreds of thousands converged upon the family. The gifts of other thousands were showered upon the infant who by his position has need of none of them, for it is reported he is already receiving a salary. Just across the channel on the continent another child is born in a make-shift house with no notice, no gifts, and little food and clothing. There were probably hundreds like him, or her, in war-torn central Europe, Russia, China, and Japan. All of this causes one to ask whether the significant leadership of today will come out of the one big London or out of one of the unheralded thousands of Bethlehems scattered over today's occupied countries. Somehow it has been God's method to work among the lowly and through the lowly.

In the Advent season of 1948 are we expectantly living with shepherds on the humble plains of Bethlehem where above the turmoil of our time we shall be able to hear the message of peace from the angels, or are we living in the tumultuous cities of pride, where every bit of news involving our security sends up greater crescendos of vicious, passionate, warmongering? Through our missionary and relief representatives we may stand with bowed heads at the manger cradles of the leaders of the future being born in the lowly Bethlehems of the world today.—JJE

IT IS HIGH TIME we were taking the emphasis off the word "voluntary" in the title of one of the phases of our Conference and MCC work. At a time in the world's history when the lines are being drawn in a final showdown, not basically between nations or groups of nations, but between the Church and the world. There is demanded of the followers of Jesus Christ something more than casually considering whether they want to give a year or two of their lives to Christian service or not. This is not necessarily a demand that all able-bodied young Christians choose a church vocation. It is, however, a challenge to unconditional Christian living. It is a challenge to young men and women to search their motives to make sure they are totally converted to Jesus Christ and willing to give unconditional allegiance to him, being ready to go to prison, suffer ridicule, and because of their convictions present their bodies a living sacrifice unto God. If we are not converted to Christ, we will surely be converted to the anti-christ—the state—who is even sucking a large part of the Christian church into his program (if we may speak in a personification). The words of Pierre Widmer in the present issue are not those of casual choice when he says. "Confronting the enormous and awful conflict that is being prepared under our eyes, which is going to break the world, are you going to utilize at the last hour the weapons of Satan to do the work of God? No, brethren. At the time when we in Europe, through faithfulness to the Gospel, are regaining with difficulty the way of Christian non-resistance, do not relinquish it by allowing yourselves to be deluded by deceitful propaganda and false doctrines, signs of the latter days. At the hour when the Kingdom of God is approaching, when the return of Jesus Christ appears as the only possible escape for the world in convulsions, remain solidly founded on the Rock of the Gospel and stay by the law of the New Covenant, the Sermon on the Mount."—JJE

AMAZING IT IS, AND SOMETIMES SHOCKING what a day's reading can bring forth for the editor. One news release called attention to the fact that Vishinsky says the U.S. is plotting a Pearl Harbor against Russia. He pointed out that an American general had written a book speaking about the capacity of airplanes carrying atomic bombs to take off from British bases and from high altitudes to strike at key Russian cities. He is reported to have further asked the question, "Do we say that our airplanes will slip in over the United States with their objective New York?"

On the same day there came to the editor's desk news item that the fundamentalist American Council of Christian Churches had unanimously called for "a complete and frank showdown with Russia" in a resolution adopted at their national convention at Philadelphia. The Council termed it a "betrayal of Christian principles and common decency for the United States to sit by and permit such a revolutionary force to gain advantage for the enslavement of the world." Said the 100 delegates of this convention, "We believe that Almighty God holds up responsible." The Council set forth its position as being in opposition to appeasement and stated, "For us to have the atomic bomb and in the name of a false morality born of perverted sense of self-respect and pacifist propaganda to await the hour when Russia has her bombs to precipitate an atomic war is the heighth of insanity and will, when the fatal hour comes, be a just punishment upon us." It is evident from this that not only the generals are planning and urging a showdown; even parts of the Christian church have adopted the policy. Is it any wonder that Russian Communism has nothing left for the Christian church? But is this the business of the Christian church in this critical hour of history? Is it the business of the Christian church to call for a showdown when to it has been committed a message of reconcilation through redemption by the blood of Christ? Our business is to win our enemies to Jesus Christ even if we die in the process, not to protect ourselves with them dying in the process. In Don Smucker's words, "It is the business of the church not to break the heads of the Russians with the atomic bomb, but to break their hearts with the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." This is the path for the church of God. Church of God, walk ye in it!—J.J.E.

"Must" Reading for North American Mennonites

by Pierre Widmer

". . . even at the price of your splendid farms . . ."

At sea, October 15, 1948

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ:

May grace and peace be with you from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ, our Saviour!

"Thank You, dear friends . . ."

For two months I was among you, and then I did not have the time to give you a parting greeting as I should have liked to do before leaving America. After eight days of complete rest on the boat, which were extremely necessary for me in order to overcome the great fatigue from which I was suffering upon leaving, I finally feel strong enough to write you this farewell letter. It will bring you at the same time our greetings from France to all the churches that I was not able to visit. Thanks to your papers, I can in this way deliver to you the messages that I received from our two conferences for all of you. I want to repeat what I said everywhere in their name: "Thank you, dear friends, for everything that you have done for us and for the people of France, 'in the name of Christ.'" May God Himself reward you and bless you richly in return. Let me assure you that our churches in France, pray for you with affection. Will you please also pray for us and remember that our people are still more in need of spiritual help than of material aid, for their discouragement is great after two terrible wars with the possibility of another general conflict facing them? The only hope for them is to hear and to receive the Gospel; the needs are exceedingly great.

> "The way of the cross doesn't conquer; it converts. It doesn't win wars—it wins friends. It doesn't kill enemies—it ends enmities. Only the death of enmity can be the birth of peace.
> "Moral power is more than a match for military power; a people who have faith in their cause and in the human nature of their opponents and in God can wield a force greater than that of arms; the spirit that can suffer is more powerful than the sword."—Albert Edward Day.

". . . certain impressions . . ."

I should like to express again to all those whom I visited my deep gratitude for the way in which you received me in your churches and in your homes. I am unable to do the same for you; but my Lord, who is infinitely rich and in whose name I came, will give it back to you a hundredfold in blessings of every kind. One thing that I can do is to tell you of certain impressions that I received among you, which it might be helpful for you to know and which I convey to you affectionately, not to flatter you, but to be of further service to you.

. . . the Lord above everything else . . .

Among you I had great joy, the joy of finding myself with brothers and sisters in the faith and of being able to worship God with those who love Him and serve Him, and who also await the coming of the Lord Jesus from heaven (I Thess. 1:9,10). What a happy privilege to be together to adore our God! But at times I had the feeling—each one of my readers will examine himself to know if this word is true of him—that you love your Mennonite Church more than the Lord Himself, or sound doctrine more than the Lord, or the forms of the faith more than the Lord, or what is worse, the world more than the Lord! It was evident to me, here and there. And I am not speaking of individuals, but of churches, of congregations. My dear friends, may each one of you really love the Lord above everything else, and may each one of your congregational communities be able to give at all times, to no matter what visitor, the deep impression that there the Lord is loved above all else, and that it is indeed He whom you serve and whom you are expecting! This is my wish for you. And rest assured that while writing that I recognize the value of the church, and of sound doctrine, and of the forms of piety. Although in France we have lost certain outward forms, such as those concerning dress, let me say that I greatly prefer the practice of the thin covering, so suitable and at the same time so becoming, to the show of ridiculous hats and other wordly finery that I saw elsewhere which seemed to me a very strange way of practicing non-conformity to the world! But, dear brethren and sisters, take note of the fact that a church never reaches a state of "having-attained," of being established in perfection; rather read again the letters to the seven churches of Revelation. It was so easy to believe that we are the best one of the churches, or still better: the best one among the best! May God preserve you from this, for it is a real danger for you.

". . . a certain wastefulness . . ."

On the other hand, I was deeply inspired by your missionary spirit and activity. Oh, when will we see flourish in our French churches such zeal for evangelization and mission work! May the Lord bless you richly in all that work, and through it may still many more souls be saved to the glory of our Saviour while it is day and we have the possibility of working. "The night cometh," says the Word. Pray for us, the Mennonites of France, in order that the Lord shake us, awaken us, and put us to work to announce Jesus, "the only name given unto men whereby they must be saved." As for knowing if you yourselves are doing what you can, when on the one hand, "the harvest is so great and the labourers are so few," and on the other hand, your means are at present so great, that is not for me to tell you. Sometimes I had the impression of there being a certain wastefulness among you, because you live in the midst of such abundance. And yet the smallest piece of bread, the smallest gift of money, would be so precious in so many unfortunate countries, in so many missionary works. May the Lord help you to use wisely and to administer well all the wealth and possessions that He has entrusted to you; for you will have to give an account for it all, dear friends; do not forget that.

"... remain strangers and pilgrims ..."

There is a third matter to which I should like to call your attention; it is that you take on very rapidly the prevailing habits of life in America. The immoderate use of chewing gum, even in church during the worship service, (how improper: doubtlessly as serious as the matter of smoking) is a small, but very characteristic sign of it among many others that are more important. And yet, your fathers came to America to have the right to be "strangers and pilgrims" on the earth. But many of you seem to think that you have gone beyond that stage, and that now you ought to become excellent American citizens, with everything which that implies, including military service! Well, dear friends, we have tried that in France, and I consider it an unfortunate experiment; do not try it! In such a condition our churches are no longer lights in the world. For the love of God, remain "strangers and pilgrims" in North America, even at the price of your splendid farms and your comfortable living if it is necessary. One does not hasten the coming of the kingdom of God by definitely establishing himself upon the earth. And we Christians are to " look for and hasten His coming." Are you looking forward to it? Confronting the enormous and awful conflict that is being prepared under our eyes, which is going to break over the world, are you going to utilize at the last hour the weapons of Satan to do the work of God? No, brethren. At the time when we in Europe, through faithfulness to the Gospel, are regaining with difficulty the way of Christian nonresistance, do not relinquish it by allowing yourselves to be deluded by deceitful propaganda and false doctrines, signs of the latter days. At the hour when the Kingdom of Heaven is approaching, when the return of Jesus Christ appears as the only possible escape for the world in convulsions, remain solidly founded on the Rock of the Gospel and stay by the law of the New Covenant, the Sermon on the Mount.

"... the patient waiting for Christ ..."

Dear friends, my heart is full of all that I should still like to tell you, but it is time to close this letter. I should like only to leave you meditating especially on the letter to the Ephesian church recorded in Revelation 2. Certainly you are rich in works, in labor, in patience under trail. But perhaps many among you have lost the first love of the Church, the constant expectation and the ardent desire for the return of the Bridegroom, the Master, the Lord Jesus Christ. Dear brothers and sisters in Christ, may "the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God and into the patient waiting for Christ" (II Thess. 3:5); that is my final prayer and my affectionate greeting for all of you.

Times of Refreshing for Pastors: Northern District

by L. R. Amstutz

The pastors of the Northern District Conference met for a period of fellowship, inspiration and mutual instruction November 9-11. The host church was the First Mennonite Church, north of Butterfield, Minn. of which Rev. M. M. Lehmann is pastor.

The subject of the Conference was, "THE PASTOR and the PRAYER LIFE." This subject was divided into the following topics; personal prayer, public prayer, prayer meetings, prayer in the homes. After each of these topics, there was an informal period of discussion which was followed by a period of prayer. The evening sessions were of a more formal nature, consisting of messages on the general theme of prayer.

Under the subject, Personal Prayer, Biblical examples of such prayers were called to our attention by Rev. Isaac Derksen from Huron, South Dakota. Dr. C. H. Suckau gave us personal experiences of answered prayer while on our mission field in India.

The topic of public prayer stimulated considerable discussion. How formal should our prayers be? It was agreed that the Holy Spirit is basic to true prayer and that we should strive to improve our public prayers by seeking to eliminate common faults.

There was also a practical emphasis given to the topic of prayer. Prayer was related to the matter of missions and soul-winning in our Wednesday evening service.

There was a warm atmosphere of spiritual fellowship prevalent. This conference has moved us to greater consistency in prayer. Reluctantly we disbanded, having been drawn closer one to another in Christian love and to our Saviour who is the object and source of all true prayer.

LET'S GET ACQUAINTED

That's what one of our good ministers thinks is exactly what we need—to get acquainted.

In order to acquaint his church with the General Conference and its operations more fully, he has written to the Mennonite Publication Office requesting that for one month his church receives fifteen copies of THE MENNONITE. Now isn't that a splendid idea? Imagine a pastor sitting down with his young folks, or even with the older folks, for an intensive study for a whole month of all the various Conference activities—Textbook: THE MENNONITE, official publication of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America.

We say he chose a good textbook, because there is something in THE MENNONITE for everyone in the family, for young and old alike. It's a good family paper—providing the family takes it. That's true of a great many things, like good family dinners, fine family devotions, and good family discussions. Each is good—providing the family takes it—as a family.

The South American Macedonian Call

by A. J. Neuenschwander

On October 6th, the Executive Committee of our Board, Rev. J. M. Regier, chairman, Rev. John J. Plenert, vice-chairman, and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, secretary, met with the two Brethren; Rev. David Koop, c.p. 328 Curitiba, Brazil and Rev. Jacob Isaak, Blumenort, Fernheim, Chaco, Paraguay for a conference on South American problems, in an all day session. Some of the points agreed upon were:

Bible Schools

The Board is to assist in furnishing a full-time worker for a Bible school in Brazil and one in Paraguay. These workers are available, ready and adequately trained to help in setting up the program and in carrying out the instruction in these schools.

Ministerial Students

Two young men in our Brazilian churches have responded to the call of God to prepare for the ministry. The Board agreed to assist financially so that they could attend a sound evangelical seminary not far removed from our Mennonite community in Brazil. The first quarter's support has already been sent. We rejoice to announce and acknowledge that the Brotherhood of the Eastern District Conference has pledged to raise $500.00 toward this worthy cause this coming year. Naturally they will need more than one year of training for full-time ministerial service.

Contacts are being made with the (Old) Mennonite Bible School, Bragado, Argentina, about the possibility of having some of the more advanced young men from our settlements in Paraguay, who desire to enter the ministry, to attend this school. In this institution Spanish is taught as well as the ordinary Bible school subjects. This seems to be a good procedure until our own Bible schools will get fully established and in operation.

German Books for Ministers

Attention to this need has been called by Rev. J. M. Regier in his earlier article. Most letters that come to the Board from our representatives in Paraguay, emphasize this great need. It happens that well-trained ministers who came to Paraguay from Europe, come completely empty handed. Therefore in order to help meet this need German books that are written for ministers are in great need.

Anyone who has such books and is willing to give them for this worthy purpose is asked to send them to the Mennonite Historical Library, in care of C. Krahn, North Newton, Kansas.

These books are to be sorted and sent by Parcel Post in 10 pound packages to their destination. This is the quickest way of getting printed matter to our brethren.

Part Support for Ministers

The two workers sent by the Board of Home Missions to South America, Rev. A. W. Friesen and Rev. J. W. Nickel, are in full agreement with Rev. Koop and Rev. Isaak on the need to provide some support for ministers. The ministers work without salary from the local congregation. Most of them live on farms and operate them for their own living. By giving them part support these ministers can employ laborers and thus free themselves from part of their farm duties so that they can give more time to spiritual work. For the first quarter, 1949 we have already sent $270.00 both to Paraguay and Brazil for this purpose. The amount for Paraguay needs to be increased.

What will need to be done in Uruguay to help those that have been settled there recently from Danzig, remains to be seen. One of our North American workers has been directed to visit this group, since they adhere to the General Conference, and report to the Home Mission Board.

South American Church Building Fund

The church building program in Brazil and Paraguay has been supported in a substantial manner, as our Chairman, Rev. J. M. Regier has reported in the earlier article. A program like that dips deep into the reserves of the Board. However, we felt justified in doing this because of the constant stream of refugees that are coming into the one settlement where a new church is being built.

The Board has set up a "South American Church Building Fund" at our General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kans. We hope that with special holiday offerings and the distribution of mission monies in the various church and society treasuries, this special fund will be remembered, as well as the General treasury of our Board. Please designate for what purpose your gift is to be used, as the Lord leads.

In shifting our emphasis to assist our brethren in South America in their spiritual work, we do not want to overlook or leave any necessary work in our fields in the United States and Canada undone. One day Jesus said: "these ye ought to have done and not to have left the other undone."

The Board members are mindful and also grateful of your regular support for this work in the past. May the Lord give you joy to continue. For your prayers to God for the work we are deeply grateful and we kindly ask you not to grow weary in your intercession.

DRAFTEES NOTE!

According to the present law and the intension of the law, a Conscientious Objector should be classified IV-E, and if classified in any category above that, should appeal for IV-E classification within the ten-day period. In most cases this can be obtained most readily by going first in person before the Local Board to state the case; there it is often possible to talk this matter over in an open and friendly manner, and the Local Board frequently is appreciative of the courtesy extended them by coming to them with our grievance first before appealing to a higher court.

Flowers in the Church

by Elva May Schrock

Flowers, carefully selected and wisely placed, can be of distinct help in creating an atmosphere conducive to worship. They are constant reminders of God's presence and silent messengers of His love and care. They can be a vital part of every service of worship, but they must be planned for, with as much thought and care as is given to any other part of the service.

Monotonous Repetition or Creative Planning

Every church should have a committee whose responsibility it is to provide a setting of beauty for the services. Flowers and plants must be grown, and time and thought must be given to their arrangement. Moreover, it is a task for every Sunday in the year. All too often we use flowers in profusion during the blooming season, and then during the winter months make no effort to provide a setting of beauty; or we resort to what is easy and use two palms or two ferns. Palms and ferns have beauty but to use them months on end is something like singing the same hymns Sunday after Sunday. God has put so much of beauty into His world that even those sections of our country, in which the winters are long yield something of beauty for us to use if we train our eyes to see, and our hands to utilize, what His love has made available.

The flower committee should be made up of people who love flowers, who know something about growing them, who understand the principles of flower arrangement, and who are willing to give time and thought to their work. They must plan so that continuous blooms will be available, keeping in mind what flowers and flower combinations are most effective in church arrangements. They must also include in their plans plants that may be used during autumn and winter. The members of any flower committee often find it difficult to provide the right flowers, and appreciate help; people of the church who have flowers should be encouraged to share them. However, everyone should accept the fact that the committee cannot always use them; the attempt to use all that are offered would sometimes destroy the unity and harmony of the arrangement. Also, much unnecessary work will be avoided if the members of the committee are always notified on Saturday instead of being offered flowers just before the service on Sunday, after time has been spent in cutting, and perhaps in arranging.

Some suggested arrangements:
(Clip for your file)

WINTER

Evergreen set off with holly or red or silver ribbon.
Long-needled pine varied by the addition of whitened elm, maple, or spruce.

SPRING

Pussy willows and forsythia.
Fruit blossoms with green branches of shrubbery.
Fruit blossoms or early flowering shrubs with lilac, daffodils, iris, or tulips.

SUMMER

Pink peonies with mock orange or daisies.
White peonies with blue iris and lemon lilies.
Madonna lilies with blue delphinium.
Elderberry bloom with phlox.
Zinnias with Queen Anne's lace (wild carrot).
Glads varied with leafy fillers.
Aster in shades of blue or violet with dusty miller.

AUTUMN

Chrysanthemums with autumn foliage.
Snowberry and coral berry with red maple.
Red corkbark with snowberry.
Oak leaves, alone or with willow.
Bitter sweet with late blooms in yellow or bronze, or with grasses or bronze foliage.
Pampa grass with cattails, or with cockscomb.
Autumn fruits and vegetables spilling from a horn of plenty or a tipped basket are apropriate for a Harvest Home or Thanksgiving service.

Principles of Flower Arrangement

To achieve the most effective church arrangements certain principles must be kept in mind. Flower arrangements for the church must be tall and massive; bouquets we use in our homes look insignificant in a large church auditorium. Vases and bowls should be large and arrangements should be about one and one-half times the height of the vase or the width of the bowl; airy fillers may be even a bit higher. Church arrangements should not mix too many colors. A few colors that blend, in flowers whose form and size complement each other, give the setting more dignity. Lines where vase and flowers meet should be broken by leaves and vines. Never should the flower arrangements be so elaborate as to call attention to themselves; they should help those who come to worship to sense the presence of God.

In deciding on the number of arrangements and their placing, the architecture of the church must be considered. There should be a few well-done arrangements, and always should they accentuate the center of interest. If this is the pulpit, flowers on either side, in front or as background, are effective. If there is a worship center with a cross the arrangement may center there, but always it should lead the eye to the cross, setting it off as the center.

If a committee is to do good work they must have adequate equipment for making a variety of arrangements. There should be several pairs of large vases and bowls. These should be of good pottery, of simple lines and pastel colors. There should be needlepoint and wire holders of various sizes, and pieces of wire mesh. Florists wire is often of help in controlling stems to get the desired effect.

But when there are no flowers...

What can be used when there are no flowers in bloom? Autumn leaves, roadside grasses, grain heads, seed pods, gourds, fruits, and vegetables can be as beautiful as the flowers of summer. In winter there is always evergreen. In early spring flowering shrubs forced into bloom offer endless possibilities—as do many of the plants of the roads and fields. The accompanying list of seasonal suggestions may be helpful.

Whatever the season of the year or whatever the arrangement, the one responsible should always take the time to view it from

A Toy for Jack

"Here's one customer who won't buy them."

by Lucy Meacham Thurston

Mary ran out laughing, an extra robe over her arm. John was warming up the motor, and the gobble of the turkeys in the barnyard and the honk of the geese added to the merriment of the morning.

The cedars by the gate, as they sped between, never looked so wintry green, nor the holly berries nearby, so red, and the slide of the motor down the long hills was glorious. Mountains grew hazier behind, hills lower; and after an hour and a half of swift driving, the edges of the city were in sight.

Mary hated the ugliness of these, even when she was on her yearly shopping lark with John, as she now was. Only when they had parked and were afoot on the downtown pavements, did she brighten up again. "Oh, isn't the city lovely now, holly and wreaths everywhere, and such gay windows. Look at this! Hammonds! We're going in here, but let's look in the windows first. O—h."

That "oh" was low and in a note of dismay. John wondered why. He did not understand. The window was bright with snow stuff, sleds and boys' and girls' toys—very real looking. A tree in one corner, peaceful sheep beneath the green branches—real pine the tree was, too—and in the foreground a file of soldiers. He hadn't yet solved the riddle of Mary's exclamation when she hurried into the store. Along the aisles she went with swift step. There were such interesting things to look at—but Mary made straight for the lift. "Sixth floor, please," she said tersely, when they had entered the elevator.

Toys were on the sixth floor. Gay balloons floated back of the counters and tables. Train tracks and trains, automobiles, sleds—all bright and alluring, were everywhere.

An alert little clerk took them in hand. "Looking for toys for girls?—for boys? We have wonderful new toys for boys this year. Look at this tank, and this machine gun; did you ever see such smart soldiers? Great, aren't they?" And she reached up for the toy soldiers and turned them about.

"Jack might like those." John was following the clerk's lead. "And we might get him one of those tanks." Then he met Mary's eyes.

John did not have to wait for Mary to speak. "I had forgotten," and between him and Mary came that vision of a day when a telegram had come to the red brick farmhouse on the hill. Dick was dead. Dead in the last year of the horrible World War. His croix de guerre, which later came to her, was not balm for the hurt of the loss of her wonderful young brother. He had been of their household since the orphaned Mary had married. And he had been all her kin before John had come into her life.

Baby Jack lay in his cradle that day. Mary looking at him and across at John had said one word, "Never," and John had nodded in understanding.

It was this they saw now. John remembered, too, that Mary had risen at the Parent-Teachers meeting and protested against the pageant which was being arranged in the school. "Let us have a pageant of peace and friendship and joy of achievement for helpfulness. Why should it be war, hatreds and fighting? No"—And she had carried the meeting with her.

"No war toys, please," she said now, and Mary had a convincing tone when she was in earnest. "That tank is hideous, but look at this airplane—beautiful, graceful, It means fun too, adventure, and bringing far parts of the world close together. These soldiers—you had no one in the war?"

"My father," said the young clerk quaveringly. "But I never—," she moved the soldiers hesitatingly—"I never thought of that."

"But it's this sort of thing that helps to make the war spirit."

"He wasn't killed," the clerk added slowly. "I think he wishes he had been. He was blinded."

"And you boost these things?" Mary pointed to the war toys. John looked on soberly, but a glow in his eyes showed a new idea was sinking in deeply.

"I—haven't done it—much. We had almost stopped buying this sort of thing, but this year the factories were putting out such attractive ones and—But they're not selling very well."

"Here's one customer who won't buy them. This airplane, this box of animals—John, what do you say?"

John gave an answer she loved: "Suits me."

"Toy soldiers—war toys," the little clerk was saying. "I don't know how it was that such a large order went this year. It won't next year. I advise the buyer. You've made me think."

And Mary made others think also. There was the Parent-Teachers group, the Ladies Aid, too, and the Neighborhood Club. Finally they made up a slogan:

What folks won't buy, the stores can't sell,
What stores can't sell, the stores won't buy,
And factories make only what factories can sell,— There's your whole big plan in a little nut shell.

several places in the church and ask herself several questions. Is the arrangement beautiful? Is it appropriate to the season? Does it have unity? Is it harmonious? Does the whole create a picture that will be an inspiration to those who come to worship? If it is, then the work has been well done and will find its reward in the assurance that a real contribution has been made.

Thanksgiving in China

(A Message from Our West China Missionaries)

We, the West China missionaries, send greetings to our churches at this Thanksgiving season. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless His holy Name" Psalm 103:1-5.

We Praise the Lord:

For His great salvation, revealed and accomplished in Christ Jesus by the Holy Spirit.

For the challenging opportunity to proclaim this Gospel here in new areas.

For bringing us to the West China field, and for the privilege of meeting in a conference where we made plans to enter the open doors.

For plans already materializing—WE HAVE FOUND A PLACE FOR A CHAPEL, in the northwest section of this great city of Ch'engtu. There are thousands of people in this part of the city, 100,000 to 150,000 but no chapel, no church or Christian clinic. The weekly schedule includes Sunday meetings, women's and children's work, a clinic, preaching services, and an inquirers and catechism classes. The chapel is a Chinese tea-house. There are many such tea-houses here in this city where one sees people sitting and drinking tea at any time of the day—from early till dark. The men employed in different kinds of busineess or trades gather for consultations along their interests, and announcements are made as to plans and methods and meetings. We were able to rent such a tea-house and have meetings there afternoons and evenings. It is sort of a free-for-all place, and occasionally the crowd is noisy, but as soon as we sing, the people settle down, some sitting in the chairs of the tea-house. others standing on the outside of the room, which is entirely open on one side. Then the preaching begins; it takes a preacher with a "lively" voice to reach all the listeners clear out to the street. The evenings are all for the preaching of the Gospel message; already a number of people, older and also younger ones, have handed in their names to join the Saturday afternoon inquirers' and catechism class.

For the mission truck (Dodge) and a goodly supply of gas—the gas supply is scarce and the price expensive, but we were able to get the supply needed. (There are no railroads in West China so we need the truck for hauling of mission supplies to the stations.)

For the support from the churches by way of the Mission Board we remember daily to praise the Lord.

We Need Your Prayers:

For the city-wide evangelistic campaign carried on by the churches and missions of this city during the month of November. Meetings are scheduled for universities, colleges, prisons, factories, open air preaching in parks and streets, and also for house-to-house visitation. Our mission is joining in these.

For a revival among missionaries for even greater zeal and also among the Chinese leaders and Chinese Christians. 'The time is short'—It is later than we think! Enemy armies are evidently gaining ground.

For greater confidence in the Holy Spirit's working, accompanying the preaching.

For the new converts and the needed spiritual nursing in their infancy.

For our mission needs: For the speedy and safe arrival of the Jantzen family and Miss Kuyf. For more new missionaries, needed for evangelistic work, student work, medical work, Bible school. For mission quarters (we are now living in crowded conditions in rented property. For supplies of Christian literature —Bibles, books, tracts.

For the Lord's guidance in all efforts and methods needed in China today. For our newly opened West China field at Paochi. With that province (Shensi) again in political turmoil, we are finding it inadvisable to return missionaries there for the present. Several trained, devoted Chinese workers are trying to carry on the work, but they are asking for the missionaries to return as soon as conditions permit.

For the situation in China as a whole. For the needs of the government, faced with monetary instability. For the people in great need, with prices out of control.

Ours is a DANGEROUS OPPORTUNITY as the Chinese word for crisis says (wei chi).

We are happy to be here "for such a time as this" and we wish to emphasize and impress upon all you dear co-workers and supporters in the homeland to back us up with all powers possible. "REDEEM THE TIME!" Do not fear for us—rather send us reenforcements! The price may seem great, but is it not worth it? The souls of the Chinese are precious in God's sight!

All of us: Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Boehr, Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wuthrich, Rev. W. C. Voth, Aganetha Fast, Elisabeth Goertz.

Evil will always dig its own grave.

HIGHEST MORTALITY RATE

Dr. Hilda M. Lazarus, noted Indian woman doctor, and newly appointed principal of Vellore Christian Medical College in South India, arrived recently at New York for a three months visit to medical centers and hospitals in the United States and Canada. While noting improved conditions in India, Dr. Lazarus emphasized that India, with a population three times larger than the United States, has less than one third as many doctors, while the shortage of nurses is especially acute, owing to the women's view of nursing as a menial profession. "The result is that India has the highest mortality rate of any country in the world," she stated. "Three and a quarter million children die each year and life·expectancy of Indian women is twenty-six, and for men twenty-seven, as compared to approximately sixty-eight for people in this country."

Voluntary Service on the Move

Dangerous Opportunity in China

AKRON, PENNSYLVANIA. Eleven young men and one married couple are now at the MCC headquarters in Akron, Penna., for a one-month period of orientation to their year of voluntary service. Half of their time is spent in study, the other half in work projects. John W. Snyder of Hespeler, Ontario, is V. S. Orientation Director, and Amos Yoder of Corn, Oklahoma is Work Director. The following are volunteers: Robert Blough, Holsopple, Penna.; Vernon Friesen, Hillsboro, Kansas; James Good, Nampa, Idaho; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Harms, Paxton, Nebraska; Melvin Headrick, LaJunta, Colorado; Glen Hostetter, Mt. Joy, Penna.; Norman Loewens, Mt. Lake, Minnesota; Irvin R. Musser, Mt. Joy, Penna.; Harold Pankratz, Hillsboro, Kansas; Henry J. Plank, Arthur, Illinois; Clarence Stutzman, Partridge, Kansas; Vern Suderman, Mt. Lake, Minnesota.

Arrangements are being made for a service unit among the migrant workers of New York State next summer, under the sponsorship of the Mennonite Central Committee. The United States has at least two million migrant workers who each year follow the harvest in three great streams—west, midwest, and east. Decent living conditions, elementary education, and religious life have been denied to many of these.

On November 1, seven young men went to Gulfport, Mississippi, for short-term service. They are Marvin Bartel, Alvin Fast, Harvey Harder, and Roger Jantzen of Mt. Lake, Minnesota, and Elda Neufeld, Herbert Ediger, and Herbert Neufeld of Inman, Kansas.

There are continuing opportunities for short-term volunteers (women and men) in various areas of service. The suggested minimum period of service is 10 weeks. If interested, write to Voluntary Service, MCC, Akron, Penna.

Relief Conditions in China

The situation in China has recently become more difficult and uncertain due to the advances of the Communist forces. Information from Dale Nebel, Director of the MCC China Relief Unit, however indicates that there is no immediate reason for alarm—that for the present, conditions are such that their work can continue.

The urgent relief needs which prevail there constitute a direct challenge to continue relief operations. The chaotic conditions accompanying the prolonged civil war cause suffering and need. Due to recent currency reforms and adjustments, many of the common people find it increasingly difficult to obtain the necessities of life.

Builders' Unit Report Published

A 36-page mimeographed booklet entitled 'T Licht in Zicht (In View of the Light) has been published to give a summary account of the work and activity of the MCC Builders and Transport Unit in Holland. The name of the booklet signifies the hope of the men that their work was a "light" in the community, just as a nearby lighthouse gave forth a beam of light at night. The material in this booklet was written either by the men themselves or by local Dutch leaders. Photographs show various unit activities and work projects. Order from Publicity Office, MCC, Akron, Penna. 10c covers mailing costs.

Relief Worker Personnel

Bertran Smucker returned from Austria on November 6; John and Anna Yoder returned from Belgium on November 6; Paul Showalter returned from Belgium on November 7; John and Mildred Clemens and Ada Showalter returned from Ethiopia on November 18.

Walter Eicher of Milford, Nebraska, returned to Germany on November 8 for an additional period of relief service after having completed one term there. Titus Lehman of Lancaster, Penna., sailed on November 10 for service in Europe and later in Greece and Palestine, after having completed a term in the China relief program. Naomi Reimer of Steinbach, Manitoba, left on November 17 for relief service in Europe, after having worked for a period at the Akron headquarters.

Orie O. Miller left on November 3 for Europe, where he will spend about a month in reviewing relief needs in the various countries and discussing with the field directors the MCC program in Europe for the coming months.

"Mennonites . . . . generally refused to pay taxes during the Revolutionary War. They too relaxed, and few of them today realize tax refusal was significant in their history. The Hutterite confession allowed the payment of no taxes for 'warfare, destruction of life, and shedding of blood.' "

The Washington Scene

by Paul Goering

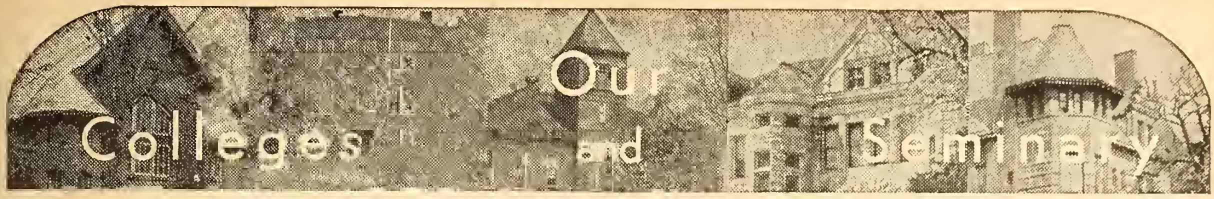
Nov. 20. Carl Durham (D-N.C.) was quoted in the papers recently to have said that if President Truman asks for UMT the next Congress will likely give it to him. Truman may or may not ask for it. He didn't campaign on it. Organized labor, traditional foes of UMT and a bulwark of the Democrat's power, may be too busy with Taft-Hartley repeal to weaken Truman's stand on UMT.

Meanwhile, the Army has never stopped thinking, planning for, or assuming that they will eventually get UMT.

Opponents ought to let their congressmen feel the opposition to UMT before he leaves home. Also the President.

Rep. Vinson (D-Ga), expected to head the House Armed Services Committee, is a UMT supporter. Sen. Tydings (D-Md), expected to replace Chan Gurney (R-S.D.) as chairman of the Senate A. S. Committee, favors it.

Dewey Short, bitter foe of UMT, was the only Republican congressman to be re-elected from Missouri. In his campaign he accused the Army of spending money and sending employees around in his district to try to get him defeated.



BLUFFTON, COLLEGE

The Men's Gospel Team deputation group visited churches in Ontario during the week of November 21. The group was composed of a quartet consisting of Ralph Weber Kitchener, Ontario; Gerhard, Toews, Freeman, South Dakota; Stanley Stauffer, Palm, Pennsylvania; and Burnell Stutesman, Fairview, Michigan; accompanied by Burton Yost, Lansdale, Pennsylvania, as speaker, and Rev. Paul Shelly. The Girl's Gospel Team gave the program at College Church Sunday evening, November 21. This group is composed of Mary Lou Rich, North Newton, Kansas; Nina Crabtree, Morral, Ohio; Mary K. Bauman, Bluffton; and Marge Richert, Bluffton. in the quartet and Elnore Rosenberger, Quakertown, Pennsylvania, the speaker. The Bible lectures by Charles R. Bell, Jr., Madison, Wisconsin, were very much appreciated. His lectures appealed to students and townspeople alike. There were many visitors on the campus to attend the Ministers' Conference and Women's Conference. At the Board meeting held November 19, it was decided that actual construction of the Auditorum-Physical Education Building should begin during 1949. Building will only proceed as there are funds to pay for the construction. The amount now in the fund is approximately $150,000.00. The goal originally set was $250,000.00.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Three Sunday-evening peace institutes were sponsored by the Peace committee of the Bethel College church. A fellowship supper was followed by classes for various age groups. The Bethel College class in "Christian Education at Work" was responsible for groups under high school age. Talks or films on peace were the closing numbers on the evening programs.

Mrs. Annalee Stewart, Washington, D. C., Dr. R. C. Kauffman, and Rev. Irving Faust, Congregational church, Newton, were the speakers.

The annual Christmas program for the Methodist Children's Home, Newton, is being planned by the Student Christian association. After the program the students will serve the children refreshments and play games. Irving Faust is chairman of the social service committee, sponsors of the event.

"What is the work of our growing Christian unity?" will be the theme for the Ecumenical Student conference held at Kansas University, Lawrence, December 27—January 1.

Several students from Bethel will attend this meeting sponsored by the YMCA, YWCA, student volunteers, and various church bodies. Approximately 2000 students will meet with 200 leaders for Bible study. The Epistle to the Ephesians has been chosen for the study.

Thirty-four debate teams from 11 colleges met at Bethel College on Saturday, November 20, for a debate tournamnt. Represented from Kansas were nine colleges and two from Oklahoma. Bethel was represented by five teams.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

A sober mood has settled over the Seminary as we approach the period of examination. These exams will be terminated Wednesday evening, permitting us to have a Thanksgiving holiday. One of the features of this Thanksgiving season will be a turkey dinner provided through the generosity of Gerald Kreider, of Goshen, Indiana. Approximately 70 people will be here to enjoy this dinner which will be served in the library, since the main house is not large enough. Benno Toews will preach the Thanksgiving sermon at the Mennonite Bible Mission.

H. Stover Kulp presented another strong missionary address to the student body in chapel this week. He was a pioneer missionary in Nigeria for the Church of the Brethren. Once again we were moved by the almost unbelievable transformation that takes place under the impact of Christian missions. Using almost any criteria—health, education, moral development, and salvation itself—one is impressed deeply with the work of our missionaries. The African field seems so widely open as contrasted with the tragic news in China.

Don Smucker conducting special meetings at the First Mennonite Church of Aberdeen, Idaho, during the week of November 28—December 3. He will also participate on the Men's Missionary Meeting to be held in Chicago at the Temple building in December 9. Among the various Mennonite leaders appearing on the program are A. C. Schultz of Northern Baptist Theological Seminary and formerly of Bluffton College, Orie Miller of the Mennonite Central Committee, and Paul Erb, Editor of the Gospel Herald.

The numerous Kansans here received the news of the repeal of prohibition in that state with considerable interest, particularly so in view of the fact that in a street near the Seminary the number of Saloons nearly equals the number of all other business places put together.

National Youth Week

The annual observance of youth week is being planned by major evangelical church youth groups. This year, the observance of youth week in the U. S. and Canada will be held from January 30 to February 6, 1949, according to Dennis Savage, Director of Youth Council Services of the United Christian Youth Movement. This year's theme is "Let God Speak" and its purpose is to express the urgency for Christian youth to let God speak in times of confusion and uncertainty.

Christianity and Conscription

As viewed by a Non-Registrant

by Austin Regier, Minneapolis, Minnesota

With conscription upon us, the conscience of many a Christian is sorely tried. For those facing conscription there are three possible courses to take. One is service in the army as I-A or I-A-O, the latter being service short of bearing arms. Another is claiming the IV-E position which places the individual in a permanent exemption position as a conscientious objector. The third position is to refuse registration for conscription. Few in our church have taken the non-registrant position. Many have taken the I-A or I-A-O position. We have, therefore, tended to be more tolerant of armed service than of the non-registration position. This hardly seems fair when we consider that such a position is being taken because of a quickened Christian conscience. Austin Regier presents his convictions on this matter.

The Christian pacifist is one who has the belief that the value of the human personality and soul is infinite. To him the destruction of human personality and soul, by whatever means, is the worst crime that can be committed by man. Man's inhumanity to man is the largest evil that exists.

> "Christianity holds that the individual is responsible for his action."

It is because war destroys the individual that he is opposed to it. He remembers that Christ's primary concern was the welfare of the individual.

One of the most difficult of the pacifist's problems is the task of removing himself from those aspects of his society which tend to destroy the individual. In this case it is war and warmaking. The consistent pacifist should refuse war taxes, personal services, etc. A slight knowledge of economics reveals that anyone actively engaged in any productive effort is working for the benefit of the total economy. But this does not mean that the pacifist is justified in throwing up his hands in despair and going along with warmaking in all its aspects.

NON-COMBATANT

Some have accepted the position of the non-combatant inside the armed forces as a sort of compromise. The lure of the uniform, being with the crowd, the post-service benefits, and poor logic have affected many of those who enter this branch of the military forces.

But the non-combatant inside the armed forces is as essential to the murder of war as is anyone else. The non-combatant is a necessary part of the total fighting force and is as important as the trigger man. Without him war could not be fought. For purposes of dissociation from the warmaking machine such a position is not possible.

ALTERNATIVE SERVICE

During the recent war there was the alternative of "work of national importance," which was supposed to be performed under civilian direction and which allowed the conscripted man to remain a civilian. This program allowed a person in some cases to do really important and constructive work. The service in hospitals, experiment units, fire fighting units, etc., is well known. But this program rested upon conscript labor. It was a byproduct of a draft to obtain men for fighting a war. The only purpose of the war draft was to facilitate the prosecution of the war. To the extent with which we cooperated with the wartime draft we are guilty of aiding the war effort.

THE CHRISTIAN SENSE OF VOCATION

A Christian, by definition, seeks to do the will of his God. His God demands his highest allegiance and in his striving to do the will of his God, as he sees it, he should allow nothing to deter him. Conscription conflicts with the traditional ideals concerning God's calls for our earthly labor and the freedom to choose one's vocation.

When a task that needs to be done comes to the attention of the Christian, he voluntarily does what he can, within the limits of his talents, toward the performance of this task. He needs nobody to compel him to do that which is the right thing to do. In our world with its calls to Christian duty he is always busy at some task. When and if needs change, he may switch his work from a job of lesser importance to one of greater importance.

The Christian pacifist will refuse to allow the state to tell him what to do. He does what he thinks is right.

So, they who are about the work of their Lord will not bow down to the demands of the state. Regardless of the action of the state, they continue in their God-assigned tasks. If they are teaching they will continue; if they are farming they will continue; if they are preaching they will continue. It is only if they see a need that they recognize as being greater than the one they are at present fulfilling that they go into another field of endeavor.

CHRISTIAN VOCATION AND CONSCRIPTION

For this reason the Christian will not allow himself to be conscripted. Since he is already about that which is most important, he would be violating his allegiance to his God by doing the will of the state. There is no such thing as a Christian being conscripted to do good works. To say that a Christian is being conscripted to fight the fire in his neighbor's house or to heal the sick in a mental hospital is a contradiction of terms. It is hypocrisy and an abomination before the Lord, because he acts irrespective of demands of government.

> "The law of the land is not sacred. The law of God is Sacred."

There are those who say that it is better to compromise with truth rather than to suffer removal from society by acting honestly. Applying this to the question of the draft law, they say that it is better to obey the law (even if it is a compromise) that to disobey and take the chance of being imprisoned. They say that it is better in this case to remain "free" outside of prison and thus be able to better carry on their task.

In reply to such objections one needs merely to point to the figure of Christ. He was presented with similar alternatives. He was doing that which His Father had asked Him to do. He would take nothing less. Christ would not have been crucified had He been a bit easier on those who opposed Him. If He had backed down occasionally when the legalistic Jews attacked Him, He would not have been crucified. He would not have needed to tell those in the high places in the synagogues and temple of their evils. But if Christ had not remained firm in His conviction, if He had been silent instead of speaking out against the evil as He saw it, and then practicing what He preached, we would not have the crucified Jesus Christ in which we glory.

Christ could have avoided the cross. He did not refuse the cross because someone told Him that He was more important alive than dead. His friends might have urged Him to avoid the cross, because it may well have seemed to them that to die at that time (and as a criminal, at that) was being reckless with the life His Father had given Him only thirty-odd years before. But Christ, without thought of His influence after death, continued His way of living without compromise.

The Christian is responsible only for doing what is right. He is not responsible for evil consequences of righteous action—if indeed such is possible.

The foregoing has a certain meaning for us that we must apply to the situation set up by the present draft law. As Christians who are doing the work for which we have been called by God; we cannot allow the Government of the United States to coerce us into the performance of any given vocation. Neither can we allow the state to frighten us into an avenue of endeavor that we would not enter if it weren't for the threat of conscription or the ridicule of the non-Christian.

VOLUNTARY SERVICE AND CONSCRIPTION

Voluntary alternative service, as it is ordinarily thought of, should not be entered to satisfy or pacify a non-Christian public opinion or a watchful government. If the need presented in a voluntary service project is more worthwhile than that which the Christian is already engaged in, he should by all means make the change—but without reference to conscription or the threat of it. And what is more, the Christian will not leave his new service when the threatening arm of conscription withdraws. He will leave only when and if the new service is of lesser importance than some other.

For this reason I am skeptical of a "voluntary service program" which expands rapidly now that conscription has arrived. I see a great need (which is alleviated by the program) in some of the areas, but the need is no greater than it was a year or two ago. But today, simultaneously with the drafting of men for war, the Mennonite Church suddenly seems to feel apologetic about the vocation of its members—particularly of its youth—and still more particularly of its men of draft age.

I see one exception to what I have said about temporary "voluntary service." If it is considered as a part of the education of the Christian it is to be welcomed and commended; but as an alternative to war service it is a violation of integrity.

If we have not been living up to the standards of Christianity; if we have been deaf to the call of God, then we should recognize our mistakes as such and mend our ways. Then, perhaps, we should find many Mennonites, young and old of both sexes entering a voluntary Christian service for life.

Many of my friends of draft age should have no fear of the condemnation of an un-Christian and warmaking society. They are about the work of the Lord and should be proud to refuse the government and their society any lesser service.

THE POWERS OF THE STATE

The state is so constituted that it has much power over the individual. It can tax his wealth, and take his property if he refuses the tax. It can make demands upon his body, and place it in prison or destroy it if the individual is unwilling to comply with these demands. But the state is not all-powerful. It cannot force a man to perform an act. God has so arranged things that the individual human being is responsible for the acts he performs.

Thomas Jefferson maintained that only those governments are legitimate which depend upon the consent of the governed for their authority. It is apparent that he could have gone a step further. Government of any kind is impossible without the consent of those to be ruled. This truth is so simple yet so profound that its implications stagger the imagination of the Mennonite mind. But this is based upon one of the basic tenets of Christianity: individual responsibility.

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY

It is commonly understood that Christianity holds that the individual is responsible for his action. He cannot throw responsibility off his shoulders and onto either circumstances or another person.

The Nuremburg war crimes trials indicate an instance in which our own government recognizes this truth. The court held that the Nazi criminals could not pass liability for their evil acts to higher authority or to circumstances. The implications are very clear.

One can never accept any law unquestioningly. It is the duty of the Christian to examine each law which affects him. If the law is poor or even bad, but has no great moral implications, it seems to me that it would be best to obey. If the law is bad, and does have moral implications, then it is his Christian duty to disobey such a law.

The eternal God on the day of judgment will not ask the Christian what the law of the land was at the time of his sojourn on earth. He will ask rather what the Christian did, completely disregarding the law at the time. God has endowed us with the freedom to choose. He did not command us to blanket obedience of pagan law. The law of the land is not sacred. The law of God is sacred. And when these conflict it is wise to obey God rather than man.

A Ship! A Ship!

Continued Story of Shipwreck and Thirteen Days at Sea

by A. Donald Miller

But that no situation defeats God and that in the worst situations created by the evil of men the essential purpose of God for His children may yet be fulfilled were conclusions from which this tragic incident did not deflect me. As those thirteen days passed, they confirmed to me that the first and final thing that really counted was the response of man's spirit to the circumstances with which he was confronted; and that that spirit of man, "the candle of the Lord," when lit at the flame of His great Light, could outshine any darkness of evil happening or natural calamity. In the sweetness of his humble spirit and the confidence of his trust in the goodness and mercy of God through trial by land and air and sea, Mr. Robertson was easily victor over the hosts of evil which sought his destruction.

No Response to S.O.S.

It had been our hope that our S.O.S. had been picked up and that, within forty-eight hours, some ship would come to our rescue, or some long-distance Catalina would fly over us to let us know that rescue was on the way. But now, on the third day, with no such sign to cheer us, we came to realize that our journey was likely to be a prolonged one. We began to settle down to a routine. It was remarkable how with one thing and another to do, the days were filled. It was about now that we instituted a games hour for the children. It survived for five or six days; after that weakness and weariness brought an end to this diversion. Young Robert Mayne with his eager, quick mind, was quite brilliant at "Yes and No." Others showed their memories were still good as we played "I went to the Grocer's and brought some bacon and bovril and biscuits, and butter . . . ." The very thought of these good things cheered and amused us! Sir James Fall let Agnes snuggle against his shoulder as he recited to her amusing rhymes and taught her "Be kind unto the humble frog and do not call him names." We exchanged limericks, discussed what we were going to have as our first meal when we got to St. Helena, and what kind of fashions the ladies would be clothed in by the inhabitants, and talked about anything that might divert the children's (and our own) minds from present discomforts.

The Fourth Day — A Happy Reunion

It was on the fourth day that there was a happy reunion which made a lump come to my throat and look busy about something so that I shouldn't be drawn into conversation while my voice might have betrayed my emotions. Until then Lady Pearce and John and Agnes were on our boat, but Peter and Hubert were on No. 4, the boat which had picked them up out of the water. At times we would draw near enough to call across, but as their boat was less crowded we made no attempt to bring them over. But on the third night we had a heavy sea; and while the Captain had ordered that we should tie together again, it had meant an enormous strain in rowing, rowing, rowing to keep one boat from charging into another. Indeed, before the night ended, two boats cut adrift from the line, their passenger exhausted, and when dawn came only five instead of six boats were visible.

So we determined to try and get Peter and Hubert before there were further separations; and although a stiff breeze was blowing, clever navigation brought the two boats side by side, and eager hands were outstretched to drag over these two plucky boys, drenched and cold, and very weary, but happy to be restored to their mother, and brother and sister. It was a lovely and touching moment.

When we were safely back in England, we heard of the fate of this boat from which we had retrieved the two boys. It had gone on and on and on with no sign of land or ship till one by one all died, except the skipper and the one lady passenger, who were picked up after fifty-one days.

This one lady passenger was an heroic woman. She had lost her husband at the torpedoing of the ship, and then found herself the only woman passenger in the boat. Once or twice we suggested that she come over to us, but she preferred to remain. At last, on the eighth day, by which time we had gotten separated from all other boats except No. 4, and when this boat was finding itself acutely short of able-bodied men capable of handling oars and sails, we were asked if we could make an exchange, taking Mrs. Merton and sending over a volunteer. A fine young ship's officer (a passenger on our ship), James Reed, volunteered, and the exchange was made. Mrs. Merton, quiet and wonderfully self-controlled, came to us; but seeing how very crowded our boat was compared with No. 4 and that our arrangements for dressings, and the issue of the rations, were well-organized, began to feel that she had left her duty on the other boat. There were things, she said, which she could do for the men. Some were already in bad condition, and the result was that the next day she went back again, Mr. Reed, the volunteer, also remaining. No. 4 had been generously keeping back with us, since all other boats had by now disappeared, and since it had its ship's compass intact. Now we decided that we ought not to hold it back any longer, especially as the hull of their boat had sustained some damage, and baling out had frequently to be engaged in. So we exchanged greeting and thanks. "Good-bye. Meet you at St. Helena! Tell 'em we're coming."

And then we saw our good companions forge ahead and, surpisingly, take a course a few points further west than the determined one. What was the reason, we wondered? We little dreamt that it would not be until after seven weeks from the time of the torpedoing that this boat would be found, drifting towards the South American coast, the skipper and our lady friend still alive. Only cabled newspaper reports have been received of the rescue. And when the skipper was able to speak he told of how this splendid Mrs. Merton, when others had lost hope and were dying, would joke to keep up their spirits, and try and sing, and be busy at the ministries of nursing.

Some Mishaps

It is not necessary to tell of each day, and each night, as they slowly passed. My torn pink programme mentions that on the first Wednesday, five days after we had been in the boat, and in a stiff sea, the sail was being hauled up again after it had been re-set when the mast split badly. Here was another disaster, so we feared. But the two quartermasters got to work, cut an oar in half, splinted the mast as the boat rolled helplessly on the waves, and made a fine, neat job of their task. There were cheers as our ready sail was hoisted again, and we began to plough forward again in the wind.

The experience of the rough night, when tying together had meant both danger to the boats and exhaustion to the rowers, resulted in the Captain not attempting it again; and this resulted in wide separations from each other in the hours of darkness, and gradual reduction of the little flotilla. On the Wednesday night we found ourselves in a very nasty patch of weather, the wind changeable, and our boat thrice swinging right round and running with the wind, instead of into it. The effort of oarsmen to get the boat around again into the wind was long and exhausting, and our one bottle of brandy began to come into use, my wife soaking small swabs of cotton wool, which were given to those who needed a quick restorative.

There was one bad night, rather later, when again the wind was strong, and the air bitterly cold, and in the darkness we had frequently to take turns at the oars, and the men for'ard had to readjust the sail. Then, on one occasion when the sail was being hauled up tighter, there was a sudden snap, and the heavy gaff came crashing down on the men about the mast. There were calls and cries. I crawled forward and found a scene of great confusion, and as I was attending to one man, while others were straightening out the sail, a senseless body fell full across me suddenly released from the enveloping folds of canvas. It was one of the gunners, and the gaff had fallen on his spine. He recovered consciousness quickly, but we feared for a time that his back was broken. Somehow or other we managed to create room enough for him to be laid flat; and the rest of the night I had to spend as a kind of watchdog, seeing that no one inadvertently bumped against him.

We had another disturbing casualty in Mr. Prentice, an elderly ship's engineer, who began to be seized with heart-attacks, during which he was possessed of great restlessness and was a cause of much anxiety. Whatever it was possible to do for him was done; there was always unselfishness shown to those who were suffering most. The divine injunction, "We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak," prevailed over the subhuman precept of "each for himself and the devil take the hindmost." There was edginess at times, of course; first and weariness and discomfort were bound to create frayed nerves; but as one now looks back upon those thirteen days and nights of strain one's prevailing impression is of considerateness for others.

HOW TO FIND HELP FROM BIBLE READING

1—Read slowly and prayerfully. "Not snap shots but time exposures" should be the rule.

2—Read keenly and thoughtfully. Imagine the scenes.

3—Read obediently. Search for the personal message each day's passage has for YOU.

4—Your inner response to God's message is vital. When He condemns, bow penitently; when He offers help, place your hope on that assurance; when He guides, follow.

5—Underline passages which strike fire. Copy them and repeat them aloud.

6—Memorize one key verse daily.

7—Set aside and keep a definite daily time for reading.

8—Make it a habit; enter the New Year as a daily reader of the Bible.

Beyond Our Own

ROME.—The Assumption of Mary, the belief that upon the death of the Virgin her body was taken up directly into Heaven, will soon be proclaimed, by papal infallibility of the Pope of the Roman Catholic Church, as a new dogma which all true Catholics will be required to believe.

CHICAGO.—"God's Acres," the Protestant equivalent of Nebraska's Boys Town, will soon be opened on a 650-acre farm about 50 miles northwest of Chicago. The center, planned for young men from 14 to 21 who are paroled from state institutions, will accommodate 250.

JAPAN. —Around two hundred Protestant missionaries, one-third of whom are in Tokyo, have now resumed work in Japan. Rural Japan, where people are willing to accept Christian truth, but who would also accept Communist doctrine—were either of these brought to them—is practically unserved by Christian workers.

CHICAGO.—Released-time classes have been resumed in many parts of the nation, reveals the International Council of Religious Education, who gives as a reason for this return to teaching of religious education the fact that school authorities and church leaders interpret the Supreme Court ruling as affecting only the use of school machinery and property. Therefore, the releasing of pupils for classes in other buildings or dismissing school early for these classes, is being continued.

ST. LOUIS.—Arrangements have been to broadcast, in the Russian language, the Gospel throughout the U.S.S.R., announced Dr. Walter A. Maier, of the Lutheran Hour. Regular weekly sermons will originate at Radio Luxembourg.

JAPAN.—A total of 784,893 persons attended the "Japan for Christ Movement" in 1947; 40,246 of this total applied for bapitsm, and 110,842 signed cards as "enquirers" concerning Christianity. This Movemen is led by Toyahiko Kagawa, and i sponsored by the United Church c Christ, and other Christian organizations.

NEW YORK CITY.—On the theor a picture is worth a thousand words the Home Missions Council, in cooperation with the Foreign Missions Conference, has prepared a thirt minute documentary film strip dramatizing "World Day of Prayer" projects around the globe. This film strip, entitled "March of Missions," is available for $2 from the office o the Home Missions Council, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10.

CHINA.—One-eighth of China's population, or fifty-five million people, are homeless as the result o civil war or floods.

BERLIN.—The number of church goers in Berlin's western sectors has more than doubled since the Berlin crisis. At evening vespers in parish houses, pastors are asking their congregations to discipline themselves and increase their prayers for peace.—Gospel Messenger.

LAST DAY FOR BEER. "Today, November 29, is the last day beer may be brewed in the U.S.A. This is a war measure, but indications seem to show that it will soon be a peace measure also. It didn't need a great war to convince thinking people that strong drink is a menace to health, happiness, morality, and decency of the community. We always knew that." DOES CAESAR MEAN MARS? The line is becoming an exceeedingly fine one that marks the end of our Christian and Biblical responsibility to the "powers that be" and the beginning of the worship of the Twentieth Century idol—Mars.

At the time of this writing one member of the General Conference, Austin Regier, is awaiting trial at Minneapolis. He will be tried on Dec. 13 after having been arrested for failure to register in accordance with the present Selective Service law. Charles Rickert, a member of the Presbyterian denomination who is attending Bluffton College, has also been arrested and is awaiting trial in Toledo sometime in January. For these men, registration is not "giving unto Caesar that which is Caesar's," but an outright worship of Mars. Considerable weight is added to their position, it would seem, when U. S. Judge John D. Clifford, in sentencing for a two-year term a non-registering pre-divinity student (mentioned in last week's MENNONITE) significantly declared: "The act of registration is the keystone of the system devised by Congress."

This should cause much heart-searching among those who wish to do the will of God at any cost. This should result in a careful re-evaluation of our position as individuals before God especially with respect to our relationship to the state. This should cause us to make sure that we "have a reason for the hope that lieth in us" on this particular problem.

But more than that, the courtrooms in which the above mentioned men will be tried should be crowded with men who will stand shoulder to shoulder beside those who seek to be true to their consciences and the will of God as they see it. A pilgrimage is much more in order here than pilgrimages to Washington.

The Peacemaker's Bulletin suggests that "If men are one at a time brought into court and sent to jail quietly, the authorities and the press can easily suppress practically all information about what is taking place. There will then perhaps be little to deter judges from meting out further heavy sentences. But the press, the American people, members of churches, will not be able to ignore what is taking place is many or even a few older men and women make known that they stand shoulder to shoulder with youth who in this matter obey God rather than men."

There are sizable Mennonite contituencies near both Minneapolis and Toledo. Let them get the facts as to time and place, write the presiding judge of their interest and intention to come, and above all pray for the young men who have chosen this way that they may have strength to be true to their convictions.

(Judge Gunnar Nordbye, Federal Courts Building, Minneapolis, Minnesota will be the presiding judge at Mr. Regier's trial.)

A VOICE OR AN ECHO? "The voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." That is the task for the individual Christian; that is the task that this Advent verse gives to the "remnant," the Church of Christ. Isaiah and John the Baptist were the conscience incarnate of their times. They refused to identify themselves with the world by falling into the pattern of a corrupted religious leadership that merely echoed in their pronouncements the false ideologies and the sin contaminated ways of their diseased times. The world as desperately as ever needs "voices" today, not echoes! When a bishop of the Church defends repeal in Kansas, when branches of the Church encourage the use of force, when individual Christians take on more and more the ways of their surroundings, then the Church ceases to a be voice and becomes but a hollow echo. The mark of the true Church, the mark of the true Christian, is their willingness to be the "voice" for truth, love, and righteousness at times when it is popular to evade the issues and compromise a clear-cut stand, succumbing to the forces of immorality, hatred, selfishness, and greed. Christian, make your life what the world ought to see, not what the world wants to see. Be a voice.—J.J.E.

"Whenever you find a church that seldom gets good service from its ministers, or keeps them long, you will usually find a church that is stingy with its expressions of appreciation, niggardly in its good will, and decidedly short on co-operation. So if you feel that your church isn't getting the best out of your minister, ask yourself how long it has been since some sign of approval was given." —Reprinted from Covenant Weekly

I Believe the Bible

by Walter Gering

"Archeology's Remarkable Confirmation"

Yes—I believe the Bible to be the Word of God. I remember the statement made repeatedly by my seminary professor, Dr. W. W. White: "The Bible needs no defense—it needs to be released." At that time, I did not catch the full significance of those words. Even today, after some years in the services of the Lord as a minister of the Word, I still find new meaning in those words. It is a release of the Word of God, rather than a defense which is needed. And strange as it may seem, as the Word is released it becomes its own defense; it speaks with an authoritative note which silences even its critics.

The Ancient Book Comes Alive

Yet it does one's heart good to find constantly new voices rising up to confirm the testimony of the inner voice of faith. This past summer I have found myself thrilled repeatedly as I have paged through copies of magazines dating back over the past twenty years. I found myself transported back thousands of years into the days of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and other saints of the ages. Old ruins, tombs, and inscribed stones began to speak; ancient civilizations began to take on new form until I found myself living their ways, thinking their thoughts and dreaming their dreams. Once again I found the ages of the ancient Book becoming alive, portraying warm, living flesh and blood; characters who once had seemed but distant, traditional figures began to step out of the pages into life's drama of today and instinctively I found myself crying out: "I believe the Bible—the Word of God."

Germans Want Bibles

Someone has said that in spite of all speed records imagination is still swifter than wings. And so it was—there before my eyes as I leafed through the pages time and space were out-stripped. I saw the ruins of ancient Ur of Chaldee. The call which had come to Abram of old back in Ur suddenly took on new meaning. I saw the ruins of today restored to the life of a busy, throbbing city.

Over the Scholar's Shoulder

With the scholars of today I found myself reading the pictorial script of the ancient scholars of Ur; a strange writing indeed for it was a combination of pictures and syllables. Not paper or parchment but the clay under their feet became the material upon which these characters were inscribed with a metal stylus. These hardened clay tablets and cylinders, only recently discovered, have become the source of immeasurable wealth of authentic data of historical value. As I looked over the shoulder of modern scholars deciphering these tablets, I was thrilled. There was the record of royal dynasties, business transactions, religious traditions and worship rites; there was the pulsing of life as it then was, now to be revealed after thousands of years of veiling.

Into the Depths

With the excavators I found myself descending into the depths of the earth; what a storehouse of ancient civilization. Together we descend into a shaft grave thirty feet below the surface level. At the bottom is a single chamber surmounted by a dome, the earliest intact domed chamber known in the world; it is the grave of a woman of royal blood. Gold, silver, and costumes still intact, we are transported in our imagination to the days of this woman of noble birth. Near by we discover the shaft grave of no less than 74 bodies, a chamber 27 by 25 feet in size. Like an open book these shaft graves tell the story of life as it was then lived.

Up the Heights

Leaving the tombs deep under the surface of the earth, we ascend the tall, striking mounds known as the Ziggurat, crowned with palm gardens and a chapel to the moon. Almost without exception the temples were devoted to the worship of the moon god. When one sees the city of Ur bathed in such a brilliant moonlight that one can easily read by its light it is easily understood why the city became devoted to the worship of the moon. No wonder Abraham was challenged by God to leave his home town and go forth to a new land.

A Significant Layer of Clay

But probably no place is as thrilling as the ancient cemetery site of Ur which has yielded so many rich treasures. It is here that we come face to face with one of the most remarkable of all treasures. The unearthed object itself is valueless, a mere layer of clay. But the sigificance of this layer of clay cannot be overestimated. As the excavators less than twenty years ago dug deep into the bowels of this ancient cemetery of Ur they dug through a layer of clean water-laid clay eight feet in thickness. Then again underneath that layer the remains of the most primitive civilization of Ur.

A study of this amazing layer of clay reveals several things; in the first place, it is clearly evident that it was the result of a single deposit and not a series of deposit layers. Then again, a study of the civilization beneath the layer of clay reveals that it was a privitive type of civilization entirely distinct from that of later civilizations above the layer. Its outstanding characteristics, in particular the brilliant painted pottery, were wiped out from everyday use never to reappear in the like manner. A civilization was completely wiped out by a flood of more than local size. And to give weight to this thought we have only to read the tablets and cylinders of succeeding civilizations built upon the deposit of clay above the ancient ruins to discover that they relate and refer repeatedly to a catastrophic flood.

"For Such a Time as This"

What a thrilling visit one makes to the ancient site of Ur as he pages through the Sumerian tablets and cylinders. How often one is amazed at the remarkable confirmation of the accounts of the Word of God. How one's faith is strengthened; how one's understanding of the ways of God and His people are enriched. It is as though God had purposely buried these ancient records under the sand of time only to unearth them for our strengthening at a time when all other foundations begin to tremble and waver.

It is good for us as we approach Universal Bible Sunday to pause for a moment of meditation and tribute; to renew our faith in the Word which our fathers cherished and upon whose teachings and declarations they staked their very lives. It is good for us, their children, to feel underneath our feet a sure foundation upon which we may take our stand assured that the storms of the day shall not destroy the Word of God.

Yes—I believe the Bible as the Word of God.

NEW ANCIENT TALES

Readers of the little book, TALES FROM MENNONITE HISTORY, written by Jacob H. Janzen, will be glad to know that this fine little booklet has now appeared in a revised edition printed attractively in a durable paper cover. The little book retains the style and spirit of the first edition, but is more readable and more attractive throughout.

Blankets for Walls in Germany

Eligibility Slows Migration

Poland Unit Relocated

In many areas housing presents a serious need. Anna Wiens, speaking of her observations in various refugee camps in Germany, says that living conditions as she saw them are very poor and some other camps are still worse. Many refugee people live in public rooms that are partitioned with blankets to serve as single rooms for families. Althought each family cooks its own food, they take turns using the same table. Some of these public rooms are cold and drafty, with inadequate facilities for heating.

These conditions explain and confirm the continuing acute need for warm clothing and nourishing food. The approaching winter will again cause much suffering from hunger and cold.

Delay in Refugee Migration

The eligiblity question continues to cause difficulty in the Mennonite refugee migration program. German citizenship is one of the factors which disqualifies persons for assistance under the International Refugee Organization. Some of the Mennonite refugees in Europe under force of circumstances had at one time accepted German naturalization to avoid repatriation. One of the central problems continues to be that of explaining the circumstances under which these Mennonites accepted naturalization. It is felt that a complete understanding of the situation will result in their continued eligibilty for IRO assistance.

Poland Unit moves location

In October the relief unit in Poland moved from its former location near Danzig to Nasielsk, which is near Warsaw. The work had been centered in a rural area and it was felt by the government officials that a more significant work could be done in this new place where the destruction of the war had been more severe and where now the people are still in need.

Relief Worker Personnel

Paul and Loretta Leatherman returned from Puerto Rico on November 22. John W. Warkentin, director of the resettlement program in Paraguay, underwent an appendectomy on November 18 in Asuncion, and is recovering satisfactorily.

A Picture of Work at Gulfport

A group of seven men began work at Gulfport during the first part of November. Their first eleven days were devoted to the following projects: 25½ man-days were spent in lining the inside of the Wayside Mennonite Mission; 17½ in helping to build a new colored church at Mt. Calvary; 18 in camp repair work; 9 in helping to build a house for a family; 2 for re-roofing a house for another family; 3½ for camp maintenance; and 7½ for clearing some land for farming. Other workers of the unit are engaged in various other types of service. Additional workers will be added to the unit as they become available.

The Christian Family's Observance of Christmas

by Mrs. Edmund J. Miller

Christmas can have glorious meaning for us and our children this year if we consciously plan for it to do so. We can start early in December to build for a spiritually significant Christmas season and Day. Since the family table provides the only time in many homes when the entire family is regularly together this might be the most suitable time and favorable environment for beginning our observance of the Christmas season.

The open Bible at the table is desirable that your family may obtain first hand impressions of the blessed Christmas story.

This is family worship. Each member should have an opportunity to participate. Plan it to the extent that each one knows the theme, whether he is to read Scripture, pray, give a thought for the day, an evening meditation, read a short poem, or lead in the singing of an appropriate hymn or carol. Mother or Father probably will need to guide in the selection of such materials if the worship period is to be meaningful. Scripture and prayer should always be included, of course. Otherwise, the procedure should be varied. If this seems like too much work, remember that here is a wonderful opportunity to emphasize the necessity for Christ to be born within each heart.

Suggestions for Family Worship and Fellowship During the Christmas Season

Scripture (May be read in unison or responsively):

Isaiah 60:1-3; Micah 5:2; Isaiah 9:6,7
Isaiah 7:14; Luke 1:26-35, 38 (The Annunciation)
Luke 1:46-55 (The Magnificat)
Luke 2:1-7 (The Birth of Jesus)
Luke 2:8-20 (The Shepherds' Story)
Luke 2:22-35 (The Dedication — Simeon)
Luke 2:36-38 (The Dedication — Anna)
Matthew 2:1-8)
) (The Visit of the Wise Men)
Matthew 2:9-12)

Visual Aids

Pictures of Christmas scenes from magazines, Bible picture series, or Christmas cards may be posted on a family bulletin board, scotch-taped or tacked on the wall of the children's room, or used to help in visualizing a Scripture passage during the family worship period.

The family project of constructing a crèche will make the Christmas story live for the children and provide endless opportunities for telling the story over and over to the little ones with their eager questions.

Those fortunate enough to own a slide projector will find it well worth the money to purchase a series of Kodachrome slides which realistically illustrate the Bible account as it is read.

Christmas Reading

The bed-time story hour provides a choice time for reading Christmas classics together as a family. Many of these may be found in The Fireside Book of Christmas Stories published in 1945 by The Bobbs-Merrill Company. Included in this collection are "The Other Wise Man," Henry van Dyke; "The Man at the Gate of the World," W. E. Cule; "The Little Hunchback Zia," Frances Hodgson Burnett; "The First Christmas Tree," Henry van Dyke; "A Christmas Carol,' Charles Dickens; and "The Birds Christmas Carol," Kate Douglas Wiggin. Two modern fantasies might be added to this list, "Miracle on 34th Street," Valentine Davies, and "The Littlest Angel," Charles Tazewell.

Children hear about Sanata Claus from playmates, see him in window displays, in toy departments and dozens of other places so he cannot be ignored. Rather, it might be well to explain him as a picture of personification of the spirit of giving and of the warm and jolly feeling that comes when we do nice things for others.

Christmas Music

There are few things more satisfying and heartwarming than a family or group of friends singing Christmas carols together. Begin to do this early and do it often.

A good album of Christmas records adds much to Christmas festivities. Let the children play these themselves. Mine likes to play them all the year 'round. Why not?

Christmas Giving:

God gave his only Son for us; what will we give to Him? The Christmas season provides a golden opportunity for presenting the needs of giving ourselves completely to Him.

This is also an opportune time for the family to undertake some project which necessitates giving with no possibility of material return.

An Urgent Message to all General Conference Mennonites

A Pastor's Contagious Conviction

by Andrew R. Shelly

My copy of the November 9th issue of The Mennonite arrived last Saturday (13th). As always, I at once glanced through the entire contents. The graphs on page 11 immediately caught my eye. Here I stopped to ponder. Among other things I noted that 46 per cent of the foreign mission budget has been raised. I pondered some more!

Ponderings led to action!

The material for our bulletin was prepared a day later than usual; so I inserted an item calling a special meeting of our Missionary Committee. We met yesterday after our morning sessions. I briefly presented the picture—with only six weeks of the year left over half the budget was still to be raised. I spoke of the absolute urgency of missions, and the fact that this must have absolute priority. I mentioned the huge number of building projects going on in General Conference. (Old People's Homes, churches, etc.).

An Additional $1,000

Then we got down to something practical and immediate. The proposition was: will we unanimously come to a conclusion to have faith that we can come up to the average for our church, which would mean an additional $1,000. Not within a few months —but now! A few weeks! We discussed the difficulties. We just joined General Conference a year ago and are still in process of adjusting in the various departments of our work. This year and for two more years, we are raising $15,000 a year for building purposes. We had additional running expenses this year. We dare not, and will not, let down on about eight very vital needs—as Bible Society, Lord's Day Alliance, our City Mission, etc.

A Triumphant Unanimous Vote

The Missionary Committee was not ready to come to a decision. The idea was received favorably, but time was requested for more thought. We met again last evening after our service. At this time we had a triumphant, unanimous vote. The committee frankly faced the question realizing that humanly we see the source of only a part of this money. But, if we saw the total, no faith would be required!

I have felt for some time that our General Conference missions should not only be maintained, but greatly expanded. The opportunities are so tremendous that we dare not falter. And, the money is here if we can pray and promote that it may be released! The Lord enables His followers to accomplish His Will!

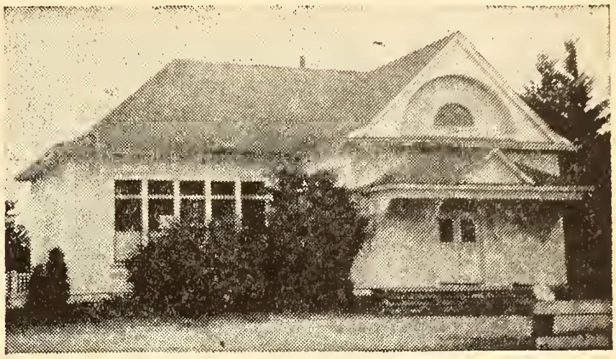
A Challenge

The challenge I want to send to every minister, leader and member of our General Conference is to join us in this determined faith, which we feel to be in the complete accord of God's Will. Let's not say we ought to do it, but we will do it. Let's not excuse ourselves because of so many other demands, but let's realize that these obligations must be met in the name of Christ. Let's give our foreign mission board a Conference-wide mandate!

Going Beyond Average

And, if I am not misunderstood, I want to add one more word: could churches who are not feeling terrific additional expenses, go considerably beyond? Not only the foreign mission, but the entire budget should be met in full!

BEHIND THE 100% PLAN



Glendale Mennonite Church of Lynden, Ferndale, Washington

Serving 28 homes

This splendid little church up in the Northwest joined the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN on July 12, 1948. Up in the Northwest they don't wait for the annual meeting when they decide that a good thing is a good thing. After the Pacific District Conference, the pastor, Rev. Dan Toevs, and two of the delegates which had attended that Conference returned with splendid reports of what the Conference was doing in all its various activities. As a part of that reporting program, one of the members brought up the matter of joining the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN and the church enthusiastically voted to join.

The total number of groups now on the HUNDRED PER CENT PLAN totals 81.

There will be an opening for a secretary in the Mennonite Publication Office approximately January 1st. If interested, write for Qualification Sheet indicating the nature of the job before making your application. Girl with Mennonite background and affiliation, naturally, preferred. Write to Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

Christ confronts His Church with a unique challenge. It is the challenge of the world-wide missionary task under the changed conditions of the present. There is confusion and unrest and turmoil in the lands of the earth. Yet doors are open for the presentation of the Gospel, inspite of the distress and suffering of mankind. Men, as never before, in many lands are willing to listen to the claims of Christ. The word which comes from our foreign fields is expressed in the language of the Apostle,—"A great and effectual door is open unto me and there are many adversaries." Doors are open. There are also "adversaries." The difficulties are great and many. Yet the fact is established that doors are open for the evangelization of vast areas. In the providence of God, we live in a day when the Lord is calling upon His Church to renew and redouble her efforts to reach the unevangelized. If the Church fails Him in this hour, we shall stand judged before the Lord of the Harvest as a faithless generation.

Why? The Task Is Unfinished

Much has been done. There have been most remarkable achievements. The labors of missionaries have been attended with success. The Gospel has been preached widely. The Church today is planted and is taking root in many lands. Yet large areas and uncounted multitudes have not been evangelized. The commission however still stands. It has not been recalled. The word of our Lord still is, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Our missionaries in India have not completed their task of evangelizing all of the 2900 villages within the borders of our own field. This also is true of other fields. The Church faces today the challenge of an unfinished task. This is not the time to relax our efforts.

Why? Men Everywhere Need Christ

There is a peculiar urgency in this. It is not the will of God that any man should perish in his sin. Sin is world-wide. The hope of mankind is in Christ. That is the glorious fact proclaimed in the Gospel and verified in the experiences of multitudes the world around. Jesus Christ is the Redeemer of men. "But how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" Men need the Gospel but vast numbers of this our generation are dying without having heard it. It is the will of God, beyond question, that we of this generation evangelize the generation now living. There is no excuse for delay.

> "Mission work is young people's work. In fact, Christianity itself is a young people's faith. This is true even though many cynics have sneered and said it is good only for the old and infirm. I had a teacher who used to thank God in his prayers that Jesus was a young man. Jesus gave "his life a ransom for many" at thirty-three. To be a Christian in any true sense requires all the manhood and womanhood any upstanding young people can muster. It is no easy faith we preach. "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong," said John."—Reprinted from Gospel Herald.

Why? Open Doors May Close

Some doors will close if they are not entered promptly. No one can predict with certainty the future of China. It is indeed a land of distress and suffering. Millions have been uprooted and are homeless. There is now civil war. The communists have established themselves in the north and are pushing southward, threatening the very life of the central government. But doors for evangelistic work are open in west China, in south China and among the tribes people of the mountains. How long will they remain open? No one knows. Certainly no time should be lost. We must press forward in the evangelization of these people. Today there is an openness of heart in Japan. The people in an unusual degree are receptive. It is a day of opportunity to press upon the people of this stricken nation the claims of Jesus Christ and His Gospel. In Africa the tribal organization of society is disintegrating under the impact of western civilization. This brings confusion and disorder. Here is fertile soil for the sowing of the good seed. Our missionary planning is seriously at fault if the Church fails to send adequate numbers to evangelize the peoples of this continent. It must be done without delay. If not, the losses will be tragic.

Why? The Open-hearted Response of the People

A little more than a year ago a missionary in the Philippines said that he was confident that his mission could report 2000 baptisms for the year if they had a sufficient number of evangelists and pastors to go out among the people. In China there is no group more open and responsive to the Gospel than the youth. A great work is in progress among the students of the high schools and colleges of that land. Similarly the youth of Africa are answering the call of Christ. In India there has been a great response among the low caste peoples. In Christ they are lifted up and have come into the fellowship of the Church. The supreme challenge today is the response of youth in many lands. The Church dare not fail to meet it.

Why? There Are Urgent Tasks on Our Fields

It is possible to mention only a few. The work of evangelization is always primary. All people need to experience the saving power of Christ. In Christ they become "new creatures." In addition there are certain very specific tasks of utmost importance. One is the building of a self-supporting Church. The purpose on that we of this ion now living."

of this is not to lighten the obligations of the Church in the homeland. It is essential to the well-being of the newly founded Church on the mission field. It is not easy for the native Church, having received assistance, to make the transition to self-support. That however must be the goal. Its a goal to be achieved without delay. The evangelization of every land ultimately will depend upon the native church. Even if desirable it would be quite impossible for the church of the homeland to send and support a sufficient number of missionaries to completely evangelize (touching every person) of any mission field. The major responsibility for the evangelization of any land must then rest upon the native church, the native evangelist and the native pastor. The Church on the mission field must become a true Church in all aspects of its life and activity. This is the objective that our missionaries have. The guidance of this phase of the mission program requires much wisdom and great patience. It truly is an urgent task.

Directly related to this is the task of finding and training a sufficient number of native pastors, teachers, evangelists. The missionary who multiplies himself by training workers to do the work that he might have done himself is rendering his highest service to the cause of Christ.

Another urgent need is an adequate supply of good Christian literature in the language of the people. People in all lands are learning to read. It has been said that 10 million adults throughout the world are learning to read each year. But what will these people read? In many lands the supply of good Christian literature is inadequate. The members of these newly founded churches on the mission field are or soon become literate for the most part. The Holy Scriptures are translated into more than a 1000 tongues and dialects. The Word of God has been translated and is available in the languages of approximately nine-tenths of mankind.

Why? For the Awakening of the Home Base

The awakening of the Church in the homeland to the challenge of missions in our day is another matter of urgency. The Church here at home serves as the base for the outreach of missions unto the uttermost parts of the earth. A strong home base is a requisite for effective work on the foreign field. What are the distinguishing marks of a strong missionary church? A missionary church is an informed church. They know the need. They are acquainted with the field in which our missionaries labor. The missionary church has caught a vision of what Christ can do in redeeming lost men. They envision men and women changed by the power of the Gospel. They see them gatherd into the fellowship of the Church. They see Christian homes. A vision of what Christ can do inspires and sustains our efforts. A missionary church accepts and fulfills its responsibility. It is aware that it has its responsibility for the evangelization of the world. The missionary church is a praying church. The concern for the spread of the Gospel is voiced in the petitions of its pastor and people. The missionary church is dedicated to the cause of missions. Fathers and mothers give their consent willingly that their sons and daughters may go, if the Lord calls them. The people give their financial support freely and liberally. They gladly acknowledge their obligation to give of their substance to the support of the Lord's work. The churches of the homeland have a vital part in the mission cause. They sustain and undergird the work. How well are we fulfilling our part?

Why? To Challenge Our Youth

Futhermore it is a matter of the utmost urgency that we send and that we continue to send out our ablest young men and young women. The best are none too good for the work that needs to be done. We must find those upon whose hearts the Lord has laid a concern; those who have experienced the saving power of Christ in their own lives; those who have dedicated themselves because of the constraining love of Christ in their hearts. Spiritual qualifications must of necessity take precedence. There are other qualifications. Vigorous health is an essential. A good basic education in the sciences, history, literature is an asset. Thorough training in the study of the Bible and in the art of teaching it to others is certainly a required discipline for the prospective missionary, for he must know the way of salvation and be able to instruct others in the things that belong to the Christian life. Anyone looking forward to service on the mission field should cultivate whatever skills, for which he may possess an aptitude. Experience in Christian work here in the homeland should be made a prerequisite for an appointment to the foreign field. Are these standards too high? The Lord's work demands our best. The mission field needs men and women who are thoroughly trained; who have the best of preparation. The mission field needs men. Our own mission fields need men. We need as many men as women. This is a call to our young men and our young women to dedicate themselves to missionary service.

Our Lord said, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." The day of opportunity is still here. There are open doors. We too must work the works of Him that sent us.

"Young people challenge the church. I heard a missionary fling this challenge at his audience recently: 'Youth stands ready to go with the Gospel to the ends of the earth. Will the church accept the challenge and make the necessary funds and prayers available to send them forth?' I say, 'Will the Mennonite Church meet the challenge of her own young people?"—Reprinted from Gospel Herald.

Our Colleges and Seminary

FREEMAN JUNIOR COLLEGE

Thanksgiving vacation at Freeman Junior College lasted from November 25 until November 29 when school was again resumed.

From November 14-21 Union Gospel meetings were held in the college gym. The Rev. G. Christian Weiss, President of the Gospel Missionary Union, Kansas City, Missouri, was the speaker. Rev. Weiss also spoke to the students in chapel several times. He told us that a Christian is: (1) a servant, (2) a saint, and (3) a Son of God.

The College A Cappella choir sang two numbers at the first meeting. Sunday evening. Two of these meetings were cancelled because of the snow storm.

The "Star" party was given November 23. It was a party given to the side selling most "Star" subscriptions by the side that sold the least subscriptions.

Professor Gerhard Toews and Professor Berky are installing the furnace in the boy's dormitory.

Elimination contests in declamation will be held November 29-30.

Pres. Ed. G. Kaufman presented the report for the 1947-48 school year, pointing out in his conclusion that "Bethel is not only serving the present, but also the unborn future; that a Christian college must be a well-conceived and deliberately planned enterprise; and that to be faithful to our heritage we must constantly improve."

Melvin Funk, Hillsboro, spoke in chapel about the voluntary service project in Cuauhtemoc, Mexico, where he had been director of the unit for over a year. Before going to Mexico, he served as director of the Gulfport, Mississippi project.

A German Christmas program was presented Friday, December 3, in the chapel, sponsored by the German department in co-operation with several music groups. The Christmas story was illustrated by colored slides. German Christmas songs were presented by a girls' chorus, the College girls' sextet, the White house quartet, Barrack's glee club, and a Canadian group. The Gospel Team Quartet will accompany Professor Shelly on this trip. On Sunday morning of December 5 they will present a program at the Mennonite Bible Mission and then will appear here in the afternoon at 4:00 P. M. at the regular Vesper Service.

For the past month Harley Stucky and family have been in residence here while he was completing work on his doctoral thesis at Northwestern University. The title of his thesis is "The International Control of Atomic Energy." On November 23 Professor Stucky left for North Newton, Kansas to begin his teaching duties at Bethel College where he was appointed this fall. Accompanying him on his journey was Paul Boschman, who will spend the Thanksgiving vacation at Bethel College.

The Seminary thanks God for the fine way in which housing opportunities are opening up at this time. Last year the situation looked quite dark since the Seminary properties were not available for occupancy under various local conditions and the National Law protecting the renters. Recently a number of families on their own volition have moved from our properties making it available for our incoming students and releasing room for other individuals already here.

Among our visitors this were Walter McDowell, of Zionsville, Pennsylvania, who was returning from two weeks' special meetings at the Pretty Prairie Mennonite Church.

With Dr. Fretz four other representatives of various denominations, including Jews and Catholics, will serve on this committee. Following the passing of a bill in Congress sometime ago to admit 205,000 D.P.'s into the United States, President Harry Truman asked the governors of each state to appoint a commission to advise him in the matter. CARMEN MENNONITE CHURCH

by Henry Funk

On Oct. 17 the Mennonite people of Carman, Manitoba, together with their friends from far and near, gathered to dedicate their newly erected church building. The services took place in the morning after noon, and evening, and were well attended.

The morning service was opened with remarks by the writer which were based on 1 Sam. 7:12, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." The dedication sermon and prayer was then brought by Rev. Benjamin Ewert, of Winnipeg, who chose three appropraite passages out of Gen. 28:16, Matt. 21:13, and Rev. 21:3. He referred to the new church as a house that is to be a house of prayer—a house of God. Then followed a very appropriate message by Rev. William Buhr, of Morden.

In the afternoon a mission festival took place. Rev. D. D. Klassen, of Homewood, was in charge of the service, and served with a home mission message based on Acts 1. The main speaker for the afternoon was Rev. Allen Schultz, of Ontario, missionary and widely known Bible expositor. Closing remarks were made by Reverend Ewert and by Rev. J. Siemens, of Winkler. Musical numbers were rendered in the morning and afternoon by the Homewood quartet, the Canadian Mennonite Bible College Quartet, and the local choir.

For the evening service we were very glad to receive Rev. and Mrs. Regier and the students of the Canadian Mennonite Bible College. They were in charge of the whole service and brought an inspiring message in song and sermon, centered around Josh. 24:15, "Choose ye this day." Speakers were Reverend Regier, and Mr. Pete Sawatzky. This service was especially well attended.

I would like to take this opporunity to thank all those who made a contribution towards making this day possible and successful. We are grateful also for financial assistance received from local and outside friends. The people at Carman have already sacrificed greatly for the work, and as they are only a small group, they are quite heavily indebted through the erection of this house of worship.

Should there be anyone wishing to make some contribution to the project, please write Mr. H. B. Loewen, at Carman. Above all, however, we want to ask you for your continued remembrance in prayer. We need the prayerful support of God's people at large.

(Note—The Board of Home Missions is deeply appreciative of the heroic efforts made by the Carman members to have their own place of worship. Your interest and prayers for this Home Mission field will be a great encouragement to all and bring glory to Christ our Lord.— A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary, Board of Home Missions.)

Recreation in the Young People's Society

by Bertha Millar, Kitchener, Ontario

Many Young People's Societies have not begun to explore the vast regions of recreation. Picture an intriguing catacomb with countless lanes inviting, luring away from the main-directed thoroughfare. We often pass by these lanes to further fun and merely follow the custom-directed frolic.

What should recreation provide? At least these four things: an interest differing from the vocation, an opportunity to know and understand each other better, a relaxation of nervous tension hence a feeling of stimulation and renewed freshness, and an opportunity for creative expression.

Looking at the Young People's Society we find the occupations of its members are quite varied. To that extent our recreation program must be varied. An accountant who has been posting numbers in his books would not appreciate a diet of rapid calcuation games any more then a man who has been transplanting trees in his fields would appreciate a diet of gymnastics.

When the members of the society have fun together at the Young People's socials they become better acquainted which results in a more unified group. Hence, it is essential that the games are well organized to prevent the formation of cliques which are a barrier to making new acquaintances.

If the games are to provide relaxation, the leader must be relaxed and thoroughly enjoying the activities with the group.

The fourth is one which we often overlook. Recreation should invite creative expression. Let the highly imaginative persons in your group give vent to their ideas, and chances are they will provide an interesting form of expression for all.

"Let's continue to explore recreation. It aids in the development of a balanced happy Christian life."

Hints to the Recreation Leader

How to Begin

It is wise to begin with a circle game, preferably one which is familiar to the group. A circle is the formation a group can most easily form. A known game will provide fun from the start—give a sense of achievement which is necessary for a good beginning. If everyone is not acquainted, follow this initial game with a rousing "get-acquainted" game.

At the beginning of an evening your group will probably be active and should be provided with active games until the leader sees they are ready for quiet ones. The games should be very well planned (although the leader must adjust his plans to the mood of the group). One game should lead into another. If one game ends with the group in four lines, for example, the next game should be one which begins with this formation. Sometimes, however, this is not possible. Then formation should be as quick and orderly as possible avoiding any confusion which would distract from the enjoyment.

Ways to Get into Formation

To form two lines from a circle ask two players on each side of the circle to drop hands. Then ask half of the circle to straighten its line. Don't be afraid to use your hands to indicate your plan. It is much simpler to give instructions to one line at a time. A second way to form two lines from a circle is to ask two persons standing side by side to face each other. Half of the circle turns right. Half of the circle turns left. The two players then walk down the center of the circle till there are two straight lines.

If you feel that the players should be mixed, number the players, "one, two, one, two, one two," around the circle. Ask the one's to form a line "behind Tom" and the two's to form a line "behind John."

Forming groups from a circle is done in the same way, numbering "one, two, three fouf"; "one, two, three, four" (according to the number of groups desired).

How to Begin a New Game

Begin to explain the game only after the attention of the entire group is gained. Explanations should be clear and brief and demonstrated where possible. If the game has many parts explain only one part at a time, allowing each part to be played in turn before they are assembled. However, as a general rule, the recreation should not be complicated.

Closing a Game

Stop while the interest is high. An observant leader will be on the alert for signs of lagging interest. Bring the game to a rather abrupt close and immediately give instructions for the next game.

Closing the Games Period

If the games precede a meeting, a few quiet games should be used followed by instructions for going to the meeting.

If the recreation is to bring the evening to a close, do not just let the games peter out. Use a closing game and let the group know that they are dismissed. Recreation in the Young People's group is an excellent, subtle way of reminding us all that fun and worship are not two widely separated forms of expression, that Young People's nights are not merely a time to preform a duty with other nights as a time to enjoy oneself. The Christian life is the happy life. Hence, your social evening will probably close with an inspiring, even though brief, devotional period.

A Few Miscellaneous Hints

When a leader gives directions he should include himself, avoiding anything that favours of dictatorship, using words such as "let's, please, shall we?," (even though the games are well organized and the leader knows what game is coming next). All equipment to be used should be at hand.

Let's continue to explore recreation. It aids the development of a balanced, happy, Christian life. Your exploration will lead you to many thrilling discoveries.

Hold Voluntary Service Orientation School

The M.C.C. is undertaking a broader and more comprehensive program of Voluntary Service for young men desiring to undertake such service rather than that of military conscription. The following information gives a detailed picture of the program being offered. The eleven young men in the first group spend a month at M.C.C. headquarters, Akron, Pennsylvania. There they undergo a program of training, preparation, and orientation. From this month's experience these men are sent out to units where they put in their period of service. The information following tells of the program being offered in the month spent at Akron, Pennsylvania.

It is of interest to note that out of the first eleven volunteers here listed, there is no General Conference youth in the list.

Members:

Blough, Robert, Holsopple, Pennsylvania
Friesen, Vernon, Hillsboro, Kansas
Good, James, Nampa, Idaho
Harms, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin, Paxton, Nebraska
Hostetter, Genn, Mt. Joy, Pennylvania
Loewens, Norman, Mt. Lake, Minnesota
Musser, Irvin R., Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania
Pankratz, Harold, Hillsboro, Kansas
Plank, Henry J., Arthur, Illinois
Stutzman, Clarence, Partridge, Kansas
Suderman, Vern, Mt. Lake, Minnesota

The School will give special emphasis to:

1. Non-resistance and love in daily life and times of peace and war.

2. Service, which is a response to the love of Christ in large or small, dramatic or routine tasks.

3. Fellowship in a like-minded, consecrated group and accepting responsibility in group living.

4. Needs of the world, individuals and groups, and a vision for a program to help meet these needs in the name of Christ.

Methods of working toward aims:

1. Course of study—The entire morning period, six days a week, will be devoted to classes and study.

2. Work—The period from 1:00 to 5:30 p. m.,, five days a week or its approximate equivalent, will be the time for practical participation in the work of the headquarters or service in the community. Amos Yoder will be responsible for work assignment and general supervision.

3. Unit and Headquarters fellowship—Much of a Christian's joy and encouragement comes from close fellowship of service in a mutual cause and group living. Such living and working together help to develop Christian fellowship, inasmuch as it provides good occasion for a definite personal interest of each in each other and mutually enjoyable and helpful times. Personal contact with one's own age level is part of the education which is caught. Often it is more influential than that which is taught. In this respect the Headquarters members will perform a major aspect of teaching the spirit of non-resistance and service.. Because of the Voluntary Service group's special purpose here at Akron, we intend to nurture a special sense of fellowship and direction within the Voluntary Service group. Amos Yoder will serve, therefore, as the Voluntary Service Orientation unit leader as well as the work director.

A Ship! A Ship!

The Twelfth and Thirteenth Day Drifting at Sea

by A. Donald Miller

Mr. Prentice survived until our rescue. He was too exhausted and ill to be hauled up on the ship by means of a bow-line, and the strong arms of the rescue crew; so a stretcher was lowered, and thus he was raised. But he did not rally from his grave condition, and on the afternoon after we were rescued the tired heart ceased to beat.

We Carefully Ration

It was after five or six days that thirst began to be acute. We had taken stock of our supplies, our number of passengers, our possible long journey. I have the cover of a sixpenny novel which someone had in his pocket, and on which, some six days after we had been in the boat, I wrote out our assets; and John Pearce and Miss Stell worked out sums to see how long supplies would last at given rates. We reckoned that if we continued to take two ounces of water in the morning and two ounces at night, we would reach our last drop twenty-four days after the date of torpedoing. We did not feel we could reduce our ration further. As it was, there were occasions when exception had to be made for the injured, or after specially exhausting work. So we worked out the other supplies to balance this estimate for twenty-four days. We found we could allot two biscuits a day, five small milk tablets (rather smaller in length and breadth than a postage stamp), two smaller chocolate tablets, and three level teaspoonfuls of pemmican. But we were also to find that to allot and to eat were different matters. By this time our tongues and mouths had become so dry that one would put a milk tablet in one's mouth and find it very little smaller an hour later, because of the lack of salvia with which to dissolve it. The smallest children managed their food rations better. In proportion to their size the same water ration was (as we wished it to be) more generous. But even so, it was sometimes pitiful to see the urgent thirst of these children. I saw one child, seeing a single drop of water resting on the outside of a measure as it was being passed along, eagerly and carefully transfer it to a finger-tip and then raise it to her mouth. We were learning a new scale of values. A cup of cold water was more precious than many golden sovereigns. And the spirit of man, face to face with adversity, was more precious than either.

Rain on the Horizon

It was on the second Sunday morning that we saw, ahead of us and a little to starboard, a heavy cloud emptying itself upon the sea. Oh, that it would give its treasure to us! We arranged our tarpaulin to funnel water into our empty casks! we took empty provision tins to hold for the rain; we changed our course a trifle to reach this blessed spot; our spirits rose in anticipation; our skipper cheered us with hopes of a splendid catch. But we saw the line of rain moving slowly away . . . . Reluctantly we rolled up the tarpaulin again, and put our tins away.

Our Sunday Worship

On the second Sunday afternoon we again offered our prayers and praise to God. No singing now, for our throats were too parched for that! But we planned a little service, deciding on those parts of the Prayer Book service which we thought we knew by heart, and a Psalm which the Pearce boys had memorized. It was significant that as we proceeded with the "Confession," "Lord's Prayer," "Psalm," "Creed," and "Prayers," we found our memories decidedly faulty, even over the most familiar passages. But by mutual promptings we got through, and then I offered a few special prayers. We remembered the other five boats from which we were now entirely separated. We remembered our loved ones far away. We remembered all brave seamen and soldiers, and men of the air, and the issue upon which the war was being fought. We prayed that we might be given strength for any further trials with which we might be faced; and that if it should be that our lives were spared, they might be spent with greater thoughtfulness of the needs of others. We committed ourselves to God.

And others were remembering us in prayer, too. I thought that afternoon of the Church at the Leper Home which had been my usual place of worship for the last twenty years; of six or seven hundred broken men and women gathered there, commending us in their simple faith to the God Whom they had come to know to be Love, in spite of, even rather through, their suffering. They would not know we were shipwrecked, but they knew we were at sea. Colleagues, too; and the dear parents at home. And leper folk of our great "family of friendship" in many different parts of India. Surely we were not alone. "To Him, who is everywhere," as St. Augustine wrote, "we come by love and not by navigation."

Some Become Critically Ill

The condition of some of the Indians was becoming bad. I found myself more and more having to move among them, giving swabs of brandy, or sal volatile, or special water if they were in extremity; because they were so crowded, and my clumsy feet would tread upon them I removed my shoes and had them put away in the locker which held ,when not in use, the first-aid outfit. "Sahib,' they would say to me, "when are we going to reach land? Are we going to be rescued?"—questions which were in my own mind, but which I certainly could not answer! One man inclined, under the strain, to be hysterical, and on one occasion stood dramatically at the mast, declaiming to heaven and God in his frenzied anger that God did not save us. He was an English-speaking Goanese steward. Our skipper quickly and sternly rebuked him—that it was God's mercy that He did not strike him dead for his blasphemy.

New Classification Procedure in Peacetime Draft

An Explanation from the Conference Peace Committee

It becomes increasingly clearer to us that the classification of registrants is different from what it was during World War II. During World War II every registrant was placed into I-A, and from there on he appealed for the classification he desired; (while this was not true in every case, it was the theory back of the classification procedure.) Now the theory is the other way: A man is placed into the lowest classification that fits him, beginning with V-A, IV-F, IV-E, IV-D, and thus up to I-A. The theory now being that only those are to be classified I-A-O and I-A who are found clearly available for service.

HOW IS CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR AFFECTED?

This affects the Conscientious Objector in his classification. If a local board classifies a Conscientious Objector who is opposed to both combatant and noncombatant service in any other classification besides IV-E, it means that such Conscientious Objector ought to appeal immediately for his IV-E classification; and if he does not make such appeal within the ten-day period, he was forfeited his legal right to classification in Class IV-E.

HOW ARE FARMERS AFFECTED?

Some farmers may feel that it is just as safe to accept a II-C classification, because a registrant's classification is always subject to review. Whenever a registrant is reclassified, however, he will be placed in a class nearer the inductible category, namely I-A-O or I-A, unless there are new circumstances which could entitle him to a lower classification. For example, a II-C might acquire a dependent, and would be entitled to consideration for III-A; but otherwise, the direction of his classification would be toward I-A.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR APPEAL

According to the present law and the intention of the law, a Conscientious Objector should be classified IV-E, and if classified in any category above that, should appeal for IV-E classification within the ten-day period. In most cases this can be obtained most readily by going first in person before the Local Board to state the case; there it is often possible to talk this matter over in an open and friendly manner, and the Local Board frequently is appreciative of the courtesy extended them by coming to them with our grievance first before appealing to a higher court.

The above information is in line with the best advice we can obtain from our Washington informants. It may appear like a technicality of the law, but knowing both the law and the intent of the law to be that of classifying registrants into the lowest category that fits their case, we deem the above procedure to be advisable.—Released by Albert Gaeddert, secretary of the Peace Committee.

Voluntary Service among Migrants and at Gulfport

Arrangements are being made for a service unit among the migrant workers of New York State next summer, under the sponsorship of the Mennonite Central Committee. The United States has at least two million migrant workers who each year follow the harvest in three great streams—West, Midwest, and, East. Decent living conditions, elementary education, and religious life have been denied to many of these.

On November 1 seven young men went to Gulfport, Mississippi for short-term service. They are Marvin Bartel, Alvin Fast, Harvey Harder, and Roger Jantzen, of Mt. Lake, Minnesota; and Eldo Neufeld, Herbert Ediger, and Herbert Neufeld, of Inman, Kansas.

There are continuing opportunities for short-term volunteers (women and men) in various areas of service. The suggested minimum period of service is ten weeks. If interested, write to Voluntary Service, MCC in Akron, Pennsylvania.

Berne C. E. Hold Annual Bible Conference

The Christian Endeavor Societies, of the First Mennonite Church of Berne, Indiana, have been sponsoring an annual Young People's Bible Conference since 1935. These meetings have always been a blessing to many. Included in the list of speakers we have had are: Walter L. Wilson, Isaac Page, M. R. DeHaan, Vance Havner, Will H. Houghton, Roy L. Brown, John R. Rice, Erland Waltner, Theodore Epp, Homer Leisy, Carl Armerding, and Paul Kuhlman.

This year Roy L. Brown had planned to be with us with his chart illustrated lectures. We were disappointed when we received word that he was unable to come because of his son's illness.

But God directs the affairs of His children and we were spiritually enriched during the week of November 14 to 19 when Herbert W. Bieber, of Bala-Cynwyd, Pennsylvania was with us.

Few of us can read Greek or Hebrew, so, to sit under the teaching of this teacher was indeed a treat as he explained the translations from the original in many passages which seem obscure to most lay people.

"Tax refusal is in itself . . . . powerful enough to have changed the course of history many times; for example, the movement led by Wat Tyler in XIVth Century England, and the Indian independence movement."

Beyond Our Own

BIRMINGHAM.—William Ward Ayer, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, New York City, led a Youth for Christ team in services in England, Scotland, and Ireland, during October and November. Dr. Ayer reported that young people are forsaking the established church in England with many being won to Youth for Christ. He then raises the question whether they will find their way back to the church. Dr. Ayer says, "We have made it plain all along that any movement which does not channel its converts back to the church will fail."

NEW YORK. — Alternative reports two significant items that were not publicized in connection with the "cold war" draft. Through the two-week registration period draft officials kept calling for more volunteers to do the registering. The long lines continued at registration places until the government finally had to "draft" teachers to do the job. Then because so many 18 to 25 year olds were failing to show up at registration centers, employers of large plants were assigned the task of registering their employees at the job. Even so when the tumult and the shouting died, about a million Americans had "forgotten" to register.

NEW YORK.—The American Broadcasting Company announces two Christmas programs in connection with a series of broadcasts entitled, "The Greatest Story Ever Told." The first of the series, entitled "Unto You This Day," based on the Luke account of the Christmas story, will be given on December 19. The second, dealing with the Matthew story and the wise men, is entitled "The Star of Peace." This will be broadcast on December 26. The time for each of the broadcasts will be 6:30 p.m. EST or 5:30 p.m. CST.

LONDON.—The Church of England Assembly at its meeting of November 10, approved the use of the atomic bomb as "defensive necessity." It is reported that though this church assembly is not competent to enact laws for the Church of England, it nevertheless speaks for the church, its 400 bishops, clergymen, and lay members.

MIAMI, FLORIDA.—All forms of gambling in this city, including church and charity Bingo games were banned by the city manager.

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—Greater lay participation, juvenile delinquency, human rights, and displaced persons were on the agenda for consideration by the bi-annual meeting of the Federal Council of Churches in which more than 500 leaders of Protestantism in the United States and Canada participated, December 1 to 3.

NEW YORK—More than one hundred of the first group of new citizens, 812 in number, to arrive in the U.S. a few days ago under the provisions of the Displaced Persons Act, wore red and white "CWS" buttons to show that they were being aided in coming to this country by Church World Service.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The General Conference Council of Boards sessions for 1949 will be held, God willing, February 15 to 17, 1949, at Bloomington, Illinois. Churches and individuals are requested to uphold members of our boards and committees as they face momentous decisions affecting our share of the Lord's work in the coming year.

Editorials

THE FUNDAMENTAL MESSAGE OF CHRISTMAS is that we more nearly approach the "abundant life" when we give and sacrifice than when we accumulate and hoard. If the Incarnation means anything at all, and Christians believe that it is fundamental in the Gospel, it means that God in Jesus Christ was saying that life will work in no other way than by sacrifical self giving. This is the supreme test of faith—faith, surely in the finished work of Christ when through the giving of Himself He brought others to God through the atonement; but more than that it is faith—conviction of the unfinished task of the Christian which is to give himself after the pattern of Christ for the service of God through continued ministrations to "the least of these," primarily in terms of spiritual needs but never ignoring real material needs.—JJE

IF GIVING, NOT HOARDING, IS LIVING then a basic problem is settled for the Christian. But significantly enough, another is raised. How shall I give? How shall I give my life, my talents, my time, and my possessions? Our times give ample evidence that rival, even contradictory, claims are made in all of these areas—claims which purport to bring about essentially the same goals. Governments are saying to people, "give me your life, your time (we are told a civilian defense army of twenty million is being mapped out), your talents (to develop more deadly weapons), and your possessions to finance the program (a major portion of our income tax feeds the military program)—give me all these and I will give you peace." Christ says, "there is no peace without me; except you put me first there can be no peace; unless you give yourself in an unqualified way to me and to my task of winning the world in terms of all its great needs, you will not only miss peace but also life in its most fundamental sense."—JJE

ASSUMING THE CHRISTIAN POINT OF VIEW ON GIVING, what is implied as far as the typical surge of year-end giving in connection with the spirit of Christmas and the making of gifts before the end of the year are concerned? Surely with world conditions as they are all gifts that are not really needed would be out of order. Surely Christian families can agree on a minimum of spending on one another at a time when all that a major portion of the world has is one another—and sometimes not that. There are families that are pouring their gift money into relief. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

Then there is a pressing responsibility upon each Christian to give wisely when appeals, nationwide appeals, for popularized and in many cases probably far-oversubscribed causes are drawing money away from already under-subscribed church causes. Why should a member of a General Conference church give as much to a nationally publicized cause as a non-church member? Let us fulfill our immediate Christ-given responsibility first.—JJE

"GOD KNOWS OF NO OTHER FAITH than that which has power and fruit, regenerates the heart, converts and renews.... It is all vain to boast of faith where the godly, new fruits and works of faith are not. I therefore, exhort all my god-fearing readers in the Lord, and entreat all, that they would impress those on their souls, and write them on the tablets of their hearts, that our holy and Christian faith is not a dead or superannuated speculation, as the world thinks, nor is it only verbal boasting, as we find it among the great and tolerated sects; but it is an active gift and power of God, a living, heavenly inspiration in a melted, open heart, or conscience which firmly believes and lays hold upon, and acknowledges the whole word of God (the threatening law, as well as the consoling gospel), to be right and true, whereby the heart is pierced and moved through the Holy Ghost with a peculiar, regenerative, renewing, vivifying power. . . ."—Menno Simons

"I wish to see all arts, principally music, in the service of Him who gave and created them. Music is a fair and glorious gift of God. I would not for the world forgo my humble share of music. Singers are never sorrowful, but are merry and smile through their troubles in song. Music makes many people kinder, gentler, more straid and reasonable.—I am strongly persuaded that, after theology, there is no art that can be placed on a level with music; for besides theology, music is the only art capable of affording peace and joy of the heart.—The devil flees before the sound of music almost as much as before the Word of God."—Martin Luther

The life of every man is a diary in which he means to write one story and writes another; and his humblest hour is when he compares the volume as it is with what he vowed to make it. —Barrie.

Let's Keep the go in the Gospel.

WHEN CHILDREN ASK

We read in the Old Testament, "And when your children shall ask, 'What mean these things?' thou shalt say . . . ."

Well, what do you say when children ask you those embarrassing questions concerning the Mennonite position towards war and peace? Here is a suggestion to help you. Get yourself a copy of the little book TALES FROM ANCIENT AND RECENT MENNONITE HISTORY, written by Jacob H. Janzen, and sit down with your children to read these delightfully prepared stories, authentic yet written at a level and with a vocabulary well within the range of a typical Mennonite home.

Our guess is that not only the children, but you yourselves, as parents, will probably find some things clarified!

Any Wild Indians in Arizona?

by Leonard Wiebe

The Flagstaff Chamber of Commerce received a letter this spring from a New Englander, if I remember correctly, asking among other things the above question, "Are there any wild Indians in Arizona?" The questioner received a reply something to the effect that there were none of the savage type anymore. No friends, there may be no openly wild savage Indians out to get some white man's scalp but there is still resentment that the white man has taken possession of his land. From the non-Christian standpoint there are no wild Indians as these Indians are tamed now and white people are permitted to witness their dances.

". . . the air seemed charged . . ."

I wish you had been here at Moencopi, Tuba City, Arizona, one Sunday night in August. We had no service that night. It was not the missionaries' fault. The first bell was rung at 7:00 p.m. The public address system broadcaster recorded Gospel music. The missionary called out into the village that he would show Bible pictures at the evening service, but none came. The last bell was rung but no one showed up. What was the matter? Was the village deserted? Oh no, the missionary could hear plenty of little "wild" Indians playing a short distance away. They and everyone else were all excited because of the snake dance and the air seemed charged with an unnatural atmosphere. Why didn't they come to the service?

Friends, please turn to Isaiah 57:20-21—"But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." Now please turn to Romans 1 noticing especially verses 18-32, but I want to call your attention to v. 23, "And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts and creeping things." Also notice v. 25: "Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed forever Amen."

". . . six consecutive days of dancing . . ."

These verses give us the reason why none attended church that night. The annual Hopi snake dance which is held the last of August had just been completed; six consecutive days of dancing in three different villages, two days at each village. Romans 1 was not only written about people across the waters in other lands but also about the American Indian.

Today there was a basket dance held here and women were the principal dancers. This morning we had a Christian grandmother with her two granddaughters present but none showed up tonight.

". . . pray earnestly . . ."

Please pray earnestly that the Holy Spirit will work mightily in the hearts and lives of these people that they repent of their sin and ask forgiveness and turn to the Lord.

"And he saw that there was no man and wondered that there was no intercessor" Isaiah 59:16a. Who will be an intercessor for these people?

Missions -- On the March

CHINA.—H. J. Brown: "In K'ao Ch'eng and Kaifeng the work has so far been done under national government control. All centers and the evangelistic band in the country report open doors for spreading the gospel. They have many inquirers, and a number of conversions. In all places catechism classes are being held. I may say here that in 1947 I reprinted the Mennonite catechism which I formerly, while in Japanese detension, translated. Now the ten thousand copies have almost all been used up. . . . at present Shanghai is in an economic turmoil, so that it becomes impossible to obtain bread, meat, rice, sugar, etc. The day before yesterday I stood in line for a whole hour and finally obtained five ounces of bread."

Mennonitism's 1,500 Mentally Ill or Deficient Need Help!

One of the most distinctive marks of a society influenced by the leaven of Christianity is the growth of institutions to care for the less fortunate individuals. The Mennonite people have always been among the leaders in this respect. They have tried to provide for their own, and for others where possible. In Russia, Canada, Paraguay, and other places where Mennonite communities have flourished, some provisions have been made to care for the mentally ill. The Mennonite churches in this country, through the Mennonite Central Committee, have now entered this area of need.

Awakened Consciences

During the recent war CPS men were made acutely aware of the present need for adequate treatment and care of the mentally ill. Upon further study and thought, it became clear to many that Mennonite churches in the United States had not ful-filled their obligation in this respect. A survey in 1945 revealed that there were about 1500 Mennonites who were mentally ill or mentally deficient. About one-third of these were in mental institutions. The other two-thirds were taken care of in the homes. The survey also showed that a majority of the ministers preferred to have such people cared for in a church institution. This awakened the consciences of those serving in hospitals and gave support to those who had long been concerned about this problem.

> "The hospital is dedicated to those who through serving in mental hospitals during World War II, developed a vision and a concern for the care and treatment of the mentally ill in a Christian environment."

A CPS Farm Re-converted

A program of action was undertaken; one of the first steps was to convert the former CPS farm at Leitersburg, Maryland, into a home for the mentally ill. The dedication for this mental hospital, now known as Brook Lane Farm, took place on October 31.

". . . nestled in the foothills . . ."

Brook Lane Farm is located nine miles from Hagerstown, Maryland, near Leitersburg. It is nestled in the foot-hills of the Blue Ridge Mountains. This rural setting gives it an atmosphere of peace and quiet. The patients will find this very helpful as they seek to get well. The farm will also provide opportunity for occupational therapy. This will consist of working with the chickens, truck farming, flower gardens, woodworking, sewing, cooking, etc.

A new building has been constructed to serve as the mental hospital building. Many people have given their labor to help in constructing this hospital and improving other facilities. The construction foreman, Ray Horning, is a former CPS man from Ephrata, Pennsylvania. This hospital has 23 beds. Due to the small number of beds available in comparison with the great need, the hospital will be limited to the treatment of short-term cases at the present time. This will exclude chronic cases, alcholics, and certain other types. Although long-term cases can not be cared for with the limited facilities, other institutions are being developed that can more adequately provide for these. At present such institutions are planned for the Reedley-Dinuba area in California and another in the mid-west.

Staff and Facilities

Delvin Kirchhofer of Bluffton, Ohio, is the administrator of Brook Lane Farm. Mr. Kirchhofer is a former teacher by profession and has had considerable experience in administering relief work. His wife, the former Helen Moser, is a registered nurse and has also had experience in relief work. She will be in charge of the nursing services. They both studied and worked at Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium, Rockville, Maryland, to learn more about treatment of the mentally ill.

Dr. Prager, a psychiatrist from Baltimore, Maryland, will give part-time service to the hospital. Dr. Prager has been highly recommended by the State Department of Mental Hygiene in Maryland. He is very much interested in the hospital and its strong emphasis on active therapy, and feels that it can make a real contribution to those who are ill.

Modern medical and clinical facilities are available in nearby communities. Arrangements are being made with the Hagerstown Hospital and the County Health Department to supplement the Brook Lane facilities where necessary. This will include special medical attention, laboratory work, X-ray, etc. One or two general practitioners from the community will be available to the hospital when needed.

Admissions

The hospital program has been developed primarily to meet the needs of the Mennonites. Non-Mennonite patients also will be accepted as space is available. Applications for admission are sent to Brother Kirchhofer. He, in consultation with the psychiatrist, decides whether the hospital can meet the needs of the applicant. If the applicant cannot be accepted, referral services will be available to aid those desiring further assistance.

Rates

To rightly care for mild or acute mentally ill patients requires more personnel and special facilities per patient than the average cases in a general hospital. One aim of Brook Lane is to provide good private Christian care on a reasonable basis. Rates are being set on a non-profit basis, and to meet expenses of the institution. The rate for the immediate future will be $5.00 per day plus expenses involved for special treatments. Special treatments will include such things as electro-shock therapy, psychotherapeutic interviews, etc. Non-Mennonites will pay $5.50 per day. This slightly higher rate is due to the fact that the Mennonites (1) contributed the money for building the hospital, and (2) are providing the personnel necessary to operate the hospital, part of which will be on a voluntary basis. Patients, their relatives, or some agency will pay for the care and treatment.

Personnel: A Continuing Need

There will be a continuing need for personnel at the hospital. This consists of three different types: (1) persons who will volunteer a year or more of service as attendants or psychiatric aides; (2) people who feel called to enter this field as a life-time service; (3) persons who will seek professional training, and then give of their skilled service.

The mental hospital is a new venture in faith for the Mennonites in the United States. It is the response to a challenge arising from a need within our own fellowship. It will perform a vital function in that area, and to some outside the Mennonite Church. It will also be a continuing witness of our service "in the Name of Christ."

Questions and requests for further information or application forms can be directed to Mr. Delvin Kirchhofer, Administrator, Brook Lane Farm, Route 5, Hagerstown, Maryland, or to the Mental Health Service Section, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

The Washington Scene

by Paul Goering

Is there any way in which a C.O., denied a 4-E and ordered to report for induction, can test his draft classification in court?

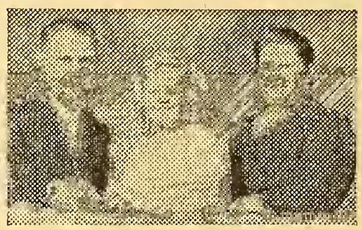
In order to do so it is necessary for the man to report for induction, be accepted, go right up to the act of induction and then stop. Under its revised rules the Army now says that in the induction ceremony the act of taking a step forward when the inductee's name is called constitutes induction. The oath is administered after the man is inducted. Although he can protest along the way and try to have the Army reject him the point at which a man should refuse is at the time his name is called for taking a forward step.

If an inductee refuses to step forward he is taken aside from the group, talked to, given another chance, and if he still refuses, he is asked to sign a statement and then allowed to leave the grounds. If his failure to step forward is not noticed he should announce that he cannot submit to induction. Since the Army statement is unfavorably worded so as to make him appear stubborn a C.O. should not sign the Army statement but write out his own reasons for refusing to be inducted.

During the war it was only possible to test a classification in court through a writ of habeaus corpus obtained after being confined for a violation. The courts require, however, that the man must have exhausted all of his administrative remedies (Selective Service appeals, induction examination, etc.) for correcting his classification. That is why it is necessary to report for induction and eliminate the possbility of being rejected.

Our Latest 'City' Congregation

Rev. and Mrs. H. Albert Claassen, served the Toronto Mennonites as Pastor and leader from January 1947 till the end of August 1948. It was hoped that during the leadership of this experienced worker, an organization might be effected. After much prayer, on April 25th, 1948, in the name of the Lord, the group voted to organize as a Congregation and make application for a charter in the Province of Ontario under the name: "Toronto United Mennonite Church."



Rev. and Mrs. Frank P. Dyck and Alvina

Charter Members

In May 1942 the Board of Home Missions engaged Rev. J. J. Esau to visit all Ontario Mennonite Churches. During this time the first Mennonite Fellowship and worship service was held in Toronto. Some of the people that attended this first meeting are now on the charter-membership list. On July 4th the Lord granted the fruits to be added to the membership, one by baptism and two by confession of faith. Charter members are: Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Lehn, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Neufeld, Mr. and Mrs. William Huebert, Mr. and Mrs. John Sawatzky, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wagner, Miss Doris Wagner, Miss Anna K. Epp, R.N., Mr. Edgar Dyck. It is our hope and prayer that others will accept the banner of the Cross and join the newly organized congregation. We thank God for this evidence of progress made during the leadership of Brother and Sister Claassen, and the cooperation manifested.

Leadership

Rev. and Mrs. Frank P. Dyck, having been jointly called to the pastorate by the church and the Home Mission Board, assumed leadership September 1st, 1948. Attendance at Worship services have been up to 45 in recent weeks. The Sunday School is small, but we hope it will increase in numbers and strength by adults also coming to study God's Word. It is a good indication for the future to know that a mid-week Prayer and Bible Study hour has been started with a good attendance. The Congregation voted to affiliate with the Ontario United Mennonite Conference and the General Conference.

The Congregation carries all its own expenses, while the Board of Home Missions supports the worker.

If anyone knows of any Mennonite family or person that has moved to Toronto or lives there, the name and address should be sent to Rev. Dyck, 140 Victor Avenue, Toronto, Ontario. All such help in prayer and interest will help greatly in this field. May Christ be glorified.—Reported by A. J. Neuenschwander.

Forward Amid Uncertainties

H. J. Brown

"Greetings to all the brethren in Christ: I was away to Kaifeng for seventeen days, going all the way by train although the last two days going and the first two days coming back I travelled on open flatcars, mostly on military trains. Let me briefly state the situation as I found it. Tung Ming and Ch'ang Yuan were under Communist control, but the Christians were meeting in the churches. The preachers and evangelists reported to the General Committee that they could work freely in the cities, and could also do evangelistic work in the villages. In K'ao Ch'eng and Kaifeng the work has so far been done under national government control. All centers and the evangelistic band in the country report open doors for spreading the gospel. They have many inquirers and a number of converisons. In all places catechism classes are being held. Rev. Wang Wan Chu is now the only ordained minister in those regions, and he is kept busy with catechism instruction, baptism, and communion services. Rev. Chang Ching, Bible school teacher in Kaifeng, has left us to go to Honan as pastor to a Presbyterian Church there. We decided to continue the joint Bible School with the Free Methodists, and have appointed Mr. Hsu Hua as teacher. The enrollment is larger this year, than it was a year ago. Some of our students have gone away, but others have come in. We have seven students there and two in high school, making nine in all for Kaifeng. Maria and I help, besides four students there.

". . . even in the face of great difficulties."

"Many of the Christian refugees from K'aichow have gone back there. This has cut deep into our church membership, but with some local additions we still count forty some members. We changed to the Big East Street, a better location. The new quarters are larger, but the local attendance is better here and so we are overcrowded again. Two months ago we had fifty Sunday school pupils, now we have more than one hundred. Daily evening services are being held for the people on the street. The General Committee again pledged itself to carry on the work, even in the face of great difficulties.

Government on the Move

"When I left Kaifeng, the central government was moving south, the military was moving east, and the railroad was to be torn up. Report has it that this has been done and that the Communists are in possession of Chengchow and Kaifeng. He hope that our brethren can continue to carry on and possibly re-establish contact with K'ai Chow and Tamingfu. Because Tung Ming and Ch'ang Yuan can use their church buildings for services, we can see no reason why this could not be done in the places north of the Yellow River. In fact, the Catholics are using their church edifice in P'u Yang and the Home Jesus Church does the same. Mr. Ch'eng Kuo Ts'un of Ch'eng Chwang'er K'ae Chow came to K'aifeng the last day that I was there. He reported that the Communists now proclaim religious liberty. He wondered whether it would not be possible to open meetings in the East Suburbs church. The church building in the city is so ruined that it cannot be used. The Christians there lack leadership. They meet in the homes in small groups. Some would like to be served with baptism. There is only one ordained minister there, namely, Rev. Liu Ch'ing Ch'uen but he has gone to his village a mile from the city, but he does not show up outside.

Housing, a Problem

"We have now apartment No. 46 of the Blackstone Apartments for our living quarters. Thus our wandering through the city from place to place has come to a happy end. We shall be able to take in our missionaries when they come through here. Thank God. This relieves us of a constant worry where to go next, and as the situation gets worse in North China and more and more foreigners are brought out, the rooming problem is getting very acute.

Economic Turmoil

"At present, Shanghai is in an economic turmoil, so that it becomes impossible to obtain bread, meat, rice, sugar, etc. The day before yesterday I stood in line for a whole hour and finally obtained five ounces of bread. I then went to the U. S. Consulate and thus was enabled to obtain tickets in the American Chamber of Commerce Club for bread and eggs. Nanking is working on a revision of prices and thus we earnestly hope that this affair will soon come to a close. However, we are told that the new Chinese dollar is being devaluated and that the black market exchange is U.S. $1.00 to God Yuan $15.00 that practically raises the cost of living four times. Some missionaries told me yesterday that they are unable to live on their salary at government rate of exchange and still we would want to cooperate with the government and support the new money."—Dated, Oct. 30, 1948.

Dr. Dester's Health

"My health has improved greatly. Have started going to the hospital for some morning duties, but do not expect to get back on full duty for several weeks. I trust that I will be able to do that."

young man remarked that on the next occasion he, too, wanted to be among those who confess Christ. But first he desires a deeper knowledge of the Bible.

"OUR C. E. SOCIETY recently had its harvest offering for the purpose of foreign missions. This year each member of the group gave one tenth of one week's earnings . . . The money we are sending was given by about fifteen members, all of high school age. Please use this offering in any way you see best to further the cause of Christ through foreign missions."

We Should Be Disturbed!

by Robert W. Hartzler

This is a poor time for Mennonites to stop working for the cause of peace. The world may continue its ominous preparations for war, but surely the church is interested in building up its defenses for peace. The world is endeavoring to set young people apart for a time of indoctrination in the arts of war; in such days it would be a sin for the church to miss any opportunity to indoctrinate the young with the things of peace. Right now the spirit of a new generation is being shaped in the schools, army camps, and places of employment in this country. Is this spirit to be one borne of moral awareness and spiritual insight, or is it to be a weak and stunted thing capable of judging a course of action only in the light of its own personal advantage?

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chief of staff of the United States army, preached something of a sermon on this point in his Armistice Day address in Boston, when he said:

". . . nuclear giants and ethical infants . . ."

"With the monstrous weapons man already has, humanity is in danger of being trapped in this world by its moral adolescents. Our knowledge of science has clearly outstripped our capacity to control it. We have too many men of science; too few men of God. We have grasped the mystery of the atom and rejected the Sermon on the Mount. Man is stumbling blindly through spiritual darkness while toying with the precarious secrets of life and death. The world has achieved brilliance without wisdom, power without conscience. Ours is a world of nuclear giants and ethical infants. We know more about war than we know about peace, more about killing than we know about living."

"If the church is to be a church, it must, by prayer and fasting, extricate itself in some degree from its embarrassing alliance with this or that class, race, or nation, so that it may speak the Word of God more purely and more forthrightly to each man and nation and also to each generation according to the peculiar needs of the person and the hour." — Reinhold Niebuhr

". . . reservoirs of concern . . ."

One of the richest reservoirs of concern in matters of war and peace which the Mennonite church has is the sizeable group of ex-CPS men. The faith of these men has been tested, in some measure, at least. Because of their experiences in the camps many of them have been confirmed in their devotion to high spiritual ends and in a sensitivity to ethical considerations. Our ex-CPS men, by and large, represent a group to which we will be turning for leadership in the next quarter of a century and more. They are a group whom we may safely expect to maintain a more than ordinarily keen interest in the things of peace for years to come; they are among the chief of those upon whom we must depend for the peace witness in local communities for years to come.

It is obviously the part of wisdom that we should promote the development of these young men as leaders through schooling at a Mennonite college. If we are sincerely interested in building for peace we should be willing to put money into the project—lots of money—and do it freely. The government spends fabulous sums on the training of those whom it expects to become military and naval leaders. The investment would be just as profitable for us who are interested in the development of leaders of another sort.

"The effort . . . has broken down."

As yet, however, the churches of the conference seem to have failed to grasp the opportunity which the ex-CPS men represent. The effort, undertaken by the conference, to assist these men to prepare for wider service has broken down. It was only a modest effort to begin with—seeking to provide them with one-third of their college expenses for a period of time equal to that which they had spent in CPS. But the churches have failed to contribute the needed funds. Last year the expenses of the program ran to $20,000 but only $4,000 came in. This year only about $1,000 has been received since the school year began with the prospect that the cost of the program this year will run to $15,000.

Conference Integrity at Stake

What is to be done about this matter? Well, this is a program of the churches of the Conference who authorized it. It is the opportunity of all those persons who are devoted to the Christian gospel of peace. Let the people consider whether it is their wish that an effort undertaken along such modest lines and in such good faith be allowed to collapse. Let the people consider whether they want our church to endeavor to be a saving factor in the sort of world situation which Gen. Bradley outlines.

Here is a program which we are morally bound to carry through, and an opportunity which it would be a sin to pass by. Let us send substantial gifts for the purpose to General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas.

"Sufficient leaflets for every home in the General Conference have been mailed to all pastors of churches with the hope that they will be adequately distributed."

SERVICE FOR PEACE is the name of the book recently completed by Melvin Gingerich, giving a history of Mennonite Civilian Public Service. The book is now at the press, and should be ready for distribution early in 1949.

The Christian Family's Observance of Christmas

by Mrs. Edmund J. Miller

When You Decorate the Christmas Tree

Let this be a family project carried on to the tune of Christmas recordings or while father reads one of the Christmas Tree legends. What matter if there are bits of evergreen, pieces of tinsel and a few broken silver balls on the floor, if one branch of the tree is fairly drenched with silver icicles and another has missed the shower altogether? (Mother can readjust things later.) What matter when a pair of blue eyes are as bright as stars and a small boy wiggles with delight over all that shining loveliness!

Make a little worship service of lighting the Christmas tree lights for the first time. The following may be suggestive to you.

Father: The wonderful night that Jesus was born contained the light of a new day for a dark, dark world, and from that time to this, light has been a part of Christmas—the soft glow of candlelight, the light of a million twinkling stars, the sparkling lights of Christmas trees, the light in the eyes of little children on Christmas morn, the inner light in the hearts of all who truly love the Christ Child, and the brightest light of all, Jesus, the Light of the World. (Turn off the room lights).

Mother: (Prayerfully)

"Light of Life that shineth
Ere the worlds began,
Draw Thou near, and lighten
Every heart of man."

Father: (while mother or an older child stands by to turn on the tree lights) As these lights spread through this darkened room and make our tree sparkle and shine, and as they are lighted by our own human hands, may we remember that it is through our own efforts and prayers that God spreads the light of his love and the Gospel of this Son, the Lord Jesus Christ who is the Light of the World.

(Turn on tree lights)

Mother: Even as our hands have lighted this tree which sends its shining rays into the darkened corners of our room, so our hearts and hands may light God's shining candles wherever by our gifts and prayers we send His messengers of light.

Family: Sing "The Light of the World is Jesus," No. 467, Mennonite Hymnary, verses 1, 2, and chorus.

On Christmas Eve

Let the children plan a Christmas Eve worship service for the family. Even the younger members will have some favorite Christmas carols to suggest and a Christmas recitation or Scripture verse to contribute.

CHRISTMAS MORNING PRAYER

Blessed Jesus,
Savior dear,
Look on me,
Now kneeling here.

How I love Thee
For Thy love,
For Thou cam'st
From heaven above;

And for my sake,
Wast Thou born,
Baby sweet,
This Christmas morn.

Make me ever,
More like Thee,
In Thy dear Humility;

Keep me always Gentle, mild,
As befits
Thy little child.

Jesus, Savior,
Born for me,
Here I give Myself to Thee.

—R. B.

When You Open Your Gifts

Father: Once there was a little boy who was not invited to his own birthday party. All were so busy that they had no time for the one whose birthday they were celebrating.

Mother: Often it is that way with Christmas. We are so busy celebrating Jesus' birthday with parties and programs and presents that we forget the birthday child Himself. I wonder, is He happy today on His birthday? Really happy because He sees within our hearts a deep, true love for Him? —a satisfying love and not just a seasonal affection stirred up by the activities of Christmas? Does He see these activities centered in a love and not just a seasonal affection stirred up by the activities of Christmas? It makes a difference, because what He wants more than anything else on his birthday is the love of our hearts.

Father (or another adult member of the group): As we exchange gifts, let us remember God's greatest gift to the world, his own Son, and the loving spirit which prompted it. That reminds me of John 3:16. Let us say it together.

Mother: As we open our gifts let us think of the giver and the love that prompted the giving, and may we find the heart-warming joy that comes from sharing with others. Thus will the Spirit of Him whose birthday we celebrate live in our hearts and lives today and every day.

Sentence prayers by each member of the family.
Opening of presents.

MENNONITE SEMINARY

Feeling that members of the Seminary family should become better acquainted with their neighborhood, Miss Evelyn Phelan, Principal of the Shakespeare public school was invited to speak to the group this week. Shakespeare school is located directly behind the Seminary property and is attended by the following Mennonite children: Robert Waltner, Carol, Anna, and Marvin Dirks, Loreen Toews, James Graber and Timothy Smucker. Miss Phelan described the school as a small city in itself with a population of 1,400 students. It is one of the 450 schools in the city of Chicago. Her analysis of the school primarily consisted of an outline of the services which it offers to the children. These include: an adjustment department for testing mental abilities, behavior, and physical handicaps; special schools and classes in sight saving, corrective speech, physical improvement, cripple schools, hospital schools, vocational schools, and social adjustment schools; a school library containing 3500 books; and a visual education program including radio and record playing equipment.

New organizations are constantly springing up among the Seminary family. The children have their part in this, too. Early this fall, Loreen Toews, a fifth grader, organized a girl's Bible club which meets every Tuesday evening at her home. It has become a popular group and has an ever increasing membership including girls of Catholic and Jewish families. The girls study Scripture passages and discuss them. They also learn hymns, many of which are new to some of the members.

Twenty-seven students are enrolled for the winter quarter. Several new residents have also moved into the Seminary property, among them Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Funk of Hillsboro, Kansas, who have spent the past year in Mexico as M.C.C. workers; Walter Juhnke of Moundridge, Kansas; and Bert Smucker of Bluffton, Ohio, who just returned from two years' M.C.C. work in Vienna, Austria.

Grace Liu, Seminary student from China, spoke at a missionary rally in Goshen, Indiana, over the past week-end. Hanno Klassen, Seminary student from Germany, was a guest of the Esko Loewen family in Topeka, Indiana, over the Thanksgiving holidays.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Rev. Theodore Epp, radio preacher from Lincoln, Nebraska, was the chapel speaker Friday, December 3. He held a week of services at the St. John Mennonite Church. Rev. Harry Yoder spoke in the Middlebury and Silver Street, Indiana, churches December 5, and worked in those communities during the following week in the interests of the Building Fund. The Building Committee met December 2 and took steps toward the drawing up of detailed plans for the Auditorium-Physical Education Building, and took other steps looking toward actual commencement of construction during the coming summer. The building will proceed only so far as there are funds available. The German department, under the direction of Miss Dora Soldner, is planning a Christmas play and program to be given just before the Christmas vacation.

BETHEL COLLEGE

The annual Christmas pageant was presented on Wednesday evening, Dec. 15, by the fine arts department. Students, faculty, and wives of faculty members took part in the tableau scenes.

Preceding the pageant, the Christmas banquet was held in the college dining hall. This banquet was sponsored for the students by the faculty.

A box-social was sponsored by the SCA in the Student Union room on Sunday evening, Dec. 5. The benefits of the sale are to go toward the University of Mainz project. The SCA is again beginning a campaign to solicit and raise funds for a supplementary feeding program at this university.

Mary Becker, missionary to Colombia, spoke at the chapel services on Thursday, Dec. 2. On Tuesday, Dec. 7, Rabbi Levenson, representative of the Jewish Chataqua society, Oklahoma City, Okla., spoke in chapel. He also addressed some classes and was available for interviews during the day.

Gertrude Hohmann, instructor of voice at Bethel college, sang the alto solos in Handel's "Messiah" at Freeman, So. Dak.

Newton's community chorus under the direction of Dr. Walter H. Hohmann presented Handel's "Messiah" on Sunday evening, Dec. 12.

Nelson Hoffman, representative for student Christian association and student volunteer groups, visited Bethel college under the auspices of those campus groups on Friday, Dec. 10. Using the challenge of Christian service as a theme, Mr. Hoffman spoke during chapel services and also at an evening meeting in the Student Union room. Mr. Hoffman will go to India as a missionary under the Methodist board of missions.

School closes on Friday, Dec. 17 for Christmas vacation. It will re-open on Monday, Jan. 3, 1949.

Relief to Students

Among the very needy classes of people in Germany are students. According to our MCC workers there are many who have only one meal a day, or who live in very primitive quarters. Those students who have wives and families, or who were invalided through the war, or who are refugees with no one to help them, are in particularly great distress. Plans are being made for feeding or food package programs, as well as clothing distribution among these young students in cities such as Kiel, Hamburg and Goettingen.

Oddities of Hymnody

Who Writes Great Hymns?

We don't know. We do know, however, who wrote some of the great hymns which we sing in our MENNONITE HYMNARY. In running through some of the interesting write-ups which are to appear very soon in the HANDBOOK TO THE MENNONITE HYMNARY, we noticed that a wide range of occupations and interests are represented in the list of those who wrote these great songs. For example, some of the hymns were written by:

Bandmasters Athletes
Merchants
Organists
Choir Directors
Sons of bankers
Lecturers on musical subjects
Journalists
Temperance reformers
Civil engineers
Railroaders
Professors of physiology and anatomy
Members of the Supreme Court
Printers
Publishers
Postmasters
Editors
Teachers of vocal music
Manager of a cotton mill
Adjutant general
Treasurer of the State of Massachusetts
A stocking manufacturer
The mayor of Salem
A daughter of an attorney
Cattle dealer
Poets
Professors
Woodchoppers
Lawyers
Harbor keepers
Homemakers

With a list that long, including so many different types of people, there is nothing to keep any of us from writing a great hymn, so far as our daily activities are concerned. And this is by no means all. All of us will want to read and re-read, again and again, some of the inspiring stories back of our great hymns. When our daily activities threaten to become routine, and when our daily duties seem to lack meaning and significance, these great stories will remind us again and again that though we may be "woodchoppers," yet we can "live and move and have our being in God."

Jottings

—Ebenezer Church, Gotebo, Oklahoma: A mission festival was observed November 20 at our church, with the Herold Church, of Cordell, and the Greenfield Church, of Carnegie, as guests. Rev. Sam Goering was the speaker for the day. After his morning message Rev. Goering performed the service of licensing Gerhard Peters to the pastorate of our church. A basket dinner and coffee were served in the Gotebo High School Gym, where the afternoon and evening meetings were also held. In the afternoon Rev. Goering spoke on missions, with special music by the Herold Church. Slides of his relief work in Europe were shown by Rev. Goering in the evening, with the Greenfield Church providing the music. The offering for missions amounted to $108. —Mrs. Oscar Schmidt, Corr.

—Meadow Church, Colby, Kansas: On October 23 Rev. Walter Regier and family from Wayland, Iowa moved into the parsonage, and on the 31st Rev. Regier was installed as our pastor. Rev. Arnold Funk officiated at the installation service. There was a basket dinner at noon, followed by fellowship in the afternoon. Rev. Funk brought us the message in the evening. The Community Christian Endeavor program, originally scheduled for October 31, was given November 7 and was well attended.—Mrs. Dan Epp, Corr.

—Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas: Rev. J. J. Enz, North Newton, Kansas, brought the morning message on November 21. He spoke on "The Secret of a Dynamic Witness." The annual mission sale and supper is to be held on December 2.—Ella Voth, Corr.

—Alexanderwohl Church, Goessel, Kansas: Our congregation had the opportunity to hear the following visiting ministers recently: Rev. Henry Hege, Corn, Oklahoma; Rev. Dirk Cattepoel, Krefeld, Germany; Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Newton, Kansas; Rev. Walter Goossen, Hotevilla, Arizona; and Rev. J. B. Frey, also of Arizona. Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Schmidt, of Newton, Kansas, showed slides of Paraguay and told of their experience in South America recently. Miss Ruth Hilty, of Pandora, Ohio who served as relief worker in Europe, spoke in our church on Nov. 21. Rev. C. B. Friesen, pastor of the Walton Mennonite Church, delivered the sermon on the 21st of November.—Katie Wedel, Corr.

—Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pa.: A women's missionary society was organized a few months ago, and at one of our meetings we gave our minister's wife, Mrs. Wilmer S. Shelly, a miscellaneous shower. Our minister and family, on November 3, moved into our parsonage, which has been completely redecorated on the inside. The Ladies' Aid Society held its fall covered-dish luncheon and anniversary on Sunday, November 7. Mr. David A. Miller, of the Allentown Morning Call, and Mrs. Percy Ruhe, of the same paper, gave a report of their attendance at the World Council of Churches held in Amsterdam this past summer, and their impressions of the conditions in Europe, especially Germany, as they observed it while visiting there.—Mae Latshaw, Corr.

—Ebenezer Church, Bluffton, Ohio: During the past few weeks the five Mennonite churches of this area undertook the project of providing a carload of cereal for European relief. The Christmas Tree in Fact and Legend

By Leah Hamilton

How strange Christmas would seem without any Christmas trees! The gaily trimmed and brightly lighted evergreens are so definitely a part of our Yuletide celebrations that folk generally think of them as one of the essentials of that joyous holiday season.

Probably the earliest record of a Christmas is of the one that was lighted in Strassburg in Alsace, in 1604. Two centuries later, decorated evergreens were an established part of the seventy-two-hour Weihnachten (Christmas), festival held generally throughout Germany. The custom soon spread to France. Prince Consort Albert was responsible for the first decorated tree in England, which added greatly to the Yuletide gaiety in Windsor Castle in 1841.

Prior to these historic records lie years of legends. There is the story that Jospeh of Arimathea planted his staff. Soon it took root and later leaves began to appear on its branches. And on every Christmas Eve this strange bush blossomed. The decorated evergreen of our modern Christmas is believed to symbolize this miraculous staff.

The earliest record of a Christmas tree is in Strassburg in 1604.

Another lenged comes from the Druids—those ancient Celtic inhabitants of the British Isles who practiced a strange sort of paganism before Christan missionaries told them the story of the true and only God and His Son Who came to earth as a Baby on the first Christmas. One of the extraordinary features of the Druidic cult was the worship of the oak tree.

Sir Winifred, one of the missionaries who preached Christianity to the Celts, is supposed to have cut down a huge oak tree to impress these pagans with the wrongness of this phase of their worship. Then the legend tells us that he pointed to a fir tree.

"This shall be your holy tree," he is credited with saying. "It is the wood of peace, for your houses are built of fir. It is the sign of endless life for its leaves are ever green. See how it points heavenward! Gather about it in your homes where it shall shelter loving gifts and rites of kindness."

Perhaps these stories have some truth in them. Many legends have. No doubt they played a leading role in the evolution of the custom of decorating evergreens for the Christmas festival—a practice which has become so popular both in Europe and in our own country.

But when and how was the Christmas tree brought to America? Recently there has been quite a bit of research done by such men as Professor William I. Schreiber of the College of Wooster, Ohio, and Professor Philip A. Shelley of Pennsylvania State College, to try to find the answer to this question, which has proved very puzzling.

For quite some time, it was thought that a homesick Hessian tailor of Wooster, Ohio, August Imgard, introduced the tannenbaum of his native land into his new home, in 1847. For years no one could find any clues to an earlier tree.

Of late years, however, Professor Schreiber has found records of a tree's being decorated and displayed in Philadelphia, Pa., prior to this.

A German doctor, Constantin Herring, who had migrated to this city, found in 1833, that Christmas lacked much of its joyousness and gaiety without the tree which adorned everyone's home in the old country. The doctor talked this over with a teacher-friend, Friedrich Knorr, and the two decided to have trees the following year.

A few days before the next Christmas, the two friends, almost as excited as they had been as children when December 25th was close at hand, ferried across the Delaware River to New Jersey, where the fir trees grew luxuriantly. They hewed down two small ones and ferried them back to Philadelphia. From the water front. Dr Herring and his friend carried the trees on their backs, followed by an ever-increasing line of curious and jeering children.

The trees were set up and trimmed with paper ornaments and lights. Then on special evenings, neighbors and patients of the doctor were invited to enjoy the spectacle. From that time until Dr. Herring's death in 1880, there was always a tree in his home each Christmas, and he always shared its beauty with his friends.

Strangely enough, there is a parallel to these stories of the first Ohio and the first Pennsylvania Christmas trees. For years, Rev. Henry Schwann of Cleveland, Ohio, was believed to have been the first American preacher to have a tree placed in his church at Christmas-time. Lately, it has been discovered that a Philadelphia preacher, Rev. Theodore Ledyard Cuyler, had a tree trimmed in his church in 1841—probably ten years before Rev. Schwann introduced the tree into his Ohio church.

In years to come, after more research has been made, other records may be unearthed that will antedate these recent findings. The dates really make very little difference, however. The fact remains that every year thousands of young and old gather around lighted evergreens, rejoicing and singing carols because more than 1900 years ago a little Baby was born in a stable in Bethlehem.

Under Orders

The ordination service for Mr. Irvin E. Richert, student at the Chicago Seminary, was held on November 14 with Dr. S. F. Pannabecker and Rev. J. N. Smucker officiating. In his morning message Reverend Smucker listed four steps necessary before a young man could be ready to respond to God's call and say, "Here am I, Send me." Seeing God with a great vision for service, seeing one's own unworthiness, experiencing a spiritual cleansing, and then feeling united as a consecrated partner with God are these four steps. Present to hear Mr. Richert take his solemn vows of serving God through the church as a minister were his wife from Chicago, his parents from California, his sister and two children from Kansas, Mrs. Richert's mother from Pennsylvania, besides a full house of worshippers.

In the Headlines

Provisions for college scholarships and peace oration promotion are made by the will of Dr. C. Henry Smith, late of Bluffton. The estate is estimated at $70,000.

The will . . . . provides for establishment of a trust. His widow, Laura, receives the trust fund income until her death, after which time proceeds will go for scholarship, peace oration, and library purposes and "dissemination among the Mennonite colleges and churches. . . . of the traditional nonresistant peace doctrines as taught by the Mennonite church."

After Mrs. Smith's death, trust income is to be divided into two equal parts. One part is to be allocated to college scholarships for the benefit of descendents of Dr. Smith's father, the late John Smith, half for use at Bluffton College and the other half for use at Goshen (Ind.) College, where Dr. Smith taught before his 35 years with Bluffton College.

Should there be no demand for these scholarships, the income may be used for such other educational purposes or beneficiaries as the boards of directors may determine.

Of the other half of the trust income, $100 yearly is to go for purchase of books and manuscripts for C. Henry Smith collection of Mennonite history in the Musselman Library in Bluffton College.

Twenty-five dollars annually is to go for promotion of peace orations at Bluffton College, Goshen College, Hesston (Kans.) College, Bethel (Kans.) College, and Tabor (Kans.) College.—Taken from Lima News, Lima, Ohio.

From Whence Came Christmas Customs?

Christmas, with all its season of joy and special events, has an interesting history back of it. New things are found out about it frequently.

It is not definitely known that the date of December 25 is the actual date of the birth of Christ. But history records that sometime after the year 337 A.D. a pope named Julius asked St. Cyril and others to try to find out the real date of the birth Christ. It was found that churches and peoples in the western part of Europe and Asia were celebrating on December 25 while some were observing the anniversary in January, April, May, March, and some in September. Celebration of Christmas on the present date was known to have been done in Rome in 350 A.D.

The original Santa Claus was Saint Nicholas. He was a bishop in Myra in 300 A. D. He was noted for his kindness and aid to poor people, especially to children. Once he wanted to help a nobleman who was very poor, but didn't want anyone to know about his condition. So the Saint climbed to the top of the man's house and slipped down the chimney in the middle of the night and left a lot of food and other needed things. Soon other people started leaving baskets of food and goodies, stockings filled with food, fruits ,and tidbits. They hung the stockings at the huge, wide chimneys as the most convenient place for them.

Soon the poor people, especially children, started hanging stockings at the fireplace to make it convenient for their benefactors to fill them at night when all were asleep. It is said that this is how the custom of hanging up stockings at Christmas Eve came about. Saint Nicholas became known as the "Saint in Clothes," or "Santa Claus." The Dutch people called him "Sinter Klaus," meaning the good saint who came down the chimney through the cinders in it.

The custom of giving gifts at Christmas time is an old one that has been handed down from the earliest of times. It follows the action of the Wise Men who brought gifts to the infant Jesus at His birth. And during the years that followed, it became the custom to give gifts to young children on the day of His birth. Then the custom developed into giving gifts between people of all ages.

Candles and Christmas go hand in hand. Candles had been used in the early-day celebrations of Christmas as they were the only illumination other than crude oil lamps, which were not so plentiful and which cost too much for many poor people. Candles were burned especially during the feasts of the Christmas season. The candles also signified the light that came into the world with the birth of Jesus. The ancient church of Greece called the Christmas season the "Feast of Lights."

Singing of Christmas carols is an ancient custom which has been carried on for so long that its real beginning isn't exactly known. It is known, however, that caroling went on during the Feast of Lights, and that singing of carols became an established church custom as far back as the year 589 A.D. Cards with carols printed on them were given out by churches in many lands. This was the forerunner of our custom of sending Christmas cards to friends and loved ones. In England the ancient Christmas customs still prevail as they have for centuries. They also prevail in Holland, and prevailed in Germany before Hitler came into power. It would be an interesting experience to be in a different land each time Christmas came.

A Ship! A Ship!

Rescue After Thirteen Days Adrift at Sea

by A. Donald Miller

And the words had quick effect and the hysteria passed. Another man, also a Goanese, became slowly demented, and would stand with glassy, bulging eyes peering wildly, uncannily about him. Sometimes little quarrels flared up between individuals or groups; and on one occasion—the only one—there was a sudden, wild outburst of feeling between Indians and Europeans over the water question. The issue of water was in the hands of Europeans; and some Indians felt (quite without warrant) that we favoured ourselves; on the other hand, certain leakages from a water-tank made some Europeans incensed against the Indians. All knew that everything hung upon the water issue; and, therefore, the irritation of tired and taxed nerves, focused upon it. At any rate, on this the eleventh morning, there was a sudden eruption of feeling. For a time the situation looked ugly, with waving arms, excited voices, the fear of physical violence. But better counsel prevailed. None of us was perfect, and we were all, very literally, "in the same boat." The great thing was not to stand upon our rights but to let goodwill and forbearance do their sweetening work. The outburst subsided, and a reaction of greater cordiality set in.

The Eleventh Morning; the First Death

It was on this eleventh morning also that our first death occurred. Uncomplainingly, having given trouble to no one, this Indian stoker just faded out. His Moslem friends composed his features; their leader recited prayers, while we sat silent; there was a pause, and then the worn body was committed to the sea.

Later in the day another Indian died, a Goanese, the one with the staring eyes, who for days had seemed a spirit apart and forlorn. For him, a Roman Catholic, our skipper, Max Johnson, recited brief prayers; and in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost his body too was gently lifted over the side of the boat and laid to rest upon the waves.

When the twelfth morning came another had died in the night, and soon a fourth followed. A fifth appeared to be near to death and began a kind of crooning chant to Allah, the all-merciful. One of the little girls, too, began to look like a pale spring flower, fading away. The gunner with the damaged back lay forward under a tarpaulin, and Mr. Prentice, though now seemingly a little better, was in a bad condition. Several had swollen legs others had sores from prolonged sitting on the hard, irregular boards. All of us were weary from long lack of rest and freedom to move, and from our lack of water and inability to take our food. The sky and sea were grey, and the sun was long before it came out to cheer and warm us. Yet there was still a quiet courage; there were smiles, and attempts at humour, and a good democratic freedom to express our views and have a "say" in the ordering of our doings.

When I was sitting during the day beside Miss Martin, a senior missionary from Delhi with a long record of service behind her, we reminded one another of a conversation we had had on board the ship, about Christian community life, and the shedding of personal possessions, and the giving up of personal freedom to order one's own life.

"We've all things in common now, all right," I said," . . . . what there are of them!"

We thought of the possessions we were bringing home; Miss Martin was coming to England for the last time and bringing her Indian treasures. So were my wife and myself. We had twenty-seven crates and packages with all that we possessed, since we had been warned to bring as much as possible of our home, apart from furniture, in order to set up again in England without making demands on production—the slow garnering of twenty-one years in India, with many things of sentimental as well as intrinsic value. We looked at one another and laughed. Miss Martin was able to do so even though her glasses, her last possession, and without which she only saw with great difficulty, had fallen into the sea (it was remarkable how, of the little we did have, so much slipped overboard!). We looked across at my wife, in her torn evening jacket, and her auburn hair (now chopped short) blowing wildly in the wind. She laughed back at us.

"I never thought I was going to have a husband with a beard!" she said.

"Yes, that is a new addition to my possessions!"

"It makes him look quite patriarchal," said Lady Pearce.

"But with a bit of the brigand chief, too!" commented someone else.

"One's scale of values does get a bit shaken up, doesn't it?" I said. "But it helps one also to see how precious the material things of life are. Do you remember my quoting to you Tagore's 'Renunciation is not for me . . . .'? I still think that, in the sense in which he meant it, he was right. He knew that gratitude for God's gifts was shown in accepting and using them, rather than in renouncing them. How the lack of the good things of God, and of man's labor, impoverishes life; I only hope that I'll use them more unselfishly, and more gratefully, when I can enjoy them again."

We still clung, you see, to a form of speech which implied that we had no doubt but that rescue would come. But were we as sure of that, down in our hearts?

It was getting on in the afternoon of the twelfth day when Max Johnson, who was at the tiller, and beside whom I was then sitting, turned to me with quiet voice. "Donald," he said, "I wish you'd send up a prayer for us that God will intervene and save us. We don't really know where we are. We've no means of telling what progress we've made. We've been alone for days now. And we're getting weaker, and supplies are going. Intercede with the Almighty for us, for we're in His hands."

And so, refusing to believe that we were

"Alone, alone, all all alone Alone on a wide, wide sea!"

we offered prayer to God. I remember that throughout that prayer little Margaret, feeling wretched and ill, kept up an accompaniment of trying. But I am quite sure that her cry ascended to God as well as our prayer! We confessed our utter dependence upon God's grace and power; we committed ourselves to His mercy. And we prayed that, if it were His will that our lives should continue upon earth (and with all those young lives on board it seemed that that must be His will), He would in His omnipotence and goodness bring deliverance to us the very next day, or at any rate some sign that deliverance was on the way.

Perhaps it may seem to have been audacious that, in leading the prayers of this mixed company of suppliants (for the Moslems amidships kept a reverent silence, though they could not understand my words), I should have asked God that—were it His will that rescue on this side of eternity should come to all—the very next day should bring deliverance, or some token of its coming. But we needed encouragement to fortify us; and justifiably or not, this is what I prayed.

When our prayer was over, I had a strange sense, almost of elation, that God had answered our supplication according to its asking. A little later, preparations for the long hours of darkness began. The first-aid tin was put away in a locker which had held my shoes for the last three or four days. To put it in straight my shoes had to be moved out for a moment.

"I'll want them to-morrow!" I said with a smile, and I meant it.

Darkness fell. The wind blew gustily and cold. we huddled together. Spray splashed over. Again and again, in the confused darkness and rolling of the boat, changes of sail had to be made and the oars gotten out to bring us around into the wind. My wife had more frequently than before to give swabs of wool soaked in brandy to steady fluttering hearts. Every expenditure of energy made thirst more urgent. We decided that as soon as dawn came, we must give the ration of water instead of at about eight o'closk. It was a bad night.

Charles Rickert Refuses to Register

Charles Rickert, college senior, from Bluffton, Ohio, was taken into custody Monday, November 8, by Federal and county authorities for failure to register under the new selective service act. Rickert was taken to Lima and then to Toledo where he appeared before a Federal District Court.

Released on $1000 bond he returned to the campus on Thursday where he will remain until his case comes before the Grand Jury.

Appearing at Ropp Hall about noon on Monday, were an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a Deputy Sheriff of Allen county prepared to take Rickert into custody. He had previously presented his letter of refusal to comply to the registration board in Lima.

The case later presented to the Federal District Commissioner in Toledo who set bail at $1000. The following day Rickert was arraigned before the Federal District Court where he was asked to sign a waiver which would have eliminated the formality of a court trial. He refused to sign the waiver and was released until the Grand Jury hearing.

Charles Rickert, president of the YMCA and preministerial student is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Rickert, of Bluffton.

Christmas Greeting

CHRISTMAS is more than a red letter day on the calendar. It is the red letter of the human heart.

Our lives are punctuated by Christmas. No doubt it is your experience as it has been ours that at Christmas you mark off another mile in your journey of life and reminisce. The bright days you want to remember are clouded by the dark days you can't forget. Perhaps you wonder if you could have endured the year had you known what it had in store for you—a bitter experience, or possibly an empty chair, a break of health, a friendship betrayed, a moral failure, a business failure, a troublous home —you feel life cracking under you.

This day of all days brings you a message to dispel all such memories and give you the fresh start of a newborn babe. If you are lost in the perplexing problems of life let the Christmas star guide you to the One Who will bring you back to the way of peace. If your way is beset with fears and doubts, let the undergirding words of the angel speak peace to the troubled seas upon which you sail. If you have waited long for peace in your heart, be encouraged by the heavenly reward granted the shepherds. If you feel your case is beyond God's reach, then remember that He stooped even to the lowly manger to help you. If you find it hard to give your all to Christ, let the Wise Men show you that no price is too great to pay to find Christ and peace. And should God seem far away, don't forget when He came as a Babe in human flesh He paved a way into every human soul over which heavenly reinforcements may come to you to sustain you in life's great struggle. The message of Christmas brings Christ into every crisis!

May this Christmas be a milestone of joy and peace for you, scattering the clouds from the horizons of your life; this is my Christmas prayer for you. J. J. E.

Immanuel--God With Us

by Harold D. Burkholder

THE FIRST chapter of Matthew's Gospel mentions two names which were given to our Lord namely, Jesus (v. 21), and Immanuel (v. 23). The first name was associated with His special office as Saviour: "Thou shalt call his name Jesus for He shall save His people from their sins." The second name, Immanuel, was primarily associated with His very nature, for Immanuel means, "God with us." Yes, Jesus the Saviour was "God manifest in the flesh." He was truly the God-man. Very God of very God and very man of very man. "Great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh" (I Timothy 3:16).

"Forever God, forever man,
My Jesus shall endure;
And fixed on Him my hope remains
Eternally secure."

Hope to the Sinner

Immanuel, God with us, brings Hope to the Sinner. The Word of God places the entire human race under sin. "As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one." "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:10, 23). Sin being what it is made it impossible for man to provide his own sin-offering. Furthermore, since sin produces blindness and death, man is unable to take the initiative in his personal salvation. It was because of this that "God spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all." Man's great plight also explains why Jesus came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Thank God, "He who knew no sin was made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him."

It has been said that Socrates cried out to Plato, "Plato, O Plato, I know God can forgive sin, but I do not know how." The Word of God, from Genesis to Revelation, testifies to the fact that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Since, all have sinned," and since, "the wages of sin is death," therefore man's only hope of salvation lies in One who is without sin; One who is able to meet the justice of God through a perfect sin-offering. This is the explanation for the Incarnation when God the Son wa sent forth "made of a woman, made under the law to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons" (Gal. 4:4, 5) It was John the Baptist who introduced Him as "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.' Immanuel, God with us, is the only hope for the sinner. Have you trusted Him as your persona Saviour from sin?

Comfort to the Sorrowing

Immanuel, God with us, brings Comfort to the sorrowing. The prophet Isaiah writes that the Messiah will "bind up the broken-hearted, and comfort all that mourn." He will give "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness . . . . that He might be glorified" (Isa. 61:1-3).

The Lord Jesus did all this during his earthly ministry. He was continually ministering to the needy, the depressed, and the sorrowing. To His troubled disciples He said, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in Me." The best remedy for heart trouble is implicit faith in Immanuel, God with us. "For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are yet without sin." Furthermore, He has promised never to leave us nor forsake us. Thank God, Immanuel, God with us, brings comfort to the sorrowing. Yes, "His Grace is sufficient for thee."

Courage to the Dying Saint

Immanuel, God with us, also brings courage to the dying saint. God's nearness to the Old Testament saint is expressed as follows: "Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil for Thou art with me." The New Testament Saint still clings to this promise but also rejoices in the Lord Jesus who tasted death" for every man" (Heb. 2:9), and who arose triumphantly from the dead. "O death, where is thy sting?

SONNET FOR THE ATOMIC AGE

By

Kenneth Boulding

On all the earth two nations now remain,
The Kingdom of This World, and of the Lord,
The one, content no longer with the sword
That takes but one life, now with murderous rain
Blankets whole towns with ruin, death and pain.
The other is not seen, not yet outpoured
In visible might, yet here and now adored
By those whose hearts are bound by love's bright chain.

You must choose. You are no longer free
To dally with them both. The time's too late.
Our cities all must share in Sodom's fate,
And where's the ark to ride a brimstone sea,
Except a manger?—what, except the blood
Of Christ can quench the fire of this last flood?

CHRISTMAS, THE FESTIVAL OF THE INCARNATION, dramatizes the cornerstone conviction of Christianity. A high Christology as witnessed to by the historic and Biblical doctrines of the Virgin Birth and the Deity or Godhead of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ spell out one glorious message which has been termed "God-in-Christ-that-Christ-may-be-in-us." But that is the technical language of doctrine. What does this mean to the common man? Simply this, that our heaven-sent help and strength and salvation is as close to us as the Babe in the manger was to Mary—yea, even closer. Reality has invaded time and space in Jesus Christ. God in a unique way stepped into history. He chose human flesh; that is a phase of the Christmas message we ignore. There ought to be real comfort in the message that God chose human flesh—that which we all share—to reveal himself to man.

Veil'd in flesh the Godhead see;
Hail the Incarnate Deity,
Pleased as man with man to dwell
Jesus our Immanuel

But let us not miss the purpose of all this. The Word became flesh in Jesus Christ in order that it might become flesh in us according to the pattern of Jesus Christ. It is pure heresy to accept the great truth of the Incarnation and refuse to follow the Incarnate One in the great truths that He taught. This Christmas, as never before, let us not only say, "O come to my heart Lord Jesus," let us also say, "O come into my whole life, Lord Jesus, there is room in my life for thee." JJE

CHRISTMAS IS ONLY FOR THE POOR. The rest have but an empty celebration. The first Christmas was made possible because Heaven became poor when He who was rich, for our sakes became poor. There is only one way to make a Christmas. That is by doing what God did to make Christmas—give what is most precious to you for those in need. In no other way can you have a genuine Christmas! You say that is going to the extreme? But has not our constant effort to rationalize our living with more than we really need brought us to the brink of the abyss? Don't forget, the only rich people who participated in the first Christmas celebration laid their treasure down at the poor child's bed. Will you really have a Christmas this year because you give yourself to the Christ-Child through the gift you give to help those in spiritual, mental, or physical need the world around? Or will you only have another celebration as you seek to quiet your conscience with a small gift that not only does not represent your gift of your heart but may tragically represent the fading hope of someone dying for hunger or dying without Christ. The world needs to return to God's kind of Christmas.—JJE

THE PSALMIST says, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee." This statement may have puzzled us. The Nuremburg and Tokyo trials of war criminals illustrate how true this can be. The victor nations sat in judgment over the war leaders of the defeated nations. Their judgments would have been more convincing if they had also judged the war crimes of the victor nations. In the sight of God and in the judgment of history the area obliteration bombing and the dropping of atomic bombs of Hiroshima, and Nagasaki will be classed among the greatest crimes committeed in the war. In time these crimes also will receive their judgment. All through the procedings of the Nuremburg and Tokyo tribuals we have sensed an undertone of revenge and wrath. The spirit of reprisal was not totally absent.

The Quakers sent a letter both to the President and to General McArthur pleading that the endless circle of reprisal called war be broken by forgiveness. What they wrote is worth pondering, "In carrying out these death sentences we also would be guilty of transgressing the same moral law that they have broken . . . Surely, to forgive our enemies and to do good to them that despitefully use us is the beginning of that new era of international trust and fellowship for which we all so earnestly beseech God . . . As Americans, we feel the need to atone for the terrible atomic bomb that we unleashed without warning on the Japanese people. Sparing the lives of seven men as an act of atonement may help to heal the wounds of the spirit both in Japan and in America."

Though this plea was not heeded, the human wrath expressed in the executions of the war leaders is yet praising God, for a new international recognition of the supremacy of God over local government for the individual citizens has been established as international law. "The U. S. Government, dominant in the Nuremburg trials, established a great fact of international law, that a citizen is morally responsible for his acts even if living under an immoral government and that a 'citizen . . . should refuse to obey his government when his government ordered him to do an evil act' . . . . Without realizing it, this Govement through its military and civil authority, thus established and reaffirmed before the world the Protestant doctrine of the supremacy of the individual conscience."

These international tribunals have thus established as international law what Mennonites have always held as a basic principle of Christian conduct, namely, that our allegience to God stands above our allegiance to any government. Praise God for this.—WFU

The Universal Week of Prayer

Pilgrimage to Unity

by Henry Martyn Gooch
General Secretary, World's Evangelical Association

WHEN we speak of the Universal Week of Prayer, the words may convey little to some, but prayer is the inspiration of unity, and unity is vital to the success of the Gospel everywhere. It is no unimportant fact then that during the Week of Prayer, in the islands of the Pacific, through all the countries of the East, and the Near East and Africa, and all around the world, there are men and women lifting up their hearts together to Him in Whom all the families of the earth are one! It is like a glorious canon, in which the children of men unite in praise and prayer, each nation in turn coming into the harmony, till the earth is encircled with song.

爲 PRAY

們 US
禱告

For a Time of Storm

It was over one hundred years ago that the Week of Prayer was started. It was a time when there was much to disquiet the nations of Europe. They were nearing a time of storm and tumult. Within every land those who shared the Christian faith had many anxieties and fears. Then it entered into the minds of some of them to call upon all who shared the same faith to begin the New Year together in a concert of united prayer, and for all these years now the call has been repeated, each new year reaching out further to new regions and new tongues, until to-day, like a mighty river, the stream of united prayer flows through innumerable channels for the deliverance and renewal of our struggling humanity.

To the Magnetic Center

In 1846, when the Week of Prayer commenced, Japan was closed; China was only known through its treaty-ports; Korea was the hermit-kingdom, sealed against the West. Livingstone already in Africa, was still looking eagerly northward where the smoke of a thousand villages beckoned him; he had still to make those journeys which were to open the way into the centre of Africa, to bring death to the slave trade, and to establish the church of Christ in the heart of the Continent. To-day, not only in Japan and China and Korea, but in Uganda and Kenya, there are Churches sharing in this common approach to the Magnetic Center. Chinese pastors in the midst of the confusion and sorrow of their nation during this Week of Prayer will be calling their peoples to think and to pray with those of all other races, black and brown and yellow and white. Thousands of Koreans will meet day by day in Prayer, and from many an African station the same petitions will arise as those inspired by the universal topics. It is well named the Universal Week of Prayer.

Voices Raised in Many Tongues

In each country Christians will be thinking of their own needs; but they will not forget the needs of others. We in England shall be lifting into the eternal light the Chinese in China, where Universal Week of Prayer is almost an annual festival, and that Chinese Church will be praying for us. It is "Common Prayer" that the Week of Prayer represents. This should stir our imagination to think of the many who will share in this spiritual journey. The Papuan whose fathers were cannibals; the mystical Indian who has found that his quest has led him to the Christian faith; the African who has so much to forgive in the treatment that he has received in other days—so much to forgive, and so much to give; and throughout Europe, from North to South, there will be voices raised in many tongues and with many varied needs, and yet one in their longings for the Kingdom in which these shall all be "one in Christ Jesus." And from the West, when the other voices are still, the eager, and hopeful peoples of the new world will take up the praises and prayers.

The Way to Unity

Human beings may be united by their common interests, or by facing a common peril, or by the use of a common language which is a "sanctuary of the soul of a nation." But there is another way whereby they may be drawn together and held together. They may meet at a spiritual center, where they see the same things and learn the same values.

"Auf Wiedersehen"

OFF to India for a fourth term!

You see we left Berne, Indiana on October 10. Friends asked, "Do you have sailing papers, and passage reservations," "No!" "Then why move to the coast?" Of course, we were anxious to have fellowship with kin, friends, and churches in Pennsylvania. We went saying that if it was the will of the Lord that we sail soon, He would open the doors. "We are ready" (Romans 1:15) was our watchword.

We did not have our visas. We had no offer of passage. Many final transactions and affairs had to be arranged. It is very difficult to procure passage these days. We had been told that if we wanted at least two weeks' notice of sailing, we could expect nothing before at least the middle of January, as everything was fully booked. Thus by the time we would have arrived, transferred our goods from Janjgir Station, gotten settled, and assumed charge of assigned work, it would have been almost Easter, 1949. The alternatives were to pray, to say we would sail on a four-day notice, or to go separately—husband and wife—on separate ships if need be.

"My Father Worketh"

Within one week of our arrival in Pennsylvania God had worked marvels. Both visas had arrived. Passage was offered, and for both of us on one vessel! In another three work-days our boat, the S.S. FLYING CLIPPER, was due to depart. It is true that we cannot take all our goods on this ship. We delivered the remainder to the docks of a ship that sailed simultaneously. Please, pray for its safe arrival, and for special grace from Bombay customs officials. Some of our fellow passengers applied in January, the most of the remainder in June.

We wish to thank so many fellow-workers for missions in so many of our churches east of the Rocky Mountains for their interest, prayers, and help. Big things the being accomplished in India. The front line of advance is being lightly held. Your continued support is needed in all ways. Tremendous doors of opportunity are opening in India, so it reported. Obstacles to be overcome are almost equally formidable.

One thing amazed us. Never has the Lord been so lavish in all His gifts. Yet the mission budgets have had to be cut for India, and more cuts are threatening.

The greatest corn crop in all U.S.A. history is being harvest in 1948.

The greatest wheat crop in all U.S.A. history was harvested in 1947.

The largest cotton crop in eleven years was produced in 1948, and the cotton states sent out calls for tens of thousands of additional workers.

The assessed valuation of land and property in Montgomery County, Pennsylvania, the county of my birth. increased in one year, in the last fiscal year, over $8,000,000.

As we prepared to sail, I noticed in a New York newspaper, that steel production in the U.S.A. had just reached an all-time peace time high.

Another recent notice told that there were more than 41,000,000 motor vehicles registered in the U.S.A. —an all-time high.

AND YET, with all these all-time "high's," MISSION BUDGETS HAVE BEEN CUT, AND MORE CUTS ARE THREATENED. More workers need be sent to the mission fields, and we are told that there is no money to send them!

Call to Arms

Brethren, where is the trouble? May it be said of our Mennonite Church, as it was of Israel, in Psalm 78, they "being armed, turned back in the day of battle" (v. 9) and thereby limited the Holy One of Israel (v. 41 marg.)

Certainly, we found some very encouraging work in the homeland. We would not minimize the victories being won for Christ in the great land of America. We were thrilled in many places, as we traveled from Oklahoma to Ontario, from Aberdeen to Allentown, from Lustre, Montana to Lansdale, Pennsylvania. Yet in this day of confusion, shifting views, with large patches of Europe in rubble, the Christian church needs more than ever the testimony of what the Gospel can accomplish in non-Christian lands. We need to obey the Great Commission! Evangelize or die. Share or shrivel! YES, in addition, Western Christianity needs the testimony of what the Gospel can do when rereleased ascent in a fresh environment. Will you and your church back us up? Will you back up the Mission Board? Please note our new address, S. T. and Metta Moyer, P. O. C. P., India.

MONTANA

A Blessed Christmastide!

by Milton Whiteman

As Christmas draws near, we remember the birth of Jesus, the Savior of the world, and all mankind. The child of God, who was born in a manger, who brought joy, and salvation from sin to all people A gift of God, a priceless gift, of free salvation. Would that kings, and those in authority all over the world would only remember this holy child of God, who brought it Love and peace on Christmas morn.

We as Christians among the Indians of Montana remember too, of one, who has gone to be with the Lord, a messenger of love and peace in Jesus' name, to the Indians. He lived among the Indians until death, our beloved missionary Rev. Rudolphe Petter, a faithful servant of God, and we miss him exceedingly (II Cor. 4:6). For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts. to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. May God grant us all a blessed Christmas tide.

CHINA

An Indigenous Witness

by Theodore Ku

Theodore Ku, known to the missionaries as Ku Tung Tsing, was the faithful accountant in the Kai Chow Hospital for many years. After the disruption of regular hospital work, he was active in other Christian work at the Kai Chow station. After it became necessary because of persecution to retreat to Kaifeng, he was taken on as a worker in the Mennonite Central Committee unit in that place. Later he was connected with the orphanage at Hengyang, Hunan, where Mr. and Mrs. James Liu also are. Until recently he has been business manager of the Presbyterian mission hospital at Siangtan, Hunan, still connected with the MCC China unit. (Ku is pronounced Goo)

The following letter was written to Sister Aganetha Fast from that place.

September 14, 1948

I was very glad indeed to receive your letter of long ago. For many days I had been waiting to write to you but was very busy. Thank you very much for the Scripture messages you sent. These will be treasured in my heart and mind. I am sure they will be a great help to me in my daily life and work hereafter.

There is much to be done here but I am enjoying the work. Please, continue to pray for me that I may be a blessing to others and help to extend the Kingdom of our Lord.

Now we have only about 60 patients in 100 out patients daily. The reason inpatients are few in number is that living costs have increased tremendously, and not many sick people can afford to come to the hospital. This is a general hospital. Just now it has 70 beds and 15 special beds; three Chinese doctors and 3 foreign doctors. Also all are special doctors. I think you can remember Dr. Hayne, formerly in the Taming Nazarene Mission. She is an eye specialist here. There are 9 nurses but only 2 foreign nurses.

With some friends I go to the prison to preach to the prisoners every Sunday afternoon. I feel that this work is very important. The prisoners are very responsive. I hope the Holy Spirit will work in their heart and all become Christians. When I received one hundred single Gospels and four kinds of pictures from Mennonite Central Committee last month, I with some friends went to the prison to distribute them to the prisoners. They like them as the living bread from heaven, and thank the Lord for His gift for them. So last week we continued to preach to them. During the week, eighty-eight signed their names (that they) believe in the Lord. We hope this prison will become as a Christian place. Please remember them in your prayer meetings.

If there is no change I finish my time of service here in October. The agreement was for six months. When I finish my time of service here, I can go back to the orphanage at Hengyang. Last month my wife was asked to go to Hengyang to work in the orphanage. They like her help to train the orphans to make things such as shoes and clothing. Lois is also with her in Heng Yang to go to school. Our three boys have been accepted again at Bethe school in Shanghai.

Please, give my greeting to all our friends and with love in the Lord.—Theodore Ku

Christmas Greetings

by Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner

Dears Friends,

"As Christmas hours unfold anew,
This special prayer is made for you.
May God who watches from above
Bless you with lasting peace and love."

Our Annual Conference and also the Hindusthani Conference are again a thing of the past. Many were our blessings as we sat, prayed, and planned together.

This year we have not answered all our dear coworkers' letters. Therefore, we are asking pardon, and at the same time, thanking you for the same. The Lord bless and reward you.

Yes, our Heavenly Father has by His great mercies helped us complete forty years here in this beloved land. It has become our country and our people. Oh, we cannot express in words the pang around our hearts when we think of leaving it by spring. Pray for strength and courage these coming months.

Just now we are off for a few weeks of visiting our different out-stations, celebrating Thanksgiving and the Lord's Supper.

Dedicate Swift Current Bible School

by Hans Dyck

SINCE the Lord has helped us so miraculously with the building of the new Bible School, we have chosen the "Doxology" for our theme song. We hope and pray that not only our lips and voices would bring forth praises unto God, but that our whole life would be a real testimony for Him.

During the last years the activities of the church have become so numerous and the student body of the Bible School has kept on increasing, and it became impossible for those two bodies to function properly and adequately in one building, the church. The more we began to realize this, the more we began to pray for a new Bible School. Now the Lord has answered our prayer. We have a new school. We are living and teaching in it. Praise God from whom all blessings flow!

On October 24, 1948, the new Bible School was officially dedicated. Rev. G. G. Epp, Rosthern, member of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, had been invited to officiate. Soon after the Sunday School was dismissed, every vacant seat found an occupant. From far and near people had come to attend the dedication. After Rev. G. G. Epp had delivered the morning message, all visitors were invited to have their dinner in the dining room of the new Bible School. After dinner, the dean, Mr. H. J. Janzen, reported that 250 people had been fed.

The Dedication Service

The afternoon session was reserved for the formal dedication of the new school. As the other churches of the city are greatly interested in our school, and as it is my privilege to work together with the different ministers in the Ministerial Association, we had invited them to give us a word of greeting at this occasion. After Rev. Jacob Unruh's opening of the afternoon session, we were greeted by all these ministers. Then the whole congregation proceeded to the new building for the dedication. God gave especially suitable weather. When all the people had gathered around the new Bible School, a number of pictures were taken. Then Rev. Epp read Psalm 100, gave a short message, and dedicated the Bible School to the Lord. The nearby choir emphasized his words by singing "The Lord is in His Holy Temple." It was, indeed, a very solemn moment. The Lord spoke definitely and at the same time showered blessings upon us. Praise His Name!

In the evening and all of the next day a missionary from Africa was in our midst. To keep the Bible pervaded with a true missionary spirit it is very wholesome to have a missionary with us occasionally. We have been successful again in introducing that good spirit into our Bible School and hope to keep it.

Bible School Opening

Tuesday morning, October 26, the first teaching day began, 30 students were present. Never in the history of the Swift Current Bible School did it begin with 30 students. During the first morning devotion two souls were saved. In the course of time others have been saved and more have come to attend. To date the enrollment is 40. This exceeds the number of students of any previous year. Although we are filled up to capacity, we are still expecting more to come. So far the Lord has always provided for room and we are confident that He will do so in the future.

By now we are in full swing. Each student knows where he belongs, and what classes he has to attend. The first week a group of students and one of the teachers visited the neighboring churches and towns and brought them the Gospel. A good number of souls have been saved and many edified.

Before I close my report I would like to thank, in the Name of Jesus, all who so generously supported this work financially as well as with prayers.

Yours in His Service,

Rev. Hans Dyck

(Note—The Board of Home Missions, is grateful that it was possible to help in a measure, in this noble work. May the Lord call and prepare many helpers in His Kingdom. In the Name of Christ, A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary.)

Somehow God weaves the strangest things
Into a pattern fair;
He took an angel song, a star,
A Hebrew peasant pair,
Some shepherds on Judean hills
And un'nown Wisemen three,
A stable cold and dark and damp,
A manger 'neath an inn—
And now
A weary world kneels hopefully
Before the Babe of Bethlehem.

The Magic Word for Mennonite D.P.'s

By Arthur A. Voth

FALLINGBOSTEL! There is an enchantment about that name. Many are the people that longingly dream about Fallingbostel, wishing, hoping, praying that they will soon receive a notice to report here. Too, many have already been here, and left in a state of inexpressible joy.

In Transit

The small town of Fallingbostel is insignificant enough, but near it is a large camp that has a total population of 7,500, and it is to this Emigration Transit Center Camp that we ordinarily have reference when using the name Fallingbostel. It is here that refugees are "processed" for emigration to Canada. About 1,400 Mennonites have already passed through this camp or through Buchholz, the camp that was previously used; approximately 1,200 are here now.

When IRO (International Refugee Organization) in the Zone receives word that a certain family is called out by a sponsor in Canada, they notify the family to appear for an interview. After their eligibility has been determined, they are asked to report to Fallingbostel. Here IRO gives them a preliminary physical examination, arranges for their documentation and transportation, and presents them to the three sections of the Canadian Immigration Team—the Security, the Medical, and Consular.

More than Transit

But Fallingbostel is more than a mere stopping point for people on their way to Canada and it is because of this realization that their joy of coming here is mingled with a sense of fear. Will they be found eligible by the Canadian team?—that is the question. When everything goes well, they may not be here for more than a month. Due to minor difficulties like a re-examination, treatment of eyes or a cold, or even a major operation they may have to stay for a protracted period of several months.

Trachoma is a disease concerning which they are very strict and one finds that a number of our people have at one time or another, possibly 20 years ago, had trachoma. The disease is now inactive; their eyes are pronounced apparently cured. Whenever any scars remain, the possibility of an outbreak exists, and their case is "furthered" (put aside) for a trial period of six months. There have been three or four cases of active trachoma; these cannot go until they are cured. Another disease concerning which the medical examination is very strict is tuberculosis. If any possibility of it being active exists, the people are "furthered" for three or six months. If an active case is found, the person concerned is rejected.

"Who Only Wait"

To us, three months, six month or even a year do not appear as a long time, but to a refugee this is a long time; to many, when they learn that their emigration will be delayed, this seems like years and decades. This is not primarily because of the trying conditions in which they will have to continue to live, but because they fear that the international situation may take a turn for the worse. To them the conditions appear so much more unstable than they do to us.

To many, Fallingbostel has been a sweet and pleasant dream. For a small percentage it has been a dreadful nightmare. May we rejoice with those that rejoice, weep with those that weep, and continue to remember all of our refugee brethren at the Throne of Grace.

JUST ARRIVED, a large group of refugees—hopeful, fearful!

The Harvest of a Mocking Generation

by William Keeney, Krefeld, Germany

TODAY in Germany we see men reaping the harvest of a mocking generation. The time of Hitler was a time when religion was not entirely prohibited but was consciously and deliberately discouraged. This affected the young people in particular who grew up with at least an ignorance and disregard for religion if not contempt for it. We are particularly aware of this harvest when we observe two things here today.

The first of these is the lack of trust of others. One must soon learn to keep automobiles locked and valuables out of sight or under close watch. Everyone keeps the doors of their houses locked, even through the day. The other Saturday at the Mennonite Church we were asked to watch a bicycle while the owner went back into the church for something she had forgotten. It was not safe to leave the bicycle for five minutes, even though there still was a group of people standing around who had just come from the church. The peak of this distrust was experienced when we went to a town hall in a village a few miles from Krefeld. We stopped in an office to ask directions to a particular man in the same building. While the secretary took us to his office, she had to lock the door to her office. Those who do not observe this lack of trust soon learn why the people here do this.

> "Make no mistake—God is not to be mocked—a man will reap just what he sows; he who sows for his flesh will reap destruction from the flesh, and he who sows for the Spirit will reap life eternal from the Spirit." Gal. 6:7-8 (Moffatt)

The other thing is the lack of trust in the future and the fear of death. Many are living in constant fear and apprehension for the future. Russia is their main concern. And the reason seems to be that Russia, or a war with Russia, has the power to kill the body. The people as a whole do not have the eternal perspective. What can happen to a person in this life determine the morals of the people, with death as the ultimate evil. The people do not seem to have a concept of an existence beyond that of the physical body. This too comes from the rejection of religion and the Christian concept of life.

As one sees the result of the sowing where the harvest is being reaped, one must stop and ponder the seed being sown in America at the present time. It seems that the increased trends toward secularization, materialism, and militarism in the United States will bring a harvest of distrust and insecurity which now exists for many people here in Germany.

From a Relief Worker's Christmas Greeting

. . . . I think of the many examples of unselfish love which I have seen this year—the happy sharing of the last pieces of bread, the willingness to offer the only extra garment to someone else far needier, the hours of tireless and uncomplaining effort in dingy, chilly shelters for the sake of others, and those quiet, unheralded workers of whom it truly can be said: 'The love of Christ constrains—."

It all comes down to one answer. It is this Gift of God which we commemorate at Christmas which supplies the only source of joy and peace and love for our world today. And sometimes its very best expression in the lives of those who have the very least of these things, humanly speaking. This "tiding of great joy" is something to live, not just to talk about!

And now, I do wish you a very blessed Christmas! Though we are far from each other, I know we shall realize that bond of fellowship in our Lord and Master which is so strengthening and rewarding.—Erna J. Fast.

NOTES ON HUMAN NEED

Paraguay.—Replanting has been necessitated by unusually large numbers of grasshoppers that have overrun the land and consumed much of the planting among the Mennonite colonies in Paraguay, causing a serious impending food shortage. This condition is restricted to the Chaco area.

China.—Conditions in China where our workers are located have not changed substantially. A number of changes in the personnel in the unit have taken place recently because of uncertain supply of suitable food for children, workers with small children returning at this time.

——Akron.—The following shipments, with total value of $75,641,17, left port during the period of October 30 to November 9. To Pakistan, 10 tons clothing, bedding, and soap; to China, 30 tons flour; to Belgium 1/3 ton of shoes and soap; to British Zone, Germany, 12 tons clothing, bedding, shoes and soap; to American Zone Germany 6 tons clothing, bedding, shoes, and soap, and leather; to French Zone Germany, 7½ tons clothing, bedding, shoes, and soap. No shipments left port during the remainder of November because of shipping strike.

The Implications of Military Toys and Games for Children

by R. C. Kauffman

CHILDREN'S play is conditioned by two factors firstly, by their inner needs and, secondly, by the activities of the adult world in which they find themselves. During the war, almost every child became a little warrior and toy-makers were busy supplying them with the materials required for their war play. Since then, military toys and games have declined in popularity, but by no means disappeared. Tanks, guns, bombers and fighter planes will in all probability remain staple toy items even as did the "toy pistol" and the "little tin soldiers" of the past. Consequently the question, what are the implications of these toys and games for our children?

In answering this question it is regrettable that there are no statistical studies available and that we are forced to rely principally on the application of general psychological observations to our problem. But even this approach would seem to make certain broad conclusions possible.

How Much Is "Normal"?

To begin with, it is pertinent to recognize that a certain amount of war-play is sufficiently common among children reared in our Western culture to be regarded as "normal." We have perhaps all, at one time or another, played "Indians," "Cops and Robbers," or some similar game. That such play significantly shaped our ideas with respect to war and peace seems very unlikely. Experimental evidence indicates that "transfer of training" is usually not automatic. That is, unless a warlike game is played with the specific and conscious intent of preparing for real war, as might have been the case in Nazi Germany, there is little likelihood of transfer taking place. For boys at least, the "gang age," appearing somewhere between the ages of 8 to 12, seems so universal as to be considered normal. The one-time educational theory of G. Stanley Hall was based on the assumption that "ontogeny recapitulates phylogeny"—that is, that the history of the race is broadly reproduced in the life of the individual and that all of us, therefore, go through a "savage" stage. The assumption underlying Hall's theory is no longer tenable, but the recognition of a "gang" stage in the course of individual development still is. To say, then, that all warlike play is bad and that parents should forcibly and definitely prohibit their children from engaging in it, is hardly warranted. As a matter of fact, such unequivocal prohibition of warplay would likely infuse it with much the same morbid fascination as that which now so commonly attends sex.

Pertinent also, from the psychological point of view, is the fact that in our so-called civilized society most children acquire a degree of latent aggressiveness in the very process of growing up. The well-known psychoanalyst, Alfred Adler, made much of this. Throughout the course of its most formative years, Alder observes, the child plays the role of an inferior in an adult society. The child must be "socialized" and this means all the frustrations incurred through the denial of its many impulses which conflict with the rules of society. There is the recurrent, "Do this," "Don't do that," "Don't do this," and so forth. All of us, therefore, emerge from childhood with some feeling of inferiority and with some degree of frustration. The natural result of all this is "the will to power."

To deny this will to power, this latent aggressiveness, is to court personality difficulties. Expression for these pent-up feelings will be found in one way or another. While war games are certainly not the most desirable means of expression conceivable they may, nevertheless, be preferable to certain alternatives that the child will consciously or unconsciously hit upon. The vituperative and sometimes actual physical attack that children make upon their parents, upon playmates, and even upon children far smaller than themselves are among these alternatives. Child psychologists, working with "problem children," are well acquainted with the child who will make a clay image of daddy or mommy and then proceed to devastate it with savage, but obviously gartifying, cruelty. So far as children are concerned, then, it would seem that our problem is not so much one of finding a "moral equivalent" for "war" (in the broad sense of the term), as it is one of finding a psychological equivalent—and this may be well-nigh impossible.

Toys Can Be Non-Suggestive

But having made these observations, it remains to be pointed out that this is by no means to sanction military toys. From a child's point of view, any movable object, supplemented by imagination, may serve as a toy. Since this is the case, toys may be either suggestive or non-suggestive. A non-suggestive or neutral, toy, is far more suitable for a child than a suggestive one since, through his vivid imagination, the child is able to make this neutral object serve his immediate needs whatever they may be. Toys definitely suggestive of war serve as a means of emotional release when the child feels the need to dramatize this type of activity, but in addition, unfortunately, they suggest war play to him even when he feels no need for this type of activity.

For example, a simple, non-suggestive object such as a stick may serve as a walk-cane, a hobby-horse as a gun to shoot buffalo, or as a tommygun to kill "enemies," depending upon the needs of the moment. But a fancy, painted, wood-and-tin-tommy-gun is good for only one thing—as a tommy-gun to kill "Japs" and "Krouts." The child with such a toy will be inclined to limit his play activities to the extremely narrow and undesirable range suggested by the play-object. If he has only war toys, he can play only war games. If he has a liberal supply of neutral, non-suggestive play objects, he may still play war at times, but he will not actually be restricted to and encouraged in the narrow field. A child with a piece of modelling clay will do some things with it that look like "murder" to the adult, but, having gotten it "out of his system," is free to proceed using it in a creative fashion. War games are not always subject to our direct control, but war toys are and should be.

A final word should be added regarding the fundamental importance of the attitudes that enter into children's play activities. In the final analysis the question of what constitutes a military toy or game is more exactly defined in terms of these attitudes than by anything else. With some children any form of play becomes warlike and any toy may serve as an instrument of terror and destruction; with others, even superficially warlike activities appear to have no significance other than that of mere play. The difference lies in the attitudes that these children bring to the occasion. No answer to our question regarding the implications of military toys and games for our chidren can afford to overlook this fact. If, as the writer assumes to be the case, our ultimate interest in this discussion is that of adapting play to the practical ends of peace, it is here that we face the crux of our problem.

The Case of George

Let me illustrate the point by citing a case, in no wise dramatic, but therefore all the more typical of many others like him. It is the case of George. As a venturesome pre-school lad, George was deeply impressed by his parents' stern and positive demeanor. His mother had adopted that agressive pattern which sometimes goes for social alertness and ultra-smartness. His father, a successful business man, added heavily to the picture, constantly reminding the boy that the real values in life are to be found in the competitive swim—that one has to swim faster and farther than the other fellow. Viewing life as a struggle for dominance, George's parents considered it their duty to train the child so that he could overcome obstacles and especially people who happened to get in his way. These aggressive ideals, religiously impressed upon the child, found their natural expression in his overt behavior and particular in his play experiences. One of the most conspicuous results was that of trying with fanatical zeal to win all the games in which he took part. He was deeply hurt by defeat. He became impatient, critical, and even abusive of conditions and people who stood in the way of his egoistic ambitions. At times he attempted to put forth brute strength against his mates, whom he considered his enemies. His play became a matter of edgy combative conduct, of vindictive behavior, and of all-around unhappiness. If further, George would have fallen under the tutelage of some muscle-minded highschool or college coach with the dictum, "Win, honestly if possible; but, under any circumstances, win!" the case would have been complete—complete, that is, except for the prospects of another war, which George might well have welcomed as another opportunity for flaunting his philosophy of life and venting his exaggerated aggressiveness.

The incident occurs to me of a father whose three sons all joined the navy. He accounted for it in terms of a picture of a ship that hung in their home. That this picture could, of and by itself alone, have brought about this result seems unlikely to say the least—as unlikely as the supposition that a picture of Christ hung upon the living-room wall could, without word of comment, interpretation or appreciation, bring about the conversion of a family. That such a picture could, however, serve to crystalize and symbolize the ideals and attitudes already pervading that home seems altogether likely. So, too, with the toys and games of children. They serve to symbolize the attitudes and ideals instilled within the child, quite apart from any play activity. Play, like the picture, is important—but more important the meaning behind it, put there by the child's most intimate associates.

To summarize

1. War games are normal occurrences in the growing-up process of the child and should not be regarded with alarm nor should they be forcibly prohibited. In so far as possible, more constructive games and activities should be encouraged by a redirection of interest.

2. There is no justifiable reason, psychological or otherwise, for supplying the child with war toys. They serve no purpose not served equally well by other toys, except that of narrowing the field of interest and activity to war itself.

3. Most determining are the attitudes and ideals which the child brings to the play situation and from which the play situation derives its symbolic significance.

MINISTERS RETREAT

to be held at

Estes Park,

Colorado

August 11-17,

THE MINISTERS Retreat Committee meet in session October 15, 1948, at Newton, Kansas. to outline the program and make final plans for the Minister's Retreat to be held next summer. The dates have tentatively been set for August 11-17, 1949, at the Y.M.C.A. Conference grounds, at Estes Park, Colorado.

The committee feels fortunate in again being able to secure the facilities of this nationally known vacation spot, established specifically for conferences of this nature. Last summer's retreat, which had also been scheduled for Estes Park, was postponed because of the conflicting dates with the Mennonite World Conference. Perhaps we should extend a word of appreciation to the Y.M.C.A. officials for their very gracious attitude in cancelling those dates which no doubt prevented some other similar group from enjoying the facilities of their camp. Also to Dr. W. W. Adams, of Central Baptist Seminary, who had turned down two other engagements to be with us as a special lecturer.

We are, therefore, especially grateful that the facilities of the Y.M.C.A. camp grounds have again been made available for us for next summer. It is our prayer and sincere desire that this event may be blessed of God and may be an instrument in His hands to bring Christian workers throughout the General Conference into a closer bond of fellowship.

We trust that these dates will be suitable to a large number of pastors, missionaries, and teachers within our conference. Other organizations in planning for their summer's activities may wish to keep these dates in mind so that they may be free to attend.

Further details concerning the program and rates will appear later.—The Retreat Committee: J. N. Smucker, L . L. Ramseyer, I. I. Friesen, H. N. Harder, Ronald von Riesen Secretary.

The Canadian Readers Say...

Dear MENNONITE:

I am writing these lines after a rather busy time, when we were rebuilding, altering, and decorating our old house, and serving at Bible conferences and diverse meetings as much as I could. Now I am trying to dispose of the huge heap of correspondence which has piled up on my task while I was busy building.

The letters which I get are proving that people place a lot of confidence in me and come to me with all kinds of troubles and problems believing firmly that I can supply them with everything and help them succeed in their various endeavours. Now, shortly before Christmas, many want books of poems and plays from me, which I have not, except those of my own which I have for sale. All the others have been loaned long ago to different "good friends" which have forgotten to return them. I wonder why the people in need do not turn to our Book Stores in Newton, Berne, and Rosthern. Instead of writing everybody personally I would like to advise them hereby to look for such books where they are to be found. The books and pamphlets shown in my advertisements are all that I can supply. So, please, do not waste your, and my time inquiring about matters of which I have no knowledge, and which I cannot supply.

There are some letters of budding poets, and writers in general, which want me to review their first fruits of literature and to help them along in publishing the same. But here, again, they turn to a poor fellow who up to this time does not know how to market his own writings, let alone how to persuade a moneyed man to be the publisher of the same. All I can do is review such writings in our papers which have already been published and sent to me in print. Among the new Mennonite writers are some very good ones, and I would advise them to go right ahead, write on and try to publish, but not to be deceived in believing that would be easy to do. The road of an artist is a rough and thorny one, and they will have to suffer and to sacrifice much for their ambitions, without knowing whether they ever will get anywhere.

One friend, unknown to me, wants me to send him pictures of the World Conference which I have not. I have a few slides, and rather poor ones at that, but I have no way of making copies of them. One good man even wants me to send him a Canadian bill, fold which suits him better than his American. Well, I shall try to think of that when I am shopping down town. But most of the letter writers will hardly get a personal reply to their lines as I am unable to read everything carefully that is sent to me, much less to reply to every writer individually.

Please, forgive me, if some of you do not get letters from me in reply to yours.

Sincerely Jacob H. Janzen,
Waterloo, Ontario, Canada

To the Mennonite:

"I have just been reading the article in the October 19 issue of The Mennonite entitled "M.C.C. in Minature: Ontario Version." Although this essentially reports the situation very well, I would like to take exception to several remarks made in this article. First, Ontario is not a small Canadian province. It is the second largest Canadian province and more than three times the size of Texas, which is the largest American state. At least, to hear Texans talk one would think so. Of course, Ontario's population is not so large. Second, Kitchener is not a residential city primarily, although it is true that there are some very fine residential sections. It is the Akron, Ohio, of Canada, with three large rubber factories, the largest tannery in the British Empire and many furniture factories and meat packing plants, etc., etc. Waterloo is the Hartford of Canada, with many insurance companies.

"I am constantly amazed at the lack of knowledge displayed by some Americans concerning Canada. My sister spent this summer with a service unit travelling throughout the central United States. Here are some of the questions asked her about Canada—Do you have to pay taxes to Great Britain? Why should your income tax be so high, you weren't in the war!!! Do you know so and so? Where does he live?—in Canada!

A friend of mine worked in a tourist information office in Windsor a short time ago. Several Americans came over and requested means of transportation. They wished to visit friends in Montreal, spend the evening in Banff, and return to Windsor for a night's lodging!

Yours for better understanding
D. D. Millar (Member Stirling Avenue Mennonite church)

LET'S GET ACQUAINTED

That's what one of our good ministers thinks is exactly what we need—to get acquainted.

In order to acquaint his church with the General Conference and its operations more fully, he has written to the Mennonite Publication Office requesting that for one month his church receives fifteen copies of THE MENNONITE. Now isn't that a splendid idea? Imagine a pastor sitting down with his young folks, or even with the older folks for an intensive study for a whole month of all the various Conference activities—textbook: THE MENNONITE, official publication of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America.

We say he chose a good textbook, because there is something in THE MENNONITE for everyone in the family, for young and old alike. It's a good family paper—providing the family takes it. That's true of a great many things, like good family dinners, fine family devotions, and good family discussions. Each is good—providing the family takes it—as a family.

CELEBRATING DOUBLE

December 26, the Sunday after Christmas (Twede Helyedag) will be another good opportunity for our Conference churches and Sunday schools to "celebrate double" as it were, by making the thirteenth Sunday in the Sunday school quarter a day of special remembrance for Conference publications. In some Sunday schools and churches this is rapidly becoming a tradition. Just as sure as the thirteenth Sunday in the Sunday school quarter comes around, these Sunday schools make it a point to set aside the collection of that Sunday—either in the Sunday school or in the church, preferably both—especially designated, "For Conference Publications."

And isn't this entirely appropriate? At the end of the Sunday school quarter we are aware particularly of the importance of good Sunday school materials for young and old alike. We have become increasingly aware of what a large part publications play in the unity and growth of our Christian insight.

We suggest sentence testimonials to be given by three or four different people in a brief two- or three-minute preparatory period just before the collection is taken, somewhat as follows. "The new HANDBOOK FOR THE MENNONITE HYMNARY IS now being printed and will soon be ready for publication. This is one of the projects of the Publication Board."

> "The Board of Publication is now preparing a splendid series of Daily Vacation Bible School materials, edited by a special committee. This series will provide for every grade from the cradle roll to the first year of high school when it is complete."
> "One of the features of this new series of Daily Vacation Bible School materials will be a Junior Hymnal, including the best selections from the MENNONITE HYMNARY and other songs especially adaptable for children."
> "The Board of Publication operates on a very carefully planned budget, and every effort is made to operate within that budget. The Board of Publications can only move ahead as rapidly as we permit them through our gifts and contributions."

IMMANUEL — GOD WITH US from Page 4.

O death, where is thy victory?" (I Cor. 15:55) Praise God, the sting of death has been removed. Hallelujah, the apparent victory of death has been wiped out. "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (I Cor. 15:57). Thank God, He is for us; He is with us; in the person of the Holy Spirit He is in us; and by His grace we shall some day be with Him. (This represents the last in a series of articles planned by the Committe on Doctrine and Conduct for the Mennonite.)

The Washington Scene

Paul Goering

December 11. The armed forces' big fight in the new Congress will be to get more than the $15 billion set by Truman as a "tentative" ceiling for the National Military Establishment. The cut in draft quotas to 10,000 for January and 5,000 for February is interpreted here as an attempt of the Army to carry its fight for more money under the unified budget to the public despite Secretary Royall's denial.

Hanson Baldwin, military analyst for the New York Times, has said that the draft cuts should not be contrued as "crippling our military program" as some people claim. National defense, he says, cannot be considered apart from the budget and Truman's "tentative" ceiling is a recognition of the growing strain of arms spending on the national economy.

The National Association of Manufacturer's propose that the new military budget should be cut to $12 billion which is about the present level of spending. Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, has warned that increased arms spending would unleash "new forces of inflation" and make necessary a "number of direct controls."

While UMT opponents expect the Army to campaign for UMT, the Army isn't in a very good position to plug heavily for it until they first succeed in getting more money especially after cutting draft quotas for lack of funds. One informant has said, however, that the Army has a brochure all ready to release to Congress and the public which claims that UMT would be cheaper than the draft.

Military spending is determined by balancing the strain on the economy with the efforts to stop Communism and also prevent a depression. Some persons seem to think Communism can be stopped by building a fortified barrier against it instead of cutting out the mass of discontent in which it breeds. And while military production gives us more spending power, it produces no consumer goods.

Instead of just encouraging Truman and NAM church people should be in the forefront for greater arms reduction and urge spending for housing, education, and useful consumer articles.

WESTERN KANSAS

Christian Workers' Institute

by A. H. Miller

The First Mennonite Church of Hanston, Kansas was host to the Christian Worker's Institute of the churches of Western Kansas November 16 and 17, 1948, under the able leadership of Rev. H. B. Janzen, Field Secretary of the Western District. One church of Colorado (Vona) was also invited but unable to send us any delegates. Reverend H. B. Janzen was the chairman of the Institute.

A New Venture

Rev. H. B. Janzen expressed a deep feeling of joy that this meeting had at last come to pass. This meeting had been anticipated, worked for and prayed for since last spring. This feeling of joy seemed to prevade the whole assembly. He realized that the western Kansas churches were small churches and isolated groups, each church being more or less for itself. He thought also that we were neglected groups in that we did not receive all the benefits of the General Conference Headquarters as those that live closer to it, yet through it all he was grateful to the Lord and counted it a privilege to meet together with us since we have a work to do in this evil world and in His Kingdom.

The Program

The Theme of our Institute was, "The Task, The Tools and the Power to Serve." Our principal speakers were, Rev. H. B. Schmidt, Pastor of the Tabor Church of Newton, Kansas and Dr. J. W. Fretz of Bethel College, Newton, Kansas.

"We Need to See Jesus Ourselves"

Reverend H. B. Schmidt used as his Scripture text, John 12:32. "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up." Israel was visited by a curse but by looking up to the brazen serpent they were saved—we too are saved by looking to Jesus. But after we are saved do we hold out Jesus to a lost and dying world? The first century Christians went out into the highways and byways to hold up Christ to a dying world.

The Urgency of Our Witness

Dr. J. W. Fretz, instructor at Bethel College, Newton, Kansas gave us the evening address Tuesday Evening 'NOW IS THE HOUR."

1. It is urgent that we witness now. We must witness for peace "now." Later may be too late.

Problem Areas Discussed

Discussion periods were held both days. These discussion were at least an hour in length. Able leaders led the discussions. Some of the problems discussed were, "How does the Minister's Pension Plan work?; "How can Sunday school teachers teach more effectively?; "What are the duties of the assistant teachers?" How can we get more missionaries to visit our isolated churches?"

The Women's Mission Society met under the able leadership of Mrs. W. C. Voth.

The various churches gave reports of their activities and problems.

Noon meals were served in the basement of the church both days by the local Ladies Aid. A late evening lunch was also served to the Peace group from Bethel College on Tuesday evening.

One of the Resolutions that we adopted was that henceforth these Institutes are to be held annually among our Western Kansas Churches. May each one of us pray that God in His providence will again make it possible to fellowship together and that the next one will even be more successful than the first.

CENTRAL AREA

Bluffton Women's Conference

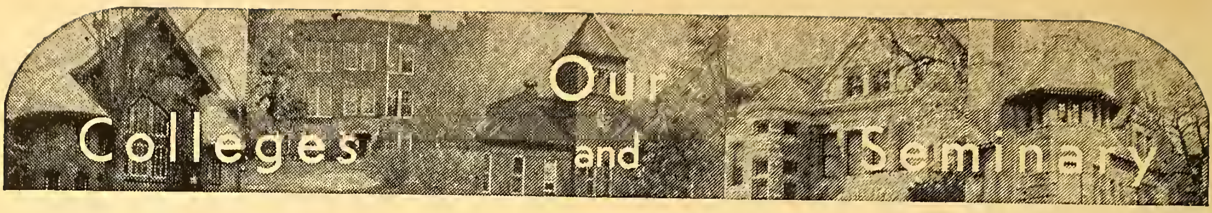
The fifth annual Mennonite Women's Conference was held at Ramseyer Chapel, College Hall, Bluffton, Ohio, on November 17 and 18, using the theme "Developing Missionary Leadership."

Rev. A. E. Kreider, Goshen, Ind., and Rev. Marvin Dirks, Chicago, Ill., presented the need for missionary leadership in the home church and on the foreign field, stressing the need for developing leadership among native Christians on the field as well as sending out more missionaries. Both education in our societies, including the study of foreign religions as a means to a more complete understanding of the problems facing our workers on the foreign fields.

Mrs. Jerry Sauder, Grabill, Indiana, Rev. Marvin Dirks, Miss Meredith Stepleton, Bluffton, presented plans for missionary education in our church among adults, young people, and children.

Reports of projects and activities in girl's mission bands and a mother's study club in their own churches were given by Mrs. Clovis Oberli, Berne, Miss Hilda Bixel, Ebenezer Church, Bluffton, and Mrs. Robert Hartzler, Eighth Street Church, Goshen. Mrs. G. M. Stoltz Topeka, Ind., presented, "The Value Of Attending The School Of Missions."

The closing session was held in Lincoln Hall Lobby following a sumptuous potluck dinner served by the churches of the Bluffton area. Officers elected for the coming year are: president, Mrs. Herman Hilty, Bluffton; vice president, Mrs. Rollin Moser, Nappanee, Ind.; sec.-treas., Miss Elisabeth Kauffman, Topeka, Ind. Program Committee, Mrs. Sidney Steiner, Pandora, Ohio, Mrs. Edison Sprunger Berne, and Mrs. Robert Hartzler Goshen.



CANADIAN MENNONITE BIBLE COLLEGE

Some of the churches which students have visited since the opening of school are Carman, Lowe Farm, Elm Creek, Springstein, Arnaud, and the combined Blumenorter churches at Rineland. Though the giving of such programs calls for a great deal of additional work on the part of student groups, it has been a blessing to all.

Of special interest was the visit of the entire student body of Rineland which is a village patterned after the old Russian "dorf" with its characteristic picket fences combined barns and houses, etc.

A welcome visitor in our midst was Mr. Gustav Reimer, formerly of Danzig, who is now on his way to Uruguay. Mr. Reimer gave several messages on the conditions as they existed in Germany and shared with us some of his anticipations in a new country.

The College administration is again planning for a special winter term in which young people, Sunday School workers, as well as ministers are invited to take part. This term extends through the months of January, February, and March. Special speakers for the first week in March are Rev. John G. Rempel, Rosthern, and Rev. Erland Waltner, Mountain Lake, Minnesota. A number of additional students have already expressed their interest in coming for this term and we trust that it will be a rich blessing for all.

MENNONITE BIBLICAL SEMINARY

The class in visitation evangelism reported to the student body in chapel this week, having based its strategy on Luke 10:10: "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place whither He Himself would come." Members of the class described their experiences in ringing doorbells of individuals completely unknown to them. They pointed out that first you have to prove you are not a burglar or a thug before you are permitted to enter the home, and in many cases entrance is not given. On the West side of Chicago, where most of this work was done, the group found that only twelve out of one hundred families had a general Protestant background. Among the members of the class that participated in this active evangelistic work was Orlando Waltner, missionary on furlough from Champa, India. The challenge of missionary work in the city of Chicago is still a very great one, for here are still thousands of individuals who do not know Christ as Lord and Savior.

Added to our other new students of this quarter is Robert Hartzler, pastor of the Eighth Street Mennonite Church of Goshen, Indiana.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

Two deputation teams representing the Girl's Gospel Team will tour during the Christmas vacation. Both teams will go west, one visiting churches in Illinois and the other giving programs in Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri. They will be accompanied by Mrs. Lenore Myers, librarian, and Rev. Paul Shelly. At the regular monthly faculty discussion meeting held December 10, Reverend Shelly spoke on "The Real Significance of Christmas." Junior and senior education students under the direction of Professors Ramseyer and Schultz visited the University School, Columbus, December 9, to observe educational practices carried on there. Dr. John Ramseyer, a Bluffton alumnus, is director of the school and two other Bluffton alumni are on the staff. The school is a part of Ohio State University. President Ramseyer spoke at the Freeman Junior College Founder's Day program. The student relief committee sold packaged food to students and faculty members during the week of December 5, and they in turn donated the food purchased for relief purposes. It is to go to Europe through the facilities of the MCC. School closed December 17 for the Christmas vacation.

BETHEL COLLEGE

Elmer Ediger, MCC, visited Bethel College campus Dec. 7 and 8 in the interest of voluntary service. He presented the present and future-planned programs for the service projects of the Mennonite Central Committee and the General Conference.

Dr. Harold E. Swanson, coordinator of the North Central association, visited Bethel College on Tuesday, December 7. Dr. Swanson, who is in the psychology department at Hamline university, St. Paul, Minnesota, met with the faculty, faculty committees, and the student council.

During the weeks before vacation Christmas carols were sung on the campus by dormitory groups and clubs. The student volunteers also sang Christmas carols for "shut-ins" in the Newton community.

Children of the Methodist Children's Home were given a Christmas party by the social services committee of the SCA on Friday evening, Dec. 17. The 42 children received gifts from college students who "adopted" them for the occasion. A program was given and refreshments served by the college group.

Katherine Wiens and Joanne Buhler have been chosen as the new editor-in-chief and associate editor, respectively, of The Collegian, Bethel College school paper. Miss Wiens, junior, is a transfer student from Reedley Junior College, Reedley, California. Miss Buhler is an exchange student from Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio.

Voluntary Service in Gulfport

by Orlo Kaufman, Gulfport, Mississippi

Helping build a house for the family living in the tool-shed seen in the picture. A fire destroyed their house several weeks ago. Seen in the picture are Harold Davis, Eldo Ediger, and Roger Janzen.

THE SOUTH is a poor section of our United States. This is true of the area in which Camp Landon is located. This area is in need because of several factors: First, it is needy because it suffered the effects of the Civil War with its destruction, waste, and revengeful steps. It is a needy area because its soil is poor. Without fertilizer and the knowledge of its use one receives little from the soil. It is a needy area because of wholesale cutting of lumber in early years, which destroyed the main source of income for large numbers of people. Once the trees were cut, many of these people moved on, others found local work, and still others remained living a hand-to-mouth existence. It is with these people that we are working. A fourth cause of the need in this community is its lack of industrialization and stabilized markets. A fifth factor is the added burden of segregation.

Scope of Service

As a result of these factors in general one finds lower standards of living, lower educational standards, poorer health. Especially among the poorer people there is also religious indifference and inconsistent Christian living, disrupted homes, even want of food and clothing, to say nothing of modern conveniences.

Observing these conditions and with Voluntary Service help becoming available, the Mennonite Central Committee decided to continue the program of public health, which was opened under Civilian Public Service and in addition undertook a program of adult education, recreation, religious education, family welfare, home-and-school repair, and home nursing. These areas are the general classifications into which our work falls. The emphasis varies with the needs and the personnel available for the tasks.

The following is a brief report of recent activities and an outline of further opportunities for service in this community:

Shacks, Sheds, Homes!

We recently had the privilege of helping a family join two 12'x20' shacks. They lost their house by fire some time before this and until these were joined had lived in but one of these buildings. This is a family with nine children. We also helped another family build a house. They too had lost their home by fire and had no place in which to move but a tool shed about 10'x12'. In this shed this family of seven had been making its home. One can hardly imagine the situation. Their home has not yet been completed for they need more materials, but we hope the time will soon come when we will see this house completed. We also have had the opportunity of helping three families get electricity. The cost of electricians' services had made it impossible for them to enjoy good lights.

House of Worship

Another project has been that of helping two churches with their church building. One was the Wayside Mennonite Church, which is an outgrowth of camp activities. It provides a place of worship for the people of the community who had desired membership in a Mennonite Church. This is a growing church; an addition to the building is now planned. The other church was for a nearby colored community which is very limited both in funds and in available help, in building a new house of worship. Both of these places will afford further opportunities. Along with the opportunities of helping them with their houses of worship are opportunities for witnessing to them spiritually through Sunday school classes and young people's meetings.

Still another worthwhile task has been that of helping a family clear land to begin farming. They had neither tools nor money to hire help and it was time for planting. So with our help the land was cleared in a few days, and it is our prayer that their land may produce heavily—the family has many needs.

Work and Play

A further project to which the men have been privileged to contribute is the developing of the campgrounds. This project consists of clearing an area for a basketball- volleyball-, and tennis court for camp personnel and community children. Most of the parents are not able to provide recreational equipment, and a community recreational area is important. The community children worked on this project this summer. We hope to have it completed so that it will be available to them next summer.

During rainy days, when we are unable to work at some of our outdoor projects, we are making Christmas toys which we are planning to sell at a reasonable price to those who cannot afford to buy toys sold at the city stores.

Looking Beyond

Future opportunities for service which are foreseen at present include a completion of some of the projects already begun. There will be further opportunities to help the two churches that have already been mentioned. Sunday school rooms need to be added at the Wayside Mission, the Mt. Calvary Church has just begun its building. Additional opportunities in home building and repair have opened; others will be opening. A colored man who began his house a year ago would appreciate help after Christmas.

After the New Year it will be our privilege to help a colored community with their new schoolhouse. The school for 180 pupils at present is held in a small churchhouse. It is necessary for this school to have a shifted schedule, the older children coming in the morning and the younger ones in the afternoon.

Many of the families in the community have land lying idle while they earn hardly enough to provide for themselves. Here is a potential income which is not being developed; it will provide opportunities for service by helping these families get started producing crops for themselves and for market, thereby supplementing their low income. We especially need a long-term worker who is qualified and interested to be the leader in this work.

We also hope to complete our recreational area and to develop a place for family picnics, thus making this a place where less-fortunate people can come as families—a source of strengthening family life.

In addition to these projects, which are worked out in camp, a project with the Harrison County Health Department is being planned. The exact nature of this work has not been determined but probably will include spraying to control insects and sanitation for hookworm control. Dr. Hedmeg, of the Health Department, stated that they could use an eight-man crew.

Services Spiritual

Along with these opportunities of offering manual help there are numerous opportunities in the areas of the spiritual. These people always appreciate a visit by camp members. This affords an excellent opportunity to have devotions and Bible stories for the children. There are also opportunities to visit and contribute at young people's meetings in local churches, both white and colored.

Along with the need for men there is a need for girls here at camp. There must be girls to cook and do the laundry. There are opportunities for a nurse in the field of health education and in nursing. There are also opportunities to help children who are retarded in school. We find children 12 to 15 years old, in the third and fourth grades. We could use a full-time teacher to do remedial work.

A further project which we feel could be developed would be gathering groups of children after school hours and on Saturday's for Bible stories. This is being done at two homes, but many more families would open their homes and invite the children of the neighborhood.

The loneliness and neglect of old people also opens to us a form of service. There are two elderly families that are visited regularly by camp personnel. There are others who would appreciate a visit by

A Ship! A Ship!

Rescue After Thirteen Days Adrift at Sea

by A. Donald Miller

THE THIRTEENTH dawn came, grey and sunless and chill. The enamel "dipper," threaded on a piece of string was passed in and out for each to have his two ounces of brackish water. We felt a little better.

We began cleaning our hands and faces, and attending to our personal needs. The first-aid box was called for. The boys and girls below pulled it out from the locker, and it was handed up.

"And my shoes, please," I said, "I'll need them today!"

So my salt-bleached shoes were handed up too. I put on one and then the other. And just as I finished lacing the second one there was a startling, almost overwhelming cry.

"A ship! A ship!"

The hour that followed was perhaps the most deliriously excited one I have ever experienced. Everyone talking at once; the suspense of the first twenty minutes, when it was doubtful whether we had been seen, as the ship—a mere speck on the horizon—appeared to grow no larger; the incredible relief and joy when it was evident that the ship was approaching; the issue, as rapidly as was humanly possible, of more and more water from that barrel with its all too small aperture; the putting out of the oars for the last time, and dropping of our red sail; the looming up of the grey and rusted iron wall of the ship's side, looking a very fortress of security; the figures above, running backwards and forewards; the sudden change into calmer water as we passed into the shelter of the ship; the ropes thrown and caught; the final drawing up of our little boat against those iron walls.

A netting of rope had been slung over the ship's side, and up scrambled the Indians, nimble as monkeys in spite of their weakness, and needing no help. Then men of the ship came over and picked up the children and carried them on board. The women followed, bowline hitched ropes and strong arms of officers to help. And then the rest of us. I put the "dipper" with which I had just been issuing water—with reckless speed and spillings—into my pocket as a memento, and my turn came. With wonderful strength and gentleness I was helped up and along; and then, everything swimming before me, I was in a little brown plush-upholstered saloon crowded with my companions and hot coffee was being pressed to my lips.

The narrative of our eight-day journey to port, our reception at Cape Town again, and our resumed journey to England—also marked with adventure—would make another story. One can here but briefly record the perfect hospitality of our hosts on the rescue ship to so many uninvited guests. The ship was a small British cargo steamer; but to us it was the finest luxury liner we had ever known. What marvelous men those ship's officers were, giving up their cabins, their clothing, and sharing their food! The Captain became the lowly servant of us all; the First Officer busied himself with a dozen services, which included becoming washerman of our soiled garments, which he afterwards ironed out on the dining room table! The second Wireless Officer, with his ukelele and the inexhaustible fund of song and party games, became the children's entertainer, diverting their minds each evening before bedtime, so that they went to their cabins, happy and without fear, to dreamless slumber. Tommy, young people who will bring to them cheer and comfort from God's word. Two young people who love the young and the old could be a spiritual blessing to this community rendering such a service.

The community people have appreciated our help. With tears of appreciation for the help rendered and the interest shown, they say "goodbye" to those who are leaving. Former workers have testified to the value of this work in their own lives. The testimony of one such worker is: "I can truthfully say that this term has been the richest experience in my life, and I want to use this as a stepping-stone to greater service in the future or rather a more effective service wherever I may serve."

This report is largely written for the benefit of young people in draft age. This is our opportunity to witness to the Christian way of life in a time when the world fears war but is not willing to take our alternative. Let us demonstrate our faith in Christ and His method of dealing with the probems that make for want and human conflict by giving of ourselves in service "in the name of Christ."

A Christian University for Japan

by Ruth Miller

Japan Christian University Foundation, New York

Thousands of Japanese youths died on the battlefields of the last war without the hope of everlasting life—they never had a chance to become Christians. Today young people in Japan who managed to survive the war still have few opportunities to accept Christianity, because most Japanese schools and colleges do not have Christian teachers or Christian teachings. Even the Christian schools in Japan cannot always get Christian teachers.

One heartening fact is that now the Japanese people are free to choose the religion they wish. They are free to think and speak as they desire. If they can only be helped to understand and accept the Christian way of life, they can be helped to become a great democratic country.

How are we going to help them?

To begin with, there must be sufficient Christian schools with Christian teachers to train these eager young people, because we must educate the youth of Japan in Christianity today if we are to have leaders who will carry out the ideals of freedom and democracy tomorrow. It is encouraging to note that the majority of boys and girls in Japan want to go to Christian schools, not to government schools. In fact, there are 5-10 times more applicants into Japanese Christian colleges than can be admitted. We must create far greater opportunity for a Christian education in Japan than exists today.

We of the Japan Christian University Foundation plan to establish a great Christian University near Toyko, Japan. At first this university will consist primarily of a school of education to train Christian teachers for the schools of Japan.

NOTE: When writing specify both old and new address. PLEASE!

What do the Japanese think of our plan? Miss Tokiko Kawagiri, formerly a teacher in the Girls' School in Kumamoto, Japan, who is now in this country as a student at the Biblical Semniary in New York City, says:

> "There is great need for this Christian university in Japan, and the lives of the Japanese people will be changed by such a university. At present, young people can get only scientific knowledge at state universities; they must acquire true spiritual wisdom through Christianity and through faith in God and Christ."

That's what a Japanese teacher thinks of our idea. What about a Japanese clergyman? Rev. Michio Kozaki is Moderator of the Church of Christ in Japan, which means he is head of all the Christian churches in that country. He says:

> "Our young people feel that, if we are to have a great and happy future, we must have a democratic country, and these young people know that in order to achieve democracy we must have Christian leaders. Young people throughout Japan are excited and enthusiastic about the idea of having a Christian university established there. We have no doubt that, if we have a superior Christian university, we can easily fill it with our best men and women to take training."

The most important contribution we can make to Japanese democracy is to help train Japan's future leaders. That is what our university will do. Won't you help? If every youth in America will give at least one dollar to help the youth of Japan, this great Christian university can soon become a reality and begin its work of educating for democracy. Please, don't forget to give when the Japan Christian University Foundation holds its nationwide campaign for funds next spring. You can help to build toward a more united world.

The Christian young people in Japan are just as eager as we are for peace. They are just as eager to heal the wounds of the broken world. But they do not have the tools. They look to us for those tools. Don't fail them! Their call to North American Youth is:

Give us a Christian university where we may train Christian teachers, doctors, nurses, lawyers, scientists, engineers, ministers, businessmen, and statesmen. Then we can dream with you and work with you as you build a peaceful world.

This index is a single, composite index in which all authors, titles, and subjects of articles which appeared in THE MENNONITE during the year 1948 are arranged in one continuous, alphabetical series. References at the end of each item is to the issue number and the page in that issue. For example, the entry:

Alderfer, Jean, "Understanding" (a poem), 8-16 indicates that this poem will be found in issue number 8, on page 16. The dates of the issues which appeared in the year 1948 are given in the list of issue numbers herewith.

Names of individuals are mentioned only, as a general rule, where such individuals were authors of some article. Each article was cross-indexed by approximately two subject references. The only items appearing in the section "Jottings" were the names of churches and the names of Conference institutions.

It is suggested that this index be placed with the first or the last issue of your file of THE MENNONITE for this year, 1948.

In order to add one very useful feature to our annual index of THE MENNONITE we are, in this issue, for the first time, adding an index of visual materials. The subjects of the various pictorial illustrations are indexed in the same manner, by topic, or by name, as the articles themselves. For example, if you are looking for material for use in connection with a program, let us say, having to do with relief work in France, it may be found by checking under either:

French girl holding a Christmas bundle (2x3¼) 27-14

or

Relief in France. Girl sitting on chair holding a Christmas bundle (2x3¼) 27-14

The above entry indicates that picture on this subject may be located in issue No. 27, page 14

Additional copies of this index are available at 50 cents per copy.
